LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 71 MURRAY STREET
BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
CHICAGO (ILL.) NEWS
NOVEMBER 30, 1921

NOTED MEN WILL GIVE FILM CONTEST ADVICE

D. W. Griffith and Prof. Cross to Tell Pupils How to Write Scenarios.

Special to The Chicago Daily News.

New York, Nov. 30.—School pupils who take part in The Daily News' $17,440 scenario story contest are to have a great moving picture maker and a noted university professor of English to help them. Three times each week D. W. Grifith, the director, and Tom Peete Cross, professor of comparative literature at the University of Chicago, will write an article for The Daily News, telling school pupils exactly the things they want to know about the writing of scenario stories.

In Mr. Griffith's offices the man who has made "The Birth of a Nation," "Way Down East," "Broken Blossoms," and other famous pictures and Dr. Cross today began their work of collaborating on these articles, which begin next week in The Daily News. Brought together by The Daily News, which had invited them to combine their knowledge of moving pictures and English instruction for the benefit of school children in and around Chicago, they agreed with enthusiasm to the plans of the contest.

Lauds The Daily News.

"The Daily News gave the moving picture industry new hope and new expectations when it drove through with such success its famous $30,000 scenario contest," said Mr. Griffith. "It gives films even greater hopes and even greater assurance of the future when it launches a scenario story contest of this new kind. Teaching the children to write, to observe life about them, to create stories, to order their hands and train their minds before they start to actually selling scripts to the films is a far-sighted and a wise move.

"I remember as a Kentucky farm boy of hearing of the noted writers who grew up on The Daily News. I have always felt the creative literary spirit hanging around that newspaper. It has a big part in the productive spirit of middle western writers. How fine it is that it should have decided to direct the force of its traditions to the new field for writers—moving pictures.

Will Do Great Good.

"The foresight and scope of The Daily News in its handling of scenario writers, both present and potential, is something that is doing and will do great good to American life, for it will get better pictures for the public and strengthen the hands of the producers who want better things.

"Whatever I know of moving pictures I will try to tell the school children of Chicago. I am proud to be associated in this work with so distinguished a scholar as Dr. Cross, and to realize how seriously and earnestly we will work together to give the children interesting and instructive lessons."

Prof. Cross, who came from the Virginia plantation, where he has been vacationing for the last three months to meet Mr. Griffith here to-day, and start writing the series, was appointed head of the department of comparative literature at the University of Chicago last summer, to succeed Dr. Moulton, noted biblical authority. Previously Cross taught in the English department of the university, where he earned a reputation in teaching English composition.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 71 MURRAY STREET
BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
CHICAGO (ILL.) NEWS
DECEMBER 3, 1921

FILM CONTEST OFFERS BIG CHANCE TO PUPILS

No Brighter Future than Writing for Movies, Says D. W. Griffith.

Special to The Chicago Daily News.

New York, Dec. 3.—"There is no brighter future for school children than writing for moving pictures," said D. W. Grifith to-day as he and Prof. Tom Peete Cross, professor of comparative literature at the University of Chicago, took a brief interlude in their work of preparing the lessons for the $17,000 scenario-story contest which The Daily News will begin next Monday. The two men, each an authority in his own line, were walking about the beautiful grounds of the Griffith studio at Mamaroneck, L. I.

They take quick walks, looking at the sound where the sun makes saber flashes on the water, to rest themselves from the highly concentrated work of writing the articles which will tell the children of Chicago and vicinity about the contest for the many prizes The Daily News will give for the best scenario stories submitted under the rules.

"In five to ten years the business of moving pictures will be far better than it is to-day and the quality will be much higher," continued Mr. Griffith. "The children who jump in now and learn what they can of moving pictures will be prepared to take important places, if they work seriously and intelligently, in the ranks of the writers who will give to the studios the plots and manuscripts in that day.

Training Most Important.

"Most important of all in this new contest, as Dr. Cross and I see it, is the training in writing pure English original ideas that we will try to give them through the columns of The Daily News. True it is that studios today want ideas from amateurs and main trained writers of their own to provide these ideas for the screen. But the people who will be biggest and best in the future will be writers who prepare their own ideas, write them well, bring out their ideas better by the use of better English and send their stories to the studios ready for the continuity experts.

"Writing for moving pictures is going to be one of the world's most lucrative tasks and it is to be one of the most important from the standpoint of literature. Gradually we are working to a point in America where a story expertly planned, conceived and executed will be in demand for magazines and studios. That is, the best writers of the next five or ten years will be the people who write so well that magazines print their stories and films from the same manuscript used in working on them in the studios. The Daily News is trying to teach children how to do this. It is working to fit them for a brilliant future."

Warm Welcome for Contest.

News that The Daily News had followed its famous $30,000 scenario contest with another great competition for scenario stories, open to school children, was all over the film colonies in New York today. Joseph M. Schenck, husband of Norma Talmadge and manager of the Talmadge sisters and "Buster" Keaton, described the plan as certain to have a definite and bettering effect upon the quality of stories that the films will use in the future.

"The Daily News," he said, "is surely showing the way to the educators who have been wondering how to get better pictures. Movies have sprung into being almost overnight. They are doing themselves a great national institution. They will be far greater. They have their faults, but the public must support the better things and work with the industry to produce better things. Mere criticism of faults does not help.

"The Daily News goes out to help build up better writing for pictures, leading up better production. The effect of this is incalculable. I don't see how The Daily News is going to handle all the children who will want to submit manuscripts. It is offering them something hundred times money, something more attractive than mere cash, an opportunity to learn the things about the most fascinating art in the world today."

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) TRIBUNE

Success of New Griffith Film Doubted

Leading Producers Say "Forget It" to $5,000,000, 72-Reel Picture.

Movie Men Admire Boldness of Idea, but Fail to See Commercial Outlet.

"Foolish Wives" Still Hidden From Public—News and Gossip From Hollywood.

By Mason Lathrop

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.—[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK
BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
MINNEAPOLIS (MINN.) TRIBUNE

Movie Men Skeptical of Griffith Plans to Make 72-Reel Film

By Mason Lathrop

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3.—[illegible]

Government Starts Case Against B'dway Brevities

D. W. Griffith Man Swears It Used Death of Girl to Get Business

The action brought by the United States Postal authorities against Broadway Brevities, its publisher and associates, came to trial this week in the Federal Court.

After the preliminaries had been got out of the way the question of the death of a beautiful young film actress cast for a part in D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East" was gone into, the prosecution intimating that Stephen G. Clow, publisher of Brevities, tried to capitalize the death of the girl by demanding money of D. W. Griffith.

This actress was Clarine Seymour, who played with Richard Barthelmess in "The Idol Dancer," another Griffith film. She was cast to play in "Way Down East," and had even completed several scenes before her untimely demise. The part was subsequently played by Mary Hay and the scenes showing Miss Seymour were scrapped and retaken with Miss Hay.

At the time Miss Seymour was engaged to wed Charles Emmerich, a young millionaire. She was stricken with acute indigestion while living with Seena Owen, picture actress, and was taken to a hospital. Miss Seymour refused to divulge the nature of her ailment for several days, and, when physicians finally diagnosed it as acute indigestion, an operation was the only possible means of saving her life. This failed and she died.

Gareth J. Lloyd, publicity and advertising manager for D. W. Griffith Productions, stated during testimony, in response to Maxwell S. Mattuck, attorney for the prosecution, that he first became interested in her death when anonymous telegrams, bearing no signature at all, came into the office at regular intervals and stated that the sender was in complete knowledge of the mysterious circumstances under which Miss Seymour died. A telegram finally came bearing the signature of Stephen G. Clow and advised Griffith to advertise in Broadway Brevities, he said.

Shortly after this, according to Lloyd, Nat Kuhnes, an employe of Brevities, came into the Griffith office and said that Clow was very angry at Griffith, and if no advertising was forthcoming shortly would be even more so.

Lloyd took up the matter of advertising in Broadway Brevities with the heads of his firm, and decided to give it, he said, not for the value, of which there was practically none, but to avoid having "Way Down East" spoiled by adverse publicity.

The trial is continuing with such Broadway characters slated to appear as Texas Guinan, J. J. Shubert, Martin Herrman, Evelyn Neville, Tex Rickard and others.

When Mattuck opened the case for the prosecution, scores of Broadwayites had already taken every available spectator's seat in the courtroom. He told the jury that he first intended to prove, by examining a number of witnesses, that "Broadway Brevities" was what is commonly termed a "scandal sheet." Edward Reynolds, who took the place of William J. Fallon as attorney for the defense, objected to the court in the use of the term "scandal sheet." But this objection, as well as many others by the defense, was over-ruled and exception taken.

Mattuck further said that he wanted, first, the jury to acquaint itself with the character of the publication on trial. Reynolds again objected, saying that not the character of the publication was on trial but that the attorney for the prosecution should hold himself to the letter of the indictment. Judge Mack over-ruled this objection too.

Few realized that when Lloyd mounted the stand his testimony would be of sensational nature. Mattuck first asked in effect:

How well do your know "Broadway Brevities?"

A.—I never read a copy of it in my life.

Q.—Were you solicited for advertising for that magazine?

A.—Yes, during 1923.

Q.—State how?

A.—During the filming of the Griffith film, "Way Down East," I received first a number of anonymous telegrams at my office, addressed to D. W. Griffith. They all mentioned the death of one of the members in the cast of that picture and said that the sender knew the "truth" as how she died. After this series of telegrams, there came one signed S. G. Clow, which stated in effect that I had better advertise in Brevities, or something about it would be made public. This had happened before I was in the employ of Griffith, so I reported it to him. He seemed excited and told me. He seemed excited and told me that Clow was very angry at my organization. He said that I had refused to advertise in Brevities, and when Clow is angry at anybody he is very dangerous.

Q.—What did you do then?

A.—Kuness told me that Brevities wanted an advertising contract for $2,500. I told him this sum was out of the question. I realized that a million dollars had been spent on the picture "Way Down East," and that the slightest amount of adverse publicity (Lloyd called it dynamite, as well) would do an immeasurable amount of harm. I took Kuness in to see Griffith and I agreed to take advertising for every new picture we put out.

At this point Mattuck read to the jury a paragraph in Brevities which purported that a certain young star in "Way Down East" had died under very mysterious circumstances and that Brevities was in possession of the facts surrounding her death.

Q.—(By Mattuck)—How much money did you pay Brevities for advertising?

A.—To date, between $1,500 and $2,000, I believe.

Mattuck then asked Lloyd whether the money was paid primarily for the advertising space it bought or because the death of the picture star, believed to be Clarine Seymour, was "hushed up." Lloyd agreed that it was paid for the story, which, he said, could no doubt harm the picture, to be hushed up.

The first witness called to the stand by Mattuck was Gordon Kahn, reporter, formerly connected with Brevities in an editorial capacity.

Q.—When did you work for Brevities?

A.—From about the middle of December, 1923, until September 10, 1924.

Q.—What were your duties on that publication?

A.—At first they were indeterminate. But for the remainder of the time they consisted in writing articles for Broadway Brevities.

Q.—Can you say that Brevities printed what is known as news?

A.—Technically it was not news, because the paper is a monthly.

Q.—What, then, was the nature of its contents?

A.—Stories of people connected with the so-called "Broadway life" and of society.

Q.—What were Clow's sources of news?

A.—Many of his friends and acquaintances supplied material for what was published; anonymous letters, phone calls, and a number of periodicals and daily papers.

At this point Mattuck asked Kahn to identify specimens of Clow's handwriting and to identify various anonymous communications received at the Brevities office. In addition to this, a book was shown Kahn which he identified as the one in which Clow kept the accounts of the publication.

Q.—Do you recall ever investigating anybody for Clow—a Miss Evelyn Neville?

A.—Yes, one of my first assignments was to locate police records that were supposed to have the accounts of the arrest of Miss Evelyn Neville. Clow told me that she maintained an "establishment" on West 72d street, which was "pulled"—raided by the police.

Q.—What did you do?

A.—I inquired at the West 68th Street Police Station, but could got no verification of such an arrest. I also examined the records for several years back of the West Side Magistrate's Court, but could learn nothing.

Q.—What did Clow say when you reported this?

A.—He was very much displeased.

Evelyn Neville, one of the complainants in the government's action, said to be a former actress, is an officer in a concern which markets a preparation for flesh reducing. Mattuck declared he would prove that Clow solicited advertising from Miss Neville. He also read to the jury a statement in Brevities, that this paper would, in the next issue, publish an account of the "raiding of an establishment at 168 West 72d street, conducted by a young woman who is connected with a reducing nostrum firm." This statement, Mattuck shows, was printed in advance of Kahn's effort to investigate Miss Neville.

Mattuck also questioned this witness about the hotels controlled by John Nott, Dowman, well known society and clubman. The witness testified that Clow had assigned him to "investigate" one of the Dowman hotels to determine if there was any soliciting by women, or any selling of liquor going on.

Q.—Did you ever investigate one of these hotels for Brevities?

A.—No, I was about to, on Clow's order, but he changed his mind.

Here Mattuck also read to the jury an account in Broadway Brevities which stated that a Dowman hotel was "knocking the knickers off of women who do not get up to pay 1 p. m., and do not retire until 5

Government Starts Case Against B'dway Brevities

D. W. Griffith Man Swears It Used Death of Girl to Get Business

The action brought by the United States Postal authorities against Broadway Brevities, its publisher and associates, came to trial this week in the Federal Court.

After the preliminaries had been got out of the way the question of the death of a beautiful young film actress cast for a part in D. W. Grifith's "Way Down East" was gone into, the prosecution intimating that Stephen G. Clow, publisher of Brevities, tried to capitalize the death of the girl by demanding money of D. W. Griffith.

This actress was Clarine Seymour, who played with Richard Barthelmess in "The Idol Dancer," another Griffith film. She was cast to play in "Way Down East," and had even completed several scenes before her untimely demise. The part was subsequently played by Mary Hay and the scenes showing Miss Seymour were scrapped and retaken with Miss Hay.

At the time Miss Seymour was engaged to wed Charles Emmerich, a young millionaire. She was stricken with acute indigestion while living with Seena Owen, picture actress, and was taken to a hospital. Miss Seymour refused to divulge the nature of her ailment for several days, and, when physicians finally diagnosed it as acute indigestion, an operation was the only possible means of saving her life. This failed and she died.

Gareth J. Lloyd, publicity and advertising manager for D. W. Griffith Productions, stated during testimony, in response to Maxwell S. Mattuck, attorney for the prosecution, that he first became interested in her death when anonymous telegrams, bearing no signature at all, came into the office at regular intervals and stated that the sender was in complete knowledge of the mysterious circumstances under which Miss Seymour died. A telegram finally came bearing the signature of Stephen G. Clow and advised Grifith to advertise in Broadway Brevities, he said.

Shortly after this, according to Lloyd, Nat Kuhnes, an employe of Brevities, came into the Griffith office and said that Clow was very angry at Griffith, and if no advertising was forthcoming shortly would be even more so.

Lloyd took up the matter of advertising in Broadway Brevities with the heads of his firm, and decided to give it, he said, not for the value, of which there was practically none, but to avoid having "Way Down East" spoiled by adverse publicity.

The trial is continuing with such Broadway characters slated to appear as Texas Guinan, J. J. Shubert, Martin Herrman, Evelyn Neville, Tex Rickard and others.

When Mattuck opened the case for the prosecution, scores of Broadwayites had already taken every available spectator's seat in the courtroom. He told the jury that he first intended to prove, by examining a number of witnesses, that "Broadway Brevities" was what is commonly termed a "scandal sheet." Edward Reynolds, who took the place of William J. Fallon as attorney for the defense, objected to the court in the use of the term "scandal sheet." But this objection, as well as many others by the defense, was over-ruled and exception taken.

Mattuck further said that he wanted, first, the jury to acquaint itself with the character of the publication on trial. Reynolds again objected, saying that not the character of the publication was on trial but that the attorney for the prosecution should hold himself to the letter of the indictment. Judge Mack over-ruled this objection too.

For realized that when Lloyd mounted the stand his testimony would be of sensational nature. Mattuck first asked in effect:

How well do you know "Broadway Brevities?"

A.—I never read a copy of it in my life.

Q.—Were you solicited for advertising for that magazine?

A.—Yes, during 1923.

Q.—State how?

A.—During the filming of the picture film, "Way Down East," I received first a number of anonymous telegrams at my office. It read in in the details. They all mentioned the death of one of the members in the cast of that picture and said that the sender knew the circumstances of her death. After three days of anonymous telegrams there came one signed by Stephen G. Clow, publisher of Broadway Brevities, stating that he was in complete knowledge of the circumstances under which Miss Seymour died. I showed the telegrams to my chief and acquainted him with the contents of the wire. He appointed Nathan Kuhnes to see Clow and arrange for the matter of advertising in Broadway Brevities. Kuhnes told me that Clow was very angry at my organization. He said that I had refused to advertise in Brevities, and when Clow is angry at anybody he is very dangerous.

Q.—What did you do then?

A.—Kuness told me that Brevities wanted an advertising contract for $2,500. I told him this sum was out of the question. I realized that a million dollars had been spent on the picture "Way Down East," and that the slightest amount of adverse publicity (Lloyd called it dynamite, as well) would do an immeasurable amount of harm. I took Kuness in to see Griffith and I agreed to take advertising for every new picture we put out.

At this point Mattuck read to the jury a paragraph in Brevities which purported that a certain young star in "Way Down East" had died under very mysterious circumstances and that Brevities was in possession of the facts surrounding her death.

Q.—(By Mattuck)—How much money did you pay Brevities for advertising?

A.—To date, between $1,500 and $2,000, I believe.

Mattuck then asked Lloyd whether the money was paid primarily for the advertising space it bought or because the death of the picture star, believed to be Clarine Seymour, was "hushed up." Lloyd agreed that it was paid for the story, which, he said, could no doubt harm the picture, to be hushed up.

The first witness called to the stand by Mattuck was Gordon Kahn, reporter, formerly connected with Brevities in an editorial capacity.

Q.—When did you work for Brevities?

A.—From about the middle of December, 1923, until September 10, 1924.

Q.—What were your duties on that publication?

A.—At first they were indeterminate. But for the remainder of the time they consisted in writing articles for Broadway Brevities.

Q.—Can you say that Brevities printed what is known as news?

A.—Technically it was not news, because the paper is a monthly.

Q.—What, then, was the nature of its contents?

A.—Stories of people connected with the so-called "Broadway life" and of society.

Q.—What were Clow's sources of news?

A.—Many of his friends and acquaintances supplied material for what was published; anonymous letters, phone calls, and a number of periodicals and daily papers.

At this point Mattuck asked Kahn to identify specimens of Clow's handwriting and to identify various anonymous communications received at the Brevities office. In addition to this, a book was shown Kahn which he identified as the one in which Clow kept the accounts of the publication.

Q.—Do you recall ever investigating anybody for Clow—a Miss Evelyn Neville?

A.—Yes, one of my first assignments was to locate police records that were supposed to have the accounts of the arrest of Miss Evelyn Neville. Clow told me that she maintained an "establishment" on West 72d street, which was "pulled"—raided by the police.

Q.—What did you do?

A.—I inquired at the West 46th Street Police Station, but could get no verification of such an arrest. I also examined the records for several years back of the West Side Magistrate's Court, but could learn nothing.

Q.—What did Clow say when you reported this?

A.—He was very much displeased.

Evelyn Neville, one of the complainants in the government's action, said to be a former actress, is an officer in a concern which markets a preparation for flesh reducing. Mattuck declared he would prove that Clow solicited advertising from Miss Neville. He also read to the jury a statement in Brevities that this paper would, in its next issue, publish an account of the "raiding of an establishment at 123 West 72d street, conducted by a young woman who is connected with a reducing museum. This statement, Mattuck shows, was printed in advance of Kahn's effort to investigate Miss Neville.

Mattuck also questioned this witness about the facts contained in John Rich Dunham, self-styled society and tipster. The witness testified that Clow had charged him to "investigate" one of the women named in Brevities to determine if there was any truth to rumors of her being a "fence" selling [illegible].

Q.—Did you ever investigate one of those women for Brevities?

A.—Yes, I was sent to an address in the Bronx to investigate a girl.

Here Mattuck read to the jury an article which stated that a Bronx girl was "among the [illegible] of women who do not get to spend T. B. Mc, and do not have Mack [illegible]

"THE GREATEST QUESTION"

Strand Theatre, New York, Week of Dec. 28

Criticisms Morning Papers

THE NEW YORK WORLD.

SPIRITUALISM THEME OF NEW GRIFFITH FILM

"The Greatest Question," Unfolding Human Story, Shown at Strand—Other Bills.

Although D. W. Griffith has not raised himself to the rank of Sir Oliver Lodge as an exponent of spiritism, "The Greatest Question," his latest feature film, which was shown at the Strand yesterday, is a good photoplay. That widely heralded part of the picture dealing with immortality and the return of the dead is really incidental to the main story.

Mr. Griffith causes one of his characters to come back to earth in shadow form and give comfort and advice to his unfortunate parents. The scenario deals with the elevation of a poor family to riches by the discovery of oil on their Kentucky farm—a theme which, in other hands, most likely would be commonplace. There are also an intertwined love story and a happy ending.

Lillian Gish, as a homeless orphan, the sweetheart of the future oil magnate, does exceptionally well. Others in the cast are Robert Harron, George Fawcett, George Nichols and Josephine Crowell. Incidental pictures completed the bill.

NEW YORK AMERICAN

A NEW D. W. Griffith picture, "The Greatest Question," is presented at the Strand Theatre this week on a programme that also includes a lovely scenic, "Children of the Netherlands," and a good news reel.

The Griffith picture has the usual fine photography, notably the close-ups of Lillian Gish that are soft-toned like miniatures. There are some country lanes and streams, too, in the footage that hesitate on the screen for a few seconds and awaken memories of places one used to know.

There are many of the deft, human touches in the picture that have become associated with the screen tales by D. W. Griffith.

"The Greatest Question" is the question of what comes after death—whether the passing on is a return to dust, or whether there is a spirit land where thought goes on.

Mr. Griffith started out with his usual directness and the same old skill of introducing his characters accurately and brilliantly. But the story wanders. Through uninteresting byways it goes, frequently picking up stones that only make it halting and lame.

NEW YORK HERALD

Spiritualism on Screen.

"The Greatest Question," one of David W. Griffiths' productions, with Miss Lillian Gish and Robert Harron as co-stars, held interest as the feature at the Strand Theatre. It is a development of a psychic drama, in which spiritualism enters into the lives of the Hilton family and to a great extent troubles their existence until the question whether life in this world concerns the soul after death is answered to their satisfaction. Miss Gish as Nellie Jones affords the comedy element as the member of the family who looks on life as the time to be happy.

"Babes in Toyland" was the overture by the orchestra, and the Criterion Quartet sang glees. Herman Severly, 'cellist, and Ralph Brigham, organist, were the soloists.

THE NEW YORK SUN

New Griffith Production.

At the Strand D. W. Griffith, through his latest, "The Great Question," calls for a showdown with the hereafter, as the publicity exponent says. Recently Mr. Griffith almost stared the hereafter in the face, and one wonders whether his answer now to this profound problem would be the same as in this film, made before the southern sun nearly answered it for him.

At any rate, the manner in which he has answered it on the screen, through the medium of an average American family, is bound to be provocative of thought, to say the least, and will bring cheer to those whose Christmas wasn't all they expected. Lillian Gish, George Fawcett, Eugenie Besserer and Robert Harron do distinguished work in another sensational Griffith picture.

"THE GREATEST QUESTION"

Strand Theatre, New York, Week of Dec. 28

Criticisms Morning Papers

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH.

GHOSTS WALK IN STRAND PICTURE

"The Greatest Question," a D. W. Griffith Production, Deals With the Occult.

PLAYED BY A GOOD CAST

Lillian Gish, Eugenie Besserer and Robert Harron Are Notable Players in Film.

By AGNES SMITH.

D. W. Griffith's newest picture, "The Greatest Question," is being shown at the Strand this week. In it Mr. Griffith delves into the great swamp of spiritualism that scientists are trying to clear up. Unfortunately for the picture, Mr. Griffith brings in a lot of other elements that weaken the force of the plot. We wish he had made a really great picture about spiritualism, for there are some inspiring elements in "The Greatest Question" that show what he might do if he tried.

Just as an example of sheer motion picture artistry of detail, the picture is decidedly worth seeing. Scene by scene it is wonderfully beautiful. And it is filled with the inimitable Griffith touches. No one can film such exquisite close-ups and no one can so truly present youthful romance.

The Boy Returns.

Quite the best parts of the picture are the scenes between the mother and the boy who is lost in the war. The boy appears to her once when he dies, swept from the deck of a submarine, and another time when her faith is wavering. These two scenes are among the finest that Griffith has ever directed.

The rest of the story concerns a little girl—a waif—who is "hired girl" for the most sinister couple that the screen has ever seen. Early in her childhood she had seen them murder a girl and bury her body. In the climax, when she faces the same fate, the memory comes back to her and she turns on the murderers.

The scene of the story is laid in the South in a typical Griffith setting and the picture is a strange mixture of the occult, of simple faith, of innocence, of sordid cruelty and lust and of a little bit of plain ordinary film melodrama. And, somehow or other, it just misses being one of the greatest pictures that Griffith has made.

Lillian Gish Scores.

The players do some rare acting. In spite of the fact that Lillian Gish plays what is now a familiar role for her, she gives a remarkable performance. Eugenie Besserer, as the mother, shows us acting of a high standard, while Josephine Crowell and George Nichols are seen as the "lectons of evil." Robert Harron is delightful in another typical Harron role. The Strand has given "The Greatest Question" a splendid musical setting.

There is no comedy this week at the Strand, but there is an entertaining topical review. A particularly interesting section of it is given over to pictures of an Armistice Day celebration in India. It was filmed by Kinograms. Then there are some good close-ups of notables now in the limelight. A short scenic called "Children of the Netherlands" is delightful.

The Strand orchestra, under Carl Edwards, plays Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland" as a concession to the holiday season and a gorgeous rendition of "The Last Chord."

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE

Strand Shows New Griffith Film of Melodrama Type

D. W. Griffith has again demonstrated his mastery of the screen in his new First National picture, "The Greatest Question," shown at the Strand Theater this week. The picture is less beautiful and less pretentious than most of his previous productions, but it is simple and human in its appeal. It is sad beyond words, but there are glints of humor in it. As is his custom, Griffith has taken a sordid background and woven into its fabric a story of enduring beauty. Instead of spinning it out and elaborating on it, his handiwork is intensive and it seems as if there is not one unnecessary scene. The strain of moralizing is scarcely pronounced enough to interfere with the enjoyment of the production. His choice of character in the cast is unerring and he has used the medium of marked contrast to intensify the fiendishness of the sinister figures and to enhance the virtues of his heroes. There is a dim echo of the great war where one of the youths goes down at sea in a submarine. A touch of the supernatural is worked into the story where the boy's ghost is seen by his mother at the moment of his death.

There is surely no one who gives a more perfect or pathetic presentation of the abused and whimsical child than Lillian Gish, who does fine work as Nellie Jarvis. She is the daughter of a peddler who reams the countryside in a caravan. When her parents die she is taken into the home of the kind-hearted Hiltons, who call her "Little Miss Yes'm," because of her constant use of the phrase. Eugenie Besserer is one of the striking characters in the cast as Mrs. Hilton. Ralph Graves plays the part of John Hilton, the young son who goes to war and is drowned. Robert Harron is Jimmie Hilton, an attractive but casual young bumpkin who loves Nellie.

When extreme poverty strikes at the roots of the home life of the Hiltons, Nellie decided to "hire out" as a maid. She is engaged by Mr. and Mrs. Scrubble. Between the tyranny and bad temper of Mrs. Scrubble (Josephine Crowell) and the passion of Mr. Scrubble (George Nichols), poor little Nellie has a miserable life. Envy and passion are shown in all their hideousness as Mrs. Scrubble hangs over the girl's bed and purposes killing her in her sleep. The climax is reached when her ferocious husband pursues the girl to a garret in the house. She is only saved from his clutches by the intervention of the jealous wife.

Retribution comes swiftly to the pair, for Nellie suddenly recalls an incident of her childhood, when she saw them murder and bury a girl in a nearby wood. They are conventionally clasped in manacles at the end of the picture, but they are supposed to be spiritually penitent before their arrest is consummated. Their sudden regeneration is the least convincing thing in the picture, for they are painted as such an inhuman and horrible pair that they are almost Dickensian in their villainy. While justice is being meted out to the wicked, the worthy Hiltons find good fortune, wealth and happiness.

The story is really founded on the old melodramatic theme of the bad being punished and the good rewarded, but the picture is so full of gripping moments and the acting is so excellent throughout that its platitudinous phases are forgotten.

The overture is Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland," with Carl Edwards conducting the orchestra. There is a colored scenic of the children of the Netherlands. The usual Strand Topical Review is run off and the Criterion Quartette sings three times a day.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE SCREEN

D. W. Griffith has said that it is his ambition to put humanity on the screen, and his last several pictures, though colored vividly with melodrama, have shown characters seeking to live as real people with more than a little success. If, in some instances, through emphasis of this or that trait, they have become stock types, rather than true human beings, for the most part they have had genuine kinship with humanity, and some of them have been genuinely lifelike. In his latest production, "The Greatest Question," which is at the Strand this week, Mr. Griffith is still striving for verisimilitude, in his characters at least, and again he has been successful to a degree, with the aid of Lillian Gish, George Fawcett, Eugene Besserer, Robert Harron, George Nichols, Josephine Crowell and Tom Wilson in the principal parts. Despite the exaggeration and artificiality apparent in each characterization, one recognizes something familiar in every one of them.

They are not all lovely, by any means. Mr. Griffith has been compared to Dickens, and he is like Dickens at least in the firmness, almost fierceness, with which he presents the ugly and repellent as well as the attractive. And, if he is seeking to make a picture a cross-section of life, must he not include brutality, viciousness, selfishness and the like, as well as gentleness, virtue and love? The question, of course, is in what measure and manner the frightful and repulsive shall be shown, and on the subject opinions will differ according to individual ideas of art or thickness of skin.

Photographically, Mr. Griffith's latest work is excellent. Some of his night scenes, especially, are about the best of their kind ever seen on the screen. Considerable credit for this should go to G. W. Bitzer, the Griffith cameraman.

The failure of the film is in the answer it offers to "the greatest question," that of human survival after death. Mr. Griffith apparently has been dipping into psychical research, but only dipping timorously. He does not face the question squarely and answer it clearly one way or the other. The subject of survival comes into his story only twice briefly and each time in such a way as to leave the question answered. Once a youth appears to his mother at the moment of his death far away, and subsequently the dead boy stands before her and his father when she appeals to him for a sign of his continued existence. The woman and her husband are convinced, but the first case might be explained as telepathy or coincidence and the second appearance may have been a hallucination. Neither is real evidence of survival. The photoplay should have testified boldly to the fact of survival, denied it unqualifiedly, or admitted its uncertainty. As it stands, it ought to satisfy both those who want to believe in survival, and those who don't, but it contributes nothing to the solution of "the greatest question."

The story of the photoplay is relatively unimportant, as Mr. Griffith, no doubt, meant it to be. It is concerned principally with an orphaned girl thrown upon a poor farmer's family from whose kindly shelter she is drawn into the power of a man and a woman as utterly abhorrent as may be imagined. After a melodramatic sequence of events, at the climax of which the good farmer finds faith in God and oil in his ground apparently in the relation of cause to effect, everything is as it should be in the best regulated stories.

Attractive as the Strand bill, even with a Griffith film, is a color scenic entitled, "Children of the Netherlands."

New York Review Mar 2 '18 page 1

Dorothy Gish Scores in Her Inimitable Way in "Mary Ellen Comes to Town"

Village Cut-up Makes Things Hum in New York—As Usual Miss Gish Acts as Much and as Cleverly With Her Feet as With Her Face—Not Her Best Picture but Sure to Please Her Many Admirers.

GRIFFITH COMPANY TO MAKE "DAWN"

By UCELLA O. PARSONS

NEW YORK, June 28.—When David Wark Griffith makes up his mind to act he does not waste time. Early this week he decided to produce "Dawn," an original story by Geoffrey Moss, an English writer, who has written many of Great Britain's best sellers. The locale is a foreign one, most of the scenario being laid in Germany and England.

A call went out to the members of the Griffith company who are under contract, including Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton. They were told to be ready to sail for Europe on the George Washington, July 4. There will be twelve mem-

Griffith to Make Film in Europe.

It is reported that D. W. Griffith will [illegible] Germany the latter part of next week with a company of twelve to shoot exteriors for an original story by Geoffrey Moss, an English author. It is temporarily known as "The Dawn."

Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the juvenile leads, but additions to the cast will be made in Germany and in England, where scenes will also be shot. Griffith met Moss in Italy and it was there that the author outlined the story which is to be made, in part, abroad.

D. W. Gri[illegible] will leave with his players [illegible] on the steamship George Washington, Friday, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular o, the latter English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title, "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad abou

GRIFFITH AND COMPANY TO SAIL ON JULY FOURTH

CAROL DEMPSTER.

She sails on July 4 on the George Washington, of course, to make picture in Europe for D. W. Griffith.

Producer-Director Goes to Germany and England for Exteriors for "The Dawn," Taking Staff and Leading Players, but Cast Will Be International, He Announces.

TO BE GONE SIX WEEKS

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington on Friday, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, English novelist and author of several best sellers. It is an original work known under the working title of "The Dawn." The director-producer bought the story during his recent trip abroad.

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company.

This will be Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." The company will be abroad about six weeks.

GRIFFITH AND STARS BOUND FOR EUROPE

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington Friday, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruited from the Moscow Art Theatre Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent.

Griffith Sails Friday

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the George Washington, Friday, for Germany to take exteriors for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

Griffith Sailing

D. W. Griffith leaves with his players and staff on the George Washington Friday, for Germany, where he will shoot exteriors of his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes. Geoffrey Moss is the author of the story, which will be filmed under the working title "The Dawn."

Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, new leading man, are to head the company, which will include players from the Moscow Art Theatre Company, and German, English and American actors, truly an international

GRIFFITH TO MAKE NEW PICTURE ABROAD

Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and an International Cast to Appear in "The Dawn," His Newest Effort

AMID rumors, on the one hand, that he proposed to do no more screen spectacles and, on the other hand, that his next picture would be one without love interest, D. W. Griffith, the old master of the celluloid drama, quietly announces that he will sail tomorrow morning from New York for Germany to take exterior scenes for a new production.

This production, tentatively titled, "The Dawn," has been prepared, from the literary angle, by Geoffrey Moss, whom Griffith described as "most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad." "The Dawn" is an original story that Moss has written for Griffith and while no hint is given as to its theme, content or nature, it will enlist the services of a cast of international complexion.

Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, the latest Griffith "leads," who were seen in his recent production of "America," will head the company and represent the United States. The Moscow Art Theater Company, which recently departed from New York, will supply the Russian delegation while Frank Puglia, whom Griffith "discovered" in a downtown theater in New York several months ago, will be the Italian standard-bearer. German, English and possibly French actors will also be added to the Griffith roster later, it is intimated.

This is D. W.'s first motion picture work abroad since he made "Hearts of the World" during the war. It is interesting, however, to note that in his new picture, "The Dawn," Griffith hopes "to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen." In this connection, he expresses the belief that the motion-picture public has awakened to an appreciation of more subtle effects in screen drama.

The company will be abroad about six weeks, though it is assumed only important exterior scenes will be photographed in Europe and Griffith could easily duplicate interiors in this country without the [illegible] which any producer seems [illegible] labor abroad.

D. W. Griffith will leave his players and staff on the steamship George Washington today sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new pictures, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about

D. W. Griffith sails to-day for Germany to take the exterior scenes for his new production. It is an original work by Geoffrey Moss called "The Dawn." Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton head the cast.

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington Friday sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scense for "Hearts of the World." In the new pictures, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Griffith and Staff Will Take Scenes in England for Next Picture.

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington this week sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title, "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Madame Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new pictures, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about

D. W. Griffith sails with his players and staff on the George Washington tomorrow for Germany, to take exterior scenes for his next production, an original work known under the working title "The Dawn." Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton head the cast. He will be abroad about six weeks.

D. W. GRIFFITH AND STAFF GO TO EUROPE

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later, he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Takes His Company to Germany to Make Big Picture

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH

D. W. Griffith left with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington yesterday, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, a popular English writer. It is an original work known under the working title The Dawn. Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre in New York several years ago, will be in the picture. Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company.

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war [illegible] Hearts of the World.

GRIFFITH NOW FILMING ABROAD

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington Friday sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes. The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn." Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors. Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures." This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects. The company will be abroad about six weeks.

GRIFFITH SAILS TO MAKE MOVIE

Director and Staff to Start Work in Germany.

D. W. Griffith sails with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures." This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects. The company will be abroad about six weeks.

IN THE MOVIE WORLD.

D. W. Griffith is sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, one of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruited from the Moscow Art theater company and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures." This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects. The company will be abroad about six weeks.

GRIFFITH WILL MAKE THE DAWN IN EUROPE

SUB-TITLES

Griffith to Make Pictures in Europe—Lillian Bound for London

It must be awfully nice to be either rich or in the movies. Of course, being a subject is nice, too, for you can stick into the cast any little commonness about the rich or the movies that pop into your mind without ever having a chance to meet one back. But also as all the rich force that get sore in a nice and neat for the subject, and all the movieses who tickle off across the mind, right all we can do is grief and weep and bum down to the conference of St. Pauls.

Many of the baby lairs of the time back actually added the movie world, and the rest is all in short time [illegible] Mary and Doug [illegible] is having the time [illegible] on the George Washington for Germany, which of all the sons of the [illegible] Hotel on the next period under the working title of "The Dawn." [illegible] will be back in August.

Mr. Griffith is planning to go to Germany accompanied by Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Frank Puglia, an Italian actor, a Russian actor, and a number of other people, and [illegible] Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater [illegible] years ago. Miss Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures." This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects. The company will be abroad about six weeks.

THE THEATRE ON BROADWAY

By S. M. MINDELL

"GOSSIP"

The Theatre Guild's production of "Gossip," at the Lyceum, will play under Guild management all Summer. In the Fall, the players will take over the road rights of the play and send out two companies simultaneously.

Miss Florence Johns, the talented young actress who has last seen here in "Children of the Moon" is to have an important role in "The Best People," which the Fulbrook company will present at the Lyceum Theatre, in August.

D. W. Griffith will move with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington, on Friday, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title of "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictured, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

GRIFFITH SAILING TO WORK ABROAD

Big Film Producer Will Make "The Dawn" in Germany

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington Friday, July 4, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes. The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre company and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about

AMUSE

Griffith Goes Abroad.

D. W. Griffith left with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington Friday, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes. The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, an English writer. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn." Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruited from the Moscow Art Theatre Company and German, Italian, English and American talent. Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company.

New Film by Griffith

D. W. Griffith's next picture, for which he is now working, is known tentatively as "The Dawn." H sailed last week with his staff and players for Germany and England to take exterior scenes.

The story is by Geoffrey Moss, a popular English novelist.

Griffith will introduce an international cast of players recruited from the Moscow Art Theater, and German, Italian, English and American talent.

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since making his war scenes for "Hearts of the World."

Griffith Off To Make Film In Old World

American Actors to Head Cast of International Players in Europe.

STORY IS ORIGINAL

D. W. Griffith and his players and staff have sailed for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes. The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, a popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title, "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruited from the Moscow Art Theater Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Griffith Will Take Scenes In Germany

D. W. GRIFFITH left for Germany last week to take exterior scenes for "Dawn," his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruiting from Moscow Art theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

GRIFFITH MAKES THE PARSON'S GESTURE

Noted Screen Producer May Be Preparing to Launch a Powerful Anti-War Argument in New Picture.

By EARLE DORSEY.

SIR J. M. BARRIE'S reported intention of crossing the Atlantic to supervise the American screen production of "Peter Pan," printed elsewhere in this issue, and D. W. Griffith's sailing for Germany to begin work on a new photoplay, exclusively announced in these columns last Thursday, were easily the two outstanding events of the past week in celluloid circles.

Of the two, I am inclined to believe that the Griffith adventure is the most important. It not only bears the stamp of authenticity—having emanated directly from the Griffith laboratory—but it is probably indicative of a new intention on Griffith's part to add at least one more innovation in screen technique to the many inventions of this producer in the past.

Griffith's announcement guardedly states his belief in the awakening of the motion-picture public to a new appreciation of subtlety in gelatine dramatics and having attained that personal conclusion, he guardedly speaks of introducing new pantomimic effects of a somewhat revolutionary character.

Such a statement from the average member of the magaphone fraternity would quickly be indexed among the deluge of blah-blah mimeography born of the press agent's nimble brain. Griffith's position, however, has long been too responsible a one to permit his gazeteers to indulge in mere gestures. The mere suggestion of new photographic trickery to come from Griffith is very near to a statement that the trickery has already been evolved and will be brought into practice, once Griffith arrives in Germany.

* * *

ANOTHER rather important phase of the same announcement is the fact that his new picture, prepared by Geoffrey Moss, a young Englishman, will be, in the working title of "The Dawn" and will enlist the services of a cast of international complexion, including American, English, German, Russian, Italian and possibly French types, headed by the petite Carol Dempster and the virile Neil Hamilton, who were last seen hereabout in the Pell presentation of "America."

When Griffith's incorrigible lust for propaganda is considered, in the light of such a title and such an international cast, it is not difficult to arrive at the conclusion that "The Dawn" will not only introduce whatever new technical effects Mr. Griffith may devise, but that it will, in all probability, propound a sermon, forcible or otherwise, on behalf of the doctrine of universal peace.

* * *

ANYONE who has considered Griffith's work for even the past half-dozen years is unable to evade the impression that the old master, who long since tired of the short-story film form and who has now apparently tired of the drama spectacle as such, is obsessed with the idea of the screen's importance from an educational rather than from a dramatic or technical point of view.

This tendency myself personally, if I remember, with those first Mr. Mencken's exclamatory sentences in his inevitable commentaries on movies or movie-makers appears on the part of a man endowed of good, clear logic, tend to satisfy themselves. It seemed, on Griffith's part, as far back as "The Birth of a Nation," into which upon the screening was cast a long unreasonable amount of the cause of the people in the cause of the politician, and proved in Griffith's occasions of the last that the movie cult proclaim are in the truth was brought plain points through the mechanisms of a political satire and not with which the hand was in control of the pen and not allowed the hand to take.

A film has a diversity than anything else in the world. It is the only medium of expression which can be made to appeal to the mass of people in the same way and at the same time. It is the only medium

Holyoke (Mass) Telegram 7/17/24

Cumberland (Md) News 7/17/24

Dayton (Ohio) Herald 7/17/24

St. Petersburg (Fla) Times July 18 1924

Pueblo (Colo) Star Journal July 18 1924

News Notes from Movieland

The eminent D. W. Griffith, has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston, she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night," and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Carol Dempster.

Middletown (O) Journal 7/17/24

NEWS NOTES OF MOVIELAND

The eminent D. W. Griffith, has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston, she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night," and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Kankakee (Ill) Republican July 17 1924

Carol Dempster.

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Augusta (Ga) Chronicle 7/17/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster.

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Ironton (Ohio) Irontonian 7/17/24

News Notes from Movieland

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

My Mirror 7/18/24

Impressed

Griffith Says Germany To-day Is World's Greatest Drama.

By Universal Service.

BERLIN. — "Germany is the greatest drama in the world today," declared David Wark Griffith, famous film director, summing up his impressions on his first visit to this country.

D. W. Griffith.

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "It is intensely interesting here. There is drama on every side.

"Germany, in spite of her defeat, and demoralization, and revolution, with her financial and economic crisis, has remained a bulwark against Bolshevism.

"Just the little I have seen and studied so far convinces me that this intensely virile, practical, industrious nation will survive."

Adolph Zukor, of Famous Players-Lasky, has just announced that Griffith will start work upon a new picture for that organization immediately upon his return from Germany.

Oshkosh (Wis) Northwestern 7/18/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Seattle (Wash) Times 7/17/24

GRIFFITH GOES ABROAD

GRIFFITH FINDS GERMANY GREATEST DRAMA IN WORLD

Lowell (Mass) Leader 7/18/24

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

The eminent D. W. Griffith, has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston the was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Carol Dempster.

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She Stroheim is to direct and Mae Murray n either appearance or actions.

Oshkosh (Wis) Northwestern 7/18/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Dayton (Ohio) Herald 7/17/24

"COUNTRY THAT TRIED TO WHIP WORLD WILL SURVIVE"—GRIFFITH

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
(Special Cable to Universal Service)

BERLIN, July 16.—"Germany is the greatest drama in the world today," declared David Mark Griffith, famous film director, summing up his impressions on his first visit to this country.

Griffith is here with a staff of fifteen to make scenes for his new film, "The Dawn."

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "I have never been in Germany before. It is intensely interesting here. There is drama on every side.

"Humanly considered, there is always more dramatic element with the defeated than with the victors in war. Germany, in spite of her defeat and demoralisation, and revolution, with her financial and economic crisis has remained a bulwark against Bolshevism. This is an intensely dramatic story which is unwritten as yet.

"Just the little I have seen and studied so far, convinces me that this intensely, virile, practical, industrious country will survive."

Griffith would not discuss his new picture. "I wanted the actual people and scenes as background—that is why I am here."

Albany (Ny) News 7/18/24

"Frozen Light" is the latest thing in the movie studios, and David W. Griffith will experiment with it in his next picture, "Dawn." The Klieg lights make it pretty hot for the actors in the studios, and if the frozen lights prove practical, furs will replace palm leaf fans with the hard-working stars.

Washington (D C) Herald 7/19/24

Chicago (Ill) Herald-Examiner July 19 1924

MR. GRIFFITH TO EXPERIMENT WITH "FROZEN LIGHT"

Will Try Out Important New Invention in Germany

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal the delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do expression over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after his arrival in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture "Dawn."

Springfield (O) Sun July 19 1924

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster.

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English author. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Syracuse (N Y) Herald 7/19/24

German 'Drama' Wins Griffith

Herald and Examiner-Universal Cable.

BERLIN, July 17.—"Germany is the greatest drama in the world today," said David Wark Griffith, famous film director, summing up his impressions on his first visit to this country.

D. W. GRIFFITH

Griffith is here with a staff of fifteen to make scenes for his new film "The Dawn."

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "I have never been in Germany before. It is intensely interesting here. There is drama on every side.

"Humanly considered, there is always more dramatic element with the defeated than with the victors in war. Germany in spite of her demoralisation has remaind a bulwark against bolshevism. This is an intensely dramatic story which is unwritten as yet. I am convinced that this nation will survive."

Regarding the new picture he is making, Griffith said:

"It is a peaceful story, not pro-Boy anti anybody, and the scenes are laid partly in Germany and partly in England. I wanted the actual people and scenes as background—that is why I am here."

Milwaukee (Wis) Sentinel 7/19/24

GRIFFITH FINDS GREATEST DRAMA IS GERMANY

Sees Sign in Nation's Fight on Bolshevism on Visit to Produce New Picture.

By POLLY PEROMA.

Cincinnati (O) Enquirer July 19 1924

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

San Francisco (Cal) Examiner July 19 1924

GERMANY 'DRAMA' SAYS GRIFFITH

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

BERLIN, July 16.—(Special cable dispatch to Universal Service.)—"Germany is the greatest drama in the world today," declared David Wark Griffith, famous film director, summing up his impressions on his first visit to this country.

Griffith is here with a staff of fifteen to make scenes for his new film, "The Dawn."

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "I have never been in Germany before. It is intensely interesting here. There is drama on every side.

"Humanly considered, there is always more dramatic element with the defeated than with the victors in war. Germany, in spite of her defeat and demoralization, and revolution, with her financial and economic crisis has remained a bulwark against Bolshevism. This is an intensely dramatic story which is unwritten as yet. I am convinced that this nation will survive."

Regarding the new picture he is making, Griffith said:

"It is a peaceful story, not pro-anti anybody, and the scenes are laid partly in Germany and partly in England. I wanted the actual people and scenes as background—that is why I am here."

Portland (Ore) Press Herald July 19 1924

Lynn (Mass) Telegram Leader July 19 1924

Griffith Sails

Dempster and Hamilton Will Lead Cast in 'The Dawn'

D. W. GRIFFITH left with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington July 4, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent.

The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture ,he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Cincinnati (O) Billboard 7/12/24

GRIFFITH'S LAST PICTURE UNDER U. A. CONTRACT

New York, July 5.—D. W. Griffith, accompanied by Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and a number of assistants, sailed today (Saturday) on the George Washington for Europe, where they will produce the greater portion of "The Dawn". The company will make exteriors in Germany and in England. It is believed that "The Dawn" will be the last picture Griffith will deliver to United Artists' Corporation for distribution, since his contract with that company will expire with the delivery of this, his eighth, picture to it.

What Griffith will do after that is not definitely known, but it is current talk that he will go with Famous Players-Lasky. It seems certain that he will not renew with United Artists, since he has expressed himself as being dissatisfied with that concern's handling of his pictures.

Whatever the famous director will do is fraught with much interest to the industry as a whole, especially with regard to the peculiar situation in which Griffith finds himself thru his connection with D. W. Griffith, Inc. This company, formed a number of years ago with a very large capitalization, has practically its only asset, outside of old negatives and some property, in Griffith himself. The stock is scattered all over the country and the people who hold it have naturally a great deal of interest in whatever Griffith may do, especially since it has never been a [illegible]

Dayton (O) Journal 7/13/24

Griffith Goes to Germany On Filming Foray

D. W. Griffith and his players and staff are on their way to Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, one of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found several years ago.

Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, new leading man, will head the Company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Portland (Ore) Oregonian 7/13/24

Griffith to Film Play With New Cast.

Plans to Have International Players in "The Dawn."

D. W. GRIFFITH, with his players and staff, has sailed for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production, a story prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn." Later, the producer will go to England for further scenes.

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture ,he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

San Francisco (Cal) Chronicle 7/13/24

Griffith Goes Abroad for Scenes and Players

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington Friday, for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, popular English writer. It is an original work under the working title "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture ,he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Columbus (O) Dispatch 7/13/24

Griffith Goes Abroad.

D. W. Griffith has left with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture ,he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects new to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been awakened to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Seattle Times 7/13/24

Griffith and Co. Sail

D. W. Griffith with a staff of players and assistants sailed on the steamship George Washington to take pictures in Germany and England for the production, "The Dawn." Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton head the cast. The company will be abroad about six weeks. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruited from the Moscow Art Theater Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent.

Cincinnati (O) Post 7/14/24

Fostoria (Ohio) Times 7/15/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

My Womens Wear July 15 1924

D.W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany were he has gone with his company of players. European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris June 30. It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression. "If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

My Telegram 7/18/24

Film Daily July 15 1924

Kansas City (Mo) Star 7/13/24

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earliest pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Mansfield (O) News 7/16/24

~~Griffith Sails For Europe~~ To Make Vehicle For Pretty Carol

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn", an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street", she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Daily News Elgin (Ill) 7/16/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English author. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Mattoon (Ill) Journal 7/23/24

Ohio movie-goers are facing a fight in the courts to make Sunday closing of motion picture houses compulsory. Test cases are being brought in Canton, and the Akron ministers are planning to close all the theatres in that city shortly and start on Cleveland and other large cities.

Mansfield (O) News 7/16/24

Griffith Sails For Europe To Make Vehicle

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn", an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street", she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

My Commercial July 16 1924

Waltham (Mass) News Tribune July 16 1924

MOVIELAND GOSSIP

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Covington (Ky) Post 7/16/24

Griffith and Co. Sail

D. W. Griffith with a staff of players and assistants sailed on the steamship George Washington to take pictures in Germany and England for the production, "The Dawn." Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton head the cast. The company will be abroad about six weeks. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruited from the Moscow Art Theater Company, and German, Italian, English and American talent.

My Dad News Record 7/16/24

Lewiston (Me) Evening Journal 7/16/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English author. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Denver (Colo) Post 7/16/24

Lincoln (Neb) Star 7/16/24

Omaha (Neb) Bee 7/16/24

Oswego (N.Y.) Palladium 7/10/24

GREAT FOR SCREEN LOVERS.

Frozen Light claimed to Have Been Discovered By European Inventors.

NEW YORK, July 12.—D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany, where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science which asserted that 10,000 candle-power lights did not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

Dunkirk (N.Y.) Observer 7/16/24

PHOTOPLAY SIDELIGHTS

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris June 30.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact" said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Milwaukee (Wis) Leader 7/16/24

Griffith Sails For Europe To Make Vehicle

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn", an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street", she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Manchester (N.H.) Mirror 7/17/24

WILL EXPERIMENT WITH "FROZEN LIGHT"

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact" said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for directors and players, and be one of the greatest advance pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Tonight, a la carte at Lawrence Inn.

FILMLAND

CAROL DEMPSTER

The eminent D. W. Griffith, has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Waltham (Mass) News Tribune 7/17/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Gazette 7/24/24 Janesville (Wis)

Ft Wayne (Ind) News-Sent 7/28/24

Austin (Tex) Statesman 7/27/24

Portland (Me) Press-Herald July 28 1924

Variety (NYC) 7/30/24

Screen Talk

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

CAROL DEMPSTER

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's historic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

My Eve World July 24 1924

"FROZEN LIGHT."

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany, where she has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat and Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture, which will have the title of "Dawn."

This ought to be "some" help in the shooting of many of the tender love scenes to be found in each and every movie. It can't be much fun to go through a lot of heated lovemaking at a temperature well over 100 degrees due to the present system of lighting. So all the sleek-haired heroes and their heroines will hail this announcement with delight. We can't blame them, as heat is heat even in a love scene.

Terre Haute (Ind) Tribune 7/24/24

News Notes from Movieland

By DAISY DEAN

The eminent D. W. Griffith, has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Carol Dempster

Peoria (Ill) Journal 7/25/24

Screen News Sacramento (Cal) July 26 1924

MOVIE NOTES

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find" and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night," and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Reading (Pa) Eagle 7/27/24

Frozen Light Would Be Welcome in the Good Old Summertime

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30. It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperatures well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

News Notes From MOVIELAND

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrays. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Carol Dempster.

Portland (Ore) Press 7/28/24

D. W. Griffith will experiment with frozen light while taking scenes for "The Dawn" in Germany. European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat, a demonstration of this having been recently given by Camille Dussard. It is asserted that ten thousand candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat and Griffith hopes to use the invention exclusively in making all the closer scenes [illegible] picture.

Lincoln (Ill) Star 7/28/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Tulsa (Okla) World 7/27/24

Atlantic City (NJ) Press 7/28/24

TIDINGS FROM MOVIE STUDIOS

BY MARION DEAN.

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

Union (NJ) Digest July 24 1924

'FROZEN LIGHT' FOR SCREEN IS PROPOSED

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat, a demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30. It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperatures well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Milwaukee (Wis) Leader 7/24/24

Brockton (Mass) Enterprise 7/26/24

Pittsburgh (Pa) Courier 7/27/24

Norfolk (Va) Virginian-Pilot 7/27/24

Sun 7/24/24

SCENES LAID IN EUROPE

St Paul (Minn) News 7/27/24

FROZEN LIGHT" TO BE TRIED OUT BY GRIFFITH

Indianapolis Star 7/27/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Cleveland (O) News 7/31/24

Indianapolis (Ind) Post 7/31/24

GRIFFITH OFF UP ON MAIN TRADE TOPIC

Director in Berlin Making "Dawn"—May Sell Mamaroneck Studios

D. W. Griffith is in Berlin, stopping at the Bristol Hotel with the members of his company. The company includes Mrs. Albert Gray, Zamah Cunningham, Carol Dempster, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Hamilton and Frank Puglia. The camera staff has H. L. Sintzenich and Hendrik Sartow and the latter's wife, also W. J. Bantel, who is superintendent of construction, and Frank Deim, the still photographer, and his wife.

Griffith has been shooting exterior scenes for his latest production, "Dawn," to be the final United Artists' release by this director. He will not say anything regarding the controversy now on in the United States between Famous Players and the United Artists, as to which organization Griffith is to continue with. He simply states that he has signed with Famous for three pictures and that the question is now in the hands of Albert H. T. Banzhaf, his attorney.

While Griffith is abroad the little battle in New York is waging over who will release his pictures in the future and who will not. At the Famous Players last week it was stated Griffith is under contract to that corporation and will produce three pictures for them.

On Wednesday last a meeting of the United Artists was held in the rooms of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford at the Ritz, at which emphatic denials were issued of the story that Griffith would produce for Famous. Present at the meeting were Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Albert H. T. Banzhaf, who represented Griffith, while Nathan Burkan represented Charles Chaplin. Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists, was also present.

Abrams stated that at the annual meeting of the stockholders and owners of the United Artists, held on March 24, last, it was agreed by all of the members of the Big Four that they would remain together for another three years. Banzhaf, Griffith's lawyer, protested this statement. He stated that that statement was gotten out solely for publicity purposes.

All of the rumors and the leaks of the inside squabbles have had their effect on the trade. That is the reason for the statement, according to the Banzhaf-Griffith side of the fence.

On the Griffith side there seems to be plenty of assurance that if the matter should come to a legal battle between their chief and the United Artists that Griffith will come off victorious.

It is understood that steps are being taken to dispose of the Mamaroneck studios, held by the Griffith corporation. These studios are said to represent an outlay of approximately $1,500,000. The report that the First National was negotiating for the location was neither affirmed or denied yesterday.

One of the questions that is coming in for considerable discussion with the passing of Griffith to Famous Players is as to the future of his executive staff, which he had built up around him for considerable years. It is natural that Albert W. Gray, the director's brother, will continue with Griffith, and it is also almost certain that Pat Campbell, who acts as contract general manager and general representative, will remain. Campbell has been handling the Griffith production sales contracts and been personal contact man between the Griffith organization and the exhibitors of the country, he having made memorable trips across the country visiting exhibitors in the interests of Griffith pictures and handling the details of the road shows as well, assuming charge in this other particular. What others of the staff will remain is a question at this time.

Cleveland (O) Press July 31 1924

Detroit (Mich) Free Press 7/19/24

GRIFFITH AND PLAYERS SAIL FOR GERMANY

D. W. Griffith and his players and staff have sailed for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young acter in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Milwaukee (Wis) Leader 7/19/24

GRIFFITH FINDS DRAMATIC STORY IN GERMANY

BERLIN—David Wark Griffith, famous film director, is convinced that Germany will survive. He said so a few hours after arriving here with a staff of fifteen to make scenes for his new film, Dawn.

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "I have never been in Germany before. It is intensely interesting here. There is drama on every side.

"Humanly considered, there is always more dramatic element with the defeated than with the victors in war. Germany in spite of her demoralization has remained a bulwark against bolshevism. This is an intensely dramatic story which is unwritten as yet. I am convinced that this nation will survive."

Regarding the new picture he is making, Griffith said:

"It is a peaceful story, not pro nor anti anybody, and the scenes are laid partly in Germany and partly in England. I wanted the actual people and scenes as background—that is why I am here."

Columbus (O) Journal 7/20/24

America Loses a Great Director

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH has departed from these shores for Germany where he will supervise motion picture productions for a Berlin company. And America, long recognized as supreme in the field of this "infantile" industry loses her greatest director because there is no company willing to pay the price for his services.

Life for the movie director is not in a bed of golden roses each to be had for the plucking. A few have been financially successful and Thomas H. Ince is one of them. But Griffith, the producer of the films that still hold the honor of being the productions of greatest dramatic forcefulness, has long been on the verge of financial failure.

"America," a historic film depicting the exciting days of the Revolution, is the last picture Griffith made in this country. During the photographing of this film, it became known that the director was confronted with the difficulties of inadequate equipment, a technical staff shy in numbers, and was paying the actors only by exercising economy in other departments.

Lionel Barrymore, who plays one of the principals in "America," heard of Griffith's predicament and immediately sent word that he would volunteer his services, without remuneration, rather than see work on the film cease. However, the picture was completed and with its premiere was hailed as a success, but the most optimistic cannot hope that this film alone will replenish the meagrely-lined coffers of Griffith's company.

Upon the completion of "America," it was rumored that the Italian government was to engage the maker of "The Birth of a Nation" to direct an historical film to be made in Italy. These plans failed to materialize.

The next report was that Griffith was to retire from the making of long feature films and in the future was to devote his time to pictures of five or six reels to be made by his own company. This arrangement went the way of the Italian government's plans.

Now, Griffith with a small staff has sailed for Germany, definitely engaged by German producers. Among the film personages going with him were Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton. The latter is the star of "America" and Griffith's most recent "find."

As a result of the exchange of directors between Europe and America during the last few years the scale has been heavily laden to America's advantage. Without losing a single prominent director the American industry has received Ernst Lubitsch, Dimitri Buchowetzki, Victor Seastrom and others, but the advantage has now been offset by one man. Mr. Griffith sends the scale down with a bump in favor of European directorial staffs.

It is to be hoped that Griffith's return to the American industry will not be long delayed and that foreign films do not permanently win him. He stands today as the first great director and his supremacy is not seriously contested. "The Birth of a Nation," celebrated its tenth birthday almost six months ago and still stands as one of the classics of the screen. Another Griffith production that bids to hold a high place for many days to come is "Broken Blossoms." In the opinions of the majority of motion picture fans Griffith stands without a peer.

Glancing around for a director in America on whom his mantle might fall, two names present themselves for his position. James Cruze, director of "The Covered Wagon," and Charlie Chaplin, although born in Great Britain, are two of the more prominent film directors who are entitled to bid for the place of the greatest American supervisor. Chaplin's initial directorial effort, "A Woman of Paris," set a high standard that makes him eligible for the honor.

But in place of searching for Griffith's successor let us hope that he will soon see fit to return to the American industry.

L. U. J.

Saginaw (Mich) News-Courier July 20 1924

GRIFFITH WILL TRY, OUT "FROZEN LIGHT"

German Invention, if Workable, Will Prove Great Aid.

FOR CLOSE-UP SCENES

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact" said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advance pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Bellingham (Wn) Reveille 7/20/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Nashville Tenn Tennessean July 20 1924

GRIFFITH IN GERMANY TO TAKE EXTERIOR SCENES

Sails With Players and Staff; Goes to England Next.

D. W. Griffith left with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington recently sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly described Hamilton as "having as great possibilities as any young actor in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture, he hopes to introduce pantomimic effects now to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has advanced to more subtle effects.

The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Springfield (Mass) Republican 7/20/24

To Try "Frozen Light."

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next picture in Germany, where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and indorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players and be one of the greatest advance pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Portland (Ore) Oregonian 7/20/24

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players and be one of the greatest advance pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Toledo (O) Blade July 22 1924

Griffith to Try "Frozen Light"

D. W. GRIFFITH will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for "The Dawn" in Germany. European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat, a demonstration having been recently given by Camille Dussard. It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat and Griffith hopes to use the invention exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Exhibitors Herald Chicago (Ill) July 19 1924

Griffith and Staff to Go Abroad for Picture

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, July 9.—D. W. Griffith has sailed with his players and staff for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, popular English writer. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, will head the company. The company will be abroad about six weeks.

Seattle (Wash) Post-Intel July 19 1924

GRIFFITH FINDS GERMAN DRAMA

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

(Staff Correspondent, Universal Service)

BERLIN, July 18.—"Germany is the greatest drama in the world today," declared David Wark Griffith, famous film director, summing up his impressions of his first visit to this country.

Griffith is here with a staff of fifteen to make scenes for his new film, "The Dawn."

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "I have never been in Germany before."

Same

D. W. Griffith, accompanied by Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and his technical staff, sailed on the George Washington last Friday for Germany, where he will take exterior scenes for his next production, which will be made under the working title of "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans an international cast headed by Miss Dempster and Mr. Hamilton, and he will recruit players from the Moscow Art Theatre as well as German, Italian, English and other American talent.

The company, which will be abroad about six weeks, is the first Mr. Griffith has taken to the old city since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World."

Jay Mo Post July 19 1924

CARL DEMPSTER and Neil Hamilton are on their way to Europe with D. W. Griffith, where Mr. Griffith will film a picture.

Santa Rosa (Cal) Dem. 7/20/24

Saginaw (Mich) Courier 7/20/24

GRIFFITH WILL TRY, OUT "FROZEN LIGHT"

German Invention, if Workable, Will Prove Great Aid.

FOR CLOSE-UP SCENES

Baltimore (Md) Sun 7/20/24

Will Try Out Frozen Light

D. W. Griffith Will Experiment With New European Invention On "Dawn"

D. W. GRIFFITH will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the "frozen light" exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advance pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture.

Springfield (Mass) Republican July 20 1924

San Francisco (Cal) Herald 7/20/24

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram 7/20/24

D. W. Griffith to Make Film Abroad

D. W. Griffith to Film Abroad

Baton (Mass) Post 7/21/24

SOMETHING NEW

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the "frozen light" exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players and be one of the greatest advance pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture.

Seattle (Wash) Times 7/21/24

TEST "FROZEN LIGHT"

EXPERIMENTS MAY ADAPT IT TO FILM USE

D. W. Griffith Announces Invention of Trying Weather Characteristics in Making Film Play.

FRATERNAL FILMS SUNDAY

Indianapolis (Ind) Star 7/21/24

Seattle (Wash) Star 7/24/24

D. W. Griffith to Take Film to Germany

Springfield (Mass) Republican July 20 1924

Portland (Ore) Telegram July 25 1924

NEWS NOTES OF MOVIELAND

By DAISY DEAN

THE eminent D. W. Griffith, has sailed for Europe with his editorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find" and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or action.

Carol Dempster.

Horsemen." Rudy will wear velvet knee breeches and jacket trimmed with silver buttons.

Atlantic City (NJ) Gazette 7/20/24

D. W. Griffith and a company of players have arrived in Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

South Bend (Ind) Tribune 7/20/24

GRIFFITH GIVES VIEWS.

Drama of Post-War Germany Discussed by Movie Man.

BERLIN, July 19.—"Germany is the greatest drama in the world today," said David Wark Griffith, famous film director, summing up his impressions on his first visit to this country.

Griffith is here with a staff of 15 to make scenes for his new film "The Dawn."

"I wanted to see and study the country and the people who attempted to lick the world," he said. "I have never been in Germany before. It is intensely interesting here. There is drama on every side.

"Humanly considered, there is always more dramatic element with the defeated than with the victors in war. Germany in spite of her demoralization has remained a bulwark against bolshevism. This is an intensely dramatic story which is unwritten as yet. I am convinced that this nation will survive."

Regarding the new picture he is making, Griffith said:

"It is a peaceful story, not pro nor anti anybody, and the scenes are laid partly in Germany and partly in England. I wanted the actual people and scenes as background—that is why I am here."

Springfield (Mass) Republican 7/20/24

GRIFFITH TO EXPERIMENT WITH FROZEN LIGHT IN GERMANY

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for "The Dawn" in Germany. European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat, a demonstration having been recently given by Camille Dussard. It is asserted 10,000 candle-power lights do not give off the slightest heat and Griffith hopes to use the invention exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

TAKES THIRD WIFE

GRIFFITH WILL COMPLETE "DAWN" ON THE OTHER SIDE

Director Finds Producing Conditions in Germany so Satisfactory He Elaborates Plans—Will Not Return Until September.

In a special dispatch from Germany to The Morning Telegraph comes the surprising news that David Wark Griffith has found conditions in Germany so favorable that he has decided to complete all of the important scenes for his next picture, "The Dawn," on the other side.

The director originally intended remaining in Germany eight days to take exterior scenes, but native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make not only the exterior scenes there, but the interiors as well.

Griffith's passage was originally booked for the United States for August 1, and now it has been indefinitely postponed, with the probability that he will return early in September.

The communication states that Griffith's enthusiasm for dramatic conditions in Germany has spurred him on to enlarge materially the original scope of his production. Neil Hamilton and Carol Dempster are the principal American film personalities who accompanied Griffith to Europe to play leading roles in the photoplay.

D. W. Griffith has found Germany so favorable as a production base that he intends to remain there for some time longer and to complete in Berlin all the important scenes for "Dawn."

Griffith to Finish New Film in Berlin

Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Berlin that D. W. Griffith has decided there to complete all important scenes for his next picture, "The Dawn."

D. W. Griffith.

He originally intended remaining only eight days to take exterior scenes, but actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

What "The Dawn" is all about has not been divulged. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton are playing important roles.

D. W. Griffith ist vorgestern mit seinen Filmschauspielern nach Deutschland abgereist.

Von JULIUS COHEN.

D. W. Griffith, einer der hervorragendsten amerikanischen Filmdirektoren, ist vorgestern, Freitag, 4. Juli, mit seinen Schauspielern und seinem technischen Stab mit dem Dampfer „George Washington" nach Deutschland abgefahren, wo er Szenen für seine neue Produktion „The Dawn" aufzunehmen gedenkt. Später beabsichtigt er auch England zur Vervollständigung der Filmszenen zu besuchen.

Die Filmgeschichte zu „The Dawn" stammt von Geoffrey Moß, einem jetzt sehr populären englischen Bühnenschriftsteller.

Mr. Griffith beabsichtigt, ein internationales Schauspielerpersonal für dieses Wandelbild zusammenzustellen, das sich aus bedeutenden Talenten des Moskauer Kunst-Theaters und Künstlern aus Deutschland, Italien, England und Amerika rekrutieren soll. Italien wird durch Franz Puglia repräsentiert sein. Diesen jungen Schauspieler entdeckte Griffith vor einigen Jahren in einem der kleinen italienischen Theater New Yorks und er hält Puglia als einen der fähigsten der jungen Filmgeneration.

Miß Carol Dempster, die schon mehrere Hauptrollen in Griffiths Produktionen kreiert hat, wird die weibliche Hauptrolle auch in diesem neuen Film innehaben. Die männliche Hauptrolle wird durch Neil Hamilton vertreten sein.

Dieses Wandelbild wird das erste sein, seit Mr. Griffith seine Kriegsszenen für „Hearts of the World" drüben aufgenommen hatte. Im neuen Film gedenkt Mr. Griffith pantomimische Effekte herauszubringen, die ganz neu sind, da er meint, daß das Publikum sich nach etwas neuem und wirkungsvollerem auf diesem Gebiete sehnt.

Die Gesellschaft wird sich etwa sechs Wochen in Europa aufhalten.

David Wark Griffith.

Stab mit dem Dampfer „George Washington" nach Deutschland abgefahren, wo er Szenen für seine neue Produktion „The Dawn" aufzunehmen gedenkt. Später beabsichtigt er auch England zur Vervollständigung der Filmszenen zu besuchen.

Griffith Continues "The Dawn" Abroad

Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Berlin that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn," according to a Berlin dispatch from the company now in Germany on the picture.

Griffith originally intended remaining there eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors there.

Passage was originally booked for Griffith's return on August 1; and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he will leave early in September. His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions in Berlin has spurred him on to enlarge materially the original scope of his production.

D. W. Griffith has nearly finished "The Dawn" in Germany, and will sail with his American staff and players about September 1.

Filmograms

D. W. GRIFFITH says in a message from Berlin, in the vicinity of which he is making his next picture, "Dawn," that conditions are so favorable there that he will complete all important scenes on the continent.

GRIFFITH LIKES GERMAN ACTOR

Went to Berlin for Only Few Scenes Of "The Dawn."

Conditions in Germany have been found so favorable for making motion pictures that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn," on the other side.

He originally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

GRIFFITH TO SHOOT "DAWN" IN GERMANY

BERLIN, Germany, Aug. 17—Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures here that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He orginally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

Griffith Will Make Most of New Picture "Dawn" in Germany

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures here that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

Passage was originally booked for Griffith's return on August 1; and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he will leave early in September.

His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions here has spurred Mr. Griffith to enlarge materially the original scope of his drama.

D. W. Griffith has sailed for Germany to film "The Dawn," which will be his final picture on his United Artists contract. Upon his return he will immediately commence on his first picture for Famous Players-Lasky, contrary to reports.

Griffith Will Experiment in Frozen Light

(BY CHARLES A. COLLINS.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen" light in Germany, when making his next motion picture. It is claimed that European inventors have perfected lighting without heat. A demonstration recently made by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science. It is asserted that 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith expects to use the frozen light exclusively in making the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to make in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Griffith To Use "Frozen" Light

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany, where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Cammille Dussard in Paris was approved and indorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris, June 30.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn".

Ten or fifteen years ago it was the American tourist with his kodak that cluttered the most ancient and honorable corners of Europe. Currently it is the professional camera man with his films that come by the mile instead of the dozen. Just behind him is the director with his megaphone and directly in front is any one of a number of America's more expensive movie stars. The principal points of interest in Italy have been particularly crowded of late with "The White Sister," "Ben Hur," and "The Sporting Venus" (Blanche Sweet) companies in action. The most recent announcement of invasion comes from Gloria Swanson, who will sail the middle of September to do "Mme. Sans Gene" in Paris.

Regarding picture conditions in another section of the continent comes a note from the Griffith offices:

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures here that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

Passage was originally booked for Griffith's return on August 1; and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he will leave early in September.

His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions here has spurred Mr. Griffith to enlarge materially the original scope of his drama.

GRIFFITH'S FROZEN LIGHT.

D. W. Grimth will experiment with "frozen light" in Germany, when making his next motion picture. It is claimed that European inventors have perfected lighting without heat. A demonstration recently made by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and indorsed by the French Academy of Science. It is asserted that 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith expects to use the frozen light exclusively in making the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to make in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

"D. W." Won't Talk

Director to Be Interviewed by Boston Newspaper Men—Has Vile Morning

---

Griffith Pleased by German Actors

Griffith to Complete Scenes in Germany

A few important scenes for "The Dawn" will be completed by D. W. Griffith in Germany if he is reported the local conditions especially favorable there.

Mr. Griffith originally planned to remain only eight days in Germany for exterior scenes but has now arranged the talent necessary to make the interiors there as well.

The venue passage reserved for him to return to America August 1st has been indefinitely postponed.

Griffith Is To Expand Program

Film Company Is Making a Drive

Griffith Pictures to Be Filmed in Berlin

Griffith Continues "The Dawn" Abroad

Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Berlin that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn," according to a Berlin dispatch from the company now in Germany on the picture.

Griffith originally intended remaining there eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors there.

Passage was originally booked for Griffith's return on August 1; and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he will leave early in September. His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions in Berlin has spurred him on to enlarge materially the original scope of his production.

Griffith Will Complete "Dawn" Abroad

Another section of the continent comes a note from the Griffith offices:

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures here that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

Griffith Likes Berlin Conditions

D. W. Griffith May Remain Until September In German Capital

CONDITIONS have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Berlin, Germany, that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining there eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable that Mr. Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors there.

Making "The Dawn" Abroad.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH has found conditions in Germany so favorable that he has decided to complete all of the important scenes of his next picture, "The Dawn," on the other side. He plans to return to this country some time in September.

David W. Griffith Shoots Scenes Of 'Dawn' In Germany

Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Berlin that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete there all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining there eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors there.

NEW GRIFFITH FILM FINISHED

Director Will Attempt to Lift Ban Declared by London Houses Against 'America'

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Staff Correspondent Universal Service

Special Cable Dispatch

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—With the last scenes of his new picture, "The Dawn," which are largely laid in Germany, completed, David Wark Griffith, film director, left this afternoon for London to try to have the ban lifted on his "America," the showing of which in England was stopped by the British government.

"I have invited the newspaper men of London to see the picture and act as a jury to decide if there is anything in it that could make a bad feeling between the two countries," said Griffith.

"I maintain that there is nothing of that kind in the picture. I was particularly careful to avoid even well-known historical facts and incidents in America's struggle for independence that were not a credit to the Britain of that day because I did not want in any way to offend the British people or nation of today.

"Naturally I could not show the British as having won our war for independence."

D. W. Griffith Is Due Back in America, From Germany, September 16

D. W. Griffith, who has been making "Dawn" in Germany, has completed his work abroad, and will arrive in New York, September 16.

It is expected that on his return the director will take up the task of straightening out the misunderstanding that exists between him and his associates in United Artists Corporation, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin. The corporation asserts "D. W." is tied up to it for three years, while the director contends "Dawn," a United Artists release, will "let him out."

In the Griffith party, returning with him, are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and his entire technical staff.

Leader 8/1/24

Griffith Experiment With 'Frozen Light'

Will Try Out New "Heatless" Invention In Germany

D. W. GRIFFITH will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris.

It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal the delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after his arrival in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

my M. P. News 8/2/24

D. W. GRIFFITH will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris June 30. It is asserted that 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

It is Griffith's idea to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of light necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said D. W., "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat." The director has arranged for a series of tests to be made after he arrives in Germany.

Movie Weekly 8/2/24

D. W. Griffith and his company have sailed for Europe to take a series of the more important scenes in the noted director's forthcoming super-feature now titled "The Dawn." The script for the story was prepared by Geoffrey Moss, a British novelist, and provides opportunities for the use of a cast which Mr. Griffith will recruit from all nations. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, featured players in "America," are to have important roles.

Sacramento (Cal) Screen News 8/2/24

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the latter English writers who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players, recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theatre several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Beaumont (Tex) Enterprise 8/3/24

Film Flickers

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neal Hamilton will have the leads. Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston, she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

CAROL DEMPSTER

Houston (Texas) Chronicle August 5 1924

The eminent D. W. Griffith has sailed for Europe with his directorial megaphone and a distinguished company of players to film exterior scenes for "The Dawn," an original screen story by the English author, Geoffrey Moss. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will have the leads.

Carol is a "native daughter" of California. Like Julanne Johnston she was, at the start of her career, one of Ruth St. Denis' pupils and toured the country as one of the Denishawn dancers. She is another Griffith "find," and has worked with him almost exclusively. In two of his earlier pictures, "The Love Flower" and "Dream Street," she had the star parts and later appeared in Griffith's "One Exciting Night" and "America." She also took a leading part in "The White Rose," in which Mae Marsh "came back" after a somewhat protracted absence from the American screen, and again in "Sherlock Holmes," a Goldwyn picture.

While there may be some difference of opinion regarding Carol's histrionic ability, there can be none regarding her dainty and refined portrayals. She makes no appeal through the bizarre in either appearance or actions.

Boston Traveler August 7 1924

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carol Dempster and others accompanied D. W. Griffith, the director, to Europe recently to film "The Dawn," an original screen story written by Geoffrey Moss, the English writer. Carol has the leading feminine role.

Belleville (Ill) News Dem. 8/11/24

my American 8/17/24

THE Griffith office yesterday received a cable from David W., saying that he found conditions in Berlin so much better than he expected that he would complete "Dawn" in Germany. He had originally intended staying only eight days, just long enough to take exterior scenes, but he has found the native actors so valuable that he has had a change of heart and will make both exteriors and interiors in the land formerly ruled by the Kaiser.

He will not leave until September, so all those who had engagements with him for August might as well cancel them.

my Eve Bulletin August 13 1924

ON THE SCREEN

D. W. Griffith, now in Germany making "The Dawn," cables his office he has found condition so favorable for making motion pictures here that he has decided to complete both exterior and interiors in Germany. Passages originally booked for Griffith's return on Aug. 1, has been postponed, probably to early in September.

Boston (Mass) Morning Globe August 13 1924

D. W. Griffith plans to return to the United States about Sept 1, having finished "The Dawn."

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 8/16/24

Berlin, Aug. 16.—Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures here that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

Passage was originally booked for Griffith's return on August 1, and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he will leave early in September.

His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions here has spurred Mr. Griffith to enlarge materially the original scope of his drama.

my Post 8/16/24

Not satisfied with grabbing off one of our most charming screen actresses, Miss Julanne Johnston, the Germans have now hypnotized one of our best directors, D. W. Griffith. Originally intending to be in Berlin but eight days for some of the shots for his next picture, "The Dawn," D. W. has found the atmosphere so conducive to artistic production that he has canceled his sailing and will remain among the pleasures of Unter den Linden until some time in September. The actors recruited from the Berlin stage have proved so capable that the producer will make both exterior and interior scenes there, instead of just the former, as he planned.

Duluth (Minn) Herald 8/2/24

"FROZEN LIGHT" TO BE TRIED OUT BY GRIFFITH

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany, where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and indorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with a temperature well over 100 deg., due to the heat of the banks of light necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and be one of the greatest advances pictures could have."

my Telegraph 8/3/24

Griffith to Try Frozen Light on New Production

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany, where he has gone with his company of players.

European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris June 30. It is asserted 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Grand Rapids (Mich) Herald 8/3/24

Frozen Light Made Great Picture Advance

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany. European inventors have perfected, it is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and indorsed by the French Academy of Science in Paris. It is asserted that 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith hopes to use the frozen light exclusively in making all the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to take in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players."

Mr. Griffith has arranged for a series of tests to be made shortly after he arrives in Bremen, Germany, where the exterior scenes will be taken for his new picture, "Dawn."

Brown (Wyo) Home News 8/3/24

Covington (Ky) Post 8/3/24

my News 8/3/24

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 8/3/24

GRIFFITH TO MAKE EXPERIMENT WITH FROZEN LIGHT NEXT

Director Says that Given the Effect Strong Illumination Is Claimed to Increase Activities

DIRECTOR HAS FAST OF PLAYERS IN GERMANY

Chicago (Ill) Comm. Tribune 8/3/24

"FROZEN LIGHT" IN LOVE SCENES

Griffith Experiments With Cool Illumination and Is Hopeful of Success.

Detroit (Mich) News 8/10/24

New Orleans (La) Item 8/10/24

Griffith And Company On Way to Europe

Noted Director Will Produce Film From Story English Writer, Geoffrey Moss By Well-Known

D. W. Griffith will leave with his players and staff on the steamship Germany, to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theatre company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the ablest of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly announced therefore as "having as good possibilities as any young actors in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture he hopes to introduce patriotism of more size to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been restrained to more subtle appeals.

The company will be abroad about

my American 8/7/24

D. W. Griffith will be back in New York the last of this month or early in September. He will make all the interior shots on "Dawn" in this country so that as soon as he finishes the exteriors, we may expect to see him.

Morning Picture Stories (N Y C) 8/13/24

GRIFFITH STILL ABROAD.

D. W. Griffith is still in Berlin where he is filming both interiors and exteriors of his new picture, "The Dawn," with Carol Dempster in a featured role. Griffith sails the end of August for home.

GRIFF ABROAD

D. W. Griffith writes from Germany that he is well satisfied with movie conditions over there, and that he will complete most of his new film, "The Dawn," over there. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, the leads in "America," went over with him to play in the picture.

Bunkirk (N Y) Observer 8/16/24

Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Germany that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called, "The Dawn," there. He originally intended remaining eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors, he cabled agents here.

Milwaukee (Wis) Sentinel 8/17/24

GRIFFITH OFF TO GERMANY FOR PICTURES

D. W. GRIFFITH left with his players and staff on the steamship George Washington, sailing for Germany to take exterior scenes for his next production. Later he expects to go to England for other scenes.

The story has been prepared by Geoffrey Moss, most popular of the later English writers, who is now having a great vogue abroad. It is an original work known under the working title "The Dawn."

Mr. Griffith plans to introduce an international cast of players recruiting from the Moscow Art Theater company, and German, Italian, English and American talent. The Italian will be represented by Frank Puglia, the young actor whom Griffith found in Mme. Guglia's company in a little downtown theater several years ago. He now accepts Puglia as one of the oldest of the younger of the younger motion picture actors.

Miss Carol Dempster, who has played many important roles in Griffith pictures, and Neil Hamilton, the new leading man, will head the company. Griffith has publicly announced therefore as "having as good possibilities as any young actors in motion pictures."

This is Griffith's first motion picture venture abroad since he made the war scenes for "Hearts of the World." In the new picture he hopes to introduce patriotism of more size to the screen, as he believes the motion picture public has been restrained to more subtle appeals.

The company will be abroad about

Ironton (Ohio) News 8/12/24

Chicago (Ill) Post 8/15/24

my Tribune 8/17/24

my Telegraph 8/13/24

GERMAN STUDIOS SATISFY GRIFFITH

Director Will Complete Production "The Dawn," in Germany. Changes His Original Plans.

GERMAN ACTORS INDEFINITELY

Chicago (Ill) Tribune 8/15/24

D. W. Griffith announces that conditions have been found so favorable in Germany for the making of motion pictures that he will complete there all important scenes for his next production, "The Dawn."

Port Chester (N Y) Item 8/15/24

Griffith Completes His Scenes in Germany

Berlin, Germany, August 14(U.P.)—Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures here that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining here eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proven so valuable, Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors here.

Passage was originally booked for Griffith's return on August 1; and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he will leave early in September.

His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions here has spurred Mr. Griffith to enlarge materially the original scope of his drama.

Providence (R I) News 8/15/24

Springfield (Mass) Union 8/16/24

Boston (Mass) Post Sep 16 1924

Many Notables Aboard Scythia as Cunard Liner Docks at Hub

NOTED MOVIE PRODUCER AND HIS PLAYERS BACK FROM EUROPE
David Wark Griffith, shown on board the SS. Scythia just after arrival at Boston, with Mrs. Alma Gray, Neal Hamilton and Miss Carol Dempster. The company has been at work in and near Berlin for nine weeks on the new photoplay, "The Dawn."

With a total of 1215 passengers, the Cunard Line steamer Scythia arrived in port yesterday from Liverpool and Queenstown, a day late owing to foggy weather. The steamer came over in command of Captain F. G. Brown, last here in the Ausonia, who took charge because of the illness of Captain William Prothero, the regular commander, now convalescing after an operation for appendicitis.

Many notables returned on the Scythia, chief among whom were Colonel Edward M. House, former confidential adviser to the late President Wilson, and Mrs. House, who have been abroad four months.

D. W. Griffith, the noted movie producer, arrived with his company of 12 players, headed by Miss Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, after spending nine weeks in and near Berlin, filming exteriors for his new photoplay "Dawn."

Boston (Mass) Advertiser Sep 16 1924

GRIFFITH AND HIS SHADOWLAND CELEBRITIES RETRUN TO BOSTON. David Wark Griffith (at left), the movie impresario, brought back a graphic picture of present-day Germany and Berlin in particular, where he and his co-workers completed a new movie. Returning on the S. S. Scythia with him were Mrs. Almah Grey, Neal Hamilton and Carol Dempster. (Staff)

Chicago (Ill) Herald-Examiner 9/16/24

Sea Captain Won't Leave Bridge Even While Appendix Is Cut Out

BOSTON, Sept. 15.—When the liner Scythia arrived here from Liverpool and Queenstown today a new captain was in charge. Capt. William Prothero is recuperating at his home in England after an operation at sea.

On the third day out from Boston on the last voyage, Capt. Prothero developed an acute attack of appendicitis. He refused to leave his bridge even when physicians decided on an immediate operation and remained in his bridge cabin while Sir John Bland-Sutton, president of the British Royal College of Surgeons, who was a passenger, performed the operation.

Among the passengers on the Scythia were Col. Edward M. House and David Wark Griffith, motion picture producer.

Waterbury (Conn) Democrat Sep 16 1924

Exhibitors Trade Review (Ny) 9/27/24

Film Daily (Ny) Sep 12 1924

Ny Bulletin 9/12/24

Ny Eve Post Sep 13 1924

Griffith Back From Germany

D. W. Griffith with his company of players and technical staff who have been making his latest production "Dawn" in Germany, will arrive in New York Monday on the Scythia of the Cunard Line. The Griffith company stopped in England to take a number of scenes. The picture is now largely completed, with only a few interiors yet to be taken in the Mamaroneck studios.

D. W. Griffith returns to the land of the box office on Monday from England, where some of the scenes in his next picture, "Dawn," were shot. Most of the story is laid in Germany, but a few scenes will be made in the Mamaroneck studio next week.

Boston (Mass) Morning Globe Sep 16 1924

Ny Telegraph & Mail 9/12/24

Griffith Here Monday

D. W. Griffith is aboard the Scythia which arrives at Boston on Monday and then comes on to New York. His offices does not know whether he will remain aboard or come down from Boston by train.

D. W. Griffith, with his company of players and technical staff who have been making his latest production, "Dawn," in Germany, will arrive in New York Monday on the Scythia of the Cunard Line.

Ny Mirror 9/13/24

Ny Eve World Sep 12 1924

Liner Scythia Below With 808 Aboard for Boston

Cunard steamship Scythia, Capt Prothero, arrived at quarantine last night from Liverpool and Queenstown and will remain at quarantine until this morning. She will berth at East Boston. The Scythia has 213 first cabin passengers, 159 second class and 436 third class, a total of 808, for Boston and several hundred for New York. David Wark Griffith, movie director, and members of his company, who have been at work in Germany and England on his new photoplay "The Dawn," are aboard the steamer.

Salt Lake City (Utah) News 9/16/24

Buffalo (Ny) Enquirer 9/11/24

GRIFFITH SAYS HE IS NOT BOUND BY 'BIG 4'

D. W. Griffith, American producer, returned from Europe on September 16 aboard the Scythia. He stated that he is still connected with the United Artists and that his latest picture "Dawn" will be distributed through that organization.

In connection with the signing of a Famous Players-Lasky contract to produce for that company, he stated that there had been some disturbing rumors concerning United Artists and he felt it was best to have the Griffith Pictures properly financed that Famous could amply care for them.

He said his signature to the statement sent out some time ago by United Artists is not binding upon the D. W. Griffith's Corporation, as Mr. Griffith personally should not sign for the organization. He also states he was told by his attorney that the statement did not act as a contract.

What the outcome of the Famous Player-United Artists argument will be remains to be seen.

Mr. Griffith finished practically all the exteriors of his latest picture "Dawn" in Europe. The interiors will be made at the Mamaroneck studios.

D. W. Griffith who has just returned from Europe and announces that he is not bound by the "Big 4."

Ny News 9/12/24

Supt. Of Schools Berlin W. Tinker Endorses Democrat Essay Contest "Why I Like America Best"

Such a Contest Brings to the Attention of School Children the Difference in Opportunities in America and Elsewhere

THREE DAYS MORE TO SEND IN ESSAYS

Hundreds Have Already Entered the Democrat's Big Essay Contest for Fifty Dollars in Prizes and Theater Tickets to "America" at Strand Theater Next Week

BERLIN W. TINKER
Superintendent of Schools.

There yet remains three full days in which the school children of Waterbury may get their essays into the Democrat office on 'Why I Like America Best,' the essay contest being run in conjunction with D. W. Griffith's big photoplay "America" coming to the Strand theater next week. As has already been announced those partaking in this contest for fifty dollars in gold must have their compositions in this office no later than 10 o'clock Saturday morning, the winners of which will be announced in Monday's Democrat and the prizes awarded that same day. A full list of prizes and rules of the contest may be found below.

The subject of 'Why I Like American Best' has been selected by the editors of the Democrat in conjunction with school officials as being a most appropriate one at this time when opportunity will be afforded by special performances through the graciousness of the Strand management to see the remarkable production of "America" after school hours. The picture as well as the essay contest are of highly an historical value to all school children in Waterbury. Rarely has such an opportunity been afforded on so large a scale for an exact reproduction of one of the most important periods in American history.

As an evidence of importance of such an opportunity which both the Democrat and the Strand theater are offering in the way of a further knowledge of this epochal period and its further study by the added inducement of an essay contest upon the subject with suitable prizes for the effort. Superintendent of Schools Berlin W. Tinker is of the opinion that the Democrat essay contest on the subject of "Why I Like America Best" contains advantages for Waterbury school children that should be immediately recognizable. In endorsing the contest he had the following to say: "A contest of this nature would compel children to think of the advantages of living in America compared with other countries. It will impress them with opportunities that the people have in America that the don't have to any other country in the world. A contest such as this is a great help in a patriotic way."

Such an endorsement by Waterbury's superintendent of schools of this essay project is only a further guarantee of importance of the subject. So there is just time for those school children of Waterbury who have not yet set to get into this contest and try for the cash prizes and free theater tickets offered by the management of the Strand theater for "America." There are but three days left in which to get your essays into the Democrat office where they will be judged by competent officials. Remember that there are twenty-five prizes in all and that means that you chance to get at least something some prize, if not money. It is expected to the after tickets to this most remarkable historical photoplay are produced Washington, the Mother Land, Arms and Men, Boys the Heroes Journey and all of their wonderful features in this educational project, together with the Strand Theater Orchestra of Waterbury, the 4 producers Fanfare and Boys Band.

Film Daily (Ny) Sep 12 1924

The Screen

By Alison Smith

D. W. Griffith returns on Monday from Europe bringing with him the completed reels of "Dawn" which he has been engaged in making on the other side. With him comes Carol Dempster and his entire technical and artistic staff prepared for the new venture on this side of the water. Its exact form is still a matter of conjecture, indeed the arrival of Mr. Griffith is expected to decide not only the question of his next picture but the outward motive of his theatrical life with the famous producing company.

Yesterday, he is still with Famous Players, but there have been persistent rumors that he was about to be absorbed by Paramount and that report, in spite of perhaps denials from the other side, seems to be absurd. And perhaps that is the harbinger of the turmoil and activity about them.

The success of the new film is one more particularly personally to the man, for on its outcome there is bound to be the greatest interest in the theatrical world, and perhaps the disposition with which the world receives this work will be the measure of success or failure in the production.

The two greatest advantages of Griffith's long years with Famous Players will be removed and also the fear that the history of the past may be used to mark the present. Griffith has made his name and fame in the past with Famous Players, but the fear of the future plans with Famous Players will be removed and also the fear that there has been enough to free the hand of Griffith in this matter.

Lucky Carew

Actor Being Considered for Two Big Films.

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

In an Exclusive story to the Mirror, the writer learned yesterday that D. W. Griffith's first production for Famous Players-Lasky Corp. is scheduled to be Marie Corelli's "Borrowed of Satan," the screen rights to which were sought by practically every large company in the business.

Prior to leaving for Germany, where he made exteriors and many interiors for his last independent film, "Dawn," Griffith spent many

D. W. Griffith — Arthur Edmund Carew.

'Frozen Light' Latest Stunt for Movies

D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen light" while taking scenes for his next motion picture in Germany, where he has gone with his company of players.

Shadowless invisible rays perfected. It is claimed, lighting without heat. A demonstration recently given by Camille Dussard in Paris was witnessed and endorsed by the French Academy of Sciences in Paris. This is expected to be the first motion picture in which these rays are used.

Detroit (Mich) News 9/14/24

Ny Telegraph 9/16/24

Portland (Or) Times 9/ /24

Griffith Back From Berlin.

D. W. Griffith's first production for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is scheduled to be Marie Corelli's "Borrowed of Satan," the screen rights to which were sought by practically every large company in the business.

Prior to leaving for Germany, where he made exteriors and many interiors for his last independent film, "Dawn," Griffith spent many days in a projection room looking at the pictures in which appeared that popular screen player, Arthur Edmund Carew, among others. They included "Love," "Peter," and "The Price of a Party."

Upon Griffith's arrival in New York this week it is not improbable that his future plans with Famous Players will be announced and also the news that there has been enough to free the hand of Griffith in this matter.

D. W. GRIFFITH BRINGS "DAWN" FROM GERMANY

David Wark Griffith, the Barrie of the screen, returned from Germany yesterday on the Cunarder Scythia and talked of marks, and stars, and ships, and cream, and the Prince of Wales.

With him were seventeen players in his picture "Dawn," including brown-eyed Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton.

"My twelve weeks' stay in Germany was a revelation," said Mr. Griffith. "The greatest sight there was the ships that were to sail for America. You should have seen the wistful eyes and hungering looks bestowed on the windows of the great liners.

"The marks of suffering are still etched on them. It has been only

D. W. Griffith, Arrived Here Yesterday on Arrival Here Is the Last Time They Have Had Any Expenses.

When asked about the money crisis in Germany, Mr. Griffith said: "Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has financed the Germans in the production of my picture, 'Dawn.' I have not a cent invested in it. I have not a cent invested in any of my pictures. I am a producer, not a financier. I am a producer of pictures and nothing else."

Ny News 9/17/24

Ny Telegraph Sep 17 1924

D. W. GRIFFITH BACK; STATES HIS POSITION

Producer, Home From Europe, States Talk Last Winter by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks of Withdrawal From United Artists Led Him to Safeguard Own Distribution Interests by Agreement With Famous Players-Lasky.

ENGLISH BAN GRIFFITH FILM

Scenes in "Amerika" Offend Britons; Director Hurries to Settle Strife.

CHIPPER SEES GERMAN COMMUNISTS GAIN

My Star 9/5/24

GRIFFITH RETURNS SEPT. 16

D. W. Griffith will return to New York from Germany on Sept. 16. He is making "Dawn" in Europe. On his return he will take up the difficulty between Famous Players and the United Artists and will clear up the matter.

Milwaukee (Wis) Leader 9/5/24

Griffith Seeks Lifting of British Ban on America

LONDON — D. W. Griffith, the American movie pioneer, who arrived in London Wednesday night from France to see why his revolutionary war picture, Love and Sacrifice, has been banned in England, attempted to prove Thursday that it is not anti-British by showing it before an audience of London newspaper men.

In the United States the film is called America. Some of the newspapers called the picture anti-British, while others said it was not.

"I see no reason why the picture should be objectionable to the British, and I consider it arbitrary that one man—T. P. O'Connor—should have the final decision," Mr. Griffith said in an interview.

Portland (Me) Herald 9/5/24

D. W. Griffith, noted producer, has completed work upon the photoplay which he was directing in Germany, and will sail for this country next Monday. The company which he took abroad will remain a week longer for sight seeing. Griffith will begin his contract with Paramount immediately after he arrives on these shores.

My American Sept 6 1924

D. W. GRIFFITH and his co[illegible] panion, including Ca[illegible] Dem[illegible]r and Neil Hamilton, a[illegible] sailing to-day for home. M[illegible] Albert Grey is also in the party, as well as a number of technical experts who accompanied Mr. Griffith to Berlin where "Dawn" was made. The Griffith office had word that there would be no delay in the sailing and that the party would leave as per schedule this morning.

CARL DEMPSTER

DORIS MAY has been so bu[illegible]

Galesburg (Ill) Republican Register 9/6/24

GOES TO EUROPE TO FILM PICTURE

Carl Dempster and Mrs. Griffith, who are expected in Europe to-day, to film "The Dawn," an epic of the Civil War.

Washington (DC) Herald 9/6/24

Evening Star 9/7/24

Likes Berlin Conditions

D. W. Griffith May Remain Until September In German Capital

Conditions have been found so favorable for making motion pictures in Berlin, Germany, that D. W. Griffith has decided to complete all important scenes for his next picture, called "The Dawn."

He originally intended remaining there eight days to take exterior scenes. Native actors assembled from the Berlin stage have proved so valuable that Mr. Griffith has decided to make both exteriors and interiors.

Passage was originally booked for Mr. Griffith's return on August 1 and now has been indefinitely postponed, with probability he may leave early in September.

His enthusiasm for dramatic conditions in Berlin has spurred Mr. Griffith to enlarge materially the original scope of his drama.

All who enjoy a good film fight

My Film Daily 9/8/24

Griffith Sails

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

London—D. W. Griffith, Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, J. C. Epping and others of the company that produced "The Dawn" in Germany left Saturday for New York on the Scythia.

Trenton (NJ) Gazette 9/9/24

D. W. Griffith, who has been filming a picture called "Dawn," in Germany, returns to New York on September 16. Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and his entire technical staff, will arrive with him. It is expected that his return will untangle the various and conflicting rumors regarding his association with the United Artists and Famous Players.

Forward (NYC) Sept 10 1924

7

SCREEN GOSSIP

NEIL HAMILTON

THE GRIFFITH HERO

Neil Hamilton, the hero of D. W. Griffith's "America," is now on the high seas with Mr. Griffith and Carol Dempster, bound for home and the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y., after a several weeks' sojourn in Berlin, Germany, filming "Dawn," the new Griffith photoplay.

Mr. Hamilton, although a newcomer to the screen, has had a long and interesting stage career, and has even been "stranded," which happens once to every real actor or actress.

Before Mr. Griffith was ready to make "Dawn," the young actor skipped over to the Famous Players studio on Long Island and played Lady Auriol's cousin in "The Side Show of Life," starring Ernest Torrence.

It was a role quite different from his youthful patriot's part in "America," and many fans inquired about the handsome young Englishman in the Torrence picture.

Yes, dear flapper fans, Neil is married.

My Motion Picture News Sept 13 1924

Christian Science Monitor Boston Sep 15 1924

See America First

BROTHER Masons who took part in the Flag Day Celebration in Scottish Rite Temple on June 14, will remember the wonderful bits of the Film, America, which were shown there for their entertainment. Without doubt America is a triumph of artistic achievement on the part of Bro. D. W. Griffith, its director and originator. It is more than a mere entertainment. It is a historical document that should have a wonderful educational effect upon not only the youth of the nation, but upon their elders who desire to brush up on the history of their country. The reading of history, unless the facts and incidents are described by the pen of genius, is apt to be a dull process. But it can never be said that there is a dull moment in all this wonderful film. It has all the fascination of a patriotic fact story plus the excitement that goes with a dramatic rendering. Nothing except such a masterpiece could make the happenings incidents to our country's upbuilding so live again.

America has been shown heretofore in the 44th Street Theatre, at prices ranging from $1.10 up. But beginning September 21, this great film will be shown in the Capitol Theatre at popular prices. There will be five shows a day, so that every one should be able to find time to see it. We strongly recommend it to all brother Masons and their families. It is a splendid chest film not you doubt us, see it.

My Post 9/12/24

Griffith Due Home in Near Future

D. W. Griffith will return to New York from abroad in the near future. He has booked passage to return on the Scythia, sailing from Southampton on September 6th. The company he took abroad is expected home a week earlier.

My Eve Journal Sep 15 1924

At the Screen Door

D. W. Griffith and his company of players and technical staff arrived in New York today, after filming "Dawn" in Germany. They stopped in England to take several scenes and will film a few interiors in the studio at Mamaroneck.

My Mirror Sep 17 1924

SCYTHIA BRINGS 1273 TO AMERICA

D. W. Griffith, Col. House Are Passengers—Vessel Proceeds to New York

More than half of the 1273 passenger arriving at Boston today from Liverpool and Queenstown aboard the Cunard liner Scythia, disembarked at the East Boston terminal shortly after 9 a. m., and the steamer sailed again about noon for New York with the remainder of the passengers.

David W. Griffith, motion picture producer, returned on the Scythia with a number of the cast of his new picture, "The Dawn," the exterior foreign scenes for which were taken in Germany, Italy and Great Britain. Miss Carol Dempster and Neal J. Hamilton, the stars of the production were also on the Scythia. The picture will be completed in the United States, probably in New York, to which city the motion picture party sailed on the Scythia.

D. W. GRIFFITH BRINGS "DAWN" FROM GERMANY

David Wark Griffith, the Davis of the screen, returned from Germany yesterday on the Cunard liner Scythia and talked of works and story and ships, but cream, and the Prince of Wales.

With his wife and children shown in his screen "Dawn" including Miss Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton.

[illegible]

DAVID W. GRIFFITH

My News Sep 17 1924

Griffith and Two Stars Home

David Wark Griffith, movie producer, and two of his stars, Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, arrived yesterday on the Cunard liner Scythia, after having completed the making of Griffith's new picture, "Dawn," and its foreign [illegible]

[illegible]

My News Sep 17 1924

Griffith Arrives on Monday.

[illegible]

Washington (DC) Herald 9/16/24

My Telegram Sep 13 1924

My Bulletin Sept 17 1924

My Eve World Sept 17 1924

Boston (Mass) Traveler Sep 15 (192[illegible])

Col. House and David W. Griffith Among Arrivals on Liner Scythia

Adamowski of Boston Orchestra Aboard—Fog Delays Ship

David Wark Griffith, movie magnate, was among the prominent Americans who returned from abroad on the Cunard liner Scythia, which reached Boston early today from Liverpool and Queenstown. The Scythia had been delayed about a day by fogs off Newfoundland.

MOVIE GROUP

In the Griffith company were Carol Dempster, heroine of a new picture to be called "The Dawn," foreign scenes for which had been filmed in Germany, Italy and England. Others of the movie group were Neil J. Hamilton, leading man in the new picture, and Mrs. Almah Grey. They did not disembark in Boston, but continued to New York, where the remaining scenes of "The Dawn" will be completed.

Among the notables who left the Scythia at Boston were Col. and Mrs. E. M. House, who spent the summer in England, France and Germany. True to his reputation for silence, Col. House had nothing to say except that he and Mrs. House were leaving today for Wenham to visit their daughter.

Prominent Bostonians arriving on the Upper photo shows David Wark Griffith and members of his company who reached Boston today on the Scythia, after several months spent in Europe filming the foreign scenes for a new picture entitled "The Dawn." They are, left to right, D. W. Griffith, Mrs. Almah Grey, Neal Hamilton and Carl Dempster. Lower photo shows Col. E. M. House and Mrs. House, who returned to America on the Scythia after a summer spent in France, Germany and Great Britain.

Boston (Mass) Eve Globe Sep 15 24

BOSTON GLOBE—MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1924

COL HOUSE HOME FROM EUROPE; SCYTHIA HAS OTHER NOTABLES

LEFT TO RIGHT—DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, MRS. ALMAH GREY, NEIL HAMILTON AND CAROL DEMPSTER

My News Sep 17 1924

Movie Troupe Returns

Elmira (NY) Telegram Sep 21 1924

Griffith Returns From Europe; States His Position in Films

Producer States Talk Last Winter by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks of Withdrawal Led Him to Safeguard Own Distribution Interests.

D. W. Griffith arrived in New York last week onthe Scythia and went directly to his offices in the Longacre Building.

When question regarding the situation that existed over his contractual relations with United Artists Corporation and Famous Players-Lasky in the matter of the release of his future productions, Mr. Griffith said:

"Whatever contracts are under discussion are distribution contracts solely. I shall continue to make my pictures for D. W. Griffith, Inc., in which concern I am an officer.

"Last Winter Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks seriously discussed withdrawal from United Artists. If this took place naturally the company would cease to exist. In order to protect myself against future distributing difficulties, in case such a condition should come to pass, I signed a piece of paper with Famous Players-Lasky.

"This was to safeguard the release of 'America' and 'Dawn,'" on which I am now at work.

"These pictures will now be distributed through United Artists Corporation. I don't know what will happen after that. I am interested in United Artists as an office holder. Whether it releases my pictures or not, I am interested in its financial affairs."

Mr. Griffith intimated during the course of the interview that he, as an individual, had not legal right to sign any contract concerning the distribution of the productions of D. W. Griffith, Inc. Yet the informal agreement which he signed with Famous Players-Lasky, he pointed out, is being taken in the light of a formal contract.

Mr. Griffith made no interiors of "Dawn" abroad. He will continue production of the picture at the Mamaroneck studio here. Shooting will be completed inthree weeks' time. The picture will bew ready for release before the new year.

"You might call 'Dawn' an international picture," Mr. Griffith explained. "It was written by an English army officer. Americans, English, Germans and Russians are in the cast. If, when it is released, people can spare the time from radio, Mah Jong, cross-word puzzles and subway rides, and if they can pass up some ofthe spectacular pictures, I hope they'll drop in theatres where it is showing and let me know which nationality of the cast wins.

"I think it is a little bit different from anything I have ever done before."

Ny World Oct. 2. 1924

Compliments Chas A Collins
The Journal-News Racine Wis
AUG 19 1924

Griffith Will Experiment in Frozen Light

(BY CHARLES A. COLLINS.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—D. W. Griffith will experiment with "frozen" light in Germany, when making his next motion picture. It is claimed that European inventors have perfected lighting without heat. A demonstration recently made by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and endorsed by the French Academy of Science. It is asserted that 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith expects to use the frozen light exclusively in making the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to make in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and will be one of the greatest advances pictures could make."

Compliments Chas A Collins
The Dispatch Columbus Ohio
AUG 17 1924

GRIFFITH'S FROZEN LIGHT.

D. W. Grimth will experiment with "frozen" light in Germany, when making his next motion picture. It is claimed that European inventors have perfected lighting without heat. A demonstration recently made by Camille Dussard in Paris was approved and indorsed by the French Academy of Science. It is asserted that 10,000 candlepower lights do not give off the slightest heat.

Mr. Griffith expects to use the frozen light exclusively in making the closer scenes in his picture. Tender love scenes, the most difficult of all scenes to make in a picture, are often "shot" with the temperature well over 100 degrees, due to the heat of the banks of lights necessary to reveal delicate shades of expression.

"If frozen light is a fact," said Mr. Griffith, "it will be of enormous value from an artistic standpoint, as few players have the endurance to do exacting scenes over and over again under the intense heat. It will save hours of work for director and players, and will be one of the greatest advances pictures could make."

THE $1,000 HEN.

That man, David Wark Griffith, certainly is a stickler for detail. Countless stories have been told about his meticulous striving for realism, but here's a brand new one. He was in Germany with his company a few weeks ago filming parts of "The Dawn," which is now being completed up in his Mamaroneck studio, and right in the middle of one of his most important scenes a tin bantam hen stalked majestically righ in front of the grinding camera. Thousands of feet of film had bee taken in that scene, and it wouldn' do to take it over again.

So what does Mr. Griffith do? He buys the bantam, has her boxed up pays a bond of $1,000 on her and has her shipped to the United States. She arrived at Mamaroneck a few days ago. And now, every time she feels the pangs of nostalgia, she hobnobs with one of the four or five German police dogs at the studio.

Lincoln (Neb) Journal Sep 29 1924

...Seasoned Authors.

Never has there been a time when the search for stories has been so desperate.

Every new novel is read with the avidity of prospectors turning up the dirt in a new diamond field.

There aren't enough of them that are good. They either slip off into sex, or the war or costumes.

Original stories are not much in demand. But they will be soon. In fact, that is the next phase that is almost at hand.

D. W.'s New Move.

Word comes from Germany that D. W. Griffith is using a famous German actor in the new picture he is making in Berlin.

This is an encouraging sign. Even his warmest admirers — of whom I am one—cannot deny that "The King" is slipping very badly.

Partly, this is due to the fact that he has tried to separate himself from all other motion picture people and do his work in an isolated town on Long Island sound.

This industry—art or whatever you want to call it—is moving too rapidly for anyone to play the part of a lone wolf. It is developing too rapidly for any one mind to monopolize.

If you stand apart you get left.

"The world forgetting, by the world forgot," is a saying that applies to D. W.

Chiefly, however, his decline has been due to the inferior actors who have been seen in his later plays.

He tried to replace the Gish girls with Carol Dempster; Richard Barthelmess with an able and husky young man whose name, I am proud to say, I have forgotten. He looks like a baggage-smasher and is just about that good an actor.

Carol Dempster will never be an actress. Also the public will never take her on the screen. She is absolutely hopeless. If D. W. persists in her use he is in a...

Spokane (Wash) Spokesman-Review Sep. 28. 1924

D. W. Griffith has returned from Germany, where he has been making "Dawn," and we hear he has a new German actor of note to present. That is good news. We hope this new actor will have great potentialities. Griffith needs a player of note. Lack of good players has been one of the reasons for his decline. for decline it has been. Had "America" been done with some forceful players the picture would have been doubly effective. It needed the calm strength...

Lexington (Ky) Leader Sep 28 1924

Peterson (N J) Call Sep 1 1924

Picture Man Sees Poverty

Lexington (Ky) Leader 9/28/24

York (Pa) Dispatch Oct 3 1924

D. W. GRIFFITH SEES POVERTY IN GERMANY

Kane (Pa) Journal Oct 4 1924

Cleveland (O) Press 9/27/24

Griffith has returned from Germany, where he completed exterior scenes of his new movie, "The Dawn."

He will take the finishing scenes in America.

Ny American 10/2/24

WORK is progressing rapidly on "Dawn," D. W. Griffith's next production. Within two weeks he expects to have it finished and ready for cutting and editing. Everyone is watching with great interest to see whether he will make his next for United Artists or for Paramount.

New Britain (Conn) Herald Oct 3. 1924

D. W. Griffith Says Berlin Is in Poverty

Berlin, Oct. 3.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Richmond (Va) News Oct 3 1924

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty

Berlin, Sept. 15.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

IRISH CUSTOMS DUTY ...

Dublin, Sept. 15. ...

Wilmington (N C) Star Oct 3 1924

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

MRS. LOUISE COLLINS DIBS

KINGSTON, Oct. 2.—The funeral of ...

Chico (Cal) Record 10/3/24

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—(AP)—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," says D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Longview (Texas) News Oct 3 1924

Berlin, Oct. 3.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

Wenatchee (Wash) World 10/3/24

Logan (Utah) Journal 10/3/24

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty and Misery

BERLIN, Oct. 3. — "After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Toledo (Ohio) Blade 10/3/24

D. W. Griffith Sees Misery in Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 3 (AP)—"After what I have seen in Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Peterborough (Ont) Examiner 10/4/24

SOME DREADFUL SIGHTS

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty and Misery.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Baltimore News Oct 4 1924

"DAWN" Nearly Ready

WORK is progressing rapidly on "Dawn," D. W. Griffith's next production. Within two weeks he expects to have it finished and ready for cutting and editing. Everyone is watching with great interest to see whether he will make his next for United Artists or for Paramount.

Salem (Ore) Times 10/4/24

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty and Misery

New York Evening Bulletin 10/4/24

Dover (NH) Democrat Oct 4 1924

MOTION PICTURE MAN SEES BERLIN POVERTY

The American film producer, D. W. Griffith, recently stated that after what he had seen in Berlin he was convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty. It was while supervising two film productions there that he made the statement to a German newspaper man. He said: "I guess my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Palais de Danse and the Hotel Bristol when visiting Berlin."

Ny American Oct 4 1924

If D. W. Griffith doesn't put the gas on "Dawn," he is apt to find himself in difficulty with the title. The first week of November, "Dawn," a stage play in three acts by Tom Barry, opens in our town. Precedent is always a law respected by all, and if Mr. Barty's play opens first he may claim title right, although I believe there is no copyright on titles, merely a courtesy extended from one person to another when there is a conflict in names. I am under the impression that "Dawn" is only a tentative title anyway, the original name of a story Mr. Griffith bought as a basis for his picture.

Chicago (Ill) Post Oct 4 1924

BERLINERS LIVE IN POVERTY, IS GRIFFITH STORY

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—(By Mail by the Associated Press.)—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man. "I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse while visiting here," the film man added.

Mt Vernon (Ohio) Banner 10/4/24

Country Butter .....

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty and Misery

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

BERLIN, Oct. 3—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Montgomery (Ala) Journal 10/4/24

Film Leader Sees Poverty In Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 3.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

Grass Valley (Cal) Union 10/5/24

Picture Magnate Is Dubious of German

Springfield (Ohio) Sun Oct 5 1924

War Over Griffith Looms in Filmdom

Los Angeles, Oct. 4.—Hollywood is speculating on the prospect of another war.

Not, of course, of the nations, but of the foremost figures in the movie world.

The lineup would be Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin on one side, and D. W. Griffith, Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky on the other.

Griffith has seemed less certain in his expressions lately of his right to quit the "Big Four" for Paramount.

While he has been explaining the letter from him to Fairbanks promising fealty to United Artists, members of the latter simply say matters are in the hands of their attorneys.

This is interpreted to mean that they are only waiting for a Griffith-Paramount junction to pounce on it.

By some onlookers it is believed the mere threat of legal action will ... Griffith from making a picture for Zukor.

It would tie up a heavy investment in the courts indefinitely and put the dean of directors out of commission, unless under heavy bond.

Meantime U. A. members hold on tightly to Griffith's letter as offset to his explanation that he has signed only a "personal" and "informal" agreement with U. A.'s chief rivals.

St Louis (Mo) Globe-Democrat Oct 5 1924

Hollywood, October 4.—(Special.)—Hollywood is speculating on the prospect of another war.

Not, of course, of the nations, but of the foremost figures in the movie world.

The lineup would be Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin, on one side, and D. W. Griffith, Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky on the other.

Griffith has seemed less certain in his expressions lately of his right to quit the "Big Four" for Paramount.

While he has been explaining the letter from him to Fairbanks promising fealty to United Artists, members of the latter simply say matters are in the hands of their attorneys.

This is interpreted to mean that they are only waiting for a Griffith-Paramount junction to pounce on it.

By some onlookers it is believed the mere threat of legal action will prevent Griffith from making a picture for Zukor.

It would tie up a heavy investment in the courts indefinitely and put the dean of directors out of commission, unless under heavy bond.

Meantime U. A. members hold on tightly to Griffith's letter as offset to his explanation that he has signed only a "personal" and "informal" agreement with U. A.'s chief rivals.

Atlanta (Ga) Journal 10/5/24

Berlin Poverty Stricken, D. W. Griffith Says

Warrington (Pa) Times 10/4/24

Griffith, Film Man, Finds Berlin Is Poor

Louisville (Ky) Courier-Journal 10/5/24

FILM PRODUCER SEES POVERTY IN BERLIN

Los Angeles Cal Times 9/17/24

My American Sep 18 1924

My Sun 9/19/24

My Film Daily Sep 17 1924

My Motion Picture News Sep 27 1924

D. W. GRIFFITH RETURNS

Director in Explanation Regarding Agreement Under "Contract"

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH)

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—D. W. Griffith arrived in New York today on the Scythia and went directly to his offices in the Longacre Building.

When questioned regarding the situation that existed over his contractual relations with United Artists Corporation and Famous Players-Lasky in the matter of the release of his future productions Mr. Griffith said:

"Whatever contracts are under discussion are distribution contracts solely. I shall continue to make my pictures for D. W. Griffith, Inc., in which concern I am an officer.

"Last winter Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks seriously discussed withdrawal from United Artists. If this took place, naturally the company would cease to exist. In order to protect myself against future distributing difficulties, in case such condition should come to pass, I signed a piece of paper with Famous Players-Lasky.

"This was to safeguard the release of 'America,' and 'Dawn,' on which latter I am now at work.

"These pictures will now be distributed through United Artists Corporation. I don't know what will happen after that. I am interested in United Artists as an officeholder. Whether it releases my pictures or not I [illegible] aware."

My Telegraph Sep 17 1924

D. W. GRIFFITH.

He Returned to New York From Europe Yesterday Having Made Exteriors for Forthcoming Pictures in Germany.

Cleveland Press 9/19/24

United Artists Will Fight to Keep D. W. Griffith in Fold; Hampton Weds Sister-in-Law

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

HIRAM ABRAMS, president of United Artists, is on board the Majestic, a little item that aroused considerable interest yesterday, inasmuch as David Wark Griffith has determined to make two pictures for Paramount as soon as he turns over "America" and "Dawn" to Mr. Abrams. And United Artists maintains that he is under a three-year contract to them.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

A man who is close to the head of United Artists said yesterday that a strong battle will be waged to keep Mr. Griffith in the fold. He said that Mr. Abrams would be prevailed upon by Douglas Fairbanks to go so far as to take the case into the courts. Mr. Fairbanks was firm in his declaration when he was in New York that he, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin would insist that Mr. Griffith deliver all his pictures for the next three years to United Artists, in view of a letter Mr. Griffith had signed with the other members of United Artists.

Since Will H. Hays has come into the motion picture industry he has been called upon to settle many contractual differences but it is not thought that he will interfere in this case, since United Artists is not a member of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association (the official title of the Hays organization). However, Famous Players-Lasky and the D. W. Griffith organizations are members in good standing.

of doing an underhand thing in business, and his understanding of his agreement with United Artists was that after he turned over "America" and "Dawn," he could make any picture he chose. He said his contract with Famous Players-Lasky was not for a life-time—it merely meant delivering two pictures.

Those who are close to Mr. Griffith hope that the case will not be taken to court. He admits that he is no business man and like all idealists, he knows very little about the law.

New Bedford (Mass) Mercury 9/16/24

David Wark Griffith, motion picture producer, has returned from Germany on the Cunarder Scythia, with eleven members of the company who took part in the making of the new film "Dawn" in Berlin and its suburbs. He expressed astonishment when informed by the reporters that his first film with the Famous-Lasky corporation would be one based upon the novel by Marie Corelli, "The Sorrows of Satin." Mr. Griffith said that he could not comment upon the film because he knew nothing about it.

In his opinion Germany was facing a serious crisis as the Communists were gaining in power at every election.

In speaking of the new picture Mr. Griffith said, "I always wanted to have a picture in which the contrast of the best talent in Europe might be shown with talent of our own. I think I have it in 'Dawn'."

Crawfordsville (Ind) Sun 9/20/24

David Wark Griffith with his company of players and technical staff, who have been making a production called "Dawn," in Germany, have returned to New York. The picture is now largely completed, with only a few interiors [illegible] taken in the Mamaroneck studios.

Passaic (N J) Herald September 19 1924

Movie Workers Back

[illegible]

GRIFFITH BACK FROM GERMANY

Despite Contract Dilemma Director Will Soon Work for Zukor

David W. Griffith is back from Germany and will be ready to go to work for Adolph Zukor as soon as interiors for the newest Griffith picture, "The Dawn," have been "shot," which opines "D. W." should be in about three weeks. Griffith and his company of seventeen, including Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, returned Tuesday on the Scythia.

With "contracts to right of him, contracts to left of him," Griffith's homecoming was something like "The Charge of the 400, Minus 399."

The screen's most eminent producer, who resembles all men of genius, in that he is long on art and kind of abbreviated as to business ability, admits that this contract stuff has him a bit flustered. These must be uneasy nights for him, with dreams in which contracts point at him from all angles. United Artists claims he is still under contract to that organization. Famous Players-Lasky declares it holds a contract of "Big Bertha" size, signed by Griffith.

So Zit's asked "D. W." how about it.

"Eight months or so ago," he began, "there was talk of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks withdrawing from United Artists, leaving Charlie Chaplin and me alone. At that time, by request, I signed a letter, which, I had every reason to believe, was nothing more than an assurance to exhibitors that United Artists was not going to disband, and a paper that would safeguard the release of 'America' and 'Dawn,' my two latest productions. My lawyer, A. H. T. Banzhaf, will bear me out in this, for it is nothing but the truth.

"I could not legally sign a contract for D. W. Griffith, Inc., of which corporation I am an officer, signed only as an individual.

"Three years ago, D. W. Griffith, Inc., contracted to make nine pictures for distribution by United Artists. 'Dawn,' on which I am now at work, is the last of these. As I understood it, our contract with United Artists is at an end with the completion of this film.

"Four months ago, or just before I sailed for Europe, I signed an agreement to make three pictures for Famous Players-Lasky.

"Whatever contracts are under discussion are distribution contracts solely. I shall continue to make my pictures for D. W. Griffith, Inc."

Griffith insisted that he was interested in United Artists as an office holder, and that whether it released his pictures or not, he was interested in its financial affairs. The paper he signed with Famous Players, he said, was but an informal agreement and not a contract.

"The Dawn," written by Major Geoffrey Moss, of the British army, author of the play, "Sweet Pepper," will be ready for release before the new year, Griffith explained. For fear that other enterprising producers will "copy" "The Dawn" and put other features similar to "The Dawn" on the market before it gets fairly under way, he will not divulge the story, saying merely that it will be "different," because being an international picture, without stars, and featuring American, English, German and Russian players. "I've never done anything like it before," he adds. "If, when it is released people can spare the time from radio, Mah-Jong, cross-word puzzles and subway rides, and if they can pass up some of the spectacular pictures, I hope they'll drop in the theatre where 'The Dawn' is showing and let me know which nationality of the cast wins."

"After 'The Dawn,' what will you produce?" Zit's inquired.

"I haven't a single idea—I haven't a story in mind. Some people," he smiled, "may say I never did have an idea."

Most of the scenes for the new film were taken around Berlin, but a few were photographed in England. Griffith told of how the British censors had prevented his production "America," two months ago, as the Rialto Theatre in London became scene of the performance of events during the American Revolution. In present at this, Griffith said he would hesitate before making another historical picture, in view of the further fact that France did not too kindly show "America" after being moved by the report he had received by him at the Empire Theatre, London, of events during the performance, and stating he dared not risk the feelings of the French people, who might take exception.

[illegible]

Film Daily (N Y) 9/22/24

Not Bound To "Big 4"

Griffith Claims He Is Free—Back from Germany with Exteriors Made for "The Dawn"

D. W. Griffith returned yesterday on the Scythia, from Germany. Asked specifically about his relations with United Artists, he declared that, according to the opinion rendered by his lawyer, he is bound to that organization no longer than it will take to complete "The Dawn," the picture for which he made exteriors in Germany.

Explaining in detail the United Artists situation, Griffith said he had been persuaded to sign the statement issued last Spring in which the members of United Artists said they would carry on for three more years, because it was represented to him that a statement of that nature was necessary to keep the company free from further disturbing reports.

"Newspapers were publishing reports that Pickford and Fairbanks were to distribute their pictures elsewhere," said Griffith. "I was told reports were in circulation that 'America' and others of my pictures would not be handled by United Artists. It was felt that something had to be done.

(Continued from Page 1)

"In the interim, offers were coming along from outside sources. When the statement in question was drawn up, I asked my attorney whether this meant a contract. He assured me such was not the case. Therefore I signed. It must be understood that my signature as an individual means nothing. I am employed by the D. W. Griffith Corp. and it is the signature of the corporation that is binding.

"The contract with Famous was made in the belief that it was a good step for the Griffith Corp. to make pictures properly financed as these pictures would be."

While Griffith was in London, he gave a press showing of "Love and Sacrifice" ("America"), to get the reaction of the newspapers to the picture which had been rejected by the British censorship commission as anti-English. Griffith said long articles were published following the showing in which newspaper men declared they could see nothing in the production to warrant the stand the censors had taken. Apparently, information received by THE FILM DAILY from London that the ban on the picture will remain is correct, inasmuch as Griffith said the cancelled permit had not been revoked when he had left England. A theater had already been engaged for the London premiere.

Speaking of conditions in Germany, Mr. Griffith said production was just as expensive there as it is here. He is firmly convinced, however, of the great value of shooting stories with a foreign locale where the story occurs. For example in "The Dawn," he used Italian and German actors and secured backgrounds such as are impossible to obtain in America.

The interiors still remain to be made. For these, Griffith will use the Mamaroneck studio. In all likelihood, it will be several months before the picture is ready for exhibition.

Dennis F. O'Brien, general counsel of United Artists is out of town and therefore could not be reached for a statement yesterday.

My American 9/25/24

HIRAM ABRAMS arrived home on the Majestic Tuesday, but when he heard a reporter was on the telephone he said he was out. Unfortunately, this reporter heard his voice, so she had to conclude Mr. Abrams did not care to talk for publication to her.

Anyway, we hear he saw David Wark Griffith in London, and talking [illegible] effect on the plans of Mr. Griffith, who is determined to make two productions for Famous Players-Lasky. And there [illegible]

Not Bound to United Artists, Griffith Declares, on Return from Germany

D. W. GRIFFITH, who returned from Germany this week after completing exteriors for "The Dawn," declared that he is bound to United Artists only for the period which will be necessary to complete the picture.

It will be recalled that, some months ago, announcement was made that Mr. Griffith had made an agreement with Famous Players to produce three pictures after "The Dawn" was finished. The position of United Artists was that Mr. Griffith would be held to a statement signed by himself, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford last Spring.

Mr. Griffith said this week that he signed because representations were made to him that such a statement was necessary to silence disturbing reports about United Artists.

He also said that, when the statement was drawn up, he inquired of his attorney as to whether it would constitute a contract. Informed that it would not, he signed. Mr. Griffith also declared that he was employed by D. W. Griffith, Inc., and that only the signature of the corporation would be binding.

"The contract with Famous Players was made," he added, "in the belief that it was a good step for the Griffith corporation to make pictures properly financed as these pictures for Famous Players would be."

The interiors for "The Dawn" will be made at the Griffith studio in Mamaroneck. It will probably be several months before the picture is in final shape.

My Exhibitors Trade Review Sep 27 1924

GRIFFITH SAYS HE IS NOT BOUND BY 'BIG 4'

D. W. Griffith, American producer returned from Europe on September 16 aboard the Scythia. He stated that he is still connected with the United Artists and that his latest picture "Dawn" will be distributed through that organization.

In connection with the signing of a Famous Players-Lasky contract to produce for that company, he stated that there had been some disturbing rumors concerning United Artists and he felt it was best to have the Griffith Pictures properly financed that Famous could amply care for them.

He said his signature to the statement sent out some time ago by United Artists is not binding upon the D. W. Griffith's Corporation, as Mr. Griffith personally should not sign for the organization. He also states he was told by his attorney that the statement did not act as a contract.

What the outcome of the Famous Player-United Artists argument will be remains to be seen.

Mr. Griffith finished practically all the exteriors of his latest picture "Dawn" in Europe. The interiors will be made at the Mamaroneck studios.

D. W. Griffith who has just returned from Europe and announces that he is not bound by the "Big 4."

JACK COHN REPORTS

My Post 9/30/24

Another thing that we hadn't heard about up to the moment of opening our mail today is the report that D. W. Griffith is to do Marie Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan." D. W. has just come out flat-footed with a denial that he is to make a movie based on this story. "The rights," he says, "are held by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and I understand that that company has already some rather elaborate plans under way for putting this story on the screen."

It strikes us as being rather unusual that one producer should give a competitor such a public boost as Mr. Griffith has done in the above communique. So, this seemingly being our annual Rumor Day, we are led to wonder what has happened to that other report to the effect that D. W. is about to make his productions under the banner of Famous Players-Lasky, otherwise known as FPL.

My Graphic Sep 29 1924

GRIFFITH DENIES

D. W. Griffith emphatically denied yesterday that he is going to produce Marie Corelli's story "The Sorrows of Satan," as a motion picture. "Reports that I plan to produce 'The Sorrows of Satan,'" said Mr. Griffith, "are erroneous. I do not own the rights to this famous story. The rights are held by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and I understand that that company has already some rather elaborate plans under way for putting it on the screen."

Picture Play (N Y C) Oct. 1924

D. W. Griffith Will Film Dawn Famous Players

D. W. Griffith has given up a long hard struggle to continue as an independent producer. After the completion of his next picture, "The Dawn," the exteriors for which Mr. Griffith is now making in Germany, he is to make a series of three pictures for Famous Players at one of the largest salaries ever paid a director.

If you read Agnes Smith's recent articles, "The Perils of Par Coup" and "More About Film Finance," you will understand the reasons for this move. During the last few years the conditions confronting the independent producer have become increasingly difficult and for such a leader in the industry as Mr. Griffith to leave this field is particularly significant. Ultimately, it is assumed, the affairs of D. W. Griffith, Inc., will be wound up, though this will be a long drawn out and delicate process. The assets of the company are valuable, so they include not only the beautiful personals in Long Island Sound where Mr. Griffith has lived and filmed for several years, but also a number of very valuable films, many of which still have the possibilities as producers of a good deal of revenue, which, it is hoped, will, among other things, repay the portion of the public which participated in the purchase of one hundred thousand shares of D. W. Griffith stock issued some years ago when [illegible]

Memphis (Tenn) Commercial Appeal Sep 28 1924

With Famous Jan. 1

D. W. Griffith Starts New Picture in Mamaroneck

D. W. Griffith is at work at the Mamaroneck studio making exteriors for "The Dawn." These will require quite a week to be done on the dunes.

It is reported that Griffith will be ready to start Famous Players-Lasky on his first picture for them about Jan. 1. The selection for his first picture has not been made. It is understood that he has a number of stories to pick from, including one by Marie Corelli.

Film Daily (N Y C) 9/22/24

Duluth (Minn) Herald Sep 27 1924

GERMANY BEARS NO MALICE TOWARD U. S. DECLARES GRIFFITH

PRINCE OF WALES MAY VISIT AT HOLLYWOOD

He Is Anxious to See Motion Picture Center.

Chicago (Ill) Journal 9/27/24

Griffith in a Working Mood

[illegible]

Minneapolis (Minn) Journal 9/27/24

Griffith Not Bound to United Artists, He Says

[illegible]

My Telegram Sep 30 1924

We Are We—"Up in the Air"

WHILE we are on the subject of movie stars, we may as well report that D. W. Griffith, who has withdrawn from the United Artists Corporation, during summer spent quite a goodly time in the big world in back of America.

Regarding the situation that existed over his contractual relations with United Artists and Famous Players-Lasky, the man who made "America" has this to say:

"Whatever contracts are under discussion are distribution contracts solely. I shall continue to make my pictures for D. W. Griffith, Inc., in which concern I am an officer.

"Last winter Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks seriously discussed withdrawal from United Artists. If this took place, naturally the company would cease to exist. In order to protect myself against future distributing difficulties, in case such condition should come to pass, I signed a piece of paper with Famous Players-Lasky.

"This was to safeguard the release of 'America,' and 'Dawn,' on which latter I am now at work.

"These pictures will now be distributed through United Artists Corporation. I don't know what will happen after that. I am interested in United Artists as an officeholder. Whether it releases my pictures or not I [illegible] aware."

[illegible]

Cleveland Press 9/19/24

Syracuse (New York) Herald Sep 24 1924

Oakland (Cal) Tribune 10/19/24

Griffith Holds International Actors' Court

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest. In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," Mr. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

From Germany, he has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men, who have had screen experience in UFA films.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yanckai, with a successful career in the provincial theaters of Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danashafski.

The American players also represent New England, the Central West and the Pacific Coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a Major in the British Army.

Canton (O) News Oct 19 1924

GRIFFITH FILM LIKE OLYMPICS

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—D. W. Griffith is staking his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest most of the work being done here.

In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," Mr. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

From Germany, he has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men, who have had screen experience in UFA films.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yanckai, with a successful career in the provincial theaters of Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danashafski.

The American players also represent New England, the Central West and the Pacific Coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

Atlanta (Ga) American 10/19/24

Griffith Holds Olympic Games For Actor Stars

D. W. GRIFFITH is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest.

In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," Mr. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

Sioux City (Ia) Journal 10/19/24

Griffith Holds Olympic Games for Acting

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test direct contest.

In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," Mr. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out among themselves for the honors in acting."

From Germany, he has enlisted Hans Schettow, Robert Scholtz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men, who have had screen experience in UFA films.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yanckski, with a successful career in the provincial theaters of Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danashafski.

The American players also represent New England, the central west and the Pacific coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a major in the British army.

Topeka (Kansas) Capital 10/19/24

GRIFFITH STAGES OLYMPIC CONTEST FOR THE PLAYERS IN HIS NEWEST FILM PLAY

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest.

In making "The Dawn," Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

From Germany, he has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men, who have had screen experience in UFA films.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yanckai, with a successful career in the provincial theaters of Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danashafski.

The American players also represent New England, the Central West and the Pacific Coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell, and Marcia Harris.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a major in the British army.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Com'l Tribune 10/19/24

THE $1,000 MEN.

That man David Wark Griffith certainly is a stickler for detail. Countless stories have been told about his meticulous striving for realism, but here's a brand new one. He was in Germany with his company a few weeks ago filming parts of "The Dawn," which is now being completed up in his Mamaroneck studio, and right in the middle of one of his most important scenes a tiny bantam hen stalked majestically right in front of the grinding camera. Thousands of feet of film had been taken in that scene, and it wouldn't do to take it over again.

So what does Mr. Griffith do? He buys the bantam, has her boxed up, pays a bond of $1,000 on her and has her shipped to the United States, and

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram 10/19/24

CONFERENCE OF UNITED ARTISTS' HEADS TO BE HELD IN LOS ANGELES NEXT WEEK

Joseph M. Schenck, Hiram Abrams, Robert Fairbanks, Dennis F. O'Brien, and Others Left Yesterday to Discuss Reorganization Plans.

By SAM COMLY.

The reorganization of United Artists' Corporation, with Joseph M. Schenck as president of the production group and Hiram Abrams heading the distribution division, is predicted as a result of a conference of a majority of the members of the so-called "Big Four," to be held on Monday next in Hollywood.

The statement that Norma Talmadge, now a First National star, following the completion of her present releasing contract, may become a star in the United Artists' group, as substantiated last week by Douglas Fairbanks and published exclusively in The Morning Telegraph, may now be broadened to include Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton in the light of yesterday's developments.

The various negotiations in which the United Artists' Corporation has figured in the last few weeks, seemed to come to a temporary stop early yesterday morning, following a series of conferences on Tuesday night. Several wires to and from Los Angeles, and several long-distance telephone calls, closed the conferences here and the conferees spent yesterday morning hastily packing trunks, valises, etc., and when the Twentieth Century Limited pulled out of the Grand Central Terminal at 2.30 yesterday afternoon, the following were among those who made up the party:

Joseph M. Schenck, president, Norma and Constance Talmadge Productions and Buster Keaton Productions.

Hiram Abrams, president, United Artists' Corporation.

Robert Fairbanks, brother of Douglas Fairbanks, and the latter's representative.

Dennis F. O'Brien of the New York law firm of O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll, counsel for Mary Pickford.

Edward Loeb, a Los Angeles lawyer, said to be advising Mr. Schenck. Mr. Loeb is also counsel for a chain of theatres in California.

The party expects to reach Los Angeles in time for the first of a series of conferences to begin on Monday.

That definite action will be taken in the Hollywood conference, to be held at Pickfair, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks (Mary Pickford), and at a Los Angeles hotel, is confidently expected by interested parties here.

Regarding the possible reorganization of United Artists' Corporation, Mr. Abrams refused to make any statement yesterday prior to leaving his office, en route to the Grand Central Terminal.

Mr. Schenck has stated, and at his offices in the Loew State Theatre Building this was reiterated, that he has six more pictures to deliver to First National Pictures, Inc., three for Norma and three for Constance, before he will discuss future plans for his two stars. The Buster Keaton feature comedies have still some little time to go through Metro-Goldwyn distribution channels before there will be a disposition of Buster's future pictures.

It was explained yesterday that the conferences in New York had reached a point where direct contact with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin is necessary in order to continue. Thus, the decision to terminate the conversations here, and resume them in Hollywood, was reached early yesterday morning, and steps taken to proceed to the Coast at once.

At the office of Mr. O'Brien no statement was forthcoming.

Albert H. Banzaf, counsel for D. W. Griffith, stated last evening that Mr. Griffith, as a part owner of United Artists' Corporation, is always interested in the welfare of the organization, and arrangements have been made, The Morning Telegraph understands, to keep Mr. Griffith informed of important developments.

When Mr. Banzaf was asked whether Mr. Griffith will deliver future "D. W. Griffith productions" to United Artists, following his delivery next week of the negative and a print of "Dawn," Mr. Banzaf said:

"That is a matter that will come up for consideration—later."

That the Paramount distributing organization has not been eliminated from consideration in the proposals as they may affect Mr. Schenck's three stars, is stated as a fact by individuals who are well informed.

Milwaukee (Wis) Reader 10/24/24

Isn't Life Wonderful, Title of New Griffith Picture.

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is the title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes.

The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of The Dawn.

The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck. Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

Los Angeles (Cal) Record 10/24/24

D. W. GRIFFITH is preparing another production for United Artists which temporarily upsets the Paramount release story.

My Exhibitors Trade Review 10/25/24

GRIFFITH TO REMAIN WITH UNITED ARTISTS

It now looks as though the David W. Griffith-Famous Players deal is off. It is reported that Mr. Griffith will start work on another picture for release through United Artists. The picture will be made at Griffith's Mamaroneck, N. Y., studios.

Mr. Griffith returned from Europe a short time ago and at that time it was announced that owing to the difficulty of financing his pictures, he would make a series for Famous-Players.

This announcement caused a sensation in picture circles and telegrams, rumors and denials were floating about for several weeks.

My Review 10/25/24

My Motion Picture News 10/25/24

D. W. GRIFFITH has gone in for Olympic games on his own account, and in "The Dawn," is staging an international competition for actors. Three of his leading character men are from Germany, who have had film experience with UFA, Italy is represented by a Sicilian pantomimist. France, Poland and Russia have contributed players—and America has countered with troupers (as they are called back-stage) from New England, the Central States and the West Coast. And the story is by a Major in the British Army.

Why not change the title to "The Melting Pot?"

Cleveland (Ohio) News 10/25/24

U. A. Reorganization Rumor Grows Stronger

Prophesy Talmadge Sisters and Buster Keaton to Appear Under United Artists' Banner, Meeting Scheduled.

By Harry O'Rourke.

IT looks now as though the much-talked-of reorganization of the United Artists' Corporation will develop into something more reliable than talk. A conference of the majority of members of the so-called "Big Four" is to be held in Hollywood Monday and as a result of that meeting we may find Norma and Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton shining forth as stars in the United Artists' group.

The prediction is that the three players will join hands with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin and that Joseph M. Schenck, husband of Norma Talmadge and president of the Norma and Constance Talmadge Productions and Buster Keaton Productions, will become president of the production group of the reorganized United Artists, and Hiram Abrams, present United Artists president, will head the distribution division.

So many rumors regarding the "Big Four" have been going the rounds since D. W. Griffith, the fourth member of the Pickford-Fairbanks-Chaplin organization, made his still-contested tieup with Paramount, that the first report about the possibility of Norma Talmadge, now a First National star, joining the United Artists, was taken like celery—with a grain of salt.

BUT various negotiations in which United Artists have figured in the past few weeks were at a standstill Friday and the conferees were on their way to the west coast with their attorneys, business representatives and what nots. It was said the proposed deal had reached a point where direct contact with Mary Pickford, her husband and Chaplin was necessary in order to continue. That looks as though there may be some fire behind the smoke screen.

All of the principals have declined to make statements concerning the possible reorganization, but that doesn't necessarily mean it's a false alarm. In all big transactions the principals are that way. They like to act mysterious.

If the reorganization does take place it probably will be some time before the Talmadge sisters and Buster actually appear under the United Artists' banner, since Schenck still has three pictures to deliver to First National for Norma and as many for Constance. Keaton's pictures still have some time to go through Metro-Goldwyn distribution channels.

Camden (N J) Post-Telegram Oct 25 1924

My Tribune 10/25/24

An unverified report trickles out that the title of D. W. Griffith's next picture will be "Isn't Life Wonderful?" Since Griffith has set the fashion so often in pictures, we may expect Famous Players-Lasky to get out a photoplay entitled "Ain't Nature Grand?" (in Technicolor), while William Fox might do a feature called "Don't He Look Natural?"

My Telegraph 10/26/24

"Dawn," Griffith's Latest Production, Has a New Title

D. W. Griffith has changed the title of his forthcoming production, the exteriors of which were made in Germany, from "Dawn" to "Isn't Life Wonderful."

In "Isn't Life Wonderful," Mr. Griffith abandoned theatrical plot in the machine sense, and has thrown his artistic and financial fortunes with the first American producer to risk a fortune on a story without even suggesting the "old sure fire" for laurels. It is an absolutely and entire departure from all precedent in the film.

"When Americans learn not to depend so much on plots and more on life for their screen and stage plays they will lead the world in drama," a group of Italian, French and German critics told D. W. Griffith in London recently.

"True here, with the exception of Germany, where the film industry is subsidized by the government, the film industry is the only one in which the United States is not the world's leader. Our film industry is the only one in which we do not lead the world. Our film industry is the only one in which we do not lead the world. Our film industry is the only one in which we do not lead the world

Cleveland (O) News 10/5/24

Big Film War Looms Over Griffith Move

By Monroe Lathrop.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 4.—Hollywood is speculating on the prospect of another war.

Not, of course, of the nations, but of the foremost figures in the movie world.

The line-up would be Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin on one side, and D. W. Griffith, Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky on the other.

Griffith has seemed less certain in his expressions lately of his right to quit the "Big Four" for Paramount.

While he has been explaining the letter from him to Fairbanks promising fealty to United Artists, members of the latter simply say matters are in the hands of their attorneys.

This is interpreted to mean that they are only waiting for a Griffith-Paramount junction to pounce on it.

By some onlookers it is believed the mere threat of legal action will prevent Griffith from making a picture for Zukor.

It would tie up a heavy investment in the courts indefinitely and put the dean of directors out of commission, unless under heavy bond.

Meantime U. A. members hold on tightly to Griffith's letter as offset to his explanation that he has signed only a "personal" and "informal" agreement with U. A.'s chief rivals.

And now while the dogs of war are straining to be unleashed comes word that "Hail the Hero" is the not inappropriate title of the picture in which Richard Talmadge will be seen actually breaking his neck.

The star resumed work on the picture September 25, taking up easy scenes.

His neck harness was discarded just five weeks after the event that was expected to end his career.

With two vertebrae fractured, he was out of the hospital in three weeks.

In another week he used his typewriter, did some spading in his garden and drove his car.

"I'm feeling fine," he declares, "and will soon be ready for anything the director suggests."

Surgeons call it all a miracle, but say Talmadge will be as strong as ever if he doesn't go too fast.

The courage that impels him to do hazardous stunts brought him around so swiftly, they say.

The disaster happened when the star plunged head first into a flying automobile.

Cameras ground and the director shouted "Fine!" But they found Talmadge crumpled up unconscious in the tonneau with his neck broken.

Lincoln (Neb) Journal 10/5/24

The "Art of Acting!" Huh!

D. W. Griffith once told me one almighty truth when we were talking of children on the screen.

"Anybody," he said, "can act better than an actor."

After many years' experience with stage and screen I have honestly come to the conclusion that there is no such thing as the art of acting.

What we call the art of acting is only a conglomeration of agreed-upon conventions.

Rin-tin-tin, the police dog, does not know any thing about the rules of dramatic technique; yet he can register eagerness or fear or anger as no actor, living or dead, has been able to. This is because he is completely free from self-consciousness, and because his imagination is a natural and perfect quality of his mind and soul.

No human actor can do so well as Rin-tin-tin, because no human actor can so completely forget himself.

Why They Love Animals.

The picture fans do not stop to analyze the reason they are so fond of animals on the screen.

They think it is because they love animals. The real reason is because they instinctively understand and admire [illegible]

Detroit (Mich) News 10/5/24

GRIFFITH MOVE A WAR SIGNAL

Signing With Famous Players May Bring On Fight to Finish.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 4.—Hollywood is speculating on the prospect of another war.

Not, of course, of the nations, but of the foremost figures in the movie world.

The line-up would be Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin, on one side, and D. W. Griffith, Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky on the other.

Griffith has seemed less certain in his expressions lately of his right to quit the "Big Four" for Paramount.

While he has been explaining the letter from him to Fairbanks promising fealty to United Artists, members of the latter simply say matters are in the hands of their attorneys.

This is interpreted to mean that they are only waiting for a Griffith-Paramount junction to pounce on it.

By some onlookers it is believed the mere threat of legal action will prevent Griffith from making a picture for Zukor.

It would tie up a heavy investment in the courts indefinitely and put the dean of directors out of commission, unless under heavy bond.

Meantime U. A. members hold on tightly to Griffith's letter as offset to his explanation that he has signed only a "personal" and "informal" agreement with U. A.'s chief rivals.

And now while the dogs of war are straining to be unleashed comes word that "Hail the Hero" is the not inappropriate title of the picture in which Richard Talmadge will be seen actually breaking his neck.

The star resumed work on the picture September 25, taking up easy scenes.

His neck harness was discarded just five weeks after the event that was expected to end his career.

With two vertebrae fractured, he was out of the hospital in three weeks.

In another week he used his typewriter, did some spading in his garden and drove his car.

"I'm feeling fine," he declares, "and will soon be ready for anything the director suggests."

Surgeons call it all a miracle, but say Talmadge will be as strong as ever if he doesn't go too fast.

The courage that impels him to do hazardous stunts brought him around so swiftly, they say.

The disaster happened when the star plunged head first into a flying automobile.

Cameras ground and the director shouted "Fine!" But they found Talmadge crumpled up unconscious in the tonneau with his neck broken.

Washington (D C) Herald 10/6/24

Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty

Berlin, (A. P. by Mail)—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Washington (D C) Times 10/8/24

D. W. GRIFFITH FINDS GERMANS IN MISERY

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions presented here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

Hartford (Conn) Times 10/9/24

MOTION PICTURE MAN SEES BERLIN POVERTY

[illegible]

Eve. World 10/8/24

BROKEN RECORDS

[illegible]

Fresno (Cal) Bee 10/6/24

MOTION PICTURE MAN SEES POVERTY IN BERLIN

[illegible]

Bloomington (Ill) Bulletin 10/8/24

DAVID W. GRIFFITH, MAKER OF PICTURES

Kentucky is the birth-place and the home of D. W. Griffith. His residence is at his studios in Mamaroneck, N. Y. There he has established a sea-walled park for picture-making, one of the show places along Long Island Sound, visible for miles, canopied with great elms and birches; and soothed into a restful reach of nature by surrounding lawns.

Here Mr. Griffith makes all his pictures, which, critics say, are unequalled for emotional intensity, poetic beauty and dramatic suspense.

How does this man appear? He is in his early forties; five feet and eleven inches tall, weighing one hundred and fifty-two pounds. Physically, he has a firm balance of bone, with alert decisive movement; a slender, cutting body with no suggestion of brute strength. His vitality and endurance are premiums of perfect health and indomitable will.

His studio is his home. For weeks, he never leaves the grounds. Up at 7:30 every morning, he works steadily until from eleven to one o'clock every night. It is most typical of him that he hastens, but never hurries; moves quickly but never rushes.

While other directors have the resources of great organizations to assist them, Mr. Griffith works alone. He selects his own stories. Then he begins to cast the principal roles. In this day when so many successful players have long-term contracts, this is often a most trying and difficult task; as available talent is often unsuitable.

While he selects his cast, he rehearses them, at once to prove the worth of the player in absorbing the role, and to work out the details of the drama so every member will be saturated with the purposes of the parts.

During the rehearsals, the costumes are selected, tried out, changed over and over again until final choice is made.

In directing his players, Mr. Griffith first allows the players to interpret the action for themselves, so that their portrayal may be natural. From this basis, he improves, suggesting movements and meanings. Only in intensely dramatic scenes does he ever raise his voice, and then only as emotional incentive. While the action proceeds, his face is a pathway for the quick and flowing emotions the scene reveals. His sensitive face registers every shy shade of feeling, and work vividly when the stronger strains of drama are touched. He is "all things to all men," feeling and reflecting every phase of every character. Psychologists declare it is this sensitive response which permits him to keep healthy and alert under unbelievable burdens.

His attitude towards his players is that of persuasive partnership, first following their original reactions, then sharing with them, gradually expanding the mood so that he leads them; and finally moulding the scene for the permanency of the camera by stimulating and spurring them.

He corrects but seldom criticises and never denounces. It is his firm policy in the social as well as professional world, never to say an unkind thing about a person; and if he ever says an uncomplimentary thing, he says it to the person, and not to others. His tolerance and patience are two capital features of his rare ability to handle others.

Robert W. Chambers, the famous novelist and student of character, says of Griffith: "I can think of no other man so entirely humble, so truly modest as D. W. Griffith. Unselfish, generous, whimsical and fun-loving, with the courage and intelligence of a great leader, and the visions of genius, here is a rare man."

Rex Ingram, the famous director, recently paid in print this tribute: "We all follow Griffith. He did everything first and the other directors do them over again as best they can. Motion pictures owe everything to this man."

With all his successes, Mr. Griffith remains a poor man. He lives in two rooms, lightly furnished, mostly with books and gymnastic apparatus. He reads at least one-half hour every day, without regard to how strenuous the work of the day has been.

A trifling but interesting peculiarity is that he can never keep his watch running. Time and again he has been presented with costly watches, but after wearing them two or three weeks, they stop.

Today he stands in perfect health, with a record of having made five times as many pictures as any other director, with having created the technique which is now the accepted method of picture making. Year after year he establishes new records in the number of pictures rated among the ten best by vote of public and critics. Some of his most famous works are "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "Hearts of the World," "Broken Blossoms," "Way Down East" and "Orphans of the Storm." And yet he is planning now to do what he considers the real work of his life, the production of a series of [illegible] portraying the great dramatic moments of mankind.

Salt Lake City (Utah) 10/11/24

Griffith Gives His Impressions Of Fatherland

[illegible]

My Eve. World 10/8/24

Hartford (Conn) Times 10/9/24

MOTION PICTURE MAN SEES BERLIN POVERTY

[illegible]

My Eve. Bulletin 10/10/24

Inter-Race Cast Make "The Dawn"

[illegible]

MANY NATIONS FURNISH ACTORS FOR "THE DAWN"

Mr. Griffith Got His Cast From All Over Europe and America

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest.

In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," Mr. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

From Germany, he has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men, who have had screen experience in UFA films.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yancksi, with a successful career in the provincial theatres of Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danashafski.

The American players also represent New England, the Central West and the Pacific Coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a major in the British army.

My Telegram 4/10/24

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for his new production, "The Dawn." He has assembled players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out among themselves for the honors in acting."

Manhattan (Kas) Chronicle 10/11/24

AMERICAN MOTION PICTURE MAN SEES BERLIN POVERTY

Berlin (AP)—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the man added.

Exhibitors Herald Chicago 10/11/24

Griffith Makes Denial

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Reports that Marie Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan" would be produced by him have been denied by D. W. Griffith. The producer stated that Paramount held the rights to this story and that he understood that the company had elaborate plans under way for screening it.

My Morning Picture World Oct 11 1924

Griffith Makes Denial

D. W. Griffith emphatically denies that he is going to produce Marie Corelli's story "The Sorrows of Satan," as a motion picture.

"Reports that I plan to produce 'The Sorrows of Satan,' said Mr. Griffith, 'are erroneous. I do not own the rights to this famous story. The rights are held by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and I understand that that company has already some rather elaborate plans under way for putting it on the screen."

Boise (Idaho) Statesman October 12 1924

AMERICAN MOVIE MAN SEES POVERTY IN BERLIN

[illegible]

Fankenburg (W Va) News 10/12/24

[illegible]

Chicago (Ill) Journal 10/15/24

Griffith's Babel

In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," D. W. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

Of Germans, he has Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in a Punch and Judy show and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Belgium. Ignacia Yancksi, with a career in the provincial theaters in Poland, represents that country. For Russia, appears Olga Danashafski.

Among the American players are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

The story is by Goeffrey Moss, a major in the British army.

Griffith has made part of his picture abroad. He has just arrived in this country to complete it.

Chicago (Ill) News 10/15/24

[illegible] Olympia.

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest. In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," he has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out among themselves for the honors in acting."

He has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of Germany's leading character men. Italy entered a Sicilian who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia. Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yancksi, with a successful career in the provincial theaters of Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danashafski. The American players also represent New England, the central west and the Pacific coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a major in the British army.

Los Angeles (Cal) News 10/15/24

NOTED DIRECTOR STAGES OWN OLYMPIC GAMES FOR LATEST PRODUCTION

[illegible]

Brooklyn Eagle 10/12/24

David Wark Griffith is staging an Olympic contest all his own to test the histrionic talents of the various nations in his latest production, "The Dawn." For this film Mr. Griffith has assembled players from several European countries and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves."

From Germany he has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men of U. F. A. films, a German producing company. Italy has entered a Sicilian who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. His name is Frank Puglia.

Henri De Vries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yanckai, with a successful career in the provincial theatres of Poland, represents that country. From Russia has come Olga Danashefski.

The American players who will appear in "The Dawn" represent New England, the Middle West and the Pacific Coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Helen Lowell.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a major in the British Army. Too bad it isn't [illegible] "Universal" pictures.

My Reeland Review 10/15/24

The first real news regarding "Dawn," which will be the next D. W. Griffith picture to be released through United Artists, tells of a cast that sounds like the list of contestants in the Olympic games. Neil Hamilton and Carol Dempster have the leading roles, they are Americans, and the rest of the cast was selected in Europe, and includes three famous players of Germany, and one each from Italy, France, Poland and Russia. And the story is by an Englishman. The picture, by the way, was made in Berlin! No date of release is given, though it is understood that the picture is ready.

Boston (Mass) Post 10/15/24

AN INTERNATIONAL CAST

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest.

In making his new production, which has for its working title "The Dawn," Mr. Griffith has assembled his players from several European nations, and, as he says, "thrown them into the story to let them fight it out amongst themselves for the honors in acting."

From Germany, he has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf, three of the leading character men, who have had screen experience in U. F. A. films.

Italy entered a Sicilian, who began his career in Punch and Judy pantomime and carried it on to opera. He is Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yoncski, with a theatrical career in Poland, represents that country. For Russia appears Olga Danoshofski. All of these players worked at the Berlin studio with Mr. Griffith.

The American players represent New England, the Central West and the Pacific Coast, with Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Helen Lowell, Erville Alderson and Marcia Harris.

And the story is by Geoffrey Moss, a major in the British army.

My American Oct. 16, 1924

Griffith Likely to Contract With United Not Pro

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH probably will fulfill the contract that United Artists alleges he made with them. Mr. Griffith is a man to whom personal honor is more important than money. Although a salary of $10,000 a week awaits him with Famous Players-Lasky, the freedom of the studios, and the privilege of doing as he pleases, he declines to do anything that would reflect upon his integrity.

Louella O. Parsons

Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford have said that Mr. Griffith has three years more with United Artists and that any attempt on his part to forego his obligation would be met with prompt action.

This, in plain language, probably would mean a law suit. Mr. Griffith does not wish to involve Famous Players-Lasky in any legal controversy. Even if he makes a picture for them, it probably would be tied up with an injunction and kept from the screen for an indefinite period. In view of all these things, Mr. Griffith has confided to his close friends that he does not feel justified in taking what would be the most advantageous offer for himself.

He is now finishing "Dawn" at his Mamaroneck studio, and as soon as that is completed he will start making definite plans. He does not even know what his next picture will be.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post Oct 18 1924

When They Talk, Oh, My!

"The Dawn," a new picture being made by D. W. Griffith, is a regular Olympic Games, in which actors from various nations compete for histrionic honors.

From Germany, Griffith has enlisted Hans Schlettow, Robert Scholz and Paul Rhekopf.

Italy entered a Sicilian, Frank Puglia.

Henri DeVries was summoned from Paris. Ignacia Yancksi represents Poland. For Russia appears Olga Danashefski.

The American players are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Helen Lowell and Marcia Harris.

My City Film Daily 10/16/24

Is Griffith Free?

Possibility That United Artists Statement May Be Binding as a Contract Upon Him

It is learned that a doubt has arisen in the Griffith organization over the future status of the producer with United Artists.

It will be recalled that early in the Spring, when many reports were in circulation regarding the future of the company, United Artists issued a statement which, on its face, bound the members of the company for a period of three years. When Griffith signed with Famous, it was stated on his behalf that he considered his signature on that document was a favor and not binding upon him.

It is understood, however, that A. H. T. Banzhaf, Griffith's attorney has been studying the situation and that he is not certain but that D. W.'s name affixed to the pivotal statement might be construed as a legal contract.

G. [illegible]th is now finishing "Dawn." He [illegible] allowing nothing to interfere with the completion of the picture. As soon as it is through, he will endeavor to ascertain just how he stands.

Lexington (Ky) Post 10/18/24

When They Talk, Oh, My!

[illegible]

Denver (Colorado) 10/19/24

MANY COUNTRIES INVADED TO GET 'THE DAWN' ACTORS

Griffith Assembles Players for Olympic Games of Drama.

D. W. Griffith is staging his own Olympic games for acting, to test the talents of several nations in direct contest.

[illegible]

Boston (Mass) Globe 10/18/24

[illegible]

Fresno (Cal) Bee 10/6/24

[illegible]

Fankenburg (W Va) News 10/12/24

[illegible]

Morning Telegraph Oct 26 (24) Journal N.Y. Post N.Y. Times Boston (Mass) Post 10/27/24 Traveler 10/30/24 N.Y. News 11/30/24

UNITED ARTISTS' CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN LOS ANGELES

Joseph M. Schenck, Hiram Abrams, Robert Fairbanks, Dennis F. O'Brien and Others Left Wednesday to Discuss Reorganization Plans.

The reorganization of United Artists' Corporation, with Joseph M. Schenck as president of the production group and Hiram Abrams heading the distribution division, is predicted as a result of a conference of a majority of the members of the so-called "Big Four," to begin to-morrow in Hollywood.

The statement that Norma Talmadge, now a First National star, following the completion of her present releasing contract, may become a star in the United Artists' group, as substantiated last week by Douglas Fairbanks and published exclusively in The Morning Telegraph, may now be broadened to include Constance Talmadge and Buster Keaton in the light of yesterday's developments.

The various negotiations in which the United Artists' Corporation has figured in the last few weeks, seemed to come to a temporary stop early Wednesday morning, following a series of conferences on Tuesday night. Several wires to and from Los Angeles, and several long-distance telephone calls, closed the conferences here and the conferees spent Wednesday morning hastily packing trunks, valises, etc., and when the Twentieth Century Limited pulled out of the Grand Central Terminal at 2.39 that afternoon, the following were among those who made up the party:

Joseph M. Schenck, president, Norma and Constance Talmadge Productions and Buster Keaton Productions.

Hiram Abrams, president, United Artists' Corporation.

Robert Fairbanks, brother of Douglas Fairbanks, and the latter's representative.

Dennis F. O'Brien of the New York law firm of O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll, counsel for Mary Pickford.

Edward Loeb, a Los Angeles lawyer, said to be advising Mr. Schenck. Mr. Loeb is also counsel for a chain of theatres in California.

The party expects to reach Los Angeles in time for the first of a series of conferences to begin.

That definite action will be taken in the Hollywood conference, to be held at Pickfair, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks (Mary Pickford), and at a Los Angeles hotel, is confidently expected by interested parties here.

Regarding the possible reorganization of United Artists' Corporation, Mr. Abrams refused to make any statement yesterday prior to leaving his office, en route to the Grand Central Terminal.

Mr. Schenck has stated, and at his offices in the Loew State Theatre Building this was reiterated, that he has six more pictures to deliver to First National Pictures, Inc., three for Norma and three for Constance, before he will discuss future plans for his two stars. The Buster Keaton feature comedies have still some little time to go through Metro-Goldwyn distribution channels before there will be a disposition of Buster's future pictures.

It was explained later that the conferences in New York had reached a point where direct contact with Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin is necessary in order to continue. Thus, the decision to terminate the conversations here, and resume them in Hollywood, was reached and steps taken to proceed to the Coast at once.

At the office of Mr. O'Brien no statement was forthcoming.

Albert H. T. Banshaf, counsel for D. W. Griffith, said last evening that Mr. Griffith, part owner of United Artists' Corporation, is always interested in the welfare of the organization, and arrangements have been made, The Morning Telegraph understands, to keep Mr. Griffith informed of important developments.

When Mr. Banshaf was asked whether Mr. Griffith will deliver future "D. W. Griffith productions" to United Artists, following his delivery next week of the negative and a print of "Dawn," Mr. Banshaf said:

"That is a matter that will come up for consideration—later."

That the Paramount distributing organization has not been eliminated from consideration in the proposals as they may affect Mr. Schenck's three stars, is stated as a fact by individuals who are well informed.

FINISH NEW GRIFFITH PICTURE AT MAMARONECK

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is the title D. W. Griffith has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes. The story developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn."

The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck on Long Island Sound. Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

SCHENK'S CHANGES

It is reported that Joseph Schenk has dissolved his connections with Loew's, Inc., and that his contract with First National for the release of Norma and Constance Talmadge's pictures will expire in September, 1925. So it seems possible there may be something in these rumors of an affiliation with United Artists, which would place the Talmadge sisters with Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin, and—who knows? with D. W. Griffith.

By the way, Griffith is lying low these days, with not a word on the subject of business arrangements. All that has been heard from him since his return from abroad has been the change of his new picture from "The Dawn" to "Isn't Life Wonderful?" We can only hope that the picture is better than it sounds.

Albany (N.Y.) News 10/27/24 Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram 10/31/24

David W. Griffith has decided to change the title of his new picture from "The Dawn" to "Isn't Life Wonderful." Since Emma Dunn's stage play is called "Dawn," Griffith evidently felt that similarity would not work to his advantage, just as Universal is seeking a new title for "Miracle" because of Morris Gest's stage [illegible]

Title is Chosen

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is the colorful title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes.

The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn."

The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound which a celebrated foreign writer recently described as "The Island of Art."

Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 10/28/24 N.Y. Eve. World 10/31/24

D. W. GRIFFITH has finally decided on "Isn't Life Wonderful" for the title of his new film hitherto called "Dawn." The picture is said to be nearing completion at the Mamaroneck Studios, although it was largely filmed in Europe.

D. W. Griffith

It is not often that Griffith is at loss for words, but in this instance he has been a long time deciding what he wanted and it may be that the new title will not strike him as entirely original. Anyhow, life is wonderful.

GRIFFITH DROPS PLOT

D. W. Griffith is taking another chance in the name of art, and we sincerely hope that he is successful. He has abandoned theatrical plot in the machine sense in "Isn't Life Wonderful!" the picture he is now making, and is attempting to portray a cross-section of life dramatically told. In other words, he is risking a fortune on a story without summoning the "old sure first" for insurance. And, as we said before, we hope the picture is a hit.

Houston (Tex) Chronicle 10/28/24 Rio (Cal) Reporter 10/31/24

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is the original title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes. The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn."

The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound, which a celebrated foreign writer recently described as "The Island of Art."

Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

"Isn't Life Wonderful," is the original title D. W. Griffith has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes. The picture is now nearing completition at the Griffith studios on Long Island.

Newark (N.J.) Ledger 10/26/24 Dayton (Ohio) Herald 10/31/24

D. W. Griffith—Dwan

If there is any artist in filmdom today—a true artist who has been doing consistent artistic work—it is David Wark Griffith, whose latest achievement, "America," concluded its premiere Newark showing Wednesday. Griffith, to us, is without question the peer of motion picture directors; if the others are "geniuses" as their press agents would have us believe, then Griffith is a super-genius. Of all those quibbling mouthpieces for megaphones, he is the sole possessor of those artistic elements which indicate a definite artistic viewpoint.

Every artist says John Ruskin, the English art critic in speaking of the painter "must first always have two great and distinct ends: the first, to induce in the spectator's mind the faithful conception of any natural object whatsoever the second, to guide the spectator's mind to those objects and feelings with which these were regarded by the artist himself."

Application of the definition does not permit elasticity. The reporter is not a poet, the parrot is not an actor, a photographer is not a painter, and a motion picture caption writer is not a prose stylist. The author half of the definition requires that the man must be able to penetrate into the nature of his subject, must know it from skin to bone.

Of all the directorial moments, Griffith, we believe, approaches nearer the definition. He has the ability, a dignified approach that is elegance and yet delicate, an exquisite grace, a fluidity of movement, a wholesome appreciation of characterization, and a delicacy and suffusing motions of thus that give his "America" one of the best performances Griffith has ever given. Griffith's most artistic and yet most human, the great.

Griffith is the master of lights and shadows—photograph, the stage has never seen, and never has the screen seen, the quality. "America" drew crowds and received the greatest photoplay praise. He is not the type of artist that has gone to pieces at success. He is the same Griffith as in years gone by.

As master of the Griffith Players, they are all little. He is the master, directing, managing, producing and directing. Mildred Harris is the leading woman in "America" and she is a worthy one. Lionel Barrymore, Erville Alderson, Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Creighton Hale, Charles Emmett Mack, Ralph Lewis, Frank Puglia, Joseph Schildkraut, Arthur Donaldson, Ralph Sipperly, Jack Dillon, Jack Ridley, Ralph Graves, Lucy Cousins, Ann Pennington, Lillian Leighton, Ruth Mitchell, Ruth Stonehouse, Ruth Dwyer, Ruth Ann Baldwin, Ruth Hiatt, Ruth Mix, Ruth Roland, Ruth Renick, Ruth Taylor, Ruth Wilson, Ruth Clifford

MOVIE HOME JOURNAL
BOSTON-MASS. NOV. 1924

MOVIE WEEKLY
11/22/24

¶A star in the making. Youthful and handsome Neil Hamilton. We predict a great future for this lad.

Studied for Priesthood —now LEADING MAN

¶Ernest Torrence played the lead in "The Side Show of Life" in which Neil Hamilton does noble work.

By Charles L. Gartner

THE detailed story of the life of the youthful Neil Hamilton would read like one of Horatio Alger's books on the country boy who made good.

Neil was born in the town of Lynn, Mass., and after completing his regular schooling, Hamilton went to a theological seminary for three years. He successfully completed the course and had even gone so far as to purchase the sombre clothing of the priesthood when he suddenly sat down to think things over.

He finally drifted to the theatrical section of New York City and brazenly presented himself at the stage door of a well-known theatre and asked for a job. When asked what he could do, Hamilton said he could act, change scenery, take care of the "props" and several other things. Whoever it was that gave him his first job took Hamilton at his word, for the next night he was on the stage appearing as an extra. When not before an audience Neil was helping shift scenery, carrying trunks around and assisting in setting the stage. For this work Neil was handed ten dollars at the end of each week. But he refused to become discouraged.

Then the movies claimed him—and after hard work and slow climbing, he "arrived."

Hamilton recently played a leading role in D. W. Griffith's "America," and also portrayed a character bit in the "White Rose." Famous-Players has this young man slated for many important and agreeable roles in the near future.

Hamilton will go far—because he has that clean, wholesome, real American youth "personality." Here's to you—Neil!

¶Neil Hamilton and Anna Q. Nilsson in a scene from "The Side Show of Life," the Paramount picture in which Hamilton caused so much favorable comment by his style, personality and good looks.

Isn't Life Wonderful?

This isn't our title. It is the name D. W. Griffith has given his new picture which he recently completed at the Mamaroneck studios after having filmed the exteriors in Europe.

There are interludes when life is wonderful . . . true enough. And we have no fault to find with the realism with which Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton portray such an interlude here.

LOS ANGELES-TIMES - 11/29/24

David Wark Griffith

"Pooh-pooh—he's gone." That's the stylish thing to say in Hollywood.

And generally to pooh-pooh everything that Griffith has done.

I can tell these pooh-poohers one thing: It will be many a long day before any other director reaches the heart of the American people as Griffith has—or as Griffith can right now if he really tries.

For a long time all big pictures were rank imitations of Griffith. Cecil De Mille, in fact, was the first one to kick over the traces.

Beginning with Von Stroheim's "Blind Husbands," a new type of picture drama came—the drama of sophistication—the story of life told with a shrug and a smile.

The climax of a Griffith picture always came when the hero galloped to the rescue and killed the villain not as he was hoisting down the down to vanish the pure, unsullied "gall."

The villain in one of the Lubitsch-Von Stroheim-Elinor Glyn plays wouldn't have had to break up our perfectly good dinner; the lady would have opened the door and told him to come right on in.

These new plays of suggestion, innuendo and sliding glances are scarcely those. Everyone knows them for a change. They give us all a pleasant feeling of being highly intelligent. But they don't touch the heart.

They reflect the feelings of an old civilization which has learned, with bitterness, that nothing matters very much. That life is only a cruel joke, that if the villain vanishes the pure ... well, the chances are a thousand to one the villain wouldn't have stayed pure, anyhow—so what's the difference?

This philosophy is fine.

[illegible]

N.Y. Motion Picture News 11/22/24

A GROUP of Italian, French and German critics had it out with D. W. Griffith in London recently. They told him that "when Americans learn not to depend so much on plots and more on life for their screen and stage plays, they will lead the world in drama."

And this is the way the spokesman of the party sized up the situation:

"Over here, with us, melodrama is secondary now. The plots with theatrical moments have given way to real life dramatically told. But you Americans do love your plots still, someone dropping dead just in time to unite the lovers, or mob extravaganzas. The costly plays with much plot machinery are not done on the European stage. Soon they will die with you. And then America will be — well, look out. We shall see the great drama then and it will come from America."

MOVIE WEEKLY, NEW YORK
NOVEMBER 22, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is the colorful title D. W. Griffith has given to his new production, for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes. The story has developed into something [illegible] under the working title of "The Dawn." The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound which a celebrated painter recently described as "The Island of Artists." Mr. Griffith has [illegible] the first [illegible]

DENVER (COLO.) POST 11/23/24

ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL, TITLE OF NEW PICTURE

[illegible]

Telegraph 11/7

14

TIMELY R[illegible]

GRIFFI[illegible]S LATEST SHOWN TO ARTISTS

Westport Acclaims "Isn't Life Wonderful" as Greatest Love Story Yet Presented

CAROL DEMPSTER IS PRAISED

D. W. Griffith gave a trial showing of his newest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful," which has produced under the working title of "The Dawn," at Westport, Ct., recently, and the audience was composed entirely of the artist colony in that place. Since the showing "Isn't Life Wonderful" has become the talk of Westport.

[illegible]

What About "D. W."?

Coast Conference Will Determine Whether He Continues with United or Goes to Famous

In addition to the approval of the reorganization plan for United Artists that must come from Nathan Burkan, legal member for Charlie Chaplin and A. H. T. Banshaf, as attorney for D. W. Griffith, it is understood the future relations of the latter will be discussed.

It should be borne in mind that United Artists feels that Griffith is tied to that organization for three

(Continued on Page 11)

BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE

What About "D. W."?

(Continued from Page 11)

[illegible] years, as a result of the contract signed by him at the annual meeting in the Spring. In view of this, there are two Griffith contracts that may be pertinent. The contract may not [illegible] in view of the fact that United Artists is not quite the organization of new product sufficient important product can be obtained without aid from Griffith. It may not be the other hand that will [illegible] much additional capital [illegible] it would be necessary for Griffith to [illegible] the production through [illegible]

D. W. Griffith, Inc., will retain [illegible] if you are interested in the company that has already released [illegible] Griffith's [illegible] Liberty [illegible] Griffith [illegible]

[illegible]

NORWALK (Conn.) HOUR 654
NOV. 7, 1924

RIALTO TO INTRODUCE "ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL"

Producer D. W. Griffith and Technical Staff to Be at Local Theater Monday.

D. W. Griffith, noted motion picture producer, is expected in this city the latter part of next week to be present at the initial showing of his latest production, "Isn't Life Wonderful," which will open the premiere showing and release of the Rialto Theatre, according to Manager Lenart. According to Manager Lenart, the picture will be shown at each two performances daily, matinee and night. Mr. Griffith, his technical staff, which has been busy for the past several weeks, and the cast of players, including Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, will be present on the day the premiere performance will take place.

The Griffith production has already created a sensation in Europe. It is said to be the greatest production ever made by the famous producer. It is said that the production has been shown to the crowned heads of Europe and has received the highest praise from the royalty of the old world. It is said that the production was available not after the war.

The Griffith production has already created a sensation in Europe. It is said to be the greatest production ever made by the famous producer. It is said that the production has been shown to the crowned heads of Europe and has received the highest praise from the royalty of the old world. It is said that the production was available not after the war.

[illegible]

Lucey's Press Clipping Bureau
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Morning Telegraph
Nov 9 1924

Lucey's Press Clipping Bureau
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
[illegible]

Lucey's Press Clipping Bureau
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Columbia
11-9-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NOV 16 1924
CINCINNATI (O.) ENQUIRER

THE SILENT DRAMA

THE saying that truth is stranger than fiction is so frequently repeated and so generally accepted that few people stop to analyze its full significance. While admitting that many truths would have to exert themselves rather energetically to surpass some of the weird fictions originated by scenario writers, it remains true nevertheless that the actual processes of life and nature are far more fascinating than the dizziest flights of imagination.

Philosophers tell us that the best way to become the master of nature is to obey her laws. The man who invented the aeroplane understood and gave due consideration to the law of gravity. By the same token, the only way to create a great work of the imagination is to study and copy as closely as possible the processes of life. To do this one must not merely photograph, or slavishly imitate specific incidents and episodes and characters. One must rather observe the underlying scheme of things—understand the general truths of nature, organic and inorganic—and then apply these truths to the creatures and incidents of the imagination.

The reason why so many motion pictures have about them an air of unreality is that they too slavishly follow a preconceived and wholly artificial plot pattern. There are a certain number of events leading up to a climax, and after the climax one is given the impression that everything is definitely and permanently settled. In life nothing is ever settled permanently. One climax is frequently the starting point of a concatenation of events leading up to another climax. No denouement in life is characterized by unmitigated happiness.

We are apt to point with pride to the fact that America leads the world in the production of motion pictures. This is true quantitatively, but not necessarily qualitatively. The European productions may be inferior to ours technically, but as regards those intangible elements that go into the making of great art, there is much we can learn from them. Some shrewd and sound advice was given recently to D. W. Griffith by a group of Italian, French and German critics.

"When Americans learn not to depend too much on plots and more on life for their screen and stage plays, they will lead the world in drama," he was told. "Over here with us, melodrama is secondary now. The plots with the theatrical moments have given way to real life, dramatically told. But you Americans do love your plots still, someone dropping dead just in time to part the lovers, or mob extravaganzas. The costly plays with which plot machinery are done on the European stage. Soon they will die with you. And then America will be—well, look out. We shall see the great drama then, and it will come from America."

D. W. Griffith's newest production, curiously called "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is said to be an abrupt and active departure from all precedent in the films. If it is what it is said to be, it will not be the first American-made production to break away from mechanical plots and sawdust characters. Several attempts in this direction have already been made, the most notable being "A Woman of Paris" and "The Marriage Circle."

CARL R. ADAMS

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NOV 16 1924
NEWARK, N. J., CALL

"Isn't Life Wonderful?"

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is the colorful title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes. The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn." The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound which a celebrated foreign writer recently described as "The Island of Art." Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Vancouver (B. C.)
Sun 11/23/24

LIFE WONDERFUL, SAYS THIS TITLE

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is the colorful title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production, for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes.

The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn."

The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound which a celebrated foreign writer recently described as "The Island of Art."

Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
WASHINGTON STAR NOV 23 192

Daniel Mark Griffith already is said to be rising to explain that his new picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful," is not propaganda, but simply a reflection of conditions at the present time in Germany, as he saw them.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Cincinnati (O.)
Billboard 11/24/24

by the A. M. P. A. against ... ing methods.

MOVE UP TO ABRAMS IN GRIFFITH-U. A. SPLIT

New York, Sept. 27.—Both D. W. Griffith and Hiram Abrams, of United Artists, are back in New York now from Europe, and, from the terse remarks made by each, it is believed that Griffith will stick to his plan of leaving United Artists for Famous Players-Lasky, and that the next move is up to Abrams, if he intends making one.

Under questioning Griffith stated that he would produce for Famous Players-Lasky as soon as Dawn, the production which he is now finishing up, is delivered to United Artists. Abrams, when quizzed, refused to say anything other than to admit that he had had a conference with Griffith in Europe.

As pointed out in The Billboard several weeks ago, Griffith's chief defense, in case United Artists takes legal action to prevent him producing for Famous Players, will probably be that the so-called three-year contract renewal United Artists claims he signed last spring is invalid because it was not authorized by the board of directors of D. W. Griffith, Inc. Griffith is tied up by a long-term contract with D. W. Griffith, Inc., only drawing a salary ... as president and his directing.

EXPLOITATION DEPT. FOR

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NOV 16 1924
NEW YORK AMERICAN

MY DEAR MISS PARSONS:

I have been an interested reader of your column for some years and appreciate your crisp and natural way you present news and notes of the movie world, and its personalities.

If you remember, about April or May, you spoke at length on revivals of old pictures, particularly of D. W. Griffith. You gave a sort of guarantee that "Broken Blossoms" would be revived on Broadway in October.

So, since Spring I have watched all notes and ads relating to same, but so far have not seen anything about it.

Now, Miss Parsons, won't you let an anxious reader know for certain, if you can, if this Griffith masterpiece "Broken Blossoms" will be shown on Broadway, or locality in and near Metropolis during October?

Hoping you will answer a reader who enjoys your column very much.

Yours sincerely,
JOHN J. RYAN.

Editor's note: Only Mr. Griffith can answer your question. Right now he is so busy arranging for the presentation of "Isn't Life Wonderful" that I doubt if he is giving "Broken Blossoms" a thought.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Syracuse N. Y.
11-24-24 Telegram

GRIFFITH CHANGES TITLE OF "DAWN"

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is the colorful title D. W. Griffith finally has given to his new production for which he went to Germany to take the exterior scenes.

The story has developed into nine reels under the working title of "The Dawn."

The picture is now nearing completion at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck, the secluded spot in Long Island Sound which a celebrated foreign writer recently described as "The Island of Art."

Mr. Griffith has been working on the production since the first of July.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
KNOXVILLE (Tenn.) JOURNAL-TRIBUNE
OCTOBER 5, 1924
4D

D. W. GRIFFITH SEES BERLIN IN POVERTY

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse while visiting here," the film man added.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM Chicago (Ill.)
Journal 11/10/24

"o." She used to prefer it Nah-seem-eva, with the ... on the screen."

Again—Griffith!

Griffith is ready with another new one, calling it "Isn't Life Wonderful?" which sounds more like a cross-word puzzle than the great picture they say this is. It's first title was "The Dawn," and Carol Dempster plays the chief part. Those who have seen it declare it is as "revolutionary" as "Broken Blossoms" ... some seasons ago.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Hartford (Conn.)
Times 11/24/24

GRIFFITH TO SHOW NEW PICTURE

D. W. Griffith will show his new picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful," for one week at the Rialto theater, New York, beginning November 24, according to contracts signed last week.

The demands upon the legitimate theaters for waiting shows, made it impossible for him to follow his usual custom of showing it first under his own presentation. The earliest show date secured him was in March.

Through arrangements between Mr. Griffith and Mr. Baker, the schedule of the Rialto theater was revised to permit the one week showing of the picture.

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is Mr. Griffith's first production since "America," and is done in a manner new to the screen. No effort for melodramatic climaxes and sweet sentimentality has been made. Mr. Griffith has been asserted to be his playwrit reveal the intricacies of life, in taking up his first story for production has faced some the equivalent.

Most of the scenes were photographed in Germany. In the cast, Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton have the leads, supported by an international cast including Lionel Barrymore, Frank Puglia, Paul Rigelhof of the Deutsches theater, Berlin, Clara Von Bolem, and a large local company. The story is from the pen of Melville Brown.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
56 WARREN ST. NEW YORK — 8 BOSWORTH ST. BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR—Boston
DEC. 29, 1924
V-D

The Advancing "Movies"

warn the retailers against the dangers of agreeing to pay rentals which are beyond their possible earnings.

The recent public deposition of an official in the motion picture world to the effect that the million-dollar picture is happily a thing of the past, at least from the publicity point of view, comes at a time when an appreciable change in motion picture values is being offered. The great and glittering dollar, and with it the fabulously overpaid screen star of other days, is about to make way for the one real and determining factor in this twentieth century art—the motion picture director.

In the early stages of the pictures, once the nickelodeon and ten-reel period was passed, the outstanding issue in this art industry was screen personality, first and last. It became a regular scramble and gamble in sure-fire screen stars. The high cost of production also rose in competitive waves, until the publicists were handling seven figures with as much ease as a reparation committee. There was Janet Waye Griffith, of course, who always ... to keep ... on a higher directional level than most of his brothers of the megaphone, and again and again there were outstanding films which earned a generous meed of appreciation for their fine direction.

Within the past year, however, the importance of the man at the helm has been demonstrated in one fine film after another. Ernst Lubitsch, Dimitri Buchowetzki and Victor Seastrom have been added to the best ranks from continental sources and have helped to advance the technique of the movies considerably. The fact that Mr. Seastrom's latest picture, a positive tragic affair from an Arthur Brisbane plot, could have played recently a few weeks Broadway engagement to a spectacular box-office record is a good enough ... that it is fast to submit a fine director's hand.

Intelligent artists and interesting pictures are only made from discriminating directors. It is this who are the guardians of artistic standards. For of the cast and the lens are creating into the business making their own ... and their private stocks of art is valued at ... Who can say what the drama will be like in another decade or two? Whatever it may be, it is certain that the best important pictures will be produced largely the cities and not in the studios, unless the motion picture has become a product and the writing on there should be a vital need, namely, better directing, with better casting from the company of the stars and the ... the director is at hand.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Columbia S. C.
11-9-24 State

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NOV 16 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
56 WARREN ST. NEW YORK — 8 BOSWORTH ST. BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM 10

What's Wrong With The Movies?

SOUTHWEST PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
KANSAS CITY, MO.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
BOSTON
Kansas City Star
Kansas 11/16/24

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAPH
DEC 28 1925

Section III
Part 5
Vol. 104
No. 181

New Year's Number
The Morning Telegraph

New York
December 28
1924

The SENSATION of THE YEAR!

"An entirely new treatment of screen drama—beggars description—seems almost incredible—blazes a new trail, making the picture of the future—picture fans will breathe a prayer of thanks."

The verdict of all fourteen New York critics is unanimous.

"There has never been so absorbingly human a drama put upon the screen. It rises to such heights of truth and beauty and power that it far surpasses all the make-believe tragedies and brainstorms which have so far appeared upon the screen . . . It will be viewed with as much interest on Third Avenue as it will on Broadway . . . Its human appeal will be answered by a response from the poor and uneducated, as well as from the more erudite and sophisticated."
(Mr. Collings, N. Y. Eve. Post)

Carol Dempster

Neil Hamilton

D. W. Griffith

NEW STARS!

"We hadn't ever cared particularly about Carol Dempster, but in 'Isn't Life Wonderful' she swayed us for two hours as we never before had been swayed."
—GEORGE GERHARD, EVE. WORLD

"Her performance will be mentioned among the fine things as long as motion pictures endure."
—MISS PARSONS, AMERICAN

"Her emotional acting is the most effective which I have ever seen."
—QUINN MARTIN, WORLD

"Miss Dempster as Inga seems inspired."
—MISS FOLSWICK, EVE. JOURNAL

"Neil Hamilton is superb."
—MISS CUNNINGHAM, HERALD-PRINTER

"The work of Neil Hamilton and Carol Dempster ranks with the outstanding performances ever given on the screen."
—MISS HERSON, DAILY MIRROR

"Lupino Lane's work in Mr. Griffith's picture, 'Isn't Life Wonderful,' touches a high mark in comedy which no screen actor, save Charles Chaplin, has ever reached."
—E. V. COLLINS, EVE. POST

LOVE AND POTATOES

From such simple, every-day material, Griffith has wrought great drama; not the drama which dazzles the eye or stuns the brain; but the drama which to every human heart responds with laughter and tears; the drama of life itself.

The story is by Major Geoffrey Moss, brother officer of the Prince of Wales in the Grenadier Guards of England. It is a story of fact, and was filmed in Germany on the actual site.

"Griffith blazes a new trail. He is making the picture of the future. He plays with human hearts, with the primary passions. If you have a soul alive to the suffering of a man and a maid, 'Isn't Life Wonderful' will thrill you."
—JOHN S. FLETCHER, MORNING TELEGRAPH

"Isn't Life Wonderful" almost begins to satisfy. Nothing but a simple story, yet it holds us in a vise like grip and carries us through the whole gamut of emotions. It is the greatest human story of this period which it is hardly that authors have been reached even by Griffith himself."
—JOHN SCHARF, EVE. WORLD

"The entirely new treatment of screen drama is 'Isn't Life Wonderful.' It is the best picture that has come from D. W. Griffith's hands, and what we have said and what we have said about everything . . . The story is simple, the film family the given patterns. There is more drama crowded on to that long strip than in any twelve reels of the average run of a hundred pictures of thickness and length."
—JOHN S. FLETCHER, MORNING TELEGRAPH

"D. W. Griffith again reveals his genius. It comes about [illegible] the art of Lupino Lane, natural Griffith [illegible] such marvelous heart-stirring story that the very pictures must have been crying their eyes out. Griffith, greater than ever, which a [illegible] of thousands of his kind. There is a pull of and a lift in the picture provided by its [illegible] of human sympathetic."
—[illegible], EVE. TELEGRAM

"Strange how we become a person of the film in Mr. Griffith's [illegible] Carol Dempster [illegible] Neil Hamilton [illegible] Lupino Lane [illegible] Griffith [illegible] Griffith [illegible] Griffith

FROM EW YORK TRIBUNE
DEC 1 1924

On the Screen

"Isn't Life Wonderful!" Proves That It Is—if You Live in the United States

By Harriette Underhill

"Isn't Life Wonderful," is the most harrowing picture we have seen since "Broken Blossoms," and D. W. Griffith made them both! Not that they are in the least alike; and the newest production at the Rivoli, though beautiful, is in no way a rival of Mr. Griffith's masterpiece.

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is a story by Major Geoffrey Moss. It is harrowing because it is true, and one cannot snatch his attention from the theme for an instant and relax with the comforting assurance that it is only playacting and that it will all come out right in the end. It doesn't, and yet never have we encountered a situation which gripped us more firmly than the one where Inga saves 9,000,000 marks, and after standing in line for four hours to buy three pounds of beef with it, looks up and finds the price has been raised to 12,000,000 because the stock was running so low, and when the starving marauders stole Hans's potatoes we could have cried out in protest. But the picture ends with Inga and Hans sitting in the moonlight and saying: "Never mind, we have each other. Isn't life wonderful!"

The story tells of people and conditions just after the war, and as we watched the maimed and starving survivors we wondered how Wilhelm happened to be alive now!

The main story is about one Polish family which dragged itself by slow stages to Berlin to try to get back some of the things which it had lost. The family consists of Inga, an adopted child; Hans and Theodore, sons of an old professor; the professor himself, his sisters and mother. Carol Dempster plays Inga beautifully and Neil Hamilton is great as Hans. Helen Lowell is the grandmother, and she, too, is most effective. We liked her best when she tore up the Kaiser's picture and stamped it in the dust. Every one has heard that the people in Germany were starving after the war, but we doubt if any one, unless he has been there, can realize just what it is like. When you have seen "Isn't Life Wonderful" you will know exactly what it was like.

Inga and Hans are in love with each other and resolve to get married in spite of the fact that neither has nearly enough to eat. Being young and in love, their constant cry is "Isn't life wonderful!" Hans works in a shipyard and on the ground allotted to each worker he raises many bushels of potatoes. Time comes to gather in the humble vegetables, which are life to them, and on the way back from the farm ravenous raiders steal the supply. They have nothing left in the world but each other, but it doesn't seem to make any difference to Hans and Inga. They still cry "Isn't life wonderful!"

The story is so simple and still vastly thrilling and exciting. What if Inga should lose the hen which furnishes two or three eggs a week! What if Theodor should lose the liverwurst which the rich American tourist had purchased for two billions of marks and presented to him! What if Hans should have his potato patch raided and what if Grandma should die from her steady diet of three horse-turnips a day! As a matter of fact Hans did lose his potatoes and maybe Grandma died of the turnips. The story ends there.

Lupino Lane is seen in the role of a strolling player who hasn't much to do with the story. It is a terrible thing, this "Isn't Life Wonderful!" and it made us feel like a dirty dog because during the war we always grumbled at the one lump of sugar the restaurants allowed for a cup of coffee and we used to carry our own along with us.

To all who are happy enough to be living in America, yes, isn't life wonderful!

There is a prologue called "On the Wings of Music." This is very beautifully done by the Rivoli singers and dancers, and the theme is "The Lorelei," if that is the name of the song, and we think it is. That is also the music of the musical score.

The only other number on the program is an out of the ingenuity cartoon called "The Cure." It is particularly genuine.

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK WORLD
DEC 1 1924

The New Films

AT THE RIVOLI

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH Presents "ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL?"

A film adaptation by Major Geoffrey Moss. Directed by Mr. Griffith. All exterior scenes photographed in Germany.

THE CAST.

Inga.....Carol Dempster
Hans, son of Professor.....Neil Hamilton
Grandmother.....Helen Lowell
The Professor.....Erville Alderson
The Brother.....Frank Puglia
The Aunt.....Marcia Harris
Strolling player.....Lupino Lane
The Hungry Workers.....Paul Rhekopf, Count von Schaal
Of the Deutches Theatre, in Berlin.

Innovation tramps the screen at the Rivoli. The new film play by Mr. Griffith dares to be intelligent. This in itself is sufficient. And still its leading woman gives one of the finest performances I have ever seen in pictures. It may be the very best. For these reasons "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is a remarkable and distinguished work.

In it, the man from Mamaroneck proves his genius embraces also versatility. As far removed in method as sun and earth is this latest intimate drama from such as "America" and "The Birth of a Nation." And yet with those who go with him here on a romantic tour of pitiable, post-war Germany the rush of emotional response is sure to be felt. I have wept a little seeing this picture. It will get you that way. Oh, well, it may not. But if it doesn't I don't care anything about you.

Fact is at its base. We see the terror of hunger in a middle-class Germany swept from its feet in the financial chaos of 1923. Great, gaunt figures, reminiscent of those of the Moscow Art, are fighting for crusts. Women and children, their faces pinched with want, wander helplessly over a barren land.

And before these clouds of anguish two love birds fly. Set upon by thieves who beat them and rob them of their only worldly goods—a cart of potatoes—they sit dazedly by a lonely roadside, and Inga says to Hans:

"But I have you still; they didn't take you from me. And you have me. Isn't that enough to make life wonderful?"

"Wonderful!" the lad agrees. And there, it is to be presumed, they begin their struggle again.

The extreme economy of theatrical effect is marked in this new picture play. Horse meat is the principal food and the story admits it. No gaudy arm slinging enters into Inga's greeting of Hans when the boy returns from the army. Persons concerned in the running narrative seem real. They are real. They were pictured on the streets of the village in Germany where the action is laid. These characters reflect the ferocity of a "What Price Glory?" the naturalness of a "Cherry Orchard," the poignant pathos of a "Rain." And still at the end of it all one can not help knowing that peace and contentment have triumphed over despair.

I think the fact that Mr. Griffith was willing to construct a romance which employed as is symbolical hinge a simple cart loaded with potatoes is a most audacious and commendable defiance of all that is conventional in the film play. Intellect, as well as emotion, plays a fine and glowing part. Aha, at last we may say it and still look our friends in the face!

There are faults to find. There are flaws to pick. And they ought to be picked. I am quite convinced now that George Bernard Shaw and David Wark Griffith should form at once a combination in restraint of script-meddling. They ought to adopt as their slogan, and tack it up over the entrance of their shop: "We're damned if you'll cut our stuff."

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" gives evidence of whittling. Of course, in presenting it in a Broadway film theatre, time had to be taken out for the news reel and an ink-well comedy. What vandalism! In taking off potatoes, rough jokes have resulted, although heavy efforts have been made to iron them out.

I think in a great many instances the subtitling is unnecessary. There is no earthly reason for this. My only objection, at most, is restricted to the mechanics rather than to the gentle beauty of the picture play. It seems to me that Miss Dempster and Mr. Hamilton were absent at all times. Let me repeat that the young women's sustained acting here is of the most effective which I have seen. And I have witnessed considerable acting lately.

To make, those who go to the Rivoli will seem to see a David Wark Griffith picture and a great one. Look for Dempster and a great cast. Look for Hamilton. Look for Lane. Look for Lowell. Look for Puglia. Look for Harris. Look for Alderson. Look for Rhekopf and Count von Schaal. Look for a great story. Look for a great picture. Look for a great lesson in tolerance. Look for a great deal of pleasure. Look for a great deal of thought. Look for a great deal of sadness. Look for a great deal of laughter. Look for a great deal of tears. Look for a great deal of everything. Look for a great deal of nothing. Look for a great deal of anything

MOVIE HOME JOURNAL

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM VARIETY (N. Y. CITY)
DECEMBER 3, 1924

FILM REVIEWS

ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL!

D. W. Griffith Production released by United Artists. Story by Major Geoffrey Moss. Directed by D. W. Griffith. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton featured. At the Rivoli, New York, week of Nov. 23. Running time, 80 minutes.

Inga .....Carol Dempster
Hans, son of the professor .....Neil Hamilton
Grandmother .....Helen Lowell
The Professor .....Erville Alderson
The Brother .....Frank Puglia
The Aunt .....Marcia Harris
Strolling player .....Lupino Lane
The Hungry Workers .....Paul Rhokopp
Count von Schart

D. W. Griffith again comes to the force with the unusual on the screen, in "Isn't Life Wonderful" at the Rivoli this week. Just as his "Broken Blossoms" was a departure from the usual picture fare, so also is this present film.

It is a picture that has something more behind it than the mere idea of entertainment. It should to an extent give the American public an insight into the lives of the simpler German folk and their sufferings as a result of the great war's aftermath.

Whether or not the picture will be a box office success is another question. Off hand it seems doubtful if the story will have sufficient appeal to make it a record breaking money venture.

The story is too realistic. It is a page torn from life. Those who rave about "the finer things in pictures" may not come to the box office in sufficient numbers to offset the out and out fans who will stay away. After all the latter are the ones to be catered to. Fans like naught but the sweetened pap fed to them day after day on the screens of the country.

One point about this story should be pointed out immediately before some rabid anti-German jumps to the fore, proclaiming it another example of German propaganda. That is the fact that Major Geoffrey Moss, the author, is of the British army. In itself that should be sufficient to still those who might shout "propaganda."

This is the picture that Griffith shot partly in Germany and partly in this country. Griffith's handling of the theme is little short of wonderful. His composition in mass scenes as well in those with but few characters is in line with the best he has ever done. The photography at times shows some remarkable shots. There is one thing about this work of the master director and that is that he has held to his idea that a story can be told with but few principals; also that he has kept his love theme in the foreground.

It is of the privations and struggles of a German family following the war and the collapse of the German exchange. A tale at once gripping and interesting though heart rending and depressing.

A German professor is im- He and his family have

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE NEWS
DECEMBER 13, 1924

Isn't Life Wonderful?

(D. W. Griffith-United Artists—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Oscar Cooper)

ELSEWHERE in this issue appears detailed comment on this picture, which sets a new mark in production. It is a distinct innovation, unlike most of Griffith's works. He has departed from the era of big sets and crashing climaxes, eliminated storms and ice-jams and rides-to-the-rescue, and told a simple, compelling human story about the privations of a family of Polish refugees in a German village.

For the most part, the mood is sombre and in the key of pathos. The comedy moments are interspersed skillfully, but the prevailing tone is one of near tragedy, relieved by the optimism of youth. There is a splendid romance, with Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton as the central figures, and this is worked out with all of the genius Griffith has displayed many times before.

The picture is remarkable in many ways. The atmosphere is perfect, because the exterior scenes were filmed on the actual locations in Germany. It is evident that both director and cast literally lived the life of the village while they were in it. The players are without exception, in absolute key with the story. Miss Dempster gives one of the finest performances ever seen on the screen, and Hamilton is a close second in the excellence of his work. Erville Alderson, as the old Professor, does a splendid character portrayal. Lupino Lane contributes comedy-relief as the strolling player. Helen Lowell, in the role of the grandmother, also deserves great credit. The other principals complete a typical Griffith cast. The acting, as a whole, is far above the average.

Stressing characterization, rather than the mechanics of plot, Griffith has contrived to tell an extremely human story in a very human way. There is a total absence of "hokum."

THEME. A "real life" drama of the struggles of a refugee family during the starvation years in Germany, with a strong vein of romance showing the battle of two lovers to gain food and shelter so that they may marry.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The remarkable acting, especially by Miss Dempster and Mr. Hamilton. The food riots in Germany. The potato-cart sequence, in which the hungry workers rob the lovers of their supply of food. The natural atmosphere, gained by filming actual locations. Typical Griffith lighting and "touches." The dinner scene, wherein the family has its first square meal in months—one of the most life-like things ever put on the screen.

DIRECTION. Sets a new mark for other directors to shoot at. Nothing has been left undone to drive home the human story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. First, Griffith with a new kind of picture that is bound to create a lot of discussion. Second, the great cast. Third, actual scenes in Germany, with emphasis on food riots and the fight against starvation. Fourth, the love story.

DRAWING POWER. It is "different." The word "entertainment" does not describe it.

SUMMARY. A vivid human document. Real life on the screen. Not a story in the ordinary sense—but the greatest of all stories—life itself. No compromise with the facts of everyday existence. Sordid poverty contrasted with moonlit romance. As a whole, a work of art that comes very near being the finest Griffith has ever done.

THE CAST

Inga ..... Carol Dempster
Hans, son of Professor ..... Neil Hamilton
Grandmother ..... Helen Lowell
The Professor ..... Erville Alderson
The Brother ..... Frank Puglia
The Aunt ..... Marcia Harris
Strolling Player ..... Lupino Lane

Personally directed by Mr. Griffith from the story by Major Geoffrey Moss, of the British Army.

SYNOPSIS. A Polish family, driven to Germany in war's aftermath, fights for bare existence. Inga and Hans cannot marry unless they get shelter and food to sustain them. Hans raises potatoes, and together they go to bring home the little crop in a cart. They are attacked and robbed by a band of hungry workers, made beasts by years of war and hunger. But the lovers still have each other and they are undismayed.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
MOVING PICTURE WORLD (N. Y.)
DECEMBER 13, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful?"

Powerful in Its Simplicity and Realism, D. W. Griffith's Latest Is Limited in Its Appeal

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

In his newest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" which is receiving its initial showing at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, D. W. Griffith has again dared to attempt something new in theme and in treatment. He has gone to Germany after the war and found his inspiration in a story of the sufferings and hardships of a family of Polish refugees. It is a story which is simplicity itself, a page from life which depends upon its absolute realism, its remarkable character delineation and superb handling. He has steered clear of melodrama or the familiar devices of the drama to heighten the effect. There are no villains, no plotting, no intrigue, but at the same time there is no dearth of drama, emotion, humor, or of the other things that stir the spectator, just as there is no dearth of these elementals in life itself.

This picture is life itself presented on the screen, and the very simplicity of its story and treatment magnifies its power. It is not when life moves along smoothly but when it is beset with difficulties and hardships that it is most dramatic, and what could be more gripping than the struggle for life itself? So, this little story centers in a struggle for mere existence against seemingly insuperable obstacles, and to the average man will seem depressing; but it is brightened by the wonderful optimism of the heroine who, undaunted by crushing circumstances, finds life wonderful and mere existence, when love is present, a reason for enjoyment.

With opportunities for big scenes, Mr. Griffith has contented himself with epitomizing the hunger madness of the workmen in an attack on a profiteer's wagon and on the pitiful little supply of potatoes belonging to the hero and heroine. Even the happy ending is unhappy from a material standpoint, for the couple are left bereft of everything but the thought that they have each other and their great love.

Although there are some slight slips, Mr. Griffith's direction of this picture is marvelous and none but a master of the art could have gotten such dramatic force out of scenes showing the family utterly dejected with their meal of horse turnips, or such pathos as the scene where the heroine waits at her sweetheart's bedside or where she attempts to buy meat and finds the price has risen out of reach before she gets into the shop, or the exaltation of these simple folk over a meal consisting of a single egg, a bowl of potatoes and liverwurst.

Equally fine is the work of the players. Carol Dempster gives a truly remarkable performance; one of the most effective the screen has ever seen is her display of simple emotions. Neil Hamilton, with less to do, scores heavily, as do all of the others. There is no exaggeration in their acting or expression, a simple movement or gesture, a slight smile on a gaunt face speaking volumes.

Comedy in keeping with the spirit of the picture is supplied by Lupino Lane as a strolling actor, and there is excellent suspense and dramatic interest in the futile attempt of the hero and heroine to escape the workmen temporarily made beasts by hunger.

For those who are moved by sentiment or who grasp the simplicity and humanity of this story, the bigness of the drama of life itself, and can enter into the finer points of this truly remarkable interpretation, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" will prove inspiring. But, after all, we seriously doubt its appeal to the masses. Foremost among the considerations which would seemingly mitigate against its general box office success is the depressing nature of the story, despite its note of optimism, for it is a drab little tale that is unfolded. And despite its intensity for those who are moved by its emotional appeal, the very absence of theatricalism and devices for building up punch and interest will have their effect. In short, to many it may prove commonplace and depressing. In its very simplicity and realism lies its greatest strength and weakness, and because of its song it does not seem the kind of a picture the average patron would recommend to his friend who goes to the theatre primarily to be entertained and amused.

CAST

Inga ..... Carol Dempster
Hans ..... Neil Hamilton
Grandmother ..... Helen Lowell
Professor ..... Erville Alderson
Brother ..... Frank Puglia
Aunt ..... Marcia Harris
Strolling Player ..... Lupino Lane
Waiter ..... Paul Rhokopp
Waiter ..... Count von Schart

Story by Major Geoffrey Moss
Directed by D. W. Griffith
United Artists

STORY

Among the thousands of refugees who flocked to Berlin was the family of a Polish professor and the story following the war revolves around the struggle of Hans, the professor's son, and his sweetheart, Inga, to get married. They manage to get place in the cart of a carter and his family and they are on their way to the village of Hans' birth when they are attacked by a band of hungry workers who steal their precious load of potatoes. Inga comforts him and they agree that life is still wonderful, despite its misfortune.

Hans and Inga have been childhood sweethearts. She nurses him when he falls ill, as a result of having been gassed. The family consent to their marriage. Hans raises many bushels of potatoes on ground allotted to him. He is held up and beaten by robbers who steal his precious carload of potatoes, but Inga comforts him and they agree that life is still wonderful, despite its misfortune.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
N. Y. EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW
DECEMBER 13, 1924

GRIFFITH FILM AN ARTISTIC JEWEL

"Isn't Life Wonderful" Presents Simple But Starkly Realistic Story.

"ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL." United Artists Photoplay. Author, Major Geoffrey Moss. Director, D. W. Griffith. Length, 9,080 Feet.

CAST AND SYNOPSIS

Inga ..... Carol Dempster
Hans ..... Neil Hamilton
Grandmother ..... Helen Lowell
Professor ..... Erville Alderson
Brother ..... Frank Puglia
Aunt ..... Marcia Harris
Strolling Player ..... Lupine Lane

At the conclusion of the World War Hans comes back to his family, camped on the outskirts of Berlin. They are all in dire poverty, but each tries uncomplainingly to get along as best they can. Theodore, a student son, works as waiter in a night club. Inga, an adopted daughter, works nights mending chairs. Hans and Inga have been childhood sweethearts. She nurses him when he falls ill, as a result of having been gassed. The family consent to their marriage. Hans raises many bushels of potatoes on ground allotted to him. He is held up and beaten by robbers who steal his precious carload of potatoes, but Inga comforts him and they agree that life is still wonderful, despite its misfortune.

By GEORGE T. PARDY

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH has chosen a sombre subject for the theme of this picture—the struggle of Germany's poor folks for bare existence during the starvation days of 1923—and shaped it with rare directorial cunning into a genuine screen jewel. Every now and then Mr. Griffith revolts against established film tradition, breaks down conventional fences and goes right ahead on a trail blazed out by himself.

He did this when he produced "Broken Blossoms," with its bitter-sweet memories, blighted love and tragic ending, a masterpiece of artistry, but entirely different from anything the silent drama had known. In "Isn't Life Wonderful" he has disregarded all the recognized rules of plot values, carefully built-up suspense, etc., and given us another innovation—a picture of straight narrative simplicity, just the plain record of a few humble lives, devoid of melodramatic complications, but starkly realistic and irresistibly compelling in its power of awakening emotional response.

It is impossible to refrain from opening the very floodgates of pity as the love idyl of Hans and his Inga developes, and the spirit of romance arises amidst the threatening clouds of hunger, privation and lowering death. For these people seem so absolutely real, their sufferings so poignant, that the full horror of the thing grips you and strikes home to the heart. Who ever dreamed of combining pathos with eggs and potatoes?

Yet we dare say many an eye will fill with tears when Inga is seen depriving her failing self of a poor little portion of potatoes, so that she may nourish sick Hans, and who can forget her rapture when the precious hen lays a precious, solitary egg? And that wistfully effective climax—Hans beaten by thieves, his only carload of vegetables stolen. The pathetic pair sit by the roadside and Inga says—"But I have you still, they didn't take you from me!" And Hans solemnly admits that life is still wonderful.

You can exploit this as a wonderfully emotional, tremendously realistic story of life in post-war Germany. Mr. Griffith's name will draw the crowds and Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Helen Lowell are each worth featuring.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM
DEC 1 1924

The Films

In his latest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" D. W. Griffith again reveals his wizardry by putting drama into a cartload of potatoes. It seems almost incredible magic that this photoplay, now at the Rivoli, should draw sorrow from spuds. Yet out of homely raw material Griffith evoked such marvellous, heart-plumbing effects that the very potatoes must have been crying their eyes out.

They formed only a small cartload of potatoes, and yet on them hung the destiny of Inga and Hans. This was their grubstake for married life. Hans, desperately casting about for means to marry Inga amid the hunger and want that gnawed at the vitals of the German peasantry after the war, had successfully raised the crop in this tiny patch outside Berlin, and the ramshackle wagon in which they garnered it became Cupid's chariot.

They set out drawing the handcart together, eager for the little home which Hans had contrived out of love and ammunition boxes, the little home now made possible by the blessed potatoes. And then they are pursued through a dark forest by a wolfish horde of ruffians ravenous for food and accusing any one with a bag of pickles of being a profiteer. Here Griffith has achieved one of his most tremulous situations as the two young lovers flee panting through the forbidding glades like Paul and Virginia, with the cart spurring them on rather than impeding. The growing tug on your emotions as the grimy pack overtakes the two innocents equals the pursuit of the Klansmen in "The Birth of a Nation," the charge of the Babylonian chariots in "Intolerance," or even the thundering sweep of the horsemen in "Orphans of the Storm"—and yet there isn't a horse in sight. Nobody is famine-stricken Germany could afford one.

The real climax of the picture doesn't occur in the violent battling over of the cargo by the rabbit and the ravishing of their vegetables. It comes when Inga, recovering consciousness, seeks to see if their nest-egg has been spared. As she peers over the edge of the cart, pathos is expressed in the most invisible wilting of her back. She is no chuckling cinderella showing a heaven sent, but but a tiny drop of the shoulders that bite home more than a battery of guns.

So it is through the cast of the picture, made up throughout with an original talent known as Major Geoffrey Moss, who although he is described as an army pensioner, might very well have been a Boston Brahmin through his remarkable gift of reading the underback of the human heart. Mr. Griffith has proved that he is equally at home in the underback and in the upper back, in fact he has proved that he is a master of the art of photoplaying, and that he can take a few humble lives, devoid of melodramatic complications, but starkly realistic and irresistibly compelling in its power of awakening emotional response.

It is impossible to refrain from opening the very floodgates of pity as the love idyl of Hans and his Inga developes, and the spirit of romance arises amidst the threatening clouds of hunger, privation and lowering death. For these people seem so absolutely real, their sufferings so poignant, that the full horror of the thing grips you and strikes home to the heart. Who ever dreamed of combining pathos with eggs and potatoes?

Yet we dare say many an eye will fill with tears when Inga is seen depriving her failing self of a poor little portion of potatoes, so that she may nourish sick Hans, and who can forget her rapture when the precious hen lays a precious, solitary egg? And that wistfully effective climax—Hans beaten by thieves, his only carload of vegetables stolen. The pathetic pair sit by the roadside and Inga says—"But I have you still, they didn't take you from me!" And Hans solemnly admits that life is still wonderful.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK EVENING WORLD
DEC 8 1924

FILM

AT THE RIALTO

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Exceptional Photoplays
(Wyn) Dec 1, 1924

ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL!

(Rialto, Boston)

Isn't Life Wonderful? marks a distinct departure from Mr. Griffith's style, choice of theme and method of treatment. The pioneer of historical spectacle, the master of war-melodrama has entered the realm field of naturalism. In Isn't Life Wonderful? he has given us a cut-rate slice of the poor, a slice from the life of poverty, enriched with a bit of the romance and the underpaid heroism of a poor yet genuine study here for the sake of study.

Mr. Griffith has found his theme in post war Germany, in a village in Germany, in Berlin after the war, which is full of unemployed people who are trying to find themselves. This he has done in a manner which leaves the impression that this theme is more of a personal purpose, with such great and obvious advantages through artful realism and unusual touch. We have had a series of these things and Mr. Griffith himself has in their exclusive of all these. He has shown mastery in constructing upon the foundation of a simple theme and plot. This is a work that will have great value in years to come as a record of the conditions of a period in time. The fact that Griffith has made it a work of art, a work of beauty, a work of a master, a work of a genius, a work of a poet, a work of a painter, a work of a sculptor, a work of a musician, a work of a dancer, a work of a singer, a work of a dramatist, a work of a novelist

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAPH DEC 1 192

"ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL," GRIFFITH FILM AT RIVOLI

Famous Director's Latest Picture Soul-Stirring Drama About Simple People and Their Tragedies—Shows a New Way to Film Producers.

By JOSEPH R. FLIESLER.

D. W. Griffith's latest motion picture production, "Isn't Life Wonderful," made from a story by Major Geoffrey Moss, was shown for the first time to the general public at the Rivoli yesterday. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton head a cast that is evenly excellent.

Contemplating Mr. Griffith's film a complexity of emotion comes over me. Undeniably "Isn't Life Wonderful" is impressive by its stark simplicity. As undeniably it is definitely depressing; yet, to the sentimental, undeniably exalting. There is something of the religion of life in Inga's philosophic, "I still have you, and you still have me. Isn't life wonderful!"

There is something of the sorrow of life in the tragedy that saturates the film. There is something akin to the blind struggling of a growing plant toward the light in the struggle of Hans and Inga for love.

The picture is distinctly for the few, in its finer interpretation. The masses, particularly those of Teutonic extraction or sympathies, will weep with the Professor's family; but, whether the great public will approve Mr. Griffith's sincere effort is a question for time to answer.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is a narrative picture. There is no maze of plot and counterplot. The simple things of life; poverty-stricken folk caught in the aftermath of a titanic struggle; an oppressed people under the heel of their own kin; and, in all this, a squalor, a delicate love story, rising to the light.

The Professor's family arrives in a suburb of Berlin after a weary hegira from Poland and is allotted two rooms in which to live. Besides the Professor, there are the grandmother, one son, an aunt, a strolling player who has joined the group and Inga. Hans, the other son, arrives from a demobilization camp, sick in body and spirit. Inga's joy at seeing him is expressed so simply, yet so powerfully (whether by virtue of Mr. Griffith's direction or Miss Dempster's perfect characterization is a matter of opinion—I am satisfied to give the guerdon to Carol), that a burst of handclapping (rare in motion picture theatres) was her reward.

The family lives on potatoes, earned by the Professor, who marks papers for a living; by the younger brother, who is employed as a waiter, and by Inga, sole salesgirl in the local Macy's. Hans, after a passing illness, finds work in a shipyard. Here he is allotted a portion of ground, which he cultivates and plants with seed potatoes. (Is it a slip on D. W.'s part that the potatoes are planted whole, instead of in slices?)

Hans builds a little one-room house of boards taken from ammunition boxes. He keeps all these preparations for his wedding a secret, because the family has frowned on his proposed union with Inga. But grandmother, disapproving, nevertheless privately converts her old wedding gown for Inga's use.

Hard times have seized not only this family but every family in the suburb in an icy grasp. A diet of potatoes or horse turnips is not conducive to joviality. The mark has practically no purchasing value. There is a rumble of discontent among the workers. All this begins to look like typical Griffith stuff—the beginning of a great bread riot, an uprising against profiteers and war lords.

But Griffith blazes a new trail. He is making the picture of the future. The hungry workers combine into a vicious gang that goes into the forest like beasts to waylay the profiteers on their way to the city with food.

Hans decides to let Inga into his secret and shows her his potato patch and the shack. Here again Miss Dempster moved me to tears by the finest performance I have ever seen on the screen.

The lovers travel through the woods with a cart to harvest their crop—the year's supply of potatoes on which it will be possible for them to marry. They are stopped by one of the gangs. But their cart is empty, so they are allowed to go. Inga is frightened, but Hans reassures her. They are to return after dark and will pursue a different road.

But again they are discovered on the way back; Hans is beaten to earth and all the potatoes stolen. Inga, thrown to the ground, lifts herself and crawls to Hans. She finds him alive, but thoroughly discouraged, disheartened.

Sitting in the road together by their empty cart, with an indifferent moon shining on their sorrow, Inga nestles to her sweetheart and says, poignantly: "I still have you and you still have me. Isn't life wonderful!"

That is the story. No surging mob rides in rebellion through the city. The fate of a nation is not portrayed in mass scenes, with trembling towers and bombarded citadels. Griffith plays with human hearts, with the primary passions. If you have a soul alive to the suffering of a man and a maid, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" will thrill you. If you must have your sorrow wholesale, maybe you'll wonder what it's all about.

Dr. Reisenfeld has arranged a briefer accompanying program than usual because of the length of the feature. The news pictorial, a number called "On the Wings of Music," with Miriam Lax, soprano; Inga Wank, contralto; Beatrice Wightwick, mezzo-soprano, and Lorelei Kendler, Zena Larina and Marguerite Low, dancers; and the Max Fleischer cartoon, "The Cure," completes the entertainment.

Neil Hamilton is starred with Carol Dempster in the feature. He hasn't the opportunities that Miss Dempster has, but there is occasion to reveal a sincerity, an assurance of self that marks him as a performer of great power. Lunino Lane, dancer and acrobat, now in Ziegfeld's "Follies," contributes a few scenes as the strolling player that brighten up the picture. Hitherto Mr. Lane has confined his talents to comedy exclusively, in this picture he comes closer to playing straight. Can it be that in this [illegible] man we have the makings of another Chaplin?

Helen Lowell, as the grandmother, contributes a characterization similar to the one she gives in person in "The Show-Off" at the Playhouse. Erville Anderson does exceedingly well by the absent-minded professor; Frank Puglia as the younger brother is sincere and accomplished and Marcia Harris as the aunt carries off an undistinguished role with spirit.

Paul Rhekopf and Count von Schacht, of the Deutchen Theatre in Berlin, make vivid creatures of the gaunt and desperate men who lead the hungry workers.

Many of the scenes were made in Germany by Mr. Griffith on his last trip there. They might just as well, it seems to me, have been made here, so the interiors were.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAPH DEC 7 192

"ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL."
With Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton.
D. W. Griffith—8,600 feet.
Reviewed by Joseph R. Fliesler.

CAST—Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Helen Lowell, Erville Alderson, Frank Puglia, Marcia Harris, Lupino Lane, Paul Rhekopf and Count von Schact.
Directed by D. W. Griffith. Made from the story by Major Geoffrey Moss.

Griffith's latest motion picture is an enigma from the box office angle. It may make lots of money—and it may not. The exhibitor must judge this one for himself, taking into consideration local conditions. It's a fine picture, no question, but there is no plot, no mass action as in other Griffith spectacles, and there is a good deal of sadness. The story is laid in Germany, after the war. If there is a large Central European population in your territory they'll come to see this picture.

Contemplating Mr. Griffith's film, a complexity of emotion comes over me. Undeniably "Isn't Life Wonderful" is impressive by its stark simplicity. As undeniably it is definitely depressing; yet, to the sentimental, undeniably exalting. There is something of the religion of life in Inga's philisophic, "I still have you, and you still have me." "Isn't life wonderful!"

There is something of the sorrow of life in the tragedy that saturates the film. There is something akin to the blind struggling of a growing plant toward the light in the struggle of Hans and Inga for love.

The picture is distinctly for the few, in its finer interpretation. The masses, particularly those of Tuetonic extraction or sympathies, will weep with the Professor's family; but, whether the great public will approve Mr. Griffith's sincere effort is a question for time to answer.

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is a narrative picture. There is no maze of plot and counterplot. The simple things of life; poverty-stricken folk caught in the aftermath of a titanic struggle; an oppressed people under the heel of their own kin; and, in all this squalor, a delicate love story, rising to the light.

CAROL DEMPSTER.

The Professor's family arrives in a suburb of Berlin after a weary hegira from Poland and is allotted two rooms in which to live. Besides the Professor, there are the grandmother, one son, an aunt, a strolling player who has joined the group and Inga, his adopted daughter. Hans, the other son, arrives from a demobilization camp, sick in body and spirit. Inga's joy at seeing him is expressed so simply, yet so powerfully (whether by virtue of Mr. Griffith's direction or Miss Dempster's perfect characterization is a matter of opinion—I am satisfied to give the guerdon to Carol), that a burst of handclapping (rare in motion pictue theatres) was her reward.

The family lives on potatoes, earned by the Professor, who marks papers for a living; by the younger brother, who is employed as a walter, and by Inga, sole salesgirl in the local Macy's. Hans, after passing illness, finds work in a shipyard. Here he is allotted a porton of ground, which he cultivates and plants with seed potatoes. (Is it a slip on D. W.'s part that the potatoes are planted whole, instead of in slices?)

Hans builds a little one-room house of boards taken from ammunition boxes. He keeps all these preparations for his wedding a secret, because the family has frowned on his proposed union with Inga. But grandmother, disapproving, nevertheless, privately converts her old wedding gown for Inga's use.

Hard times have seized not only this family, but every family in the suburb in an icy grasp. A diet of potatoes or horse turnips is not conducive to joviality. The mark has practically no purchasing value. There is a rumble of discontent among the workers. All this begins to look like typical Griffith stuff—the beginning of a great bread riot, an uprising against profiteers and war lords.

But Griffith blazes a new trail. He is making the picture of the future. The hungry workers combine into a vicious gang that goes into the forest like beasts to waylay the profiteers on their way to the city with food.

Hans decides to let Inga into his secret and shows her his potato patch and the shack. Here again Miss Dempster moved me to tears by the finest performance I have ever seen on the screen.

The lovers travel through the woods with a cart to harvest their crop—the year's supply of potatoes on which it will be possible for them to marry. They are stopped by one of the gangs. But their cart is empty, so they are allowed to go. Inga is frightened, but Hans reassures her. They are to return after dark and will pursue a different road.

But again they are discovered on the way back; Hans is beaten to earth and all the potatoes stolen. Inga, thrown to the ground, lifts herself and crawls to Hans. She finds him alive, but thoroughly discouraged, disheartened.

Sitting on the road together by their empty cart, with an indifferent moon shining on their sorrow, Inga nestles to her sweetheart and says, poignantly: "I still have you and you still have me. Isn't life wonderful!"

That is the story. No surging mob rises in rebellion through the city. The fate of a nation is not portrayed in mass scenes, with trembling towers and bombarded citadels. Griffith plays with human hearts, with the primary passions. If you have a soul alive to the suffering of a man and a maid, "Isn't Life Wonderful" will thrill you. If you must have your sorrow wholesale, maybe you'll wonder what it's all about.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE NEWS
DECEMBER 13, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful"—United Artists, Rivoli, New York

World: "Inspiration tramps the screen at the Rivoli. The new film play by Mr. Griffith dares to be intelligent. This in itself is sufficient. And still its leading woman gives one of the finest performances I have ever seen in pictures. It may be the very best."

Times: "Through countless deft and effective touches in this simple yet deeply stirring narrative Mr. Griffith again proves himself a brilliant director."

American: "David Wark Griffith who blazed the trail ten years ago and gave the world the first significant historical drama has again pioneered the way and given us the most truthful delineation of characters in 'Isn't Life Wonderful' that I have ever seen on the screen."

Tribune: "The story is so simple and still vastly thrilling and exciting."

Daily News: "Griffith in making 'Isn't Life Wonderful' has done a remarkable thing by presenting an entirely new treatment of screen drama. It is the very best picture that has come from his hands—and when we say that we have said about everything."

Mirror: "This new Griffith picture is a gem of screen realism. There is no recurrence to camera trickery for effects. It develops smoothly, grippingly, beautifully."

Telegraph: "No surging mob rises in rebellion through the city. The fate of a nation is not portrayed in mass scenes with trembling towers and bombarded citadels. Griffith plays with human hearts, with the primary passions. If you have a soul alive to the suffering of a man and maid, 'Isn't Life Wonderful' will thrill you."

Evening World: "'Isn't Life Wonderful' leaves us groping so helplessly for words to describe it adequately that we are approaching this task with a feeling of utter futility . . . This picture almost beggars description."

Journal: "Picture fans will breathe a prayer of thanks to Mr. Griffith. Cynics will brush away their tears, and feel as they did before they lost their illusion and their hair. Because it isn't a story. It's life."

Bulletin: "Griffith, the Homer of the screen, has given a tremendously powerful film epic. Usually a Griffith film goes into a legitimate theatre for a long run but this one has been released directly for film exhibitors, though it is worthy of as much exploitation as anything he has produced since 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

Post: "We can safely say that never has there been so absorbingly human a drama put up on the screen. It will move to laughter and to tears any one who has a spark of sympathy for the trials and humble happiness of his fellow men."

Telegram and Mail: "Its insistent universal sympathies and the exquisite work of Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton make Griffith's masterpiece so that one is inclined to change the title to 'Isn't Griffith Wonderful?'"

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM CINCINNATI ENQUIRER POST
DECEMBER 14, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful"

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
56 WARREN ST. NEW YORK — 6 BOSWORTH ST. BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM BOSTON ADVERTISER
DEC. 7, 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK POST
DEC 1 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
THE DAILY NEWS, NEW YORK
DECEMBER 7, 1924

The Griffith Photoplays

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" David Griffith's Production, at the "Nation" at Piccadilly

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXX NEW YORK, DECEMBER 13, 1924 NO. 24

New Kinds of Pictures

D. W. GRIFFITH gave us a very interesting interview the other day on his new picture. Among other significant things he says that the opening of "Isn't Life Wonderful" has brought him more letters and occasioned more enthusiastic reviews than any other picture of his, including "The Birth of a Nation;" and that in its "try outs" in some Connecticut towns it was enthusiastically received by the factory workers.

* * *

Whether the New York critics have correctly gauged their readers or not — running the gamut from those of the Evening Post to those of the Daily News — remains to be seen; whether this picture will get to the masses all over the country like, for instance, "Over the Hill," remains also to be shown at the box-office. But in any event we believe that Mr. Griffith has produced a picture which may well receive the most serious consideration of producers and exhibitors.

It is a story of life — based cleverly upon the broadest of all dramatic appeal, namely, the struggle for self-preservation.

* * *

To put it simply, Mr. Griffith put his camera on his shoulder and went forth to photograph a story right where the story happened. He lived among the people themselves, got his color, characters, facts, sympathy first-hand. And the result is impressive realism. Another did the same thing recently — Robert J. Flaherty; and we had the dramatic "Nanook of the North." Every good writer writes his stories just that way. There is no other way — to make them ring true.

All of which suggests to us and very forcibly these thoughts:

* * *

That there is altogether too much of the studio in our pictures today. The studio is apt to mean artificiality — even the studio at its best. We have presented wonderful effects, vast, startling, often enthralling. But after all it isn't life and, while for a cycle of time it is entertainment, it gets quickly insipid. People are talking a lot about the sameness of the movies — that we are too insistent upon the stock, ready-made values — big stories, scenes, shots, tricks, punches at the expense of credulity. There's always a vital danger in entertainment, all entertainment, and that is in overdoing the theatric. Fifteen years ago the stage was that way — all pomp and splendor and bombast. And then along came Eugene Walter's "Paid in Full" — a small cast without makeup, a little story of life, and the new kind of play was big enough to set a new cycle in stage entertainment.

* * *

As for stories — there was very little plot to "Nanook" and "Over the Hill." And there's very little plot in "Rain" and "The Show-Off" and "Lightnin'" and other striking stage successes. But there is life, the kind that gets home, in appeal; and the telling of which rings true.

We could go on easily enough with other thoughts on this same subject; but for lack of space we pass to an important and practical point.

If Mr. Griffith has hit the box-office angle in this picture then a wide vista is opened up in the way of story material for producers sincere enough and able enough to paint life upon the screen. This material will embrace not merely the work of some great authors still unknown to the screen today but also many a bit of life in an unheralded short story, and still more to be created directly for the screen, by our best modern authors, for instance.

And in this connection we wonder if when these "different" pictures come along exhibitors will take pains — extra pains, to find out just how their audiences feel about them in comparison with other pictures. That's highly important. No picture is advancing these days. There are new kinds of pictures right along. It is wisdom to find out their appeal.

C. S. Johnston

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM Los Angeles Cal Times 12/10/24

GRIFFITH'S NEW ONE A TRIUMPH

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is Hit in New York

"Romola" Has Beauty But is Much Too Slow

Two Performances Please in "Sundown"

BY HELEN KLUMPH
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Floods of tears greeted the openings last week of D. W. Griffith's and Lillian Gish's latest pictures. In the case of "Isn't Life Wonderful?" the tears were caused by a gripping heartbreaking story; at the opening of "Romola" the tears were tears of disappointment and dismay. Lillian Gish, the first artist of our screen, has made a thoroughly dull picture, one that in no way reflects her charm or intelligence. It is a tragic pity that she has not already made another picture that could be hurried onto the market to make audiences forget this one.

Although there were rival openings at regular theatres and a special personal appearance night at the Piccadilly, where "Sundown" was being shown, "Romola" attracted most of the leaders of the film industry in New York. Lillian's personal popularity would guarantee that even if "Romola" hadn't been touted as a great picture, Richard Barthelmess and Mary Hay were there with Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson; May Allison, Dagmar Godowsky, Peggy Joyce, Richard Dix and any number of others were in the audience.

The fault, it seems to me, lies mainly with Henry King. He quite neglected to make this a "moving" picture. Indeed, as one flippant critic pointed out, the one big smashing bit of action in the picture was where the leaning tower of Pisa continued to lean.

"Romola" is wondrously beautiful, but terribly dull.

Only one person connected with "Romola" emerges with his banners of popularity flying. That is Ronald Colman. The picture gives him nothing to do but he does that with consummate charm. Having admitted that I know him and that I once sat next to him at a dinner party in Los Angeles, I am now threatened with poison letters from the two young women who sat next to me at "Romola."

A GRIFFITH TRIUMPH

There was no gala opening for "Isn't Life Wonderful" and that is as it should be, for gold cloth and ermine and jewels would make one feel decidedly guilty while watching this picture. It is one of the most poignant screen tales I have ever seen. It is a triumph for Mr. Griffith who wrings your emotions with a simple tale, but I fear that it is not the box-office success his friends have been hoping for for him.

With the opening of "Sundown" New York movie goers settled down to a more conventional fare. It has been advertised as a great epic of the West, but I see in it no greater epic than in numerous western pictures made by Tom Mix, Buck Jones, William S. Hart, Fred Thomson, Hoot Gibson and others. Its chief claim to fame is the movement of a sizeable herd of cattle, but I've seen as many cattle in a Fred Thomson picture as the camera can round catch, so I don't see that it has added anything to the picture.

The reviewers were cruel to "Sundown," claiming that it lacked charm. I think Julian Johnson never lived in the West. He is one who has lived and loved the West and would be swamped by those people who would be swamped by a Western epic and yet who would be bored to death by a Western picture. Today it is epic.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 12/10/24

NEW GRIFFITH FILM IS GREAT

'Isn't Life Wonderful' Declared by Louella Parsons to Be Producer's Best Work

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor N. Y. American

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—David Wark Griffith, who blazed the trail ten years ago and gave the world the first dignificant historical drama, has again pioneered the way and given us the most truthful delineation of characters in "Isn't Life Wonderful" that I have ever seen on the screen.

In addition to its honesty and sincerity and its absence from all artificiality, "Isn't Life Wonderful" is done with a delicacy that indicates stronger than any mere words the great genius that directed the course of this seemingly simple little tale.

Mr. Griffith in a speech made at a preview, said that he felt he must ask forgiveness for "Isn't Life Wonderful," which had no thrilling rescues with dashing heroes riding to save beautiful women at the eleventh hour, but loved this picture better than anything he has ever made. He intimated that it might not make as much money as some of his other productions.

I beg pardon for contradicting my old friend, but he is wrong. "Isn't Life Wonderful" has an appeal that is stronger and more potent than any of Mr. Griffith's other productions, no matter how magnificent nor how beautiful they have been. If he really believes that "Isn't Life Wonderful" will not make money, again I must contradict him.

Unless one is a moron or an utter imbecile, he will feel the tale of the poverty-stricken Polish family starving to death in Germany is so real that it hurts. Truthfulness is always acceptable and this story by Major Geoffrey Moss of the British Army is as if one had peeped into the windows and seen the anguish of Inga's grandmother and Hans' father.

Carol Dempster, as Inga, is so wonderful. I sat rooted to my chair unable to believe this girl, who was just a little above fair in the past, had given a performance that will be mentioned among the fine things as long as motion pictures endure.

Miss Dempster's beautiful curls were sacrificed to the character of Inga, and she wore her hair drawn back in a knot and without any attempt to look beautiful. She was superb.

Neil Hamilton, too, as Hans, the unhappy Polish lad, surpasses himself. He seems inspired by the Griffith magic, as does Lupino Lane, who is a joy as the dancing Randolph. In fact, all the players are much more than satisfactory—they are excellent—and that includes Helen Lowell, as the grandmother; Kerville Alderson, as the father; Marcia Harris, as the mother, and Frank Puglia, as Theodor. Nowhere could there be found more perfect types than in the three hundred workmen. They were really laborers, who had suffered during the war famine.

The Result is, indeed, fortunate to have obtained a picture that D. W. Griffith, at his best, and his best has never been surpassed by anybody, has given us.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Variety (N. Y. City) December 10, 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Exhibitors Herald, Chicago December 13, 1924

United Artists

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM New York Journal 12-19-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Motion Picture News 12/13/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM New York World DEC 1 8 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Buffalo N. Y. Post 12-20-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM E. P. Exhibitors Trade Review December 13, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful?"

IT has taken D. W. Griffith to raise more sharply than it has been raised before the question, Can the American people be made to appreciate a picture created as a work of art, with the ordinary petty box-office angle subordinated?

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" qualifies as an artistic masterpiece. It impresses itself as the type of picture which a great producer might make on royal mandate. It is one of the fine examples of real integrity in production the screen has seen.

In the face of this fact, generally admitted by those who are competent to judge, the question is being asked, "Will it go over at the box-office?" And to that question, unfortunately the answer must rest with time and trial.

This, however, is a word to the exhibitor. If you permit your own imaginings to bar this picture from your house; if you are so certain your customers are wholly lacking in appreciation of the better things that you don't dare risk showing them a really great picture, for fear they won't understand it, then it is high time to stop talking about better pictures and to get down to cheerful acceptance of factory-made stuff that will go over with folks of our admittedly intelligence.

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is not the only picture of the season around which this question arises, but it is an outstanding example of the sort of picture which some people say can not be made profitable. Let's hope they are wrong. Let's assume, for the present, that there are not quite as many cynics in one part of the world as some of our wise friends would have us believe.

Die Fleisch-„Polonäse" in der Notzeit Deutschlands

Griffiths Meisterwerk: „Isn't Life Wonderful!"

Frank Norris, der grösste Romanschriftsteller Amerikas, ist jung gestorben; von seinem Genie, das die Menschen und Dinge in ihrer wahren Gestalt sah, sie mit unbarmherziger Ehrlichkeit schilderte und doch neben den Hässlichkeiten des Lebens auch die Schönheit und Poesie nicht vergass, konnten wir Grosses erwarten. Norris hätte der Knut Hamsun oder der Emile Zola Amerikas werden können — der Tod hat diese Möglichkeit zerstört. Vielleicht treffen hier die Worte aus Emilia Galotti zu: „Eine Rose gebrochen, ehe der Sturm sie entblättert"...

Frank Norris musste von den Werken seiner Feder leben und diese Werke standen jenseits von Geschmack und Verständnis der Amerikaner, er hätte, um klingenden Erfolg zu haben, der Menge Zugeständnisse machen müssen (hat das in „The Pit" getan) und wäre künstlerisch zu diesen Zugeständnissen zugrunde gegangen.

Das grösste seiner Werke war die Trilogie „Die Geschichte des Weizens" — das unvollendet geblieben ist. Der erste Band „The Octopus" war der Kampf des Menschen mit der Natur und der Kampf der Arbeiter unter den Menschen, die der Natur das goldene Korn abrangen, gegen die Habgier der Ausbeuter, die vom Schweiss der anderen leben und das goldene Korn in wirkliches Geld ummünzen — den Trust, die Spekulanten. Der Octopus ist Norris' vollendetstes Werk.

— Im zweiten Band „The Pit" schilderte er das Treiben an der Getreidebörse, den bis zum Wahnsinn gesteigerten Ehrgeiz eines Einzelnen, der durch einen Weizen-Corner den Reichtum und die Macht der Welt sich sichern wollte. Er wollte den Weizen zu seinem Sklaven machen und ward selbst der Sklave und das Opfer des Weizens. Stellenweise gross, stellenweise theatralisch wirksam, steht dieser Teil nicht auf der Höhe des ersten.

Der dritte Teil sollte „The Wolf" heissen, sollte die Hungersnot schildern und — in Ostpreussen spielen. Hungersnot in Ostpreussen, dem Lande der Junker und Agrarier — wir lächelten damals (vor dreissig Jahren) über die Einfalt des Amerikaners, denn wir hielten eine Hungersnot in Ostpreussen, ja in Deutschland überhaupt für eine in ihrer Unmöglichkeit lächerliche Idee....auf Erden ist nichts unmöglich — wir haben die Hungersnot in Deutschland erlebt.

Norris starb ehe er diese „Rache des Weizens" geschrieben hat; aus Notizen und Aeusserungen erfuhren wir, dass er die Vertierung der Menschen in ihrer Not, dass er die zähe Ausdauer der Deutschen in ihrem Kampf mit der Not, dass er den schliesslichen Sieg der Menschen über die Not schildern wollte.

Ein Festmahl: Kartoffeln und Leberwurst

Was dem amerikanischen Dichter versagt geblieben, hat der amerikanische Meister des Films ausgeführt: D. W. Griffith hat Deutschlands Kampf gegen die Hungersnot in dem Film „Isn't Life Wonderful" geschildert. In lebendigen Bildern, in Bildern aus dem Leben, aus den tatsächlichen Ereignissen in dem Deutschland der Notjahre nach dem Krieg hat er — realistisch wie Norris und poetisch wie Norris — die Leidensgeschichte der Deutschen geschrieben. An der Hand einer ganz alltäglichen Handlung, die gerade durch ihre Einfachheit alle Herzen ergreift und erschüt-

tert, zeigt er uns die Schwachen in ihrer Stärke und die Starken in ihrer Schwäche.....der Alltag wird zur Tragödie. Wir sehen die Schwachen, die Leute des guten und gebildeten Mittelstandes, durch zähe Ausdauer und feste Zuversicht zu Siegern werden; wir sehen die Starken, die Männer der Arbeit, die der Mangel an Arbeit lähmlegt, in ihrer Verzweiflung zu Bestien werden — wir bewundern die Schwachen, wir bemitleiden die Starken, die nicht durch Veranlagung, sondern durch bitterste Not zu Verbrechern werden — was rein menschlich verständlich, also auch verzeihlich ist.

Der neueste Griffithfilm, der in Deutschland aufgenommen wurde und prachtvolle deutsche Landschaftsbilder und Szenen feinster Poesie enthält, ist von der Kritik und dem Publikum einstimmig als der wirkungsvollste und beste Film anerkannt worden — er ist das Meisterwerk der Filmkunst.

Es ist nur gerecht, wenn man neben dem Meister auch die Mitarbeiter an diesem Meisterwerk nach Gebühr lobt, denn wie Griffith sich hier selbst übertroffen hat, haben die einzelnen Darsteller sich zu Leistungen aufgeschwungen, deren man sie niemals für fähig gehalten hätte.

Carol Dempster spielt das Mädchen aus dem deutschen Mittelstand — ihre Inga wird zum Symbol des heutigen Deutschlands. Carol Dempster war in ihren früheren Filmrollen immer eine angenehme, verständige Schauspielerin von grossem natürlichen Liebreiz, aber auch nicht mehr als das. In diesem Lebensbild steht sie mit eins neben den grössten Künstlerinnen und über vielen, die bisher als Grössen gerühmt wurden. Carol Dempster ist eine Schönheit mit prachtvollen Augen, sie hat von allen Filmschauspielerinnen die schönsten Augen; als die halbverhungerte, geistig und körperlich im Kampfe mit der Not sich aufreibende Inga ist sie das verhärmte, anämische, in seiner Liebe und seiner Tatkraft bewundernswerte deutsche Mädchen von tiefem Empfinden; es ist eine unvergleichlich grosse darstellerische Leistung, wie sich auf diesem schmalen Gesichtchen und in diesen grossen Leidensaugen jede leise Seelenregung und jede innerste Gemütsbewegung widerspiegelt — sie hat von allen Filmspielerinnen die sprechendsten Augen. Und unvergleichlich gross ist es auch, wie Carol Dempster, die Amerikanerin, die noch nie zuvor den Fuss auf deutsche Erde gesetzt hatte, äusserlich und innerlich das deutsche Mädchen naturwahr lebt.

„Die Hoffnung auf Segen"

Neil Hamilton, der mit Carol Dempster in mehreren amerikanischen Filmen zusammenspielte, ist ebenfalls in diesem deutschländischen Bild ihr Gegenspieler und in vielem ihr gleichwertiger Mitarbeiter. Auch er ist deutsch in seinem Wesen und in seiner Erscheinung; auch er hat sich in den Geist seines Hans vertieft, ohne jedoch den deutschen Charakter so restlos zu erschöpfen wie das bei Carol Dempster der Fall ist. Jedenfalls ist auch seine Leistung die beste, die er soweit zu verzeichnen hat.

Prachtvoll ist die „Tante", die stille Duldierin und mutige Mitkämpferin, in ihrer mütterlichen Fürsorge von Marcia Harris gezeichnet. Neville Alderson (der Professor), Frank Puglia (Bruder), Lupino Lane (reisender Künstler), Helen Lowell (Grossmutter) vervollständigen ein Ensemble von höchster Güte. Griffith hatte alle diese Darsteller von hier nach Deutschland mitgenommen, er hat sie alle erfolgreich „verdeutscht", was für den Erfolg und die Glaubwürdigkeit des Films unbedingte Notwendigkeit war. Er hat sein Personal drüben durch Mitglieder des Deutschen Theaters ergänzt, das Programm nennt leider nur zwei: Paul Rehkopf und Herrn von Schacht. Diese Schauspieler wirken als notleidende Arbeitslose mit — Kommunisten aus Not, nicht aus Neigung....man hat wohl noch nie auf der Filmbühne Gestalten von überzeugenderer Kraft gesehen als diese Unglücklichen; sie sind in ihrem Hunger, in ihrer Verzweiflung, in ihrem Wahnsinn von furchtbarer Wahrheit und unheimlicher Natürlichkeit. Wer diese Riesen mit den erloschenen Augen und den toten Herzen, wer diese in ihrer Not vertierten Menschen mit den gierigen fiebernden Blicken, den lechzenden Lippen und den gefletschten Zähnen gesehen, der kann die Angst vor dem Bolschewismus und die damals als „kommunistische Schreckensstaten" gemeldeten Vorfälle verstehen. Sorge, Elend, Verzweiflung, Not und Hunger sind furchtbare Genossen, die selbst das gebildetste aller Völker zeitweise seine Bildung vergessen lassen können.

Der tiefe Eindruck dieses unvergleichlichen und unvergesslichen Bildes wird noch verstärkt durch die musikalische Begleitung: wie ein Kranz von deutschen Vergiss-

(Schluss auf Seite 31)

„Wo Liebe, da Segen"

„Du, du, liegst mir im Herzen"

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK POST

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK 12-10-24, Telegraph

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM Reg. Tribune 12/8/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM New York Graphic 12-6-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK — BOSTON

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU — NEW YORK

CLIPPING FROM

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXX NEW YORK, DECEMBER 13, 1924 NO. 24

New Kinds of Pictures

D. W. GRIFFITH gave us a very interesting interview the other day on his new picture. Among other significant things he says that the opening of "Isn't Life Wonderful" has brought him more letters and occasioned more enthusiastic reviews than any other picture of his, including "The Birth of a Nation;" and that in its "try outs" in some Connecticut towns it was enthusiastically received by the factory workers.

* * *

Whether the New York critics have correctly gauged their readers or not — running the gamut from those of the Evening Post to those of the Daily News — remains to be seen; whether this picture will get to the masses all over the country like, for instance, "Over the Hill," remains also to be shown at the box-office. But in any event we believe that Mr. Griffith has produced a picture which may well receive the most serious consideration of producers and exhibitors.

It is a story of life — based cleverly upon the broadest of all dramatic appeal, namely, the struggle for self-preservation.

* * *

To put it simply, Mr. Griffith put his camera on his shoulder and went forth to photograph a story right where the story happened. He lived among the people themselves, got his color, characters, facts, sympathy first-hand. And the result is impressive realism. Another did the same thing recently — Robert J. Flaherty; and we had the dramatic "Nanook of the North." Every good writer writes his stories just that way. There is no other way — to make them ring true.

All of which suggests to us and very forcibly these thoughts:

* * *

That there is altogether too much of the studio in our pictures today. The studio is apt to mean artificiality — even the studio at its best. We have presented wonderful effects, vast, startling, often enthralling. But after all it isn't life and, while for a cycle of time it is entertainment, it gets quickly insipid. People are talking a lot about the sameness of the movies — that we are too insistent upon the stock, ready-made values — big stories, scenes, shots, tricks, punches at the expense of credulity. There's always a vital danger in entertainment, all entertainment, and that is in overdoing the theatric. Fifteen years ago the stage was that way — all pomp and splendor and bombast. And then along came Eugene Walter's "Paid in Full" — a small cast without makeup, a little story of life, and the new kind of play was big enough to set a new cycle in stage entertainment.

* * *

As for stories — there was very little plot to "Nanook" and "Over the Hill." And there's very little plot in "Rain" and "The Show-Off" and "Lightnin'" and other striking stage successes. But there is life, the kind that gets home, in appeal; and the telling of which rings true.

We could go on easily enough with other thoughts on this same subject; but for lack of space we pass to an important and practical point.

If Mr. Griffith has hit the box-office angle in this picture then a wide vista is opened up in the way of story material for producers sincere enough and able enough to paint life upon the screen. This material will embrace not merely the work of some great authors still unknown to the screen today but also many a bit of life in an unheralded short story, and still more to be created directly for the screen, by our best modern authors, for instance.

And in this connection we wonder if when these "different" pictures come along exhibitors will take pains — extra pains, to find out just how their audiences feel about them in comparison with other pictures. That's highly important. No picture is advancing these days. There are new kinds of pictures right along. It is wisdom to find out their appeal.

C. S. Johnston

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM Los Angeles Cal Times 12/10/24

GRIFFITH'S NEW ONE A TRIUMPH

"Isn't Life Wonderful" is Hit in New York

"Romola" Has Beauty But is Much Too Slow

Two Performances Please in "Sundown"

BY HELEN KLUMPH
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Dec. 9. — Floods of tears greeted the openings last week of D. W. Griffith's and Lillian Gish's latest pictures. In the case of "Isn't Life Wonderful?" the tears were caused by a gripping heartbreaking story; at the opening of "Romola" the tears were tears of disappointment and dismay. Lillian Gish, the first artist of our screen, has made a thoroughly dull picture, one that in no way reflects her charm or intelligence. It is a tragic pity that she has not already made another picture that could be hurried onto the market to make audiences forget this one.

Although there were rival openings at other theaters and a special personal appearance night at the Piccadilly, where "Sundown" was being shown, "Romola" attracted most of the leaders of the film industry in New York. Lillian's personal popularity would guarantee that even if "Romola" hadn't been touted as a great picture. Richard Barthelmess and Mary Hay were there with Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson; May Allison, Dagmar Godowsky, Peggy Joyce, Richard Dix and any number of others were in the audience.

The fault, it seems to me, lies mainly with Henry King. He quite neglected to make this a "moving" picture. Indeed, as one dippest critic pointed out, the one big smashing bit of action in the picture was where the leaning tower of Pisa continued to lean.

"Romola" is wondrously beautiful, but terribly dull.

Only one person connected with "Romola" emerges with his banners of popularity flying. That is Ronald Colman. The picture gives him nothing to do but he does that with consummate charm. Having admitted that I know him and that I once sat next to him at a dinner party in Los Angeles, I am now threatened with poison letters from the two young women who sat next to me at "Romola."

A GRIFFITH TRIUMPH

There was no gala opening for "Isn't Life Wonderful" and that is as it should be, for gold cloth and ermine and jewels would make one feel decidedly guilty while watching this picture. It is one of the most poignant screen tales I have ever seen. It is a triumph for Mr. Griffith who wrings your emotions with a simple tale, but I fear that it is not the box-office success his friends have been hoping for for him.

With the opening of "Sundown" New York movie goers settled down to a more conventional fare. It has been advertised as a great epic of the West, but I see in it no greater epic than in numerous western pictures made by Tom Mix, Hoot Jones, William S. Hart, Fred Thomson, Hoot Gibson and others. Its chief claim is fame in the movement of a gigantic herd of cattle, but I've seen as many cattle in a Fred Thomson picture as the camera eye could catch, so I can't see that it set an extra mark added anything to the picture.

The reviewers went great to "Sundown," claiming that it would thrill. I think that reviewers never lived in the West, for no one who has lived out on those plains would be interested in the dull, lengthy, tedious, hackneyed tale it is given.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 12/10/24

NEW GRIFFITH FILM IS GREAT

'Isn't Life Wonderful' Declared by Louella Parsons to Be Producer's Best Work

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor N. Y. American

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—David Wark Griffith, who blazed the trail ten years ago and gave the world the first significant historical drama, has again pioneered the way and given us the most truthful delineation of characters in "Isn't Life Wonderful" that I have ever seen on the screen.

In addition to its honesty and sincerity and its absence from all artificiality, "Isn't Life Wonderful" is done with a delicacy that indicates stronger than any mere words the great genius that directed the course of this seemingly simple little tale.

Mr. Griffith in a speech made at a preview, said that he felt he must ask forgiveness for "Isn't Life Wonderful," which had no thrilling rescues with dashing heroes riding to save beautiful women at the climax [illegible] but [illegible] this picture better than anything he has ever made. He intimated that it might not make as much money as some of his other productions.

I beg pardon for contradicting my old friend, but he is wrong. "Isn't Life Wonderful" has an appeal that is stronger and more potent than any of Mr. Griffith's other productions, no matter how magnificent nor how beautiful they have been. If he really believes that "Isn't Life Wonderful" will not make money, again I must contradict him.

Unless one is a moron or an utter imbecile, he will feel the tale of the poverty-stricken Polish family starving to death in Germany is so real that it hurts. Truthfulness is always acceptable and this story by Major Geoffrey Moss of the British Army is as if one had peeped into the windows and seen the anguish of Inga's grandmother and Hans' father.

Carol Dempster, as Inga, is so wonderful, I sat rooted to my chair unable to believe this girl, who was just a little above fair in the past, had given a performance that will be mentioned among the fine things as long as motion pictures endured.

Miss Dempster's beautiful curls were sacrificed to the character of Inga, and she wore her hair drawn back in a knot and without any attempt to look beautiful. She was superb.

Neil Hamilton, too, as Hans, the unhappy Polish lad, surpasses himself. He seems inspired by the Griffith magic, as does Lupino Lane, who is a joy as the dancing Randolph. In fact, all the players are much more than satisfactory—they are excellent—and that includes Helen Lowell, as the grandmother; Neville Alderson, as the father; Marcia Harris, as the mother, and Frank Puglia, as Theodor. Nowhere could there be found more perfect types than in the three hungry workmen. They were really laborers, who had suffered during the war famine.

The Revolt is, indeed, fortunate to have obtained a picture that David Wark Griffith at his best and his best has never been surpassed by [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW DECEMBER 13, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful?"

IT has taken D. W. Griffith to raise more sharply than it has been raised before the question, Can the American people be made to appreciate a picture created as a work of art with the ordinary petty box-office angle subordinated?

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" qualifies as an artistic masterpiece. It impresses itself as the type of picture which a great producer might make on royal mandate. It is one of the fine examples of real integrity in production the screen has seen.

In the face of this fact, generally admitted by those who are competent to judge, the question is being asked, "Will it go over at the box-office?" And to that question, unfortunately, the answer must rest with time and trial.

This, however, is a word to the exhibitor. If you permit your own misgivings to bar this picture from your screen, if you are so certain your customers are wholly lacking in appreciation of the better things that you don't dare risk showing them a really great picture, for fear they won't understand it, then it is high time to stop talking about better pictures and to get down to cheerful acceptance of factory goods that will go over with folks of our admittedly intelligence.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is not the only picture of the season around which this question arises but it is an outstanding example of the sort of picture which some people say can not be made profitable. Let's hope they are wrong. Let's assume, for the present, that there are not quite as many people in one part of the world as some of our wise friends would have us believe.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
VARIETY (N. Y. City) DECEMBER 10, 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
EXHIBITORS HERALD, CHICAGO DECEMBER 13, 1924

United Artists

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM New York Journal 12-13-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Detroit Free Press 12/13/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK WORLD DEC 1 8 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Buffalo N. Y. Courier 12-28-24

Dec 1924

Die Fleisch-„Polonäse" in der Notzeit Deutschlands

Griffiths Meisterwerk: „Isn't Life Wonderful!"

Frank Norris, der grösste Romanschriftsteller Amerikas, ist jung gestorben; von seinem Genie, das die Menschen und Dinge in ihrer wahren Gestalt sah, sie mit unbarmherziger Ehrlichkeit schilderte und doch neben den Hässlichkeiten des Lebens auch die Schönheit und Poesie nicht vergass, konnten wir Grosses erwarten. Norris hätte der Knut Hamsun oder der Emile Zola Amerikas werden können — der Tod hat diese Möglichkeit zerstört. Vielleicht treffen hier die Worte aus Emilia Galotti zu: „Eine Rose gebrochen, ehe der Sturm sie entblättert"...

Frank Norris musste von den Werken seiner Feder leben und diese Werke standen jenseits von Geschmack und Verständnis der Amerikaner, er hätte, um klingenden Erfolg zu haben, der Menge Zugeständnisse machen müssen (hat das in „The Pit" getan) und wäre künstlerisch an diesen Zugeständnissen zugrunde gegangen.

Das grösste seiner Werke war die Trilogie „Die Geschichte des Weizens" — das unvollendet geblieben ist. Der erste Band „The Octopus" war der Kampf des Menschen mit der Natur und der Kampf der Arbeiter unter den Menschen, die der Natur das goldene Korn abrangen, gegen die Habgier der Ausbeuter, die vom Schweiss des anderen leben und das goldene Korn in wirkliches Geld ummünzen — den Trust, die Spekulanten. Der Octopus ist Norris' vollendetstes Werk.

— Im zweiten Band „The Pit" schilderte er das Treiben an der Getreidebörse, den bis zum Wahnsinn gesteigerten Ehrgeiz eines Einzelnen, der durch einen Weizen-Corner den Reichtum und die Macht der Welt sich sichern wollte. Er wollte den Weizen zu seinem Sklaven machen und ward selbst der Sklave und das Opfer des Weizens. Stellenweise gross, stellenweise theatralisch wirksam, steht dieser Teil nicht auf der Höhe des ersten.

Der dritte Teil sollte „The Wolf" heissen, sollte die Hungersnot schildern und — in Ostpreussen spielen. Hungersnot in Ostpreussen, dem Lande der Junker und Agrarier — wir lächelten damals (vor dreissig Jahren) über die Einfalt des Amerikaners, denn wir hielten eine Hungersnot in Ostpreussen, ja in Deutschland überhaupt für eine in ihrer Unmöglichkeit lächerliche Idee....auf Erden ist nichts unmöglich — wir haben die Hungersnot in Deutschland erlebt.

Norris starb ehe er diese „Rache des Weizens" geschrieben hat; aus Notizen und Aeusserungen erfuhren wir, dass er die Vertierung der Menschen in ihrer Not, dass er die zähe Ausdauer der Menschen in ihrem Kampf mit der Not, dass er den schliesslichen Sieg der Menschen über die Not schildern wollte.

Ein Festmahl: Kartoffeln und Leberwurst

Was dem amerikanischen Dichter versagt geblieben, hat der amerikanische Meister des Films ausgeführt: D. W. Griffith hat Deutschlands Kampf gegen die Hungersnot in dem Film „Isn't Life Wonderful" geschildert. In lebendigen Bildern, in Bildern aus dem Leben, aus den tatsächlichen Ereignissen in dem Deutschland der Notjahre nach dem Krieg hat er — realistisch wie Norris und poetisch wie Norris — die Leidensgeschichte der Deutschen geschrieben. An der Hand einer ganz alltäglichen Handlung, die gerade durch ihre Einfachheit alle Herzen ergreift und erschüt-

tert, zeigt er uns die Schwachen in ihrer Stärke und die Starken in ihrer Schwäche.....der Alltag wird zur Tragödie. Wir sehen die Schwachen, die Leute des guten und gebildeten Mittelstandes, durch zähe Ausdauer und feste Zuversicht zu Siegern werden; wir sehen die Starken, die Männer der Arbeit, die der Mangel an Arbeit lähmlegt, in ihrer Verzweiflung zu Bestien werden — wir bewundern die Schwachen, wir bemitleiden die Starken, die nicht durch Veranlagung, sondern durch bitterste Not zu Verbrechern werden — was rein menschlich verständlich, also auch verzeihlich ist.

Der neueste Griffithfilm, der in Deutschland aufgenommen wurde und prachtvolle deutsche Landschaftsbilder und Szenen feinster Poesie enthält, ist von der Kritik und dem Publikum einstimmig als der wirkungsvollste und beste Film anerkannt worden — er ist das Meisterwerk der Filmkunst.

Es ist nur gerecht, wenn man neben dem Meister auch die Mitarbeiter an diesem Meisterwerk nach Gebühr lobt, denn wie Griffith sich hier selbst übertroffen hat, haben die einzelnen Darsteller sich zu Leistungen aufgeschwungen, deren man sie niemals für fähig gehalten hätte.

Carol Dempster spielt das Mädchen aus dem deutschen Mittelstand — ihre Inga wird zum Symbol des heutigen Deutschlands. Carol Dempster war in ihren früheren Filmrollen immer eine angenehme, verständige Schauspielerin von grossem natürlichen Liebreiz, aber auch nicht mehr als das. In diesem Lebensbild steht sie mit eins neben den grössten Künstlerinnen und über vielen, die bisher als Grössen gerühmt wurden. Carol Dempster ist eine Schönheit mit prachtvollen Augen, sie hat von allen Filmschauspielerinnen die schönsten Augen; als die halbverhungerte, geistig und körperlich im Kampfe mit der Not sich aufreibende Inga ist sie das verhärmte, anämische, in seiner Liebe und seiner Tatkraft bewundernswerte deutsche Mädchen von tiefem Empfinden; es ist eine unvergleichlich grosse darstellerische Leistung, wie sich auf diesem schmalen Gesichtchen und in diesen grossen Leidensaugen jede leise Seelenregung und jede innerste Gemütsbewegung widerspiegelt — sie hat von allen Filmspielerinnen die sprechendsten Augen. Und unvergleichlich gross ist es auch, wie Carol Dempster, die Amerikanerin, die noch nie zuvor den Fuss auf deutsche Erde gesetzt hatte, äusserlich und innerlich das deutsche Mädchen naturwahr lebt.

„Die Hoffnung auf Segen"

Neil Hamilton, der mit Carol Dempster in mehreren amerikanischen Filmen zusammenspielte, ist ebenfalls in diesem deutschländischen Bild ihr Gegenspieler und in vielem ihr gleichwertiger Mitarbeiter. Auch er ist deutsch in seinem Wesen und in seiner Erscheinung; auch er hat sich in den Geist seines Hans vertieft, ohne jedoch den deutschen Charakter so restlos zu erschöpfen wie das bei Carol Dempster der Fall ist. Jedenfalls ist auch seine Leistung die beste, die er soweit zu verzeichnen hat.

Prachtvoll ist die „Tante", die stille Dulderin und mutige Mitkämpferin, in ihrer mütterlichen Fürsorge von Marcia Harris gezeichnet. Erville Alderson (der Professor), Frank Puglia (Bruder), Lupino Lane (reisender Künstler), Helen Lowell (Grossmutter) vervollständigen ein Ensemble von höchster Güte. Griffith hatte alle diese Darsteller von hier nach Deutschland mitgenommen, er hat sie alle erfolgreich „verdeutscht", was für den Erfolg und die Glaubwürdigkeit des Films unbedingte Notwendigkeit war. Er hat sein Personal drüben durch Mitglieder des Deutschen Theaters ergänzt, das Programm nennt leider nur zwei: Paul Rehkopf und Herrn von Schacht. Diese Schauspieler wirken als notleidende Arbeitslose mit — Kommunisten aus Not, nicht aus Neigung....man hat wohl noch nie auf der Filmbühne Gestalten von überzeugenderer Kraft gesehen als diese Unglücklichen; sie sind in ihrem Hunger, in ihrer Verzweiflung, in ihrem Wahnsinn von furchtbarer Wahrheit und unheimlicher Natürlichkeit. Wer diese Riesen mit den erloschenen Augen und den toten Herzen, wer diese in ihrer Not vertierten Menschen mit den gierigen fiebernden Blicken, den lechzenden Lippen und den gefletschten Zähnen gesehen, der kann die Angst vor dem Bolschewismus und die damals als „kommunistische Schreckenstaten" gemeldeten Vorfälle verstehen. Sorge, Elend, Verzweiflung, Not und Hunger sind furchtbare Genossen, die selbst das gebildetste aller Völker zeitweise seine Bildung vergessen lassen können.

Der tiefe Eindruck dieses unvergleichlichen und unvergesslichen Bildes wird noch verstärkt durch die musikalische Begleitung: wie ein Kranz von deutschen Vergiss-

(Schluss auf Seite 31)

„Wo Liebe, da Segen"

„Du, du, liegst mir im Herzen"

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 66 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOYLSTON STREET
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 66 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOYLSTON STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK POST DEC 11 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 66 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOYLSTON STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK
12-10-24, Telegraph

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 66 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOYLSTON STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Chg. Tribune 12/8/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
EXHIBITORS HERALD CHICAGO
DECEMBER 13, 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM New York Graphic 12-6-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 38 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK POST
DEC 6 1924

New Photoplays

Griffith's New Film Reveals New Comedian and Some High Spots of Directorial Genius—"Romola" Not for This Generation

TO ATTEMPT TO MAKE analytical comment on a Griffith picture is difficult. Of course, it isn't obligatory for any one to make the attempt, but inasmuch as "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is one of the four or five finest films of the year (or any year), and as we've hankered for a long time to turn our typewriter loose on D. W., we'll just go along and set down a few random thoughts which may or may not interest any one but ourself.

While the entire picture is extraordinarily good, there are three things in it which stand out so definitely as to be worthy of especial notice. The first is a scene in which Lupino Lane, who "in Poland was considered something of a dancer," exhibits his footwork to a very much bored man who finally leaves him flat. While the scene itself is splendidly done and provides a legitimate laugh, we wish to rise and state that Mr. Lane's work in it touches a high mark in comedy which no screen actor save Charles Chaplin has ever reached.

It has been said, and with much truth, that Charlie's comedy is outstanding because behind the fun and burlesque lies pathos. You sympathize with him at the same time that you laugh at him. Lane's work in this picture has the same quality of pathos. His antics bring a laugh, but you see bravery and earnestness and wistful longing in his eyes, and you are sorry for him.

We consider that Lupino Lane's work in "Isn't Life Wonderful?" puts this comedian in a class by himself, and that, given the proper stories, he has it in him to become one of our best makers of sincere laughter.

THE SECOND NOTEWORTHY thing in this film is the scene in which the starving family is deluged with food. Their delight is so simple and so human that you just can't help rejoicing with them, even though there are tears in your eyes as you do so.

This little episode is undoubtedly one of the finest things that have graced the screen so far. For several reels we have seen the family slowly starving on one potato or horse turnip a day; then suddenly they acquire a large piece of liverwurst, a sack of potatoes, and an egg.

The first time we saw the picture we were just recovering from a large and fulsome repast; but by the time the liverwurst appeared we had acquired such a sympathetic appetite that we almost wished that the family would extend to the audience the invitation which went to their hungry neighbors.

There are many other touches of directorial genius throughout the picture, but undoubtedly the best of them all is the manner in which Griffith has worked up the suspense which culminates in the big scene of the story, that in which the boy and girl are robbed of the small wagonload of tubers which mean happiness, as well as comfort to them.

We are shown a band of workingmen, made desperate by hunger, starting for the suburbs of Berlin, where they hope to find food hidden by profiteers.

The shots then alternate between scenes of these men roaming through the woods at night, in search of victims, and the boy and girl digging their potatoes and hauling them each to the city. With remarkable skill Griffith gradually brings the two elements closer and closer together until they meet at last and give us one of the most dramatic, and at the same time one of the most unprecedented climaxes ever seen on the screen.

It seemed to us, when viewing the film, that we should have to leave the theatre before the final meeting, so great was the tension created and worked up. But even the entire season is lavishing on the screen, its elements are so simple and so human that we must sympathize at most as much with the villains as with the hero and heroine. It is one of the few things we've seen in the movies that we shall not soon forget.

GRIFFITH IS THE FIRST to bring comedy of the screen. Was comedy did with the character and situation which does not lie. There is an atmosphere of reality surrounding them which makes each event somehow, as though [illegible]

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
New York, News
12-7-24

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" an Epochal Film

By MILDRED SPAIN.

Something epochal has happened. David Wark Griffith, who taught the movies their first toddling steps with "The Birth of a Nation," has now boosted them up a rung or two in the world with an entirely new treatment.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" filmed in Germany by Mr. Griffith, is the most daring and yet the simplest picture ever made.

It tells of Germany after the war. A Germany at once pathetic and greedy. A starved, bestial, hopeless Germany digging in the garbage cans for moldy crusts or killing deliberately for enough potatoes to last the day.

David Wark Griffith

But his theme is of the one hope of Germany. Simple love, the desire for a home and garden, the wish for children in those homes.

Inga and Hans, beloved of each other, are beaten and pounded by circumstances. Their one little hope of enough potatoes to last the winter is wrested from them by snarling, hungry men who have stood too long the bite of hunger. And yet Hans and Inga, seeing the pink of dawn, look at each other and say:

"Isn't life wonderful?"

Griffith has thumbed his nose at plot. I will confess, however, that I had one terrifying moment. Inga is followed by a ruffian. I was sure he was after her for reasons movie. You know, the fight at the last moment with the girl clawing her face and saying "No! No!" with her eyes.

Scene from "Isn't Life Wonderful?"

But no such thing. The ruffian knew Inga had food. It was food he wanted, not a girl.

I hereby publicly apologize to Mr. Griffith for my dark and wholly unfounded fears.

Another Clever Lesson.

Then, too, Mr. Griffith has put another clever lesson over in the acting of Carol Dempster. You know, it was Griffith who conventionalized emotion upon the screen. Its gladness a star kicks up a heel. In horror she lets the cords stand out on her neck and twitches all over not unlike Gibbs Gray, etc.

But Carol Dempster's interpretation of Inga is something entirely new in screen acting. The same Griffith who made the old rules has evidently made some new ones—and very good, too.

Carol Dempster's Inga will always stand out to me as one of the perfect screen characterizations.

Hobart Bosworth and Carol Dempster

I hope "Isn't Life Wonderful" is a big box of [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD
DEC 7 1924

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAM
DEC 7 1924

[illegible]

NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
DEC 28 1924
CLEVELAND (O.) PLAIN DEALER

A "Survey" of Films by a Successful British Writer

BY KARL K. KITCHEN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—After Maj. Geoffrey Moss, the British novelist whose story "Dawn" has been made into a successful photo play by D. W. Griffith, had spent a week of theatergoing on Broadway—mostly in picture theaters—he discussed the movie situation with the writer. It seems to me that he has an unusually clear conception of the "picture business" and that is why I am setting forth his views at considerable length.

"The screen has beaten the pulpit and the stage," said Maj. Moss, whose novel "Sweet Pepper" is one of the best sellers in England, "and it may beat the printing press—although I would not be rash enough to make that prediction.

"For good or ill it has today a stronger influence than that of the spoken word and more subtle than that of the printed one. It may benefit, it may harm—but it cannot fail to influence.

"There are various kinds of films—comic, educational, melodramatic, spectacular, salacious and dramatic. Comedy films fulfill their mission. It would not be possible to overpraise the work of a Harold Lloyd or a Charlie Chaplin. The fun is innocent, it brightens the life of millions, it appeals to all ages, classes, all races. It has in it the hint of the eternal which exists in all great art.

The educational film is an experiment. We will wait.

Melodramatic films have a special appeal to youth. Their influence is not always a good one but they are here to stay. This view seems to be commonly accepted; there is no need to discuss it here.

"The spectacular ('super production!') and the salacious story depend for their success upon their sensationalism. For a time they may prove good for the box office. But they sure are 'stunts,' and like other 'stunts' they must move forward or fail. With each new attempt an extra thousand of 'crowd,' an extra furlong of palaces must be added; or yet another garment must be stripped from the heroine. And so the point is soon reached where the more distant actors will be invisible, and when the final chiffon has been snatched away.

"Dramatic films include those which are sentimentalized stories and those which are sheerly dramatic. Actually, almost all come under the first heading. And this article is a plea for the second.

"Sentimentalized motion plays bear little relation to life. They do not, like the fairy tales of old, carry morals which are true and eternal. They create false values, and they will encourage nothing but a weak lush growth of sentimentality. If the idea expressed in them are accepted, as they may be—especially by young girls, the results will be a sense of disillusionment, and of disappointment when the hard facts of life have to be faced.

"But these considerations are moral ones, and it would be hardly fair to blame the makers and exhibitors of films for not being swayed by such arguments. What right have they, they can say, for denying to their audiences the type of play which pleases them? What right have they to decide what the public shall see and what it shall not? Are they so certain, after all, they will argue, that these are not the best films that can be offered? * * * Admittedly they are not like life; admittedly they are bad art. Quite! But then the public does not want art. It wants entertainment. Beyond that we must consider the interests of our investors.

"That is the attitude of the motion picture trade. It is a perfectly justifiable one. If there is no flaw in the argument, then * * * for practical purposes * * * it is unanswerable.

"But is there no flaw in the argument? Can it be true that the public wants all its dramas denaturalized and sweetened with synthetic honey?

"To offer today and tomorrow what pleased yesterday, is an easy policy. It sounds so safe. But is it? There is another nation whose producers are more adventurous. These who saw "The Last Man" may realize the threat.

"Why not try a change? * * * Nothing revolutionary, only the introduction now and again into the program of some film which is pure drama. It is not a costly experiment; for drama depends, not upon elaborate costumes and expensive settings, but upon sincerity, upon truth, upon beauty of treatment. The world's greatest paintings have been made from materials which could not have cost more than a few dollars.

"For years producers have tried to cater for the lowest rather than the average intelligence. They have lost their sense of perspective. They are afraid of surprising their audience into thought. They have cultivated ingenuity and they have lost imagination. One may guess the denouement of a plot almost before the atmosphere and the characters have been established.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Providence R.D.
12-7-24

David W. Griffith's "Isn't Life Wonderful?" and Henry King's "Romola" Presented in New York. Both Judged Striking Films. British Film-Going Public.

Two films much talked about during the past month and of more than usual interest are Griffith's "Isn't Life Wonderful?" and Henry King's production of George Eliot's novel "Romola." A good deal of the former was made in Germany, and all of the latter, it is understood, was filmed in Florence, Italy, the actual scene of the story. Germany is also the scene of Mr. Griffith's film, which is from a war tale by Maj. Geoffrey C. G. Moss.

Both these pictures were shown for the first time in New York last week, and both revealed characteristically high types of direction. Mr. Griffith's play depends more for its appeal on its "humanity" rather than for any definite plot. It shows a group of Polish refugees trying to keep themselves from starvation in the lean times immediately after the war. There is a "love interest," but its beginning is not pictured nor its end. It is just as if the audience as witnesses came upon these people in the midst of their trials and hopes and left in the midst of them, though there are threads which lead both ways as aids to the imagination.

"This is one of the most beautiful, most moving and interesting movies that we have ever seen," writes the Post. "And it is about nothing at all—except life. . . .We can safely say that never has there been so absorbingly human a drama put upon the screen. It will move to laughter and to tears any one who has a spark of sympathy for the trials and humble happinesses of his fellow men.

"Dealing with only the lowliest of people, showing only their unimportant emotions, it rises to such heights of truth and beauty and power that it far surpasses all the make-believe tragedies and brainstorms which have so far appeared on the scene. 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' while a picture which embodies the highest of intelligence and imagination will, we venture to predict, be viewed with as much interest and feeling on Third avenue as it will on Broadway. Certainly its biggest quality is universality. Its human appeal will be answered by a response from the poor and uneducated as well as from the more erudite and sophisticated movie patrons of the Big Street."

Surpassingly beautiful was the verdict on "Romola." The telling on the screen appears to be slow, however. One reviewer thought it dull except for the artistry of the pictures and the acting by Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, William Powell and Ronald Coleman. Another remarked that the villain held the centre of the stage longer than the hero or heroine, but that is what Tito does in the book. He is by far the outstanding character. This indicates that the customary movie distortion of a novel has not affected "Romola."

Many eyes and minds, however, found the story well told and often exciting as put upon the screen. No small task, as George Eliot's novel has more character delineation than dramatic action. But it seems to be the scenic background, the lighting and the costumes that made the most appeal.

King "has a style of his own," says Mordaunt Hall in the Times, "and his artistic bent is apparent in most of the glorious scenes of this film. The settings are really something to marvel at, and no less impressive are the exteriors. There are white, winding roadways flanked by sun-bleached stone walls, old gates that have stood the test of centuries of seasons, worm-eaten oaken doors, cobblestone squares and a glimpse of a lazily flowing river.

"Mr. King used Florence for all it was worth in this picture, and even if the story were not as good as it is, the scenes are so beautiful that they in themselves are worth every inch one spends viewing this picture. At times the photography is of such excellence that it appears to have depth. There are views in the sunshine and others timed for moonlight which would awaken enthusiasm in the eyes of any artist."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
MOVING PICTURE WORLD (N. Y.)
DECEMBER 13, 1924

D. W. Griffith's New Picture Wins New York Reviewers

WITH the premiere run of D. W. Griffith's new film, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" at the Rivoli Theatre in New York City, a kind of [illegible] was learned that [illegible] goes to the price to see great [illegible] drama. Critics is called to the [illegible] reviewers as a whole of a [illegible] is revealed in [illegible] the pictorial [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TRIBUNE
DEC 14 1924

My Dear Miss Underhill:

This is the written voice of one of your constant readers addressing you with a little song of praise.

On the strength of your remarks anent "Isn't Life Wonderful?" we dropped in at the Rivoli, and now my list of best pictures has got to be changed. At the top of this list "The Woman of Paris" has sat supreme, while "The Marriage Circle" and one or two others have closely approached the seat of honor, but I am now inclined to place "Isn't Life Wonderful?" in one of the high positions as one of the best motion pictures I have ever seen. Although it is, as you say, harrowing, it is so strong and simple; and I consider the acting of Carol Dempster and Helen Lowell as fine as anything seen on the screen. That scene where the poor family is rejoicing over having some real food to eat—instead of horse turnips—alone, is worth going many miles to see.

If people didn't differ so much in their opinions of the "movies" I should advise everybody to go and see this masterpiece, and I am sure some of them would come away feeling happy and content with their little lot. There is a lesson in it for all of us.

Will you kindly mention other pictures in which Carol Dempster has the leading role? H. W. H.

Glen Ridge, N. J., Dec. 7, 1924.

Am so glad you liked "Isn't Life Wonderful?" Miss Dempster was in "America," "The White Rose" and, in fact, all of the D. W. Griffith productions for the last five years, I believe.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 38 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN
DEC 14

MY DEAR MISS PARSONS:

I have always read and enjoyed your page and now for the first time a spirit has moved me to write to you. As I read in Sunday's page you wished to hear how one liked D. W. Griffith's "Isn't Life Wonderful." I simply wished to say it is the finest picture Mr. Griffith has yet made. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton were at their best. Having seen the premiere of this picture, I was fortunate in seeing Mr. Griffith and stars in person and must say they are just wonderful. Mr. Griffith certainly thought right in making a German production. I think there are fine locations in Germany for filming and hope to see more made over there.

As ardent reader,
G. M. MILLER.

Editor's note: I am glad that you enjoyed the Griffith picture.

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK SUN
DEC 6 1924

[illegible]

Judge 12/20/25

Griffith This Day Our Daily Film

by George Mitchell

THE man who never, or very, very rarely, goes to the movies because, by some favoritism of the gods he has been so cluttered up with crowns and wreaths he can't afford to be seen out with anything that isn't stamped "By Special Appointment to H.R.H." and all that sort of tosh . . . you know the type: He wears his monocle to bed nights, do you see, lest his man, Martingale, might think he wasn't used to wearing the thing and all that sort of fiddle-faddle. . . . Well, if this 100 per cent. regular feller should drop in to see "Isn't Life Wonderful?" he's going to get the jolt that will bump off a couple of his bay leaves.

My first impression as I watched the first few hundred feet of this film was that it was too good to be true. I felt like the little boy who said there wasn't any such animal as the giraffe. There couldn't be a picture as good as this. No motion picture could put this lump in my Adam's apple. I must be wearing my little brother's collar.

It isn't just the story that does the trick. It's the way Griffith has made it.

The story is of a poor, demolished German family broken on the wheel of the recent war. Their subsequent struggle for existence in the face of post-war famine and its consequent profiteering is the material at the director's command. The love story is as gentle as an April morning and, like an April morning, is entirely devoid of sexual complexes. The girl is as plain as a turnip; the boy

(Continued on page 30)

Hostess—Aren't you fond of Christmas pudding, Doctor?
Doctor—Not very—but I'm deeply indebted to it!
—Passing Show (London)

Griffith This Day Our Daily Film.

(Continued from page 20)

as naïve as a stalk of celery. I have never seen a love story on the screen so tenderly handled and, strange as it may seem, it grips more powerfully than all the lip-biting contests that have ever been contended by Arab sheik or U. S. flapper. It's just that that Griffith has achieved in this remarkable picture. He has reached the height of forcefulness by the simplest methods. His thunder is the silence of night. His terror is that of suspense. The silent inaction of the mob of hunger-driven thugs that lay in wait for the young lovers' harvest of potatoes drives you up out of your chair. If they had waited another ten minutes, I'd have run down the aisle and slashed the screen. You may not like "Isn't Life Wonderful." You may find it sad. But you will find it beautiful. Nothing that I have ever seen equals the truth of Carol Dempster's and Neil Hamilton's characterizations. And as for the picture itself, I unqualifiedly put it down as the finest picture I have seen.

* * *

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 98 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN
DEC 14 192

A TERRIBLE blow has been struck at the much abused lack of intelligence of the public. They like "Greed," and I am told Saturday and Sunday at the Cosmopolitan Theatre is a sell out. They have also let the world see their great interest in "Isn't Life Wonderful," David Wark Griffith's latest opus. Someone said after Mr. Griffith's picture made its bow:

"Yes, it is a fine picture, but not the sort of thing the public likes."

Someday I am going to write an article explaining why I think the public is maligned in the matter of mentality. One reason I know this is true is because of the type of letters I receive. Time was when no one with any intelligence ever wrote a letter about the movies. To-day, I receive letters from ministers, lawyers, bankers, scholars and teachers. Either the movies are changing or the world is getting more frivolous.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
My Mirror 12/3/24

"Isn't Life Wonderful," the Year's Best Picture

By REGINA CANNON

David Wark Griffith's latest and much-talked-of production, "Isn't Life Wonderful!" which opened Sunday at the Rivoli, is a wonderful picture, viewed from any angle. Whether or not the production will become popular is another question. As a masterpiece of a master producer, it is bound to create a sensation. But as a story with a popular appeal—possibly not. And yet, if it be true that "one touch of Nature makes the whole world kin," there will be found in this simple story of human live and suffering the touch that will arouse the sympathy and compassion of people everywhere.

The story itself is common enough no doubt. It was written by Major Geoffrey Moss of the British army, and is the appealing cry of humanity against the frightfulness of war — and the horrors that follow in the wake of the big guns.

Neil Hamilton

Whatever of appeal the original story may have possessed (we have not read it) it assuredly lost nothing in the hands of the producer. Probably no other man in the film industry could do what Griffith has done with the material at hand—stark, naked, ugly poverty and national chaos—and make of it a beautiful love idyl.

The story is laid in the country that suffered most from the late war—Germany, the locale being the suburbs of Berlin; the time—the days immediately following the collapse of the government and the annihilation of the money standard.

Graphically, grippingly, silently, we are shown the long, long line of hollow-eyed, sunken-cheeked people, standing in line to buy a little bit of almost priceless meat after months of a diet of nothing but turnips. Few persons in the line get a chance to buy the meat before the almost hourly deflation of the mark has reduced their pittance to a valueless handful of paper.

The return of Hans (Neil Hamilton) from [illegible] the war is [illegible] when one speaks of it, just the return of one soldier among millions to what was once his home. His health ruined by the hardships of war, Hans enters the barren, sorbid hut where his family await him.

Griffith has made of this scene a never-to-be-forgotten picture of what awaited the German soldier after the war. No flying banners, no triumphal march, no waving hands and cheering people. Grim tragedy, hopelessness, starvation greeted Hans as they greeted other German soldiers—victims of a carnage in which they had no choice or voice.

Hans makes a heroic struggle for life and love, upheld and strengthened by Inga—his childhood sweetheart. Carol Dempster as Inga gives a characterization that leaves absolutely nothing to be desired, while Neil Hamilton, remembered for his work in America, is handsome, manly and a finished actor.

Helen Lowell as the grandmother is wonderful, as is Erville Alderson playing the part of the professor, Hans's father.

For the matter of that, the cast is strikingly perfect—which almost goes without saying since Griffith's is the master-mind behind the performers.

Too much cannot be said of the directing. There is not a suspicion of melodrama, not the wink of an eye-lash too long-drawn out. Not so much as a hair's breadth of miscalculation in the strain on the heartstrings. It is truth laid bare and bleeding before your eyes.

The picture ought to run for years—for as long as it may take to arouse humanity to the state of mind where they shall declare, "War Shall Be [illegible]

CAROL DEMPSTER AND HELEN LOWELL

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK REVIEW
DEC 6 1924

Mr. Griffith Again Gives of His Best In His Latest, "Isn't Life Wonderful?"

His Simple Naturalistic Methods Produce a Heart-Stirring Picture of the Struggles and Romance of a Polish Refugee Family in Berlin After the War—Praise for Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton

THE CAST

Inga ..... Carol Dempster
Hans, son of Professor ..... Neil Hamilton
Grandmother ..... Helen Lowell
The Professor ..... Erville Alderson
The Brother ..... Frank Puglia
The Aunt ..... Marcia Harris
Strolling Player ..... Lupino Lane
The Hungry Workers .....
Paul Rhekopf and Count von Schact, of the Deutches Theatre in Berlin

Story by ..... Major Geoffrey Moss
Directed by ..... D. W. Griffith

There has been such a deluge of remarkable photoplays in the past two months, including "He Who Gets Slapped," "Forbidden Paradise," "The Red Lily," etc., that the extreme commendability of D. W. Griffiths latest achievement, "Isn't Life Wonderful," does not come upon us as a great surprise. We have become rather spoiled, as it were, and have begun to take exceptional pictures as a matter of course. In fact, after reviewing such superior film achievements as the afore mentioned, we are almost saying to ourself, "isn't a movie critic's life wonderful?"

"In "Isn't Life Wonderful" Mr. Griffith fully realizes all he set out to achieve. Through the use of Major Geffrey Moss' story, concerning the starvation and food riot period in Germany immediately after the World War, Mr. Griffith has succeeded in screening the most convincing "bit of life" that it has been our good fortune to view. It is without any straining for artificial—dramatic or comic—effects.

"Isn't Life Wonderful" tells of the struggle of a family of Polish refugees who settled down just outside of Berlin at the close of the war, a grim background for a really charming little romance. The cast was particularly well chosen, Carroll Dempster and Neil Hamilton, being featured for the first time in their already enviable screen careers, each giving his or her very finest characterizations to date as Inga and Hans, the lovers. In the support are splendidly selected types, including Lupino Lane, who is outrageously amusing in a priceless comedy role of a strolling player, Helen Lowell, Erville Alderson, Frank Puglia, Marcia Harris, Paul Rhekopf, Count von Schact and Walter Plimmer, Jr., who was wisely cast as the clean-cut, good-natured American lad, the only American role in the entire picture, who brings the first real happiness to the Polish family—through his kindness and generosity. "Isn't Life Wonderful" moves at a very even pace from start to finish—working steadily and naturally to an intense, highly dramatic, [illegible] life-like, climax.

Our one criticism of "Isn't Life Wonderful" is its title and the re-iteration of that phrase at intervals throughout the picture. Somehow the name is misleading and the line is not in keeping or suggestive of the unusual quality of the substance of the picture. But the scenery and the exquisite photography!!! indeed there is so much to commend concerning "Isn't Life Wonderful" that words fail us and we miss it! ALICE CARROLL

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 98 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Morning Telegraph Journal 12/4/24

Reviewing Films on Broadway

By QUINN MARTIN

New York, December 1.

"ISN'S LIFE WONDERFUL"

A film version of the story by Major Geoffrey Moss. Directed by D. W. Griffith. Interior scenes photographed in Germany.

The Cast

Inga ..... Carol Dempster
Hans, son of Professor ..... Neil Hamilton
Grandmother ..... Helen Lowell
The Professor ..... Erville Alderson
The Brother ..... Frank Puglia
The Aunt ..... Marcia Harris
Strolling Player ..... Lupino Lane
The Hungry Workers Paul Rhekopf and Count von Schact
Of the Deutches Theater in Berlin.

INNOVATION tramps the screen at the Rivoli. The new film play by Mr. Griffith dares to be intelligent. This in itself is sufficient. And still its leading woman gives one of the finest performances I have ever seen in pictures. It may be the very best. For these reasons "Isn't Life Wonderful" is a remarkable and distinguished work.

In it, the man from Mamaroneck proves his genius embraces also versatility. As far removed in method as sun and earth is this latest intimate drama from such as "America" and "The Birth of a Nation." And yet with those who go with him here on a romantic tour of pitiable, poignant tragedy the rush of emotional response is sure to be felt.

Pace is at its best. We see the terror of hunger in a public place for some sheaf from the free in the hospital chest of 1918. Bread, sheaf, [illegible] are fighting for crumbs. Women and children, their faces pinched with want, wander aimlessly over a barren land.

And before these pleas of anguish [illegible] the hearts of the men who [illegible] and rob them of their [illegible] quality of a [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible].

But I have [illegible] that Griffith has done [illegible] and [illegible] that enough to make the picture [illegible].

[illegible] the [illegible] screen. And [illegible] it is to be remembered they [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NASHVILLE (TENN.) TENNESSEAN
DECEMBER 14, 1924

GRIFFITH WINS MORE LAURELS

"Isn't Life Wonderful" Accorded Unstinted Praise By Many Critics.

D. W. Griffith's reputation as the world's greatest director, apparently has been further strengthened by his success with "Isn't Life Wonderful," his new picture made abroad.

Such praise as the critics have given this work makes one of the highest points in this director's successful career. Despite the fact he defied all convention of the screen, tossed away all effort at plot, kept his hero and heroine without even a new hat or pair of shoes; didn't even let them visit a beautiful "int rior" as the movies so love yet he has scored one of the greatest successes in recent years.

Here is what some of the critics have to say:

"We can safely say that never has there been so absorbingly human a drama put upon the screen. It rises to such heights of truth and beauty and power that it far surpasses all the make-believe tragedies and brainstorms which have so far appeared on the screen."
"E. S. COLLING in Evening Post."

Beggars Description

"'Isn't Life Wonderful,' almost beggars description. Nothing but a simple story, yet it held us in a vise-like grip and carried us exalted and wilted through the whole gamut of emotions. Its very freedom from screen trickery or false pathos lifted it to heights that seldom have been reached even by Griffith himself. Carol Dempster swayed us for two hours as we never before have been swayed."
GEORGE GERHARD, in Evening World.

"An entirely new treatment of screen drama is 'Isn't Life Wonderful.' It is the best picture that has come from D. W. Griffith's hands [illegible] when we have said that we have said about everything. The plot is life itself. The great climax is where the little family is given potatoes. There is more drama wrapped up in that one scene than in 50 battles, 70 rides to the rescue or 100 stories of blackmail and murder."
MILDRED SPAIN, Daily News.

"D. W. Griffith again reveals his wizardry. It seems almost incredible, yet out of homely raw material Griffith has evoked such marvelous, heart-plumbing effects that the very potatoes must have been crying their eyes out. Griffith, greater than ever, elicits a furore with the flourishing of liverwurst in this film. There is a pulse and a life to the picture provided by its note of hope triumphant."
FRANK VREELAND, Telegram-Mail.

Prayer of Thanks

"Picture fans will breathe prayer of thanks to Mr. Griffith. Cynics will brush away their tears and feel as they did before they lost their illusions and their hair. Because it isn't a story—it's life itself. Carol Dempster as Inga seems inspired."
ROBB PELSWICK, Eve. Journal.

"D. W. Griffith, the Homer of the screen, has given us a tremendously powerful epic."
FRED McISAAC, Evening Bulletin.

"D. W. Griffith has again pioneered the way and given us the most truthful delineation of character I have ever seen. Done with a delicacy that indicates stronger than words the great genius that created this seemingly little tale. Unless one is a moron or an imbecile he will feel this tale. Carol Dempster's performance will be mentioned as one of the things to rival as motion pictures pictures."
LOUELLA O. PARSONS in N. Y. American.

"Why film fans so intelligent as to a remarkable and distinguished work. Carol Dempster gives one of the finest performances I have seen [illegible] in N. Y. world.

Remarkable Offering

"A remarkable film offering—enough to create another [illegible] in the Globe Theatre, N. Y. [illegible]

"'Isn't Life Wonderful' is a [illegible] in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
EXHIBITORS HERALD, CHICAGO
DECEMBER 13, 1924

Big Four to Maintain Twenty-Six Exchanges

"Bagdad" Will Go Into Picture Houses Immediately; Chaplin Stays With United Artists

"We want the exhibitors to make money. Make that emphatic!"

It was Joseph M. Schenck speaking and it was his answer to the theatre owners who have expressed fear, through the pages of the Herald, that the Schenck-United Artists merger will operate to the disadvantage of the smaller exhibitors.

"Thief" to Go Into Picture Theatres Immediately

The chairman of the board of the amalgamated company continued: "In the future United Artists will not roadshow pictures. 'The Thief of Bagdad' is being taken from the road for immediate release to the regular motion picture houses. Pictures belong in picture theatres, not in the legitimate houses, for it is the picture houses that have built up the industry and given us our revenue to continue operation.

"We will probably open some of our pictures on Broadway at $2 top, but that policy will not be general. We will go to the theatres of the country selling each picture individually. For instance, say we go into a town with three or four houses. One theatre can book one of our attractions, another another, and so on.

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK

"The only pictures which we will handle are those that can stand alone and sell individually. There will be no block booking.

"Artists who will contribute to our schedule are Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Ernst Lubitsch, Charles Chaplin and D. W. Griffith. Norma and Constance Talmadge will not send their pictures through United Artists until the termination of their present contract. Of course, all stars with whom I am associated will eventually go through the merged organization."

"Buster Keaton?" Mr. Schenck was asked.

"Draw your own conclusions," he answered.

Griffith Will Return

Concerning Mr. Griffith's relations with the reorganized corporation, Mr. Schenck said that the producer's contract with Paramount called for only three attractions, and that after completion of that contract he would return to the United Artists' fold.

Mr. Schenck gave this interview to a Herald representative while in Chicago last week en route East. Final details of the merger had just been completed on the Coast, including the acquisition of Mr. Chaplin's signature. The chairman of the merged company is now in the East acquainting himself with the United Artists distribution system.

"We are not only going to maintain our exchange system, but we are going to increase the number of branches to twenty-six," Mr. Schenck said in answer to the many rumors regarding the company's distribution plans.

"On every picture we will have 250 prints. With that number of prints in twenty-six exchanges we expect to play all bookings within say fifteen months. Certainly not much longer. The picture then can be placed on the shelf, and after five or six years it will be ripe for reissues. This policy will permit the smaller theatres to play the pictures while they are still virtually new."

Totals 10,000 Bookings

At this juncture Mr. Schenck cited some interesting figures relative to bookings. Up to the present time, he said, "Smilin' Through" had 9,900 bookings, while "His Majesty, the American" has had 10,000. In this connection, Mr. Schenck said that he did not know how many of these were return bookings, as his records showed only the total.

The merger, as Mr. Schenck sees it, will offer the independent producer of meritorious pictures an outlet for his product. And Mr. Schenck is confident also that the exhibitors will benefit financially.

In the Schenck party were Norma Talmadge, Sidney Franklin and Lola Bara, sister of Theda Bara, and Miss Talmadge's traveling companion. After conferences in New York between Mr. Schenck and Hiram Abrams, president of the company, the party will go abroad.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
FILM DAILY, NEW YORK
NOVEMBER 30, 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
56 WARREN ST. NEW YORK
8 BOSWORTH ST. BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW HAVEN (Conn.) REGISTER
DEC. 21, 1924

Cosmo Hamilton comedy now holding forth at the 39th St. theater.

The new David W. Griffith picture "Isn't Life Wonderful?" has created a lively discussion among critics and leaders in the motion picture industry. While there seems to be little doubt that in certain scenes he has achieved an artistic triumph equal to anything he has done in the past, the fact remains that the picture does not appeal to the American public and is apparently a box-office failure.

Boiled down to its essentials, the new picture is little more than an appeal to the American public for the lower classes of Germany, and while this may move many, there are very many more who are not ready to forget 1914 and the four years that followed.

But out of all the turmoil caused by the picture, one salient fact emerges, and that is that Neil Hamilton has proven beyond the shadow of doubt that he is as good as the cinema has. His characterization in the picture, that of the struggling son of a German professor, is declared by almost every recognized critic to be one of the screen's masterpieces.

Carol Dempster plays opposite to Mr. Hamilton, and it is her final summary that gives the picture its name. After she and her lover have slaved and starved for a year to save enough to marry on, they are set upon by robbers and stripped of their savings. Turning to the man she cannot now marry, she says: "I still have you, so isn't life wonderful?"

Bronx N.Y. Home 12-21-24 News

D. W. Griffith is reversing the rules of showdom by seeking a legitimate theater in which to continue the Broadway run of his latest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" which has been seen on Broadway at the Rivoli and Rialto theaters for two weeks. The picture was admitted to be a worthy departure from the regular movie trade goods, but was considered a poor prospect financially. This was before it was shown, however, and now an indefinite run is planned.

Richmond, Va Times 12-21-24 Desk

CRITICS PRAISE NEW GRIFFITH FILM

D. W. Griffith's reputation as the world's greatest director, apparently has been further strengthened by his success with "Isn't Life Wonderful," his new picture made abroad.

Such praise as the critics have given this work makes one of the highest points in this director's successful career. Despite the fact he defied all convention of the screen, tossed away all efforts at plot, kept his hero and heroine without even a new hat or pair of shoes; didn't even let them visit a beautiful "interior" as the movies so love, yet he has scored one of the greatest successes in recent years.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
FILM DAILY, NEW YORK
NOVEMBER 30, 1924

Newspaper Opinions

"Isn't Life Wonderful"—Daily Star Sheet

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER
DEC 1 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM BALTIMORE AMERICAN
DEC 1 1924

ON THE SCREEN

By Quinn Martin

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—An energetic press book publisher has written in asking me to name the ten best motion pictures of the last year. I have replied by sending the issue. The best I can do is to oblige him by telling merely what film plays I have enjoyed the most. This is easy. That is, it was easy up to about the eighth. After that it was a matter of no great certainty. No more than eight stand out as being undeniably good.

In that little list of twenty-odd I should place "Isn't Life Wonderful" in its [illegible] place), "The Marriage Circle," "A Woman of Paris," "The Humming Bird," "Sherry," "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," "Hot Water" and "The Iron Horse." These are not set down in order of my preference. Although the unexpected success of Chaplin's film play is in my judgment the finest thing I have seen in the year, the other two somehow I have forgotten already. I think one was "Isn't Life Wonderful."

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM CHICAGO DAILY NEWS
DEC 27 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER
DEC 1 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Star
Lincoln Neb
12-28-24

Griffith Has Masterpiece—D. W. Griffith's latest effort, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is said to exceed anything he has done heretofore. It is a story of real life, without much [illegible], and without a lot of expensive sets. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton are the featured players. The picture was filmed in Europe.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
SALT LAKE CITY (UTAH) NEWS
DECEMBER 27, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful" Scores Great Success

D. W. Griffith's reputation as the world's greatest director, apparently has been further strengthened by his success with "Isn't Life Wonderful," his new picture made abroad.

Such praise as the critics have given this work makes one of the highest points in this director's successful career. Despite the fact he defied all convention of the screen, tossed away all efforts at plot, kept his hero and heroine without even a new hat or pair of shoes; didn't even let them visit a beautiful "interior" as the movies so love, yet he has scored one of the greatest successes in recent years.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Atlanta (Ga.) Journal 12-21-24

"Isn't Life Wonderful?"

POVERTY-STRICKEN Germany in the black days that followed on the heels of the World war is the dramatic background for D. W. Griffith's latest photoplay, "Isn't Life Wonderful," at the Rivoli this week. And against this background he has fashioned a simple, tenuous tale, that does little more than record the sufferings of a Polish family that got dumped into a dinky suburb of Berlin shortly after the close of the late quarrel that occurred in our none too well regulated family of nations.

Mr. Griffith's set of characters are the various members of the house of a German professor—a man of letters who was reduced by the war to the somewhat menial task (for him) of correcting examination papers for the apple-cheeked Hans and Gretchens of a school in the small fry town of Copernick, Germany. The rest of the professor's family works heroically, too, but they are gripped by that poverty that descended on thousands of persons in Germany during the periods when the truly German mark fell heavily, and when food riots were so common that one didn't stop to notice them any more than a resident of Hollywood would stop to look at a troupe of movie actors.

Mr. Griffith, it can be seen, lapses back into the manner in which he produced "The White Rose," which, if you remember, was devoid of story and filled to the brim with "characterization." This latest effort is an improvement over that worthy but slightly tiresome photoplay, but there is room for further improvement along these same meritorious lines.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Chicago (Ill.) News 12/27/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK ENQUIRER
DECEMBER 31, 1924

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM THE MOTION PICTURE WORLD
DECEMBER 27, 1924

GRIFFITH REWARDED

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Indianapolis (Ind.) News 12/27/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM WASHINGTON STAR
DEC 21 1924

Griffith's new picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is said to be suffering from a new complaint. The public gets so interested in it that audiences remain from one showing through the next. [illegible] about it.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Albany (N.Y.) Press 12/27/24

PHOTOPLAYS AND PLAYERS

David W. Griffith's latest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is said to be suffering from a new complaint. The public gets so interested in it that audiences remain from one showing through the next. [illegible] about it.

PHOTOPLAYS AND PLAYERS. David W. Griffith's latest picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful," after having been exhibited as two regular motion picture theatres in New York, will be taken to a legitimate Broadway house for a special run at higher prices, if plans under consideration at Griffith headquarters, it will be the first time such a procedure has been undertaken for a picture.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
DEC 14 1924
COLUMBUS (O.) STATE-JOURNAL

Views on the News

WHEN is a motion picture success not a motion picture success? The answer to that riddle is, "When the success is an artistic triumph."

Very often, in trade papers, one will notice a criticism something like this: "This picture, one of the finest ever made, will probably have no box office appeal, except among the high-brows."

Such a picture has just been released in New York. It is D. W. Griffith's "Isn't Life Wonderful?" made from the short story by Major Geoffrey Moss, an English army officer. The story tells a simple tale of the hardships of common everyday life in German yafter the war.

A few years ago production of such a picture would have brought a visit from the vigilantes or General Palmer's secret service organization. Today it is accepted in the spirit in which it was made.

It just happens that we read the short story when it first appeared. It is the story of two young German lovers who are terribly poor. The boy has been secretly raising a patch of potatoes in a hidden lot. He reveals his wealth (the potatoes) to his sweetheart and she immediately becomes worried for fear the potatoes will be found and stolen by their hungry fellow townsmen. So the two set out one day for the hidden potato patch and dig up all the tubers and start to cart them away to a safer place.

While on their way down a road they are set upon by villagers who demand the potatoes. A fight follows and before long the mob has departed, leaving the boy and girl with the empty potato cart, their savings blasted.

It's then the girl turns to the boy, with the hope of youth in her breast, and asks, "Isn't life wonderful? We still have each other."

A simple, homely story of everyday life, with no climaxes and no great mob scenes and little exaggeration. The critics acclaim it as one of the greatest pictures ever made. But, they say, the public won't like it.

Thus the producer is between the cirtic and the public, and he can't satisfy both. If he makes a palpable "box office attraction" the critics score him for debasing the art of the motion pictures. If he makes what the critics want, the public stays away from the picture. There are exceptions, of course, for instance, "Birth of a Nation" and "The Covered Wagon."

Marshall Neilan, who has contributed several original ideas to the art or industry, whichever term you wish to apply to his business of entertaining the public, has hit upon a novel idea. With "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" he decided to furnish a happy ending and an unhappy ending. The theater manager can use either one he chooses.

However, we question whether this will help the situation much, for where in the world will you find a motion picture theater manager who will substitute the unhappy for the happy ending?

As long as the majority of movie fans want to see the lives of their heroines preserved; as long as they demand the happy fadeout at the end of the picture, so long will critics have to write of such productions as "Isn't Life Wonderful?" that they are beautiful but will have no box office pull.

THE PLAYGOER.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
MOVING PICTURE WORLD (N. Y.)
DECEMBER 13, 1924

[Editor's Note—It is the purpose of this new department to make a brief record of new ideas in presentation on Broadway. Every new angle in presentation, which seems to meet the approval of the audience will be set down and described. No doubt other showmen in other cities are helping their box offices with original ideas. Every theatre owner is invited to send reports of interesting and successful new ideas to the Moving Picture World, when full credit will, of course, be given.]

IN the presentation of "ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL" at the RIVOLI, the compiler of the musical score has matched every original and exquisite thought in the picture with an equally original and exquisite musical setting. Considerations of space preclude the publication of the entire musical score, though the temptation to do this is great. I think that he has rendered a distinct and necessary service to the picture, which deserves at least some little mention in detail. It is necessary to point out at the beginning that "ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL" is emphatically a picture of moods and characterizations, and not at all what exhibitors call a picture of action. Indeed, one might say it is a succession of very fine scenes, resembling and strongly suggesting animated paintings. In arranging the musical score the compiler no doubt viewed the picture in that light, and selected his music accordingly. The reaction of the audience to the musical accompaniment was obviously favorable. The crowds in the RIVOLI, it seemed to me, caught every single point and responded heartily. The appeal the picture makes to the sympathy of the audience is well sustained by the music. MENDELSSOHN'S "LORELEI" ran like a "lietmotif" through all the pathetic scenes. It proved particularly pleasing in two places, where the lovers are alone in the silence of the night and where the grandmother presents the girl to her lover in her own old bridal gown made over for the occasion. The sharp contrasts in which the film abounds have received an adequate musical medium in every instance in which they occur. The rapid changes from pathos to violence, and back again from violence to pathos, were aided by well-selected, dreamy and sentimental strains, quickly changing to strong and alarming agitatos. The humorous scenes, without which the entertainment value of the picture might have suffered badly, are particularly well taken care of by the musical score. Well known and simple GERMAN airs, lively waltzes and snatches of dances, quite filled the bill, and were evidently much enjoyed by the audience. A whimsical theme has been invented by the compiler for the diverting figure of the professor. It never fails to arouse the audience to an extra burst of merriment. One thing more should be mentioned. MR. GRIFFITH is constantly trying to emphasize the beauty of his scenic backgrounds even to the moods of sky and forest and river. The great opportunities for getting the right kind of an echo in the orchestra were utilized to the fullest by the musical settings. The prologue, consisting of music, singing and dancing, evoked much applause. A woman sings the first bars of "THE LORELEI." No words are used but the effect is splendid. A chorus in English, taken from a popular song, and a pretty dance by three girls, ended the prologue.

Journal News
Racine, Wis.
12-13-24

THE RACINE JOURNAL-NEWS, SATURDAY AFTERNOON, DE

Griffith's New Production Is Work of Art

(By CHARLES A. COLLINS.)

NEW YORK.—"Close beyond our tears is a smile that justifies our courage, and makes life wonderful."

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is a story to put any [illegible] the supreme test. D. W. Griffith has every reason in the world to be exceedingly proud of his latest achievement. From beginning to end, this is a work of pure art. Its development is so natural and smooth that the great length of the picture never manifests itself until you note the time at its conclusion. And if you see this film more than once, you will find more beauty than at a single visit. It is food for your brain.

The plot concerns the experiences of Polish refugees in Germany during the famine of 1923. Hans is the son of a professor, and Inga is a distant relative who has been with the family some years. Hans has a job in a shipbuilding plant; his brother earns a small wage as waiter in a restaurant; the old professor receives only a meager sum, while Inga works for almost nothing in a store. The aged mother is an invalid. But in spite of all the hardships, there is a certain air of contentment over the little group.

Hans and Inga are in love, a fact that is apparent to all the others. Unknown to anyone else, Hans begins to construct a tiny house with odd bits of lumber he picks up. And when the shipbuilding plant offers employees some ground on which to grow vegetables, Hans plants potatoes on his patch. As his work on the house progresses, the potatoes begin to sprout, and finally, both house and potatoes are ready. Yes, sir, potatoes were very dear at the time, and Hans figured to have enough for his family. Inga and himself all winter, and enough left over to sell, for which he would receive a tidy sum to start housekeeping with. The plant is some distance out, and one night Hans and Inga start for the place with a cart, which they gleefully fill with the precious potatoes. But on the way home, they are attacked by a gang of ruffians who mistake them for food profiteers, and who make away with all the potatoes. Inga, however, is philosophical, and as she sits there on the ground with the man she loves, gazing into the darkness, the moon breaks through. Inga: "After all, I've got you, and you've got me. * * * The moon—look! Oh, Hans! Isn't life wonderful?"

Carol Dempster plays Inga. This is the little girl of whom I said after seeing her in one picture, that she would one day be my favorite screen actress. She is superb. Neil Hamilton, whom I always consider my own screen "find," gives a sincere performance as Hans. Erville Alderson, who used to play about in the old stock days out in Kansas City, is delightful as the absent-minded professor, and Lupino Lane proves that he can win laughs as well on the screen as on the stage. As a matter of fact, he was roundly applauded by the audience.

Jacques Gruesberg, associate conductor of the Mark Strand symphony orchestra, following his success with the theme song, "Love and the Rose," for "Monsieur Beaucaire," wrote "Remember Me" and "The Valentino Tango" for "A Sainted Devil."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
SYRACUSE (N. Y.) TELEGRAM
DECEMBER 11, 1924

'D. W.' AT HIS BEST IN NEW PICTURE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—David Wark Griffith, who blazed the trail ten years ago and gave the world the first significant historical drama, has again pioneered the way and given us the most truthful delineation of characters in "Isn't Life Wonderful" that I have ever seen on the screen.

In addition to its honesty and sincerity and its absence from all artificiality, "Isn't Life Wonderful" is done with a delicacy that indicates stronger than any mere words the great genius that directed the course of this seemingly simple little tale.

Mr. Griffith in a speech made at a review said that he felt he must ask forgiveness for "Isn't Life Wonderful," which had no thrilling rescues with dashing heroes riding to save beautiful women at the eleventh hour, but he said he loved this picture better than anything he has ever made. He intimated that it might not make as much money as some of his other productions.

I beg pardon for contradicting my old friend, but he is wrong. "Isn't Life Wonderful" has an appeal that is stronger and more potent than any of Mr. Griffith's other productions, no matter how magnificent nor how beautiful they have been. If he really believes that "Isn't Life Wonderful" will not make money, again I must contradict him.

* * *

UNLESS one is a moron or an utter imbecile, he will feel the tale of the poverty-stricken Polish family starving to death in Germany is so real that it hurts. Their hunger is so aptly pictured that I, who had just eaten a large dinner, felt I must have food. Such truth will be appreciated by all who really love motion pictures. Truthfulness is always acceptable, and this story by Major Geoffrey Moss of the British army is as if one had peeped into the windows and seen the anguish of Inga's grandmother and Hans' father.

I feel words fail me when I come to Inga. I wish that I had saved some of the adjectives that I have used for less worthy occasions. Carol Dempster, as Inga, is so wonderful I sat rooted to my chair unable to believe this girl, who was just a little above fair in the past, had given a performance that will be mentioned among the fine things as long as motion pictures endure.

Miss Dempster's beautiful curls were sacrificed to the character of Inga, and she wore her hair drawn back in a knot and without any attempt to look beautiful. She was superb.

Neil Hamilton, too, as Hans, the unhappy Polish lad, surpasses himself. He seems inspired by the Griffith magic, as does Lupino Lane, who is a joy as the doting landlord. In fact, all the players are much more than satisfactory—they are excellent—and that includes Helen Lowell, as the grandmother; Erville Alderson, as the father; Marcia Harris, as the mother, and Frank Puglia, as Theodor. Hawkins needs there to found more perfect types than in the three hungry workmen. They are really laborers, who had not eaten during the war years.

The scenes in Dave Work Griffith's at his best, and his best is not to be surpassed by any [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
EXHIBITORS HERALD, CHICAGO
DECEMBER 27, 1924

United Artists

WITH the premiere run of D. W. Griffith's new film "Isn't Life Wonderful?" at the Rivoli theatre in New York City, a flood of favorable criticism was loosened that, according to United Artists, surpasses any reception given by the press to any recent Griffith picture. Griffith is hailed by the metropolitan newspapers as a wizard of a new technique as powerful as revealed in any of his melodramic successes although his method is revolutionary as compared with his former handling of screen situations. The picture is hailed as something "revolutionary", an "innovation" and is called "the very best picture that has come from Griffith's hands." One paper declares that the production "almost beggars descriptions."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN
DEC 7

MY DEAR MISS PARSONS:

Just a few words I would like to say concerning Carol Dempster.

In the closing of your write-up apropos of D. W. Griffith's latest, you said of Miss Dempster: "I was unprepared for the improvement in her—it is really a miracle."

I do not pretend the perspicacity of a critic, Miss Parsons, so I really fail to comprehend the justice of that statement. "I was unprepared for the improvement in her"—did you mean that you considered her chances for advancement as hopeless? Certainly that was the verdict the thought conveyed to my mind.

Miss Dempster in the few pictures she participated showed more sincerety and marked ability than most of these new grimaces that breezed in on the tail of publicity. Carol (I take the liberty) blends a sweet personality with an attractive portrayal which is impregnable under strictest scan. In her work one may feel a trace of self-consciousness, but she overcomes that with her sincerety and honesty of purpose.

Of course, I do not maintain that she is a finished artiste, but I do not contend that she has arrived and mentally reached her peak with the best of them. And I will predict she is to be one of the [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] not as a [illegible] but as an artist. [illegible] sincerely, [illegible] VAN GRAN

Editor's Note: I read your letter with much interest. If you have ever read any of my other reviews or written pieces you will know that I have always found Carol Dempster a most promising actress, but I had not prepared for the marked improvement in her.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
New York Bulletin
12-7-24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 6 WARREN STREET BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM BALTIMORE SUN

Think Our Plays Have Too Much Plot

Foreign Critics Believe America Will Produce Fine Plays When New Method Griffith Is Trying Is Adopted

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 6 WARREN STREET BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM PEOPLE

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 15 VESEY STREET BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK EVENING

CLIPPING FROM Salem, Ohio

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Atlantic City, N.J. 12-20-24 Union

ARRIVE LATE AND ART WILL SUFFER

D. W. Griffith Says the Audiences Must Be on Time

"The motion picture will never be able to take its rightful place among the arts until some arrangement is devised whereby patrons of motion picture theatres are educated into arriving in time to see a picture through from the beginning," states D. W. Grifith, picture director.

"With the old-fashioned type of picture each scene was complete in its way. It didnt make any difference whether one saw the middle or the end first and the beginning last. It was a series of incidents strung together, and the order in which they were strung mattered comparatively little.

"In the telling of a story, such as 'Isn't Life Wonderful!' however, there is one beginning from which we rise with a slow, steady movement to the climax. The atmosphere of the early scenes prepares the audience for the later scenes. There can be no appreciation of the later scenes until one has seen the early scenes.

"To try and appreciate this picture by seeing the middle or end of the film first and the beginning last is like trying to enjoy a symphony played backward or eat a banquet which starts with dessert and works back to soup.

"In this picture we are dealing with the drama of life itself. We have dispensed with theatrical effects and are dealing with the naked human heart. It is told with the utmost simplicity; and that very simplicity demands that the audience be in a receptive and a sympathetic mood.

"A dramatist achieves such a mood in exactly the way I have tried to achieve it in this picture. But if his audience came into the theatre at the beginning of his second or his third act and then, after sitting through these sections of the play unprepared and unresponsive, waited for the first act to be played over again, his entire play would be ruined for them.

"That is why I say that the real heights of artistry in motion pictures can never be reached until pictures are so presented that the audience watches a picture from beginning to end.

"Of course, there will always be pictures made which are made on the unit-scene idea, because there will always be a demand for them as there is for vaudeville and for burlesque. But consistent artistry may be expected in our cinemas only when audiences and producers bring to the screen the dignity it deserves by arranging things so that audiences recognize the advisability of watching a picture through from beginning to end, and not of regarding it as a vaudeville or a burlesque into which they may drop at any time to enjoy a succession of more or less unrelated incidents thrown on a screen."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Providence R.I. 12-14-24 Journal

Mr. Griffith Would Have People Arrive at Pictures on Time.—Will Help Movies as an Art, Says Producer.—"Warning Shadows" is Called Exceptional Photoplay.

The late-comer in the theatre is often the cause for inked and injured managers who from time to time conduct a fitful war against him, sometimes in interviews, sometimes by advertisements warning that no one will be seated after the rise of the curtain for the first act. It's only when they deem their drama a super serious production that this happens and seldom do they stick to their guns. Only in the musical recitals and symphony concerts does the policy of the closed door hold fairly general sway.

Now comes Mr. Griffith inveighing, and would raise the movies a step higher in art by educating picture patrons to arriving in time. "The motion picture will never be able to take its rightful place among the arts," he says, "until some arrangement is devised" to break up the informal custom of dropping in at any time. "With the old-fashioned type of picture," he is quoted as saying, "each scene was complete in its way. It didn't make any difference whether one saw the middle or the end first and the beginning last. It was a series of incidents strung together, and the order in which they were strung mattered comparatively little.

"In the telling of a story, such as 'Isn't Life Wonderful!' however, there is one beginning from which we rise with a slow, steady movement to the climax. The atmosphere of the early scenes prepares the audiences for the later scenes. There can be no appreciation of the later scenes until one has seen the early scenes.

"To try and appreciate this picture by seeing the middle or end of the film first and the beginning last is like trying to enjoy a symphony played backward or eat at a banquet which starts with desserts and works back to soup.

"In this picture we are dealing with the drama of life itself. We have dispensed with theatrical effects and are dealing with the naked human heart. It is told with the utmost simplicity; and that very simplicity demands that the audience be in a receptive and sympathetic mood.

"A dramatist achieves such a mood in exactly the way I have tried to achieve it in this picture. But if his audience came into the theatre at the beginning of his second or his third act, and then, after sitting through these sections of the play unprepared and unresponsive, waited for the first act to be played over again, his entire play would be ruined for them.

"That is why I say that the real heights of artistry in motion pictures can never be reached until pictures are so presented that the audience watches a picture from beginning to end.

"Of course, there will always be pictures made which are made on the unit-scene idea, because there will always be a demand for them as there is for vaudeville and for burlesque. But consistent artistry may be expected in our cinemas only when audiences and producers bring to the screen the dignity it deserves by arranging things so that the audiences recognize the advisability of watching a picture through from beginning to end, and not of regarding it as a vaudeville or a burlesque into which they may drop at any time to enjoy a succession of more or less unrelated incidents thrown on a screen."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREA
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM DEC 21 1924
DAYTON (OHIO) NEWS

Audiences Must Arrive In Time For Film Shows

NEW YORK, Dec. 20. — "The motion picture will never be able to take its rightful place among the arts until some arrangement is devised whereby patrons of motion picture theaters are educated into arriving in time to see a picture through from the beginning," declared D. W. Griffith in an interview.

"With the old-fashioned type of picture each scene was complete in its way. It didn't make any difference whether one saw the middle or the end first and the beginning last. It was a series of incidents strung together, and the order in which they were strung mattered comparatively little.

"In the telling of a story, such as 'Isn't Life Wonderful!' however, there is one beginning from which we rise with a slow, steady movement to the climax. The atmosphere of the early scenes prepares the audience for the later scenes. There can be no appreciation of the later scene until one has seen the early scenes.

"To try and appreciate this picture by seeing the middle or end of the film first and th ebeginning last is like trying to enjoy a symphony played backward or eat a banquet which starts with dessert and works back to soup.

"In this picture we are dealing with the drama of life itself. We have dispensed with theatrical effects and are dealing with the naked human heart. It is told with the utmost simplicity; and that very simplicity demands that the audience be in a receptive and a sympathetic mood.

"A dramatist achieves such a mood in exactly the way I have tried to achieve it in this picture. But if his audience came into the theater at the beginning of his second or third act, and then, after sitting through these sections of the play unprepared and unresponsive, waited for the first act to be played over again, his entire play would be ruined for them.

"That is why I say that the real heights of artistry in motion pictures can never be reached until pictures are so presented that the audience watches a picture from beginning to end.

"Of course, there will always be pictures made which are made on the unit-scene idea, because there will always be a demand for them as there is for vaudeville and for burlesque. But consistent artistry may be expected in our cinemas only when audiences and producers bring to the screen the dignity it deserves by arranging things so that audiences resognize the advisability of watching a picture through from beginning to end, and not of regarding it as a vaudeville or a burlesque into which they may drop at any time to enjoy a succession of more or less unrelated incidents thrown on a screen."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK POST

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM DEC 7 1924
NEW YORK TIMES

Mr. Griffith on Audiences

DAVID W. GRIFFITH is accustomed to seeing the presentation of his pictorial efforts in a special theatre. His current film, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" was presented at the Rivoli, and the coming of the audience in the midst of screening the picture obviously irritated Mr. Griffith, who at once declared that motion pictures could not be judged as an art unless some arrangement were devised whereby cinema patrons were educated into arriving in time to see the film from the beginning.

"With the old-fashioned type of picture each scene was complete in its way," said Mr. Griffith. "It didn't make any difference whether one saw the middle or the end first and the introductory chapter last. It was a series of incidents strung together, and the order in which they were shown mattered little.

"In the telling of such a story as 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' however, there is the beginning from which there is a slow but steady movement toward the climax. The atmosphere of the early scenes prepares the audiences for the later ones. There can be no real appreciation of the latter scenes until one has seen the beginning of the picture. To attempt to appreciate this picture by viewing the end or the middle first and the beginning last is almost like trying to enjoy a symphony played backward or eating a banquet which starts with the demi-tasse and winds up with the soup.

"My new picture concerns the drama of life itself. We have dispensed with theatrical effects and are dealing with the naked human heart. The narrative is unfolded with the utmost simplicity, and this very simplicity demands that the audience be in a receptive and sympathetic mood. A dramatist achieves such a mood in exactly the way I have tried to achieve it in this picture. But if his audience came to the theatre at the beginning of his second or third act, and then, after sitting through those sections of the play unprepared and unresponsive, waited for the first act to be played over again, the whole effect of the dramatist's play would be ruined for the late comers.

"Of course there always will be pictures produced on the unit-scene idea, because there will be a demand for them, as there is for vaudeville and for burlesque. But consistent artistry may be expected in our cinemas only when audiences and producers bring to the screen the dignity it deserves, by arranging things so that the spectators recognize the advisability of watching a picture from beginning to end and not regarding it as a vaudeville entertainment into which one may drop at any time to enjoy a succession of more or less [illegible] incidents thrown on a [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
56 WARREN ST. NEW YORK — 8 BOSWORTH ST. BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
BOSTON (Mass.) MORN. GLOBE
DEC. 15, 1924

73—Made use of.
74—To persuade.
[illegible]
[illegible]—True.
80—A leg shackle.
82—Short poems.

MOVIE F[illegible] AND

"The motion picture will never be able to take its rightful place among the arts until some arrangement is devised whereby patrons of motion pictures are educated into arriving on time to see a picture from the beginning," said D. W. Griffith, whose new photoplay, "Isn't Life Wonderful," has made such a sensation in New York.

"With the old-fashioned type of picture each scene was complete in its way. It didn't make any difference whether one saw the middle or the end first and the beginning last. It was a series of incidents strung together, and the order in which they were strung mattered comparatively little.

"In the telling of a story, such as "Isn't Life Wonderful," however, there is one beginning from which we rise with a slow, steady movement to the climax. The atmosphere of the early scenes prepares the audiences for the later scenes. There can be no appreciation of the later scenes until one has seen the early scenes.

"To try and appreciate this picture by seeing the middle or end of the film first and the beginning last is like trying to enjoy a symphony played backward or eat a banquet which starts with dessert and works back to soup.

"That is why I say that the real height of artistry in motion pictures can never be reached until pictures are so presented that the audience watches a picture from beginning to end.

"Of course, there will always be pictures made which are made on the unit-scene idea, because there will always be a demand for them as there is for vaudeville and for burlesque. But consistent artistry may be expected in our cinemas only when audiences and producers bring to the screen the dignity it deserves by arranging things so that audiences recognize the advisability of watching a picture through from beginning to end, and not of regarding it as a vaudeville or a burlesque into which they may drop at any time to enjoy a succession of more or less [illegible] incidents thrown on a screen."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
PORTLAND (ORE.) OREGONIAN

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

Wants Theatre Time-Table

[illegible]

CLIPPING BUREAU
BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Sagamore, Mass. Times
Springfield Republican

MUST SEE PICTURE FROM VERY START

Griffith Deplores Habit of Coming in Middle of Action.

LOSE SWING OF STORY

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

CLIPPING BUREAU
BOSTON

MOVIE HOME JOURNAL

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
DENVER (COLO.) TIMES
DECEMBER 4, 1924

New Griffith Picture Gets First Showing in N. Y. Theater.

D. W. Griffith is showing his new picture, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" at the Rivoli theater in New York this week.

The demands upon the legitimate theaters for waiting shows made it impossible for him to follow his usual custom of showing it first under his own presentation. The earliest show date assured him was in March.

Thru arangements between Mr. Griffith and Mr. Zukor the schedule of the Rivoli theater was revised to permit the one-week showing of the picture.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is Mr. Griffith's first production since "America," and is done in a manner new to the screen. No effort for melodramatic climaxes and unreal spectacles has been made. Mr. Griffith has been content to let his players reveal the incidents of life, being the first time any producer has dared make the experiment.

Most of the scenes were photographed in Germany. In the cast Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton have the leads, supported by an international cast including Lupino Lane, Frank Puglia, Paul Rhepkoff of the Deutchers theater, Berlin, Count von Schact and a very large company. The story is from the short story by Maj. Geoffrey Moss of the British army.

MARION BENT
Who With Her Spouse, Pat Rooney Is Playing at the Orpheum This Week.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
56 WARREN ST. NEW YORK
8 BOSWORTH ST. BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW CANAAN (Con.) ADVERTISER
DEC. 4, 1924

"Isn't Life Wonderful" "Goes Over" in New York

Picture Shown at New Canaan Playhouse Recently Gets Good Criticism in New York

"'Isn't Life Wonderful?' Proves that it is—if you live in the United States," says Harriette Underhill, critic, in Monday's New York Herald-Tribune, in speaking of D. W. Griffith's new picture which was given a try-out at the New Canaan Playhouse several weeks ago, when Mr. Griffith was here in person to get the views of the hundreds that packed the house to the doors. Here is the critics version of the new picture:

"Isn't Life Wonderful," is the most harrowing picture we have seen since "Broken Blossoms," and D. W. Griffith made them both! Not that they are in the least alike; and the newest production at the Rivoli, though beautiful, is in no way a rival of Mr. Griffith's masterpiece.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" is a story by Major Geoffrey Moss. It is harrowing because it is true, and one cannot snatch his attention from the theme for an instant and relax with the comforting assurance that it is only play-acting and that it will all come out right in the end. It doesn't, and yet never have we encountered a situation which gripped us more firmly than the one where Inga saves 9,000,00 marks, and after standing in line for four hours to buy three pounds of beef with it, looks up and finds the price has been raised to 12,000,000 because the stock was running so low, and when the starving marauders stole Han's potatoes we could have cried out in protest. But the picture ends with Inga and Hans sitting in the moonlight and saying; "Never mind, we have each other. Isn't Life Wonderful?"

The story tells of people and conditions just after the war, and as we watched the maimed and starving survivors we wondered how Wilhelm happened to be alive now!

The main story is about one Polish family which dragged itself by slow stages to Berlin to try to get back some of the things which it had lost. The family consists of Inga, an adopted child; Hans and Theodore, sons of an old professor; the professor himself, his sisters and mother. Carol Dempster plays Inga beautifully and Neil Hamilton is great as Hans. Helen Lowell is the grandmother, and she, too, is most effective. We liked her best when she tore up the Kaiser's picture and stamped it in the dust. Every one has heard that the people in Germany were starving after the war, but we doubt if any one, unless he has been there, can realize just what it is like. When you have seen "Isn't Life Wonderful?" you will know exactly what it was like.

Inga and Hans are in love with each other and resolve to get married in spite of the fact that neither has nearly enough to eat. Being young and in love, their constant cry is "Isn't Life Wonderful?" Hans works in a shipyard and on the ground allotted to each worker he raises many bushels of potatoes. Time comes to gather in the humble vegetables, which are life to them, and on the way back from the farm ravenous raiders steal their supply. They have nothing left in the world but each other, but it doesn't seem to make any difference to Hans and Inga. They still cry "Isn't Life Wonderful?"

The story is so simple and still vastly thrilling and exciting. What if Inga should lose the hen which furnishes two or three eggs a week! What if Theodore should lose the liverwurst which the rich American tourist had purchased for two billions of marks and presented to him! What if Hans should have his potato patch raided and what if Grandma should die from her steady diet of three horse-turnips a day! As a matter of fact Hans did lose his potatoes and maybe Grandma died of the turnips. The story ends there.

Lupino Lane is seen in the role of a strolling player who hasn't much to do with the story. It is a terrible thing, this "Isn't Life Wonderful?" and it made us feel like a dirty dog because during the war we always grumbled at the one lump of sugar the restaurants allowed for a cup of coffee and we used to carry our own along with us.

To all who are happy enough to be living in America, yes, isn't life wonderful!

SOUTHWEST PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
KANSAS CITY MO.
TOPEKA KAN.
KANSAS CITY PHOENIX
DECEMBER 7, 1924

Praise for Griffith By European Director For His Latest Film

Fritz Lang Declares 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' Will Live Forever in Memory

Europe's leading motion picture director paid high tribute to America's leading director when Fritz Lang, of the Ufa, returning to the continent after a tour of this country, declared that D. W. Griffith's new film, "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is "the greatest picture I have ever seen or ever hope to see."

Lang directed "Siegfried," the film production of the Nibelung sagas immortalized by Wagner's operas, and is shortly to make "Faust." He toured the United States to familiarize himself with the methods of American directors, and saw all the leading films of the day.

"In 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' Griffith has again revolutionized the film world," said Lang. "Incidentally he has given a veracious picturization of conditions in Europe after the war, conditions little understood in America. I suppose, which gave rise to most poignant dramas.

"But it is not to the story itself but plots and exaggregated action are no longer necessary; that the drama of character is suited to the screen.

"To my mind, speaking from the viewpoint of one who has studied art and made a profession of directing, 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' is the greatest achievement made to date in motion pictures. I believe it will live after many more ma ive productions have been forgotten."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
56 WARREN STREET 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN
DEC 1 - 1924

ON THE SCREENS IN CITY THEATERS

Griffith Invades Post-War Germany.

Poverty stricken Germany in the black days that followed on the heels of the world war is the dramatic background for D. W. Griffith's latest photoplay, "Isn't Life Wonderful," at the Rivoli this week. And against this background he has fashioned a simple, tenuous tale that does little more than record the sufferings of a Polish family that got dumped into a dinky suburb of Berlin shortly after the close of the late quarrel that occurred in our none too well regulated family of nations.

Mr. Griffith's set of characters are the various members of the house of a gentle professor—a man of letters who was reduced by the war to the somewhat menial task (for him) of correcting examination papers for the apple cheeked Hans and Gretchens of a school in the small fry town of Copernick, Germany. The rest of the professor's family works heroically, too, but they are gripped by that poverty that descended on thousands of persons in Germany during the periods when the unruly German mark fell heavily, and when food riots were so common that one didn't stop to notice them any more than a resident of Hollywood would stop to look at a troupe of movie actors.

Thus we are furnished with some admirably staged scenes of Germany during all this strife and stress over getting enough to eat. Most of "Isn't Life Wonderful," indeed, was photographed in and around Berlin. And while the writer hasn't been to Germany, its scenes seem to bear the imprint of truth. To be sure the great Griffith has not forgotten his "love interest." For there develops a romance between the professor's son and an orphaned girl who has traveled with his unhappy family from their Polish homestead. This romance is carried on by Neil Hamilton and Carol Dempster—the same pair that performed similarly in Mr. Griffith's "America." And, incidentally this fragile romance furnishes just about all the "plot" that there is to "Isn't Life Wonderful."

Mr. Griffith, it can be seen, lapses back into the manner in which he produced "The White Rose," which, if you remember, was devoid of story and filled to the brim with "characterization." This latest effort is an improvement over that worthy but slightly tiresome photoplay, but there is room for further improvement along these same meritorious lines. "Isn't Life Wonderful" is acted as well as any picture of the current season, and in individual scenes Mr. Griffith shows that he is the only American director who can compare with Lubitsch and Sjostrom. But still, taken as a whole, this photoplay at the Rivoli has a fatal tinge of dullness.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Bridgeport (Conn.) Post
12-7-24

Griffith Picture One of Best.

"Isn't Life Wonderful," D. W. Griffith's new picture which was shown in New York last week for the first time, is destined to take first place in the list of the current year's best photoplays.

The newspapers spoke in glowing terms of the latest Griffith achievement, many stating that it was without exception the best motion picture of its kind ever produced.

E. S. Collins, who is reputed to be one of the most conservative of screen critics, said: "We can safely say that there never has been so absorbingly human a drama put on the screen. It rises to such heights of truth and beauty that it far surpasses all the make-believe tragedies and brainstorms which have so far appeared on the screen."

Mildred Spain said: "An entirely new treatment of screen drama. It is the best picture that has come from the hands of Griffith. The plot is life itself."

55 WARREN ST. NEW YORK
8 BOSWORTH BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
BOSTON (Mass.) POST
DEC. 7, 1924

all as false as paste jewels, she declares in this very interesting article, and adds expressively, that it's "the bunk."

* * * *

Karl K. Kitchen is the author of the following anecdote. And he admits that he will not feel insulted if you do not believe it. However—

"Geoffrey Moss, the British novelist, whose 'Sweet Pepper' is the best seller in his own country, and who wrote the story on which the new Griffith picture, 'Isn't Life Wonderful,' is based, had his first piece of pumpkin pie yesterday. He lunched with the writer at Whyte's.

"The waiter who served us placed the cheese I had ordered on top of our respective pieces of pie. Major Moss took a look at the strange dish before him—this is his first visit to America—and with a quick gesture shot the piece of cheese from the top of his pie with his middle finger and thumb.

"'How careless,' he commented."

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM Lowell Leader
12/4/24

"ISN'T Life Wonderful?" On the tempo of an interrogation David Wark Griffith presents his latest cinema play at the Rivoli and having once asked his auditors that question, proceeds to prove it. At least, for one who fell under the spell of the magic of a cinema teller's art, told only as one director the world over can tell it in a work that humbly aspires to transpose the tragic lives of those humble creatures in a far away land, caught in the bitter aftermath of the world's most terrific struggle and whose cry for bread finds here a poignant justification in every line. To this chronicler of cinema notes of a little more than a decade, whose eyes have tired over the mediocre efforts of so-called cinema virtuosi and the majority of Hollywood's kunst-vereis, it's equal has yet to be seen. And yet it relies not on pompous embellishments, nor on censor-evading sex matter, nor on spectacle, nor Indians whooping it up over the lot, but its strength lies in the unparalleled appeal of simplicity, of the utter absence of artificialty in a drama as potential as the undying faith of its youthful characters. If one were to search for comparisons, the index in one's memory would point to an ally like Stanislavsky in his treatment of Chekhov's "Cherry Orchard," or Gorki's "Lower Depth's," and thus convey simultaneously to the reader the scope of this cinema. For, not unlike the realism of those plays, this, too, is a reflection of the depths and heights we humans may attain. In the simple exposition of the Polish professor's family stranded in a little town in Germany shortly after the war the after-thought leaves us not a little uninspired to a more piercing inquiry than the original query of the author. What is noble?

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
New York Bulletin
12-1-24

New Griffith Film Filled With Pathos

D. W. Griffith, the father of the cinema has given a tremendously powerful film play to the screen this week. Family drama plus a heavy heart for a long time has not been so well handled. Though it is merely of the simple sort of an old story it has been produced with a marvelous touch.

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

Praise for Griffith By European Director For His Latest Film

Fritz Lang Declares 'Isn't Life Wonderful?' Will Live Forever in Memory

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
Hartford (Conn.) Times
12/9/24

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM
DEC. 1 1924

D. W. GRIFFITH WILL MAKE ONE FOR UNITED ARTISTS

Director Becomes Free Agent After In Delivery—Many Exhibitors Protest Over Barred Chaplin Film—Mabel Normand Back

By Sam Cowley

[illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Wash. (DC)
Times 12/13/24

THE PHOTOPLAY

By FADEOUT

THE major efforts of the movies for 1924-25 are now bursting upon New York.

Each season the film makers grind out, in addition to the program grist, certain big specials to which they point with pride.

Most often they draw a bead on the box-office, tho they make some pretense at art. This year of grace presents rather an unusual spectacle in this regard. While the makers no doubt devote their orisons to pious hopes that they will jam the turnstiles with hope-maddened maniacs, the big pictures of the winter show a horrifyingly artistic trend.

Which leads to amusing cuttings-up in the picture reviewing line.

THE journalistic film reviewers along Broadway are, in the main, a serious minded lot of ginks.

Stuffed to biliousness with screen bunk, they take out their sourness by weekly lambastings, and in the privacy of their closets pray for screen art before framed photographs of St. David Griffith. The reviewers for the film trade papers, on the other hand, consider screen art so much six-month egg, and keep their ferret-like noses trained on the box-office possibilities of the stuff. Which is meet and right, since it is their bounden duty to the exhibitors they serve.

The 1924 crop of specials has filled the trade reviewers with alarm, and sends the daily paper boys into fits of joyful hysteria. Erich Von Stroheim, the mad Austrian, has at last turned loose his monumental "Greed," made from Frank Norris' "McTeague." The newspaper men chortle and drool over its art, and the trade paper gentlemen back up and view with alarm. "Art!" scream the Park Row Walkleys. "Be careful of this one—it may not mean a nickel at the ticket window!" shriek the business men.

All is fun and confusion.

TO add to the uproar, D. W. Griffith has projected "Isn't Life Wonderful?" a realistic drama of conditions in post-war Germany.

Again the strictly journalistic chain-gang touches off red fire and set pieces in City Hall Park, and again the men of the trade papers advise their clients to lock up the spoons and count the hard coal.

In other words, certain film makers have elected, this winter, to turn loose some of the screen art for which we irreconcilables have been bawling for years. And while the horn-rimmed critics yowl with glee and trot out their best eight dollar words, the critical cash-registers tie down their ears, and advise the thousands of exhibitors on whom the success of great pictures depends to lay in a large pile of canned stuff and dust the cyclone cellar.

It is quite possible that hundreds of exhibitors, scared out of their wits by the alarming wig-wagging of the trade papers, will pass up the big worthwhile pictures altogether. We daily paper critics can yell ourselves blue in the face, but the roaring trade papers will get the larger crowds before their tents. And if the big ones do a bust this season, the film magnates might as well fix the blame now, ante mortem.

FRANCIS FORD, the old serial king of 10 years ago, is playing a leading role in a new Hoot Gibson picture. Heigh-ho—another comeback.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE
DEC 7 1924

Slow Motion

By MARTIN B. DICKSTEIN

Can a Photoplay Written by an English Army Officer Be Called German Propaganda? — "Romola" and "The Firebrand," Two Plays of Florence.

THIS, being written before the presentation of Eric von Stroheim's "Greed" at the Cosmopolitan Theater, the Frank Norris story is necessarily excluded from our summation of the week's best films. The laurel wreath is cast over the shoulders of David Wark Griffith for his admirable production of "Isn't Life Wonderful." It may be that some who have seen this vivid dramatization of post-war Germany will set up the cry of "propaganda," seeing in it only an attempt to strew rose petals in the path of the once despised Hun, who is doing his best to come back into polite society gracefully. Yet, the author of the story is none other than Major Goeffrey Moss of the British Army, friend of the Prince of Wales and once companion an dbrother officer in the same regiment with Lord Lascelles, husband of Princess Mary. That alone should allay the fears of the propaganda sleuths, but it probably won't. They will see in Griffith's picture of the suffering brought about by the collapse of the German mark only a subtle bid for international sympathy. They will see in the impoverished condition of German labor a coup for the new republic on the Rhine. They will see much in "Isn't Life Wonderful" that will appear to them inexcusable sentimentality and slush. The propaganda sleuths will find nothing of beauty, nothing of art, for it has been said that none are so blind as those who will not see.

We, for one—or two—(there were two of us) saw in the Griffith film at the Rivoli last week one of the finest things D. W. has ever brought to the screen, not excepting his charming "Broken Blossoms." We liked the idea. Nothing so simple and yet so poignantly beautiful had ever before been attempted in the cinema. There was none of the blah that has found an all too permanent place in pictures; none of the incredible trimmings without which the average photoplay cannot seem to get along. There were no lavish settings to awe the audience and to impress upon it the fact that money is only a secondary consideration in the propagation of the celluloid art. Griffith has side-stepped all the pretty little knicknacks which have been clinging to studio traditions like leeches on a blood blister. He has produced this film in keeping with the very spirit of the story—thriftiness, beauty in simplicity and a severity in its handling which left no room for opulent display.

One seldom sees on the motion picture screen such powerful scenes as that one in "Isn't Life Wonderful," in which the impoverished little German family celebrates in great glee the addition of a steaming heritof of "harvested" to the spoil scanty fare of boiled turnips. There was never anything quite so heartrending as that scene in which frau wants to the most fine with 12 million marks—just enough to buy a little hart-steak—once to dine and after three hours when the price had gradually been advanced to 14 million marks. But then still had frau and with them "life was wonderful."

"Isn't Life Wonderful" begins today its second week on Broadway, having been moved from the Rivoli to the Rialto Theater. If you would see for what great acting the Griffith film is capable, see Florence Vidor, the Griffith wife of Hans Mason, the Griffith boy, and Marcia Harris, the Griffith mother.

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 56 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 6 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TIMES
DEC 7 1924

Author Describes Writing "Isn't Life Wonderful?"

By MORDAUNT HALL.

MAJOR GEOFFREY C. G. MOSS, author of "Isn't Life Wonderful?" from which David Wark Griffith produced his stirring picture, arrived in this country just in time for the presentation of the film version of his literary effort. In the course of an interview he expressed his admiration for Mr. Griffith's artistic photoplay, which, incidentally, attracted great throngs to the Rivoli last week.

This author was a brother officer of the Prince of Wales in the Grenadier Guards, and for years has written short stories chiefly for his own pleasure and without much thought about their publication. Finally in 1922 he published his novel, "Sweet Pepper," which attracted wide attention throughout the United Kingdom. He began another novel, but eventually put it aside to write half a dozen short stories which are compiled in a volume entitled "Defeat." "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is one of these narratives. It is 11,000 words long.

How he came to pen these stories is quite interesting. It appears that Major Moss at the time was bent on building a yacht, which he decided he could do for less money in Germany than in England. He therefore went to Copenic to have the craft made, and he soon discovered that the actual workers on the little vessel were living on two loaves of bread and a handful of potatoes a week.

Rewrote Stories Nine Times.

Already he had thought up at least one of these narratives through happenings in the Ruhr under French occupation. He admits that certain occurrences, for which he blames the French, caused him to be violently opposed to that nation's actions toward Germany.

"I wrote those stories over nine times," said Major Moss, "and I wrote with tears in my eyes. I worked fourteen hours a day to finish them by a certain time. As Mr. Griffith turned this one story into a picture he wept, too. It was made in the very locale in which I had placed my background. There the people who owned the shipyard, and whom I was paying in gold, were making a fortune and rolled around in costly cars. But the workers existed on their two loaves of bread and a few potatoes—just enough to keep body and soul together, but no more. Even a toothache might have proved fatal to them.

It seems astonishing for a man having a fifty-two-foot auxiliary ketch named "La Noble Rose," built in Germany, to have been inspired to let his thoughts flow through a pen on paper telling of the starved Germans. Possibly it is even more surprising that an American film director should have been attracted to this one particular story, which gripped him so strongly that he sent a wire to the author asking him what he would accept for "Isn't Life Wonderful?" The man who had been a soldier in England's smartest regiment was elated at receiving the message. In course of time Mr. Griffith went to Germany to make the picture, keeping quite silent about the story, and going about his work with a certain nonchalance as if he did not care so much about the effort he was to make. It was called "Dawn," he said at the time. He even wanted a suggestion for a title, which, it is presumed, he had decided to release as "Isn't Life Wonderful?"

Kept Production Secret.

Without any apparent effort at secrecy Mr. Griffith stilled general talk about the production, leaving a comparatively few persons wondering why he had gone to Germany to make this film. One day, when the photoplay was almost ready, Mr. Griffith's publicity department announced that the production Mr. Griffith had made in Germany was to be called "Isn't Life Wonderful?" and from then on interest in the picture grew. His own managers and executives waxed extremely enthusiastic about the story, asserting that they thought that it was the finest film Mr. Griffith had ever directed.

Then Mr. Griffith himself appeared to be mildly pleased in the picture, and he sent a cable message to Major Moss to come to America for the presentation. This author had only twenty hours in which to arrange his passport and other affairs, but largely through the courtesy of the American Consul General in London he reached New York in time.

The film was screened in Town Hall on the Friday preceding its release at the Rivoli. Major Moss had arrived that morning, and he was deeply stirred at the fleeting shadows that passed before him and told his own story with moving characters on a screen. It was to him a wonderful experience, even more impressive than had been the actual taking of the scenes in Copenic. He said then that Mr. Griffith had performed a truly faithful translation of his tale. It stirred many persons who saw it. One executive of one picture concern admitting that he had seen the film twice, the other occasion being at Montclair, where it was put on to ascertain what impression it would make on an audience.

In producing this picture Mr. Griffith sought to make the most of his foreign background, and on one occasion he wanted a picturesque alleyway. He investigated Copenic and finally discovered just the spot he wanted. Looking it over carefully, he noticed a sign which he thought ought to be covered up or pulled down. It was learned that the sign when translated read: "Persons desiring to take motion pictures of this alleyway must apply to the authorities for permission." This ended the notion of using that location, as Mr. Griffith disliken having overpictured places in his films. He wished as much originality as possible in his scenes and buildings.

Mr. Griffith's Spark.

The simplicity of this picture is very much the same as that in "Dos Cos ter Spare," except that Mr. Griffith's emotions spark is constantly seen as the scenes are unfolded. As a general rule the motion picture director tells his conclusions of an approaching storm by showing a sense of fast flying, massed clouds. Mr. Griffith has done the same thing himself, and for all we know he battened this idea, in "Isn't Life Wonderful" however, by lots of the counting stone by portraying the everlasting of trees.

Mr. Griffith stings very closely to the written story, except for the conclusion he hypothesizes as the prevailing substantial contentment of the poor old professor and his family. The message he intends to get across in this way is the same as that the novelist, evidence of which is a happy and cheerful ending to a book that is bitter to read on the usual points in the closer. But instead of having this permanent relief you are left hope that brought and future as to the end. There are plenty good in the closing scenes, such as making of the parting sweetheart, in the display which has Frau Brunner and Hans Mason and Marcia Harris and Lupino Lane, who have made a hit in the picture, but they have [illegible]

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK — BOSTON
CLIPPING FROM CLEVELAND (O.) PLAIN DEALER
DEC 7 1924

D. W. Gets Praise; Elliott's Novel Not for the Screen

BY KARL K. KITCHEN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—By an unusual coincidence D. W. Griffith's latest picture and Miss Lillian Gish, his former star, in her latest production arrived on Broadway within twenty-four hours of each other. "Isn't Life Wonderful," Mr. Griffith's film which was made in Germany, had it first showing on Sunday at the Rivoli at regular movie prices, which the much heralded "Romola" with Miss Gish in the title role had its "world premiere" at the Cohan theater on Monday night.

Right at the beginning let me say that the Griffith picture which may be seen for 55 cents is far superior to "Romola" at which $2.20 was charged the opening night. The latter production boasts of much lovely photography but it is stagy and lacks the long flowing sublime and indifferently acted Griffith. Mr. Griffith's direction when occasionally were very effective performances, but "Romola" have ever to criticize. We should always be of fair old time stuff, so that we have never been able to such fine advantage as in this particular production, which was made in Italy by Henry King and directed "Sea Wolf" [illegible]

The story of "Romola" written by George Eliot, being a psychological study rather than a novel of action, does not immediately to the screen. In spite the rapid action and promise of excitement in place of that are to be effective. Miss Gish has not been able to get the portrayal of a woman, in the portrait portrayal of the part. Miss Gish is particularly good in the scenes with her father, Dante Cecchi, and Lionel Barrymore, who plays the part of Romola's husband. Miss Gish's performance in the closing scenes, in particular, are very good. Miss Gish has not been able to get the portrait portrayal of the part. Miss Gish is particularly good in the closing

LUCE'S PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
NEW YORK 98 WARREN STREET — BOSTON 8 BOSWORTH STREET
CLIPPING FROM
Eve. Times
12/5/20

LATEST GRIFFITH FILM DIFFERENT

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" Has the Big Producer At His Best

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" asks D. W. Griffith several times during the showing of his new film and the audience, caught in the spell of the master director's genius, sobbingly answers "Yes," whereupon Griffith immediatly plunges his two central characters down another steep hill of despair until finally they possess nothing in the world but a deep love for each other. Then again he asks, and gets the same answer.

An attempt to tell the plot of "Isn't Life Wonderful?" would be futile because there just isn't any plot. But there's a story with the simplest theme possible. Yet, it grips and holds. It concerns the poignant suffering endured by Inga and Hans, sweethearts, and their families, when they are driven from Poland to Germany where starvation grips them in the aftermath of the great war.

The refugees are forced to live on potatoes until the very sight of one becomes hateful to them. But the supply of potatoes runs out and, after a winter of turnips and more turnips, Hans raises potatoes and what was once despised becomes a feast for the gods.

Isn't life wonderful? Yes!

And then the potatoes are stolen by starving villagers. Gone is the harvest of Hans' long toil and suffering. Gone the hope of an early wedding. Gone the feeling of security that comes with a well-filled larder. But there still remains love for each other.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" Yes!

Carol Dempster has hidden every particle of her beauty in a peasant makeup. We doubt if most leading women would care to completely hide their charm and looks for the sake of characterization as Miss Dempster does, but, what she lacks in beauty throughout this film is more than compensated for by the histrionic talent she displays. Miss Dempster's acting as Inga is the outstanding portrayal, for Neil Hamilton as Hans is disappointing. Lupino Lane supplies the comedy in the all too rare moments that he is on the screen.

The story of "Isn't Life Wonderful?" is adapted from "Dawn," by Geoffrey Moss, an officer of the British army. It was filmed on the actual locations in Germany and Mr. Griffith has caught some exquisite old world pastoral scenes.

"Isn't Life Wonderful?" may prove disappointing to those Griffith fans who crave his usual whirlwind climax, but it will surely please those who want to see the screen produce something different.

* * *

I AM in receipt of a most interesting letter from Major Geoffrey Moss. He raises the question of the box office appeal of "Isn't Life Wonderful?" I am publishing his letter and asking any of my readers who care to take part in the discussion to send us a line. Major Moss says:

D. W. Griffith.

My Dear Miss Parsons:

I have read the reviews of "Isn't Life Wonderful?", D. W. Griffith's screen version of a short story of mine, which have appeared in film trade papers.

Reviewers have praised the picture without stint. Indeed, I am told, that no film has ever had such a unanimously favorable "press."

I have been much puzzled to read in trade journals, however, a doubt as to the film's box office appeal.

Might I, a stranger in this so hospitable a land, ask humbly the following questions?

1. Can it be that the motion picture audiences in this country are incapable of enjoying a work which could gain such universal praise?

2. Can it be that the public appreciate it, but that the exhibitors underestimate the public's good taste?

3. Can it be that the critics in these trade journals are themselves wrong in underestimating the taste of others, and that the audiences and the exhibitors are both quite as capable of appreciating good work as the critics themselves?

I should not have dared to write the above had I, myself, been responsible for the translation of my tale to the screen, or if I had the slightest financial interest in its success.

Very truly yours,
GEOFFREY MOSS.

* * *

N.Y. Herald
May 21

Griffith to Produce "That Royle Girl"

D. W. Griffith's first picture for Paramount will be "That Royle Girl" by Edwin Balmer, a serial now appear- in the Hearst-Cosmopolitan Magazine. Mr. Griffith is engaged in filming his final production for United Artists, "Sally of the Sawdust," for which all interior scenes have been completed. The exteriors will remain to be taken.

"That Royle Girl" is a dramatic story of the conflict between the old Americanism of the bluebloods of New England, and the vivid, new Americanism born of the many bloods that mingle in Chicago.

Production will start at the Paramount Long Island studio soon after completion of "Sally of the Sawdust."

CLIFFORD B. LLOYD, press representative for D. W. Griffith, has written us a long and interesting letter setting us all straight on the subject of Griff's future activities, and particularly on his connection with the blackface comedy being made at his studio by Lloyd Hamilton. Lloyd is glad to be set right on the matter, and pass Mr. Lloyd's information on to you as informative. You may remember that a fortnight ago I wrote a lament on the seeming deterioration of the old master. Lloyd's letter says that Griffith was interested in having Al Jolson do a character in the American Revolution story the old fox was even then cooking. When Al flew to Europe, leaving the blackface picture flat on its back, Griffith dropped the comedy and turned it all over to Hamilton and Hamilton's own director. He has nothing to do with Ham's show as at present constituted.

THE picture of the American Revolution is now on the fire, and sizzling, says Lloyd. Griffith has prepared a scenario of the thing, with the assistance of Robert W. Chambers and others. He has gone over the historical ground at Concord, in Boston and at Valley Forge and Trenton. He hopes, in his picture, to show the causes of the Revolution, and tell the dramatic tale of those stirring days with all the mastery at his command. And that's that. I rescind the order for tuber roses for the "departed" master. I take back the offer of my services as pallbearer. I sit back in my private, keg-lined projection room, waiting for Griffith's next picture to arrive. And certainly I thank Dr. Lloyd for his fine letter on the affairs of the Poo Bah of Mamaroneck.

O. R. Vii

Working for years

My Film Daily 8/26/23

My Daily News 9/8/23

My Telegraph Sep 7 1923

Lewiston (Me) Star 7/31/23

Griffith Pictures For D. A. R.

Certain prominent members of the Daughters of the American Revolution have been urging, it is said, that David Wark Griffith make a big historical film drama laid during the days of the American Revolution. The matter has not yet been taken up by the D. A. R. officially, but it is understood that at one of the meetings to be held very shortly it will be proposed that Mr. Griffith make a production under the sponsorship of this organization. He has long had such a story in mind, in fact he has the scenario ready, and parts of Robert Chambers's book, "The Reckoning," have been adapted as a sort of foundation of the story, it is said. Carol Dempster will play one of the important roles, but so far no other players have been engaged.

Griffith Starts

Revolutionary War Story in Work—To Be Lavish in Production—May Cost $1,500,000

D. W. Griffith has started work on his Revolutionary War story at Mamaroneck. The production will represent one of Griffith's most ambitious efforts and may cost $1,500,000.

The opening sequences a[illegible] week include the ride of Paul Revere to warn the citizens of Lexington of the approach of the British soldiers. Members of the Griffith staff are understood to be dickering for several farms near New York on which will be staged the elaborate battle scenes. It seems quite likely that several important engagements of the Revolution will be filmed on a large scale.

Griffith, as noted, has had this story in mind for several years. He has always wanted to produce a film that was epic in its appeal and has

(Continued on Page 2)

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Sep 2/23

Griffith's Next Picture.

D. W. Griffith has started work on a new picture. It will have a revolutionary war background and may cost $1,500,000. The opening sequence, which was filmed last week, includes the ride of Paul Revere to warn the citizens of Lexington of the approach of the British soldiers. Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, who appeared in Griffith's latest production, "The White Rose," will be seen in the leading roles of the [illegible]

GRIFFITH TO FILM OUR REVOLUTION ON D. A. R.'S BID

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting in authentic fashion the stirring episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the republic which has become the mightiest of the world.

D. W. Griffith

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, with its workmen living better than the kings of the time of the Revolution, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility of these conditions.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama.

Albany (N Y) News Sep 10 1923

GRIFFITH TO FILM GROWTH OF REPUBLIC

At the request of Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and of Mrs. Charles White Nash of Albany, state D. A. R. regent, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play depicting America's successful struggle for independence and the development of the republic.

ALL THAT IS NEWS IN T[illegible]

GRIFFITH STARTS PRODUCTION OF NEW HISTORICAL FILM

Mamaroneck Studios of Great Director Buzzing With Activity as Another "Birth of a Nation" Is Forecast — Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn Take Leads.

SUBJECT IS KEPT SECRET

Out at the Griffith studios in Mamaroneck there is a buzz of eager activity, with cameras grinding six and seven hours a day. A big historical drama is in the making, and Mr. Griffith is getting in some scenes before the snow comes and the frost turns the green leaves to Autumnal tints. "Black on White," the Lloyd Hamilton film, is finished and the members of that company have moved their belongings elsewhere to make room for the coming drama, which is destined to be another film page out of American history.

The enthusiasm of David W. Griffith over his historical production and the belief of those who have listened to him outline his story that he will have another "Birth of a Nation," surrounds this picture with especial interest.

Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, the man who created the character of Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's play, have been cast in a very important historical role. There are other well-known players who will also be added to the cast, but as yet information is very meager. It was impossible to get any news from the Griffith office on this picture, which is being filmed with the greatest secrecy.

Mr. Griffith has been spending his time in entertaining modern stories, and there has been such a demand for another "Birth of a Nation" that he has put everything else away to spend his time on this film, which he will try to make a worthy successor to "The Birth of a Nation." "The Covered Wagon" has proved how well Americans like historical tales of their own country, and we believe there is certainly a demand for a story laid in the time of the Revolutionary War—a picture that can be made in the East, the part of the country that is filled with places that figured in the war of independence.

My Telegraph Sep 9 1923

Handing Griffith a Few Bouquets.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH is back at his old stand. After making a series of light features, including both comedy and drama, he is going in again for the historical panorama, and who is more impressive at this sort of work we cannot for the life of us think. To us Mr. Griffith is still the Tilden of the motion picture world and in likening him to the great tennis player we mean only to compliment him. Griffith is master of the terrific wallop and the gentle trap-shot as surely as his athletic rival.

The director's new subject is to be the American Revolution, perhaps even more enshrined in the hearts of the American public than the Civic War days, though more remote, and if Mr. Griffith can do as well with the early times of the Republic as he has done with the reconstruction era, we shall have another masterpiece to discuss. There is material enough in this subject to daunt almost anyone except a historian, but Mr. Griffith has in the past shown himself thoroughly capable of sifting the gold from the dross and there is every expectation that he can do it again. We are of the opinion that the release of this Revolutionary drama will mark another step forward in the industry.

New Bedford (Mass) Mercury Sep 11, 1923

The segregation which has enshrouded the film studios of D. W. Griffith at Mamaroneck of recent weeks is broken, and it is learned that in response to a request by the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mr. Griffith is at work on the preliminary steps in making perhaps his biggest cinema spectacle. It will be a picture play depicting the episodes of America's struggle for independence.

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Sep 12 1923

My Telegraph Sep 9 1923

GRIFFITH SECRETLY WORKING ON BIG DRAMA OF THE REVOLUTION

Daughters of American Revolution and Will H. Hays Behind Effort Which May Prove Director's Greatest Screen Achievement.

FRANK M'GLYNN IN ROLE

Famous Lincoln Actor Now Playing Part of George Washington—Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton Also in Cast of Historic Classic.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily at some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an effort to obtain some summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the titular role of Lincoln.

"Hearts of the World" current at the Colonial with Thomas Meighan.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S PLEA FOR AMERICAN HOMES.

MANY motion picture people praise a film play as a great drama. This column joins not in the general chorus of the motion picture producers. We think the producers are afraid that they are making their audiences and know that as to an industry in picturing the wonders of home, they could show that they are unfaithful to the fundamental ideas of "home and fireside."

"If I have a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where the flowers are in season, where I can have music, Mr. Griffith declares, "I can forget the world outside. I can forget the cares of the day. I can forget the right and wrong of the day.

"If I think on the story of the motion picture and the message it has and can give the world, I think of a mother of truth and beauty in the home in a serene setting in the quiet country. I think of a mother who has had her children and their children around her knee and who has taught them the ideals of truth and beauty

Lockport (N.Y.) Union Sun
Sep 13 1923

N.Y. Sun
Sep. 14. 23

IAL HOUSE IDEAL HOME SAYS GRIFFITH

D. W. GRIFFITH, MOTION PICTURE MAN, WANTS COLONIAL HOUSES

MAKES PLEA FOR HIS IDEAL FOR MORE BEAUTIFUL HOMES IN U. S.

MANY GREAT MANSIONS ARE FAR FROM BEAUTIFUL, SAYS DIRECTOR

Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home.

The boy of fifteen was a long, "gangling" youth with no slightest claim to beauty for himself. His mother used to address him in kindly admonition. "David," she said, "some people get this world's goods by luck, others by looks and some get it by work. Since you have neither looks nor luck you'll have to get yours by work." The boy did all he could on the farm. One of his duties was to bring four cows home from the patsure every night. As he looks back over the path of retrospect, in the broad beam of varied experience, he concludes that these were the "ornerriest" cows that browsed in any pasture of all the world. oFr when he wanted the cows to walk they would stop, and when he wanted them to stop they would walk. "And "night would gather," as the story-writer would say, and the cows, half way home, would stand gazing at the stars, while the boy shivered at the sound of the wind in the trees. When a branch crackled under feet he was startled by the darkness-emphasized sound was made by an Indian or a ghost.

But life was not all stubborn cows and fear-breeding sounds for that boy. There were hours of sheer beauty. They were evenings spent beside the fireplace when his father, a brigadier general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake," read from the world's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning them what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room wih a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my rday's business to provide the backlog for the fireplace. There were two windows. One looked upon a wheatfield with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. Bt the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticised by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, received a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purposes of beauty because they do not accard with the American settling and sentiment. They are incongruous and incongruity is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twentieth of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness is infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which smtes back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the Souh, and which was cared for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small ones at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was in similar spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James River, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley house is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months later I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In teh Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large roms at the front, and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. The yae eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had ben lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—

SEMENOFF REPRIEVED
MOSCOW, Sept. 10.—A Moscow

Grand Rapids (Mich) Press Sep 15 1923

Minneapolis (Minn) Journal
Sep 13 1923

Griffith's Idea Of Real American Home

Movie Man Makes Plea For The Colonial Type Of House.

Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home.

The boy of fifteen was a long, "gangling" youth with no slightest claim to beauty for himself. His mother used to address him in kindly admonition. "David," she said, "some people get this world's goods by luck, others by looks and some get it by work. Since you have neither looks nor luck you'll have to get yours by work." The boy did all he could on thefarm. One of his duties was to bring four cows home from the pasture every night.

As he looks back over the path of retrospect, in the broad beam of varied experience, he concludes that these were the "ornerriest" cows that browsed in any pasture of all the world. For when he wanted the cows to walk they would stop and when he wanted them to stop they would walk. And "night would gather," as the story-writer would say and the cows, half way home, would stand gazing at the stars, while the boy shivered at the sound of the wind in the trees. When a branch crackled under feet he was sure the darkness-emphasized sound was made by an Indian or a ghost.

But life was not all stubborn cows and fear-breeding night sounds for that boy. They were hours of sheer beauty. They were evenings spent beside the fireplace when his father, a brigadier-general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake" read from the gorld's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning then what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the backlog for th fireplace. Tehre were two windows. One looked upon a wheat field with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticized by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, receives a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purpose of beauty because they do not accord with the American setting and sentiment. They are incongrous, and incongruous is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twntieth part of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness and infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which stems back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the South and which was caerd for by twenty-five servants are large in the front part of the house and taper to small one at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was similar in spirit to Shirley House one of the famous homes on the James river, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley House is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months after I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In the Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large rooms at the front and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. They are eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had been lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.

More than 20,000,000 steel [illegible] are made at Birmingham, England, every week.

VOTE FOR MARK T. LAMBERT, MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY. 12-

New Orleans (La) Times Picayune 9/16/23

GRIFFITH PLANS HISTORICAL FILM

Director to Produce Story of the American Revolution

The greatest film undertaking of D. W. Griffith, the noted director, which he has just launched, will be a feature film of the Revolutionary War, and, according to his executiv it will be filmed along the same spectacular lines as "Intolerance," "The Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm."

Through Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the suggestion was made to Will H. Hays, which led to Griffith's planning of this production. It was pointed out that at this time it was opportune to present to the American public the story of the American Revolution, uncolored by prejudice, and showing the struggles and circumstances which led to the founding of the American Government.

All the resources of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other historical societies have been placed at Griffith's disposal, so that he may secure the most accurate historical data. Many of the scenes of the action will take place upon the actual sites where they occured in Revolutionary Days.

At the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck work has already begun upon a series of sets which embrace many of the historical buildings of that period. Next week Griffith will go to Boston to take scenes in the Old North Church, in Paul Revere's home, in the old State House, and many other buildings now existing where the actual scenes of the Revolutionary conflict occurred. Arrangements are also being made for the use of Bunker Hill.

New York Journal
Sep. 14, 1923.

Griffith to Make 1776 Film

United States History of the Revolutionary period is to be the basis of a big cinema production to be made by David Wark Griffith. Like his other famous productions having historical background such as "The Two Orphans" of the French Revolution period and "The Birth of a Nation," which had the Civil war as its theme, the new production will have a definite story of the American Revolution period around which the historical event will be grouped.

Griffith will make this production upon the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Frank McGlynn who played Abraham Lincoln in the Drinkwater's play has been cast for George Washington. Carol Dempster will play the feminine lead.

Among the historical events to be depicted probably will be the massacre on Boston Common and the Boston "tea party." Paul Revere's ride, the Nathan Hale episode, and the battles of Concord and Lexington, filmed on the exact location of their historic conflict.

George Washington will be the dominating figure of the production. His disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee; his magnificent stroke upon Tenton after crossing the ice-filled Deleware; his tragic winter at Valley Forge and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown will be pictured upon the screen. The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American republic will form the background for the conclusion of the picture.

Boston American
Sep 15 1923

Eugene (Ore) Guard 9/15/23

DESTROYING GOOD TASTE

D. W. Griffith In Arts and Decoration.

Motion pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they photograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart of the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's showroom. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel.

I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them albums of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's averred value poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Length round, not long, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls of days for music in graceful lines and of a few favorite pictures—all portraits, saving then a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle patriot father of Joseph Mazzini, one of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the fields and the trees.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee, of the profound White as that French soldier who had a rare to my college in Washington, he died one of the greatest men of my day. When to know his nobility he had departed on world his action. With the Spring in the Great Dr. Gen. Johnson had lured. In the one that sadly have played the role of War in the play drama, he knew, through comparative [illegible] spectacle but that I should have the portrait of Thomas Jonathan Jackson, the man who [illegible] the Shenandoah Valley, the man who [illegible] Jackson, the man who [illegible] Jackson, the man who [illegible] Jackson

Los Angeles (Cal) Exhibitors 9/16/23

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 9/17/23

Exhibitors Herald. Chicago (Ill) Sep 22 1923

Chattanooga (Tenn) Times. Sep. 23 1923

Tacoma Sep 15

Revolution Film Begun

By Frederick James Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—David Wark Griffith has started work on his big spectacle of the Revolution. The first scenes have just been shot at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Frederick James Smith

The actual story of the reason why "D. W." has launched this historical feature is now told for the first time. The idea grew out of a plea made by the Daughters of the American Revolution to Will Hays, overlord of the cinema. Hays, in turn, put the idea to Griffith—and so the spectacle came into being. This, by the way, is the first time on record that a motion picture has been made on the plea of an organization of the magnitude of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

I am able to tell—also for the first time—something about the story of the spectacle. There will be a love theme running through the opus, but, essentially, the spectacle will be a panorama of the Revolution, introducing every character of the period. The love story will be in the hands of Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, who played a minor role in "The White Rose." Frank McGlyn, who portrayed Abraham Lincoln for such a long time in the John Drinkwater play of that name, is to be the George Washington. Other important characters will be Nathan Hale, Benedict Arnold and Alexander Hamilton.

Griffith tells me he plans to take some seven months on the production, and he expects to make it the biggest thing, in expenditures, anyway, since "Way Down East" and "Intolerance."

Washington (DC) Times 9/17/23

EARLY AMERICA IS PLOT OF GRIFFITH'S NEXT.

It develops that the Daughters of the Revolution, one of the strongest patriotic organizations of this country, is tremendously concerned in the making of D. W. Griffith's next, which will show the founding of the American government.

Correspondence passing between Mrs. Cook, president of the D. A. R., Mrs. Nash, regent of New York, and Griffith, was made public by the Hays office and indicates the import and seriousness of the film, the scenario of which will be prepared by Anthony Paul Kelly.

The committee on public relations of the Hays office is actively interested in the firm.

Bath (Me) Times Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM IS CALLED "AMERICA"

Members of Col. Dummer Sewall chapter, D. A. R., will be interested to learn that "America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Chicago (Ill) Journal Sep 19 1923

Boston Traveler 9/19/23

GRIFFITH'S FILM

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

Newark (NJ) News Sep 20 1923

"America"

D. W. Griffith has decided to name his next picture "America."

For Zane Grey Film

"America" Selected as Title For New Griffith Production

After a canvass of six universities, six grade schools and six sporting places, the last of which included a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room and a dance hall, D. W. Griffith selected the title "America" for a Revolutionary film he is preparing to produce at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

More than ninety per cent. of the votes taken were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a close second. Several of those who participated in the voting have been invited to appear in the battle and other group scenes punctuating the action.

Buffalo (NY) Commercial Sep 19 1923

Ziegfeld Follies has gone to Boston.

America will be the name of the new D. W. Griffith picture of the American Revolution. It is costing $1,000,000 and will not be completed until next spring. The picture will tell the story of the Colonies' struggles for freedom from the inception of the troubles with England to the final success of Washington's Army. Robert W. Chambers has written the story, including in it an adaption of his novel, The Reckoning. The most famous men of the period will appear, such as Washington, Adams, Hancock, Nathan Hale, Patrick Henry and Paul Revere.

The role of Washington probably will be assumed by Frank McGlynn. Neil Hamilton, introduced by Griffith in The White Rose, is to be the romantic hero and Carol Dempster will be the sweetheart.

New York Jet 9/21/23

NAME GRIFFITH SPECTACLE

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of American Revolution.

Morning Telegraph (NY) Sep 22 1923

Spirit of '76 in Film

D. W. Griffith is to make a motion picture that will deal with the early days of the Republic, and embody the great episodes of the American Revolution. Mr. Griffith has consented to make the picture at the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This organization made its request through the Committee on Public Relations, which affiliates in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H. Hays is president.

Boston Post 9/22/23

Variety (NY) Sep 20 1923

GRIFFITH WORKING ON PATRIOTIC 'AMERICA'

Record of Revolution—McGlyne May Be George Washington

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his next production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and concerning a screen record of the Revolutionary War.

The work so far has been concerned with the reproduction of battle scenes near the hamlet of Mamaroneck, N. Y., about 10 miles from the Mamaroneck where the studio is. Five big sets have been built there and the battlefields of Lexington, Mass., has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes the U. S. War Department has given the producer assistance a detail of more than 1,000 men from one of the coast artillery posts. They are taken up the sound and transported in uniform from the landing place in Westchester county.

The scenario of the picture was by Hugh Hamilton and Carol Dempster and there is a probability that Frank McGlynn, who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" will be chosen to play George Washington.

Money is the prime object with Mr. Griffith around Mamaroneck. In the Main Street, Paul Revere's ride will be filmed and as he is to perform the national exploitation will be used as backgrounds.

The film will be filmed upon after a canvass of universities, six grade schools and six sporting places, the last of which included a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room and a dance hall, D. W. Griffith selected the title "America" for a Revolutionary film he is preparing to produce at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Pittsburgh (Pa) Sep 22 1923 Gazette-Times

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

"America" Title Chosen for Griffith Picture

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Trenton (NJ) Gazette Sep 20 1923

"America" Under Way

Boston, Sept. 22.—Work on the Revolutionary film, which will be known as "America," a title which was selected after a poll that included six universities, six grade schools and six clubs.

Griffith to Make Revolutionary Film at Request of D. A. R.

Production Will Depict Sacrifices and Stuggles During the Period of America's Founding

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Singular honors and further recognition of the motion picture as a medium for fostering Americanism and promoting education is bestowed on the cinema in a request made by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution that a film be made, dedicated to patriotic purposes, and depicting the struggles and sacrifices of the founders of America. This request has been acceded to and the picture will be produced by D. W. Griffith.

THIS is believed to be the first time in the history of the motion picture that a national organization of the prestige of the D. A. R. has requested the industry to produce a photoplay.

* * *

The request was first made to the Committee on Public Relations affiliated in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State Regent, representing the Daughters of the American Revolution on the committee made the request to Mr. Hays who transmitted the idea to Mr. Griffith who readily consented to make the picture.

Preparation of the scenario has started and acording to present plans the picture will graphically show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary period. Prominent figures and scenes of early American history will be introduced and the whole is intended to foster the spirit of Americanism in an appealing manner.

* * *

Mr. Griffith, in outlining his plans for the production in a letter to Will Hays, stated:

"It is an important development in the progress of motion pictures when such an organization takes an active and helpful interest in introducing these larger themes into pictures."

Writing further on his idea of what the picture would embody Mr. Griffith's plans include the picturization of various phases of unrest today; the average working man's condition at present; the battles between capital and labor. Then the story would go into the past and show the great sacrifices made by our forefather to make possible the privileges now enjoyed. This would lead into the story of the Revolution depicting outstanding events and personages of American history.

* * *

Among them would be such scenes and incidents as the battlefield at Concord and Lexington; the road where Paul Revere made his memorable ride; the battle of Bunker Hill; Nathan Hale risking his life to protect another; the disaster at Ft. Washington and the retreat from Ft. Lee and many other scenes of importance.

According to Mr. Griffith, Robert W. Chambers, noted author, whose several books deal with the Revolutionary period will render his time and services in the making of the picture as will John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history and Anthony Paul Kelly, author of "Three Faces East."

* * *

While the picture will be of historical nature it will be a commercial production, appealing to the masses. It will be kept entirely free from political or partisan propaganda.

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep. 22 1923

GRIFFITH DENOUNCES SCREEN INTERIORS

(D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.)

Motion pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they protograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart to the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's show-room. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel. I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First, they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill-assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them rooms of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's rotund voice poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Longish rooms, not large, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls, of dark furniture in graceful lines and of a few forceful pictures—all portraits, among them a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle philosopher of Concord, Emerson, one of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the great out-of-doors.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee at the moment when, as Earl of French said when he paid a visit to my cottage at Mamaroneck, he faced one of the greatest tragedies of war. When he knew that the supplies he had depended on would not arrive. When the meeting he had hoped for Johnson had failed. When his plan that might have turned the tide of war in the other direction, he knew, through unconquerable circumstances had died. I should have the portrait of Gen. Grant, sturdy but gentle, his campaigning hat pulled down over his eyes, saying as he viewed the noble discomfiture of the idol of the south, "The surrender of side arms will not be necessary." There would be one of the old Puritans, too, with their dreams hidden behind stern masks. And in the snow. Always in the snow. Roger Williams, the builder, rather than Miles Standish, the soldier. And Thomas Paine. And a thinker of France; say Rousseau. Each picture would be an epic. Each would be a well of character inspiration.

The trend of Americans away from the cities to country homes is an indication of the desire for such a manner of living. But the trend is slow. The American life of today is so jazzed that we fly constantly but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of any nation. That sense of beauty will not be developed until reading and reflection again become national pastimes.

Hartford Sep 20

A Michigan ... lead of Franc... "The Birth of ... shown there ... chief of police ... project...

"America" ... title for the ... which will be ... at the reque... the American ...

This is ... that a pictur... direct reques...

Detroit (Mich) News Sep 23 1923

Albany (NY) News Sep 19 1923

"America" is the title of the picture of Revolutionary days which David W. Griffith will make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chicago Sep 2...

Griffith Making Patriotic Production

Producing Story of Revolutionary Period on Big Scale at Request of D. A. R. Officials

RESPONDING to a request from officials of the Daughters of the American Revolution, transmitted through Will H. Hays, D. W. Griffith is at work on a motion picture based on the founding of the American Government.

The request, according to announcement this week, was made first to the Committee on Public Relations, affiliated with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Mr. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York Regent, representing the D. A. R. on the Committee, made the request. The Committee sent the request to Mr. Hays who turned it over to Mr. Griffith and obtained his consent.

The film as at present outlined is to show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary Period.

In a letter to Mr. Hays, outlining the picture, Mr. Griffith wrote in part, after pointing out the present world-wide unrest and the danger of Bolshevism: "Our idea of a motion picture that is much needed in America is to show conditions in America as they are today, of various phases of unrest and dissatisfaction, to show how the average workman of today, with his bathroom and plumbing, lives better than the kings of the world up to 150 years ago. In the battles between labor and capital, let them both argue out their troubles as much as they will, but one thing all must remember: to be careful that no act imperils, in any way, the sacred institutions of these United States."

Mr. Griffith then outlined the scope of the picture, which would include the Boston Tea Party, Lexington and Concord, Paul Revere's Ride, the heroism of Nathan Hale, the dark days at Valley Forge, and all the events of the Revolution leading up to the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The romance for such a story has been originally written by Robert W. Chambers, the letter continues. "He will give his time and practically invaluable services, owing to his great knowledge of everything pertaining to the historic as well as the romantic side of a picture dealing with this theme." The producer will also have the assistance of John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history, and Anthony Paul Kelly, playwright and scenarist.

"No effort should be spared in telling the greatest story we believe possible to tell Americans—the story of their country," Mr. Griffith concludes.

GRIFFITH TURNS TO WAR OF 1776

Working in Secret on Plans for Filming Colonial Days on Big Scale.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past three weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, well known for the portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present who will play the Washington role, but it is certain that the actor will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The interesting news about the production of the picture comes from a source which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president. This will be a source of great publicity for the picture, which will be produced under the auspices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Wilmington (NC) Dispatch Sep 26 1923

"AMERICA" NEW FILM D. W. GRIFFITH, INC.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Toledo (Ohio) News Dec 9/21/23

Filmformatio...

By BARL AIRKIN

HARVEY O'BRIEN never took part in a ... than 10 The producers of motion pictures ... are at it, each trying to beat the other ... goal is anything unusual, something ... something that will cause the ... box office.

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Elmira (NY) Gazette Sep 19 1923

Variety (NY) Sep 26 1923

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Boston Herald Sep 23 1923

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Manchester (Conn) Herald Sep 19 1923

Film Daily 9/19/23

Griffith's Next, "America"

D. W. Griffith's next picture which deals with the Revolution will be known as "America," a title which was selected after a poll that included six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sport clubs.

Griffith to Film Our Revolution

AT the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting in authentic fashion the stirring episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic which has become the mightiest in the world.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, with its workmen living better than the kings of the time of the Revolution, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility of these conditions.

...ng. W Va News Sep 12 1923

Lockport (NY) Union Sun Sep 13 1923 (2)

NY Sun Sep. 14. 23

...HOUSE ...HOME ...FFITH

...TION PIC- ...COLON- ...S

...S IDEAL ...UTIFUL ...S.

...IONS ARE ...UTIFUL, ...OR

...d beauty is ...s public in ...to a conu- ...Keats and ...re read at

...as a long, ...o slightest ...nself. His ...im in kind- ...' she said, ...rld's goods ...and some ...you have ...you'll have ...he boy did ...One of ...four cows ...very night. ...he path of ...beam of ...cludes that ...st" cows ...ture of all ...wanted the ...stop, and ...stop they ...nt would ...ter would ...way home, ...the stars, ...the sound ...When a ...t he was ...zed sound ...r a ghost. ...born cows ...for that ...er beauty. ...beside the ...a brigadier general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake," read from the world's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning them what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room wih a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my rday's business to provide the backlog for the fireplace. There were two windows. One looked upon a wheatfield with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. Bt the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where

Charles A. Schwab's house, where
Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticised by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, received a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purposes of beauty because they do not accard with the American settling and sentiment. They are incongruous and incongruity is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twentieth of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness is infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which smtes back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing frost. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the Souh, and which was cared for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small ones at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was in similar spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James River, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley house is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months later I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In teh Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large roms at the front, and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. The yae eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had ben lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—

SEMENOFF PERISHED MOSCOW, Sept. 10. A [illegible]

Grand Rapids (Mich) Press Sep 15 1923

Griffith to Make 1776 Film

United States history of the Revolutionary period is to be the basis of a big cinema production to be made by David Wark Griffith. Like his other famous productions having historical background such as "The Two Orphans" of the French Revolution period and "The Birth of a Nation," which had the Civil war as its theme, the new production will have a definite story of the American Revolution period around which the historical event will be grouped.

Griffith will make this production upon the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Frank McGlynn who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's play has been cast for George Washington. Carol Dempster will play the feminine lead.

Among the historical events to be depicted probably will be the massacre on Boston Common and the Boston "tea party." Paul Revere's ride, the Nathan Hale episode, and the battles of Concord and Lexington, filmed on the exact location of their historic conflict.

George Washington will be the dominating figure of the production. His disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee; his magnificent stroke upon Tenton after crossing the ice-filled Deleware; his tragic winter at Valley Forge and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown will be pictured upon the screen. The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American republic will form the background for the conclusion of the picture.

Griffith's Idea Of Real American Home

Movie Man Makes Plea For The Colonial Type Of House.

Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home.

The boy of fifteen was a long, "gangling" youth with no slightest claim to beauty for himself. His mother used to address him in kindly admonition. "David," she said, "some people get this world's goods by luck, others by looks and some get it by work. Since you have neither looks nor luck you'll have to get yours by work." The boy did all he could on thefarm. One of his duties was to bring four cows home from the pasture every night.

As he looks back over the path of retrospect, in the broad beam of varied experience, he concludes that these were the "orneriest" cows that browsed in any pasture of all the world. For when he wanted the cows to walk they would stop and when he wanted them to stop they would walk. And "night would gather," as the story-writer would say and the cows, half way home, would stand gazing at the stars, while the boy shivered at the sound of the wind in the trees. When a branch crackled under feet he was sure the darkness-emphasized sound was made by an Indian or a ghost.

But life was not all stubborn cows and fear-breeding night sounds for that boy. They were hours of sheer beauty. They were evenings spent beside the fireplace when his father, a brigadier-general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake" read from the gorld's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning then what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the backlog for th fireplace. Tehre were two windows. One looked upon a wheat field with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticized by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, receives a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purpose of beauty because they do not accord with the American setting and sentiment. They are incongruous, and incongruous is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twntieth part of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness and infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which stems back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the South and which was caerd for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small one at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was similar in spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James river, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley House is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months after I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In the Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large rooms at the front and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. They are eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had been lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.

More than 20,000,000 steel pins are made at Birmingham, England, every week.

VOTE FOR MARK T. LAMBERT, MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY. 13-

Boston American Sep 15 1923

Eugene (Ore) Guard 9/14/23

GRIFFITH PLANS HISTORICAL FILM

Director to Produce Story of the American Revolution

The greatest film undertaking of D. W. Griffith, the noted director, which he has just launched, will be a feature film of the Revolutionary War, and, according to his executiv it will be filmed along the same spectacular lines as "Intolerance," "The Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm."

Through Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the suggestion was made to Will H. Hays, which led to Griffith's planning of this production. It was pointed out that at this time it was opportune to present to the American public the story of the American Revolution, uncolored by prejudice, and showing the struggles and circumstances which led to the founding of the American Government.

All the resources of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other historical societies have been placed at Griffith's disposal, so that he may secure the most accurate historical data. Many of the scenes of the action will take place upon the actual sites where they occured in Revolutionary Days.

At the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck work has already begun upon a series of sets which embrace many of the historical buildings of that period. Next week Griffith will go to Boston to take scenes in the Old North Church, in Paul Revere's home, in the old State House, and many other buildings now existing where the actual scenes of the Revolutionary conflict occurred. Arrangements are also being made for the use of Bunker Hill.

New York Journal Sep. 14, 1923

...ROYING GOOD TASTE

...th in Arts and Decoration.

...ures have received, and merited, ...m about the type of rooms they ...o represent the homes of the ...nd women in evening attire de- ...opera or arrive from it. Or a ...nce is in progress. Persons of ...y and education flash their jewels ...where of a furniture shop or an ...showroom. The rooms are crowd- ...ects that stridently quarrel.

...the bad taste of such interiors. ...e two reasons that measurably ...resentation of them. First they ...from memory of some drawing ...ave seen them as crowded and ...assorted and undecorative and ...jects in Mayfair. And if a pro- ...e courage to show a room in a ...alth that was not crowded with ...isplaced magnificence he would ...e audiences. The producer offers ...g rooms and other interiors as ...nsdes" like I think are the pop- ...the rich. If I show a room of ...I conceive it to be, where life ...mouth beauty, I shall lose money. ...ffers, however, I shall tempt the ...the gods.

...that the sense of beauty is de- ...environment. If I had children ...to develop in them the sense of ...do this I should provide them ...simple beauty as the one in ...ther's marked rooms poured forth ...Keats and Tennyson and Shakes- ...peare read, not large, of rather ...and rain gray walls, of days for- ...ceful lines and of a few favor- ...All portraits, among them a por- ...magnificently rich face of Anna ...a portrait of the gentle philan- ...Maxwell, one of George ...the country gentleman, the man ...the great age of dress.

...ut in a portrait of Robert M. La- ...and when or that Frank will ...a coat to his college at Ha- ...the best part of the present day.

When to have the nights be- ...the street for service. When ...the bad dress for with fashion ...When to use the night have ...the day. In the other direction, ...I should have the period ...period, which I should have ...period, with their frames ...and gilded canvas. And in the ...the Miss Franks, the ...Miss Franks, and a number of ...Miss Franks, would ...be in the ...

D. A. R. TO BACK HISTORIC FILM

New York, Sept. 15.—At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting in authentic fashion the stirring episodes of that period in our history for which the society was formed to commemorate America's successful struggle for independence and the foundation of the republic which has become the mightiest of the world.

David Wark Griffith.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photodrama should show first, the America of today, with its workmen living better than the kings of the time of the revolution, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility of these conditions.

This is the first time in the life of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photodrama.

JILES WEAL SUPPORTS FOR POOR MAN

Chicago (Ill) Journal Sep 15 1923

D. W. Griffith has started work on his Revolutionary War story at Mamaroneck. The production will represent one of Griffith's most ambitious efforts and may cost $1,500,000. The opening sequences shot this week include the ride of Paul Revere to warn the citizens of Lexington of the approach of the British soldiers. Members of the Griffith staff are understood to be dickering for various farms near New York on which will be staged the elaborate battle scenes. It seems quite likely that several important engagements of the Revolution will be filmed on a large scale.

New Orleans (La) Times Picayune 9/16/23

GRIFFITH AT WORK IN SECRET MAKING REVOLUTION FILM

Will H. Hays and D. A. R. Behind Historical Classic Effort.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence and the foundation of the Republic.

The subject has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some pictures before the new work begins of Paul Revere's ride, the battle of Concord and Lexington, Washington and his army at Valley Forge, Washington and Cornwallis at Yorktown, Washington and Lafayette, Washington and Rochambeau, Washington and Greene, Washington and Pulaski, Washington and Kosciusko, Washington and Steuben, Washington and Lee, Washington and Hamilton, Washington and Knox

Los Angeles (Cal) Express Sep. 9/16/23

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 9/17/23

Exhibitors Herald. Chicago (Ill) Sep 22 1923

Chattanooga (Tenn) Times. Sep. 23 1923

Tacoma 12 3 Sep 15 1923

Revolution Film Begun

By Frederick James Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—David Wark Griffith has started work on his big spectacle of the Revolution. The first scenes have just been shot at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Frederick James Smith

The actual story of the reason why "D. W." has launched this historical feature is now told for the first time. The idea grew out of a plea made by the Daughters of the American Revolution to Will Hays, overlord of the cinema. Hays, in turn, put the idea to Griffith—and so the spectacle came into being. This, by the way, is the first time on record that a motion picture has been made on the plea of an organization of the magnitude of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

I am able to tell—also for the first time—something about the story of the spectacle. There will be a love theme running through the opus, but, essentially, the spectacle will be a panorama of the Revolution, introducing every character of the period. The love story will be in the hands of Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, who played a minor role in "The White Rose." Frank McGlyn, who portrayed Abraham Lincoln for such a long time in the John Drinkwater play of that name, is to be the George Washington. Other important characters will be Nathan Hale, Benedict Arnold and Alexander Hamilton.

Griffith tells me he plans to take some seven months on the production, and he expects to make it the biggest thing, in expenditures, anyway, since "Way Down East" and "Intolerance."

Washington (DC) Times 9/17/23

EARLY AMERICA IS PLOT OF GRIFFITH'S NEXT.

It develops that the Daughters of the Revolution, one of the strongest patriotic organizations of this country, is tremendously concerned in the making of D. W. Griffith's next, which will show the founding of the American government.

Correspondence passing between Mrs. Cook, president of the D. A. R., Mrs. Nash, regent of New York, and Griffith, was made public by the Hays office and indicates the import and seriousness of the film, the scenario of which will be prepared by Anthony Paul Kelly.

The committee on public relations of the Hays office is actively interested in the firm.

Bath (Me) Times Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM IS CALLED "AMERICA"

Members of Col. Dummer Sewall chapter, D. A. R., will be interested to learn that "America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Levity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Chicago (Ill) Journal Sep 19 1923

Boston Traveler 9/19/1923

GRIFFITH'S FILM

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a close second.

Buffalo (NY) Commercial Sep 19 1923

"America"

D. W. Griffith has decided to name his next picture "America."

For Zang Gray

Newark (NJ) News Sep 20 1923

"America" Selected as Title For New Griffith Production

After a canvass of six universities, six grade schools and six sporting places, the last of which included a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room and a dance hall, D. W. Griffith selected the title "America" for a Revolutionary film he is preparing to produce at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

More than ninety per cent. of the votes taken were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a close second. Several of those who participated in the voting have been invited to appear in the battle and other group scenes punctuating the action.

Ziegfeld Follies has gone to Boston.

America will be the name of the new big D. W. Griffith picture of the American Revolution. It is costing $1,000,000 and will not be completed until next spring. The picture will tell the story of the Colonies' struggles for freedom from the inception of the troubles with England to the final success of Washington's Army. Robert W. Chambers has written the story, including in it an adaption of his novel, The Reckoning. The most famous men of the period will appear, such as Washington, Adams, Hancock, Nathan Hale, Patrick Henry and Paul Revere.

The role of Washington probably will be assumed by Frank McGlynn. Neil Hamilton, introduced by Griffith in The White Rose, is to be the romantic hero and Carol Dempster will be the sweetheart.

Variety (Sept) Sep 20 1923

New York Post 9/21/23

NAME GRIFFITH SPECTACLE

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of American Revolution.

Morning Telegraph (NY) Sep 22 1923

GRIFFITH WORKING ON PATRIOTIC 'AMERICA'

Record of Revolution—McGlyne May Be George Washington

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his next production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and concerning a stirring period of the Revolutionary War.

The story so far has been concerned with the reconstruction of Barrie school, near the hamlet of Greenburg, N. Y., about 10 miles from the Mamaroneck where the studio is. Five big sets have been built there and the hardships of Valley Forge, West, has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes the U. S. War Department has given the producer authority to detail a regiment of men from Fort Hamilton, one of the oldest forts in the country. They are using up the men and equipment in preparing for the training place in West Chester county.

The principals of the picture have not been finished and Paul Hampton and Frank Brotherton are there is a probability that Frank Brotherton will appear in New York Tuesday to join Mamaroneck and will be shown in the Revolutionary Washington.

Means, in the press, called upon to find a good person to be the Nathan Hale, Paul Revere's ride and the battle of Lexington and Concord, Paul Revere's ride and the battle of Lexington and Concord, Paul Revere's ride and the battle of Lexington and Concord

Harrisburg (Pa) News Sep 12 1923

Rockford (Ill) Union Sun Sep 13 1923

NY Sun Sep. 14. 23

IAL HOUSE DEAL HOME SAYS GRIFFITH

D. W. GRIFFITH, MOTION PICTURE MAN, WANTS COLONIAL HOUSES

MAKES PLEA FOR HIS IDEAL FOR MORE BEAUTIFUL HOMES IN U. S.

MANY GREAT MANSIONS ARE FAR FROM BEAUTIFUL, SAYS DIRECTOR

Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home.

The boy of fifteen was a long, "gangling" youth with no slightest claim to beauty for himself. His mother used to address him in kindly admonition. "David," she said, "some people get this world's goods by luck, others by looks and some get it by work. Since you have neither looks nor luck you'll have to get yours by work." The boy did all he could on the farm. One of his duties was to bring four cows home from the patsure every night. As he looks back over the path of retrospect, in the broad beam of varied experience, he concludes that these were the "ornerliest" cows that browsed in any pasture of all the world. oFr when he wanted the cows to walk they would stop, and when he wanted them to stop they would walk. "And "night would gather," as the story-writer would say, and the cows, half way home, would stand gazing at the stars, while the boy shivered at the sound of the wind in the trees. When a branch crackled under feet he was sure the darkness-emphasized sound was made by an Indian or a ghost.

But life was not all stubborn cows and fear-breeding night sounds for that boy. There were hours of sheer beauty. They were evenings spent beside the fireplace when his father, a brigadier-general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake" read from the world's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning then what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the backlog for the fireplace. There were two windows. One looked upon a wheatfield with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticised by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, received a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purposes of beauty because they do not accard with the American settling and sentiment. They are incongruous and incongruity is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twentieth of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness is infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which smtes back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the Souh, and which was cared for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small ones at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was in similar spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James River, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley house is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months later I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In teh Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large roms at the front, and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. The yue eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had ben lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—

SEMENOFF PERISHED MOSCOW, Sept. 10. A [illegible]

Grand Rapids (Mich) Press Sep 15 1923

Griffith's Idea Of Real American Home

Movie Man Makes Plea For The Colonial Type Of House.

Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home.

The boy of fifteen was a long, "gangling" youth with no slightest claim to beauty for himself. His mother used to address him in kindly admonition. "David," she said, "some people get this world's goods by luck, others by looks and some get it by work. Since you have neither looks nor luck you'll have to get yours by work." The boy did all he could on thefarm. One of his duties was to bring four cows home from the pasture every night.

As he looks back over the path of retrospect, in the broad beam of varied experience, he concludes that these were the "ornerliest" cows that browsed in any pasture of all the world. For when [redacted] wanted the cows to walk they would stop and when he wanted them to stop they would walk. And "night would gather," as the story-writer would say and the cows, half way home, would stand gazing at the stars, while the boy shivered at the sound of the wind in the trees. When a branch crackled under feet he was sure the darkness-emphasized sound was made by an Indian or a ghost.

But life was not all stubborn cows and fear-breeding night sounds for that boy. They were hours of sheer beauty. They were evenings spent beside the fireplace when his father, a brigadier-general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake" read from the gorld's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning then what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the backlog for th fireplace. Tehre were two windows. One looked upon a wheat field with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticized by thes who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, receives a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purpose of beauty because they do not accord with the American setting and sentiment. They are incongrous, and incongruous is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twntieth part of the value in dollars of the two I have named,but their value in sentiment and in fitness and infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which stems back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the South and which was caerd for by twenty-five servants are large in the front part of the house and taper to small one at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was similar in spirit to Shirley House one of the famous homes on the James river, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley House is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months after I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In the Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large rooms at the front and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. They are eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had been lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.

More than 20,000,000 steel [illegible] are made at Birmingham, England, every week.

VOTE FOR MARK T. LAMBERT, MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY. 13c

GRIFFITH PLANS HISTORICAL FILM

Director to Produce Story of the American Revolution

The greatest film undertaking of D. W. Griffith, the noted director, which he has just launched, will be a feature film of the Revolutionary War, and, according to his executiv it will be filmed along the same spectacular lines as "Intolerance," "The Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm."

Through Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the suggestion was made to Will H. Hays, which led to Griffith's planning of this production. It was pointed out that at this time it was opportune to present to the American public the story of the American Revolution, uncolored by prejudice, and showing the struggles and circumstances which led to the founding of the American Government.

All the resources of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other historical societies have been placed at Griffith's disposal, so that he may secure the most accurate historical data. Many of the scenes of the action will take place upon the actual sites where they occured in Revolutionary Days.

At the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck work has already begun upon a series of sets which embrace many of the historical buildings of that period. Next week Griffith will go to Boston to take scenes in the Old North Church, in Paul Revere's home, in the old State House, and many other buildings now existing where the actual scenes of the Revolutionary conflict occurred. Arrangements are also being made for the use of Bunker Hill.

New York Journal Sep. 14, 1923.

Griffith to Make 1776 Film

United States history of the Revolutionary period is to be the basis of a big cinema production to be made by David Wark Griffith. Like his other famous productions having historical background such as "The Two Orphans" of the French Revolution period and "The Birth of a Nation," which had the Civil war as its theme, the new production will have a definite story of the American Revolution period around which the historical event will be grouped.

Griffith will make this production upon the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Frank McGlynn who played Abraham Lincoln in ohn Drinkwater's play has been cast for George Washington. Carol Dempster will play the feminine lead.

Among the historical events to be depicted probably will be the massacre on Boston Common and the Boston "tea party." Paul Revere's ride, the Nathan Hale episode, and the battles of Concord and Lexington, filmed on the exact location of their historic conflict.

George Washington will be the dominating figure of the production. His disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee; his magnificent stroke upon Tenton after crossing the ice-filled Deleware; his tragic winter at Valley Forge and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown will be pictured upon the screen. The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American republic will form the background for the conclusion of the picture.

Minneapolis (Minn) Journal Sep 13 1923

Boston American Sep 15 1923

Eugene (Ore) Guard 9/14/23

DESTROYING GOOD TASTE

D. W. Griffith in Arts and Decoration.

Motion pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they photograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart of the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's showroom. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel.

I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justfy the presentation of them. First they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinment as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them rooms of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's cultured voice poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Longish rooms, not large, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls, of days for repose in graceful lines and of a few forceful pictures—all portraits, among them a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle patrician [illegible] of Lincoln, Emerson, son of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the great out of doors.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee, at the moment when as Mark Twain said [illegible] to put courage at Appomattox, he faced one of the greatest tragedies of war. When he knew the supplies he had depended on would not arrive. When the meeting he had dreamed for with Johnson had failed. When he saw the odds have turned the tide of war in the other direction, he knew, through accumulated [illegible] that [illegible] should have the portrait of General Grant, who, [illegible] the conquering [illegible] of the end of the war. The President gave [illegible] Grant. There would be one of the old Puritans, too, with their [illegible] [illegible] and in the [illegible] [illegible] Washington, the [illegible] [illegible] Franklin, and a [illegible] [illegible] Franklin would be an [illegible] [illegible] and of [illegible] [illegible].

The work of American [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner Sep 16 23

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 9/17/23

Exhibitors Herald Chicago (Ill) Sep 22 1923

Chattanooga (Tenn) Times Sep 23 1923

Tacoma (Wash) Sep 15 19

Revolution Film Begun

By Frederick James Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—David Wark Griffith has started work on his big spectacle of the Revolution. The first scenes have just been shot at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Frederick James Smith

The actual story of the reason why "D. W." has launched this historical feature is now told for the first time. The idea grew out of a plea made by the Daughters of the American Revolution to Will Hays, overlord of the cinema. Hays, in turn, put the idea to Griffith—and so the spectacle came into being. This, by the way, is the first time on record that a motion picture has been made on the plea of an organization of the magnitude of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

I am able to tell—also for the first time—something about the story of the spectacle. There will be a love theme running through the opus, but, essentially, the spectacle will be a panorama of the Revolution, introducing every character of the period. The love story will be in the hands of Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, who played a minor role in "The White Rose." Frank McGlyn, who portrayed Abraham Lincoln for such a long time in the John Drinkwater play of that name, is to be the George Washington. Other important characters will be Nathan Hale, Benedict Arnold and Alexander Hamilton.

Griffith tells me he plans to take some seven months on the production, and he expects to make it the biggest thing, in expenditures, anyway, since "Way Down East" and "Intolerance."

...te in "The Law of Compensation."

Griffith to Film Our Revolution

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting in authentic fashion the stirring episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic which has become the mightiest in the world.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, with its workmen living better than the kings of the time of the Revolution, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility of these conditions.

Moving Picture World (Ny) Sep 22 1923

Motion Picture News (Nyc) Sep. 22 1923

Washington (DC) Times 9/17/23

Variety (Nyc) Sep 20 1923

Film Daily 9/19/

Manchester (Conn) Herald Sep 19 1923

Boston (Mass) Post 9/22/23

Pittsburgh (Pa) Sep 23 1923 Gazette Times

Trenton (NJ) Gazette Sep 20 1923

Elmira (NY) Gazette Sep 19 1923

EARLY AMERICA IS PLOT OF GRIFFITH'S NEXT

It develops that the Daughters of the Revolution, one of the strongest patriotic organizations of this country, is tremendously concerned in the making of D. W. Griffith's next, which will show the founding of the American government.

Correspondence passing between Mrs. Cook, president of the D. A. R., Mrs. Nash, regent of New York, and Griffith, was made public by the Hays office and indicates the import and seriousness of the film, the scenario of which will be prepared by Anthony Paul Kelly.

The committee on public relations of the Hays office is actively interested in the firm.

Bath (Me) Times Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM IS CALLED "AMERICA"

Members of Col. Dummer Sewall chapter, D. A. R., will be interested to learn that "America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Boston Traveler 9/19/23

Chicago (Ill) Journal Sep 19 1923

"America"

D. W. Griffith has decided to name his next picture "America."

For Zane Grey

GRIFFITH'S FILM

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

Newark (NJ) News Sep 20 1923

"America" Selected Title For New Griffith Production

After a canvass of six universities, six grade schools and six sporting places, the last of which included a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room and a dance hall, D. W. Griffith selected the title "America" for a Revolutionary film he is preparing to produce at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

More than ninety per cent. of the votes taken were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a close second. Several of those who participated in the voting have been invited to appear in the battle and other group scenes punctuating the action.

Buffalo (NY) Commercial Sep 19 1923

Zieg feld Follies has gone to Boston.

America will be the name of the new big D. W. Griffith picture of the American Revolution. It is costing $1,000,000 and will not be completed until next spring. The picture will tell the story of the Colonies' struggles for freedom from the inception of the troubles with England to the final success of Washington's Army. Robert W. Chambers has written the story, including in it an adaption of his novel, The Reckoning. The most famous men of the period will appear, such as Washington, Adams, Hancock, Nathan Hale, Patrick Henry and Paul Revere.

The role of Washington probably will be assumed by Frank McGlynn. Neil Hamilton, introduced by Griffith in The White Rose, is to be the romantic hero and Carol Dempster will be the sweetheart.

New York Jet 9 1.21.23

NAME GRIFFITH SPECTACLE

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of American Revolution.

GRIFFITH WORKING ON PATRIOTIC 'AMERICA'

Record of Revolution—McGlyne May Be George Washington

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his next production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and concerning a screen record of the Revolutionary War.

The work so far has been concerned with the reproduction of battle scenes near the homes of Mamaroneck, N. Y., about 16 miles from the Mamaroneck where the studio is. Five big sets have been built there and the hardness of Lexington, Mass., has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes the U. S. War Department has given the producer a detail of more than 1,000 men from one of the local forts. These big sets have been built in the wood and transported on coaches from the parking place in Mamaroneck county.

The scenario of the docket shows Paul Revere and Patrick Henry, and there is a probability that Frank McGlynn, who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's "Lincoln," will be chosen to play Washington.

Music in the piece, called upon to stand around Boston in the Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's ride and so on, is to be provided by the Mamaroneck Philharmonic Society.

The film was started some time after a concept of the production, which was first made by Griffith and Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman" and "The Leopard's Spots," and was based on the original manuscript of a play by Dixon.

The film was started after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

Motion Picture News (Nyc) Sep 29 1923

"America" Title Chosen for Griffith Picture

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Motion Picture News (Nyc) Sep 22 1923

"America" Under Way

Griffith to Make Revolutionary Film at Request of D. A. R.

Production Will Depict Sacrifices and Stuggles During the Period of America's Founding

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Singular honors and further recognition of the motion picture as a medium for fostering Americanism and promoting education is bestowed on the cinema in a request made by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution that a film be made, dedicated to patriotic purposes, and depicting the struggles and sacrifices of the founders of America. This request has been acceded to and the picture will be produced by D. W. Griffith.

THIS is believed to be the first time in the history of the motion picture that a national organization of the prestige of the D. A. R. has requested the industry to produce a photoplay.

* * *

The request was first made to the Committee on Public Relations affiliated in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State Regent, representing the Daughters of the American Revolution on the committee made the request to Mr. Hays who transmitted the idea to Mr. Griffith who readily consented to make the picture.

Preparation of the scenario has started and acording to present plans the picture will graphically show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary period. Prominent figures and scenes of early American history will be introduced and the whole is intended to foster the spirit of Americanism in an appealing manner.

* * *

Mr. Griffith, in outlining his plans for the production in a letter to Will Hays, stated:

"It is an important development in the progress of motion pictures when such an organization takes an active and helpful interest in introducing these larger themes into pictures."

Writing further on his idea of what the picture would embody Mr. Griffith's plans include the picturization of various phases of unrest today; the average working man's condition at present; the battles between capital and labor. Then the story would go into the past and show the great sacrifices made by our forefather to make possible the privileges now enjoyed. This would lead into the story of the Revolution depicting outstanding events and personages of American history.

* * *

Among them would be such scenes and incidents as the battlefield at Concord and Lexington; the road where Paul Revere made his memorable ride; the battle of Bunker Hill; Nathan Hale risking his life to protect another; the disaster at Ft. Washington and the retreat from Ft. Lee and many other scenes of importance.

According to Mr. Griffith, Robert W. Chambers, noted author, whose several books deal with the Revolutionary period will render his time and services in the making of the picture as will John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history and Anthony Paul Kelly, author of "Three Faces East."

* * *

While the picture will be of historical nature it will be a commercial production, appealing to the masses. It will be kept entirely free from political or partisan propaganda.

Motion Picture News (Nyc) Sep. 22 1923

Griffith Making Patriotic Production

Producing Story of Revolutionary Period on Big Scale at Request of D. A. R. Officials

RESPONDING to a request from officials of the Daughters of the American Revolution, transmitted through Will H. Hays, D. W. Griffith is at work on a motion picture based on the founding of the American Government.

The request, according to announcement this week, was made first to the Committee on Public Relations, affiliated with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Mr. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York Regent, representing the D. A. R. on the Committee, made the request. The Committee sent the request to Mr. Hays who turned it over to Mr. Griffith and obtained his consent.

The film as at present outlined is to show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary Period.

In a letter to Mr. Hays, outlining the picture, Mr. Griffith wrote in part, after pointing out the present world-wide unrest and the danger of Bolshevism: "Our idea of a motion picture that is much needed in America is to show conditions in America as they are today, of various phases of unrest and dissatisfaction, to show how the average workman of today, with his bathroom and plumbing, lives better than the kings of the world up to 150 years ago. In the battles between labor and capital, let them both argue out their troubles as much as they will, but one thing all must remember: to be careful that no act imperils, in any way, the sacred institutions of these United States."

Mr. Griffith then outlined the scope of the picture, which would include the Boston Tea Party, Lexington and Concord, Paul Revere's Ride, the heroism of Nathan Hale, the dark days at Valley Forge, and all the events of the Revolution leading up to the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

"The romance for such a story has been originally written by Robert W. Chambers," the letter continues. "He will give his time and practically invaluable services, owing to his great knowledge of everything pertaining to the history as well as the romantic ele-of a picture dealing with this theme." The producer will also have the assistance of John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history, and Anthony Paul Kelly, playwright and scenarist.

"No effort should be spared in telling the greatest story we believe possible to tell Americans—the story of their country," Mr. Griffith concludes.

Spirit of '76 in Film

D. W. Griffith is to make a motion picture that will deal with the early days of the Republic, and embody the great episodes of the American Revolution. Mr. Griffith has consented to make the picture at the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This organization made its request through the Committee on Public Relations, which affiliates in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H. Hays is president.

GRIFFITH DENOUNCES 78 SCREEN INTERIORS

(D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.)

Motion pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they protograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart to the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's show-room. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel. I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First, they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill-assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them rooms of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's rotund voice poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Longish rooms, not large, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls, of dark furniture in graceful lines and of a few forceful pictures—all portraits, among them a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle philosopher of Concord, Emerson, one of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the great out-of-doors.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee at the moment when, as Earl of French said when he paid a visit to my cottage at Mamaroneck, he faced one of the greatest tragedies of war. When he knew that the supplies he had depended on would not arrive. When the meeting he had hoped for Johnson had failed. When his plan that might have turned the tide of war in the other direction, he knew, through unconquerable circumstances had died. I should have the portrait of Gen. Grant, sturdy but gentle, his campaigning hat pulled down over his eyes, saying as he viewed the noble discomfiture of the idol of the south, "The surrender of side arms will not be necessary." There would be one of the old Puritans, too, with their dreams hidden behind stern masks. And in the snow. Always in the snow. Roger Williams, the builder, rather than Miles Standish, the soldier. And Thomas Paine. And a thinker of France; say Rousseau. Each picture would be an epic. Each would be a well of character inspiration.

The tread of Americans away from the cities to country homes is an indication of the desire for such a manner of living. But the trend is slow. The American life of today is so jassed that we fly constantly but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of any nation. That sense of beauty will not be developed until reading and reflection again become national pastimes.

Detroit (Mich) News Sep 23 1923

Albany (NY) News Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS TO WAR OF 1776

Working in Secret on Plans for Filming Colonial Days on Big Scale.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past three weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio in Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some outdoor scenes before the advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, the latter known for portrayal of the role of Abraham Lincoln in the John Drinkwater play of that name, which was produced by the Theatre Guild last year. Mr. McGlynn is to be cast in the role of George Washington.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Wilmington (NC) Dispatch Sep 26 1923

"AMERICA" NEW FILM D. W. GRIFFITH, INC.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Chicago (Ill) Sep 21 1

Hartford (Conn) Sep 20 1

A Michigan city h... lead of France and h... "The Birth of a Nati... shown there again. ... chief of police claim ...

"America" has been ... title for the film of ... which will be made ... at the request of t... the American Revolu...

This is ... that a picture has b... direct request of any ...

IN THE MOVIE

"America" to Select... D. W. Griffith's ...

"America" is the title ... W. Griffith's revolution... he is preparing to make ... tion of the Daughters ... Revolution. This is th... where a film has been ... by a public organization ... selected after a poll of ... six grade schools, six ... sporting places, where ... prevalent, including ... camp, a race track, a ... hall and a boys' playg... More than 90 per cent ... votes were for "Ameri... "The Spirit of Seventy-... heavy second choice. ... vividness and comprehe... were the standards by ... all the returns were ...

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 9/21/23

Filmformation

By EARL AIKEN

HARVEY O'HIGGINS gave high part in a work great ... ago than the producers of motion pictures. Every ... are so in each trying to find the ... which ... is something different, something ... goal ... something that will stand the test ... time ... box office.

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM TO BE CALLED "AMERICA"

Syracuse (N Y) Herald Sep 12 1923

Lockport (N Y) Union Sun Sep 13 1923

N Y Sun Sep. 14. 23

HOUSE HOME RIFFITH

MOTION PIC-TS COLON-SES

HIS IDEAL AUTIFUL U. S.

NSIONS ARE AUTIFUL, CTOR

and beauty is rous public in ace to a cont-ing Keats and peare read at was a long, no slightest himself. His him in kind-id," she said, world's goods oks and some ce you have k you'll have The boy did arm. One of g four cows every night. the path of oad beam of concludes that ariest" cows pasture of all he wanted the uld stop, and to stop they night would writer would f way home, the stars, at the sound ees. When a feet he was asized sound or a ghost. tubborn cows nds for that heer beauty. nt beside the her, a brigadier general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake," read from the world's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning them what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room wih a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my rday's business to provide the backlog for the fireplace. There were two windows. One looked upon a wheatfield with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. Bt the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticised by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, received a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purposes of beauty because they do not accard with the American settling and sentiment. They are incongruous and incongruity is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twentieth of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness is infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which smtes back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the Souh, and which was cared for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small ones at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was in similar spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James River, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley house is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months later I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In teh Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large roms at the front, and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. The yae eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had ben lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—

SEMENOFF PERISHED MOSCOW, Sept. 10. A dispatch

Grand Rapids (Mich) Press Sep 15 1923

Griffith's Idea Of Real American Home

Movie Man Makes Plea For The Colonial Type Of House.

Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home.

The boy of fifteen was a long, "gangling" youth with no slightest claim to beauty for himself. His mother used to address him in kindly admonition. "David," she said, "some people get this world's goods by luck, others by looks and some get it by work. Since you have neither looks nor luck you'll have to get yours by work." The boy did all he could on thefarm. One of his duties was to oring four cows home from the pasture every night.

As he looks back over the path of retrospect, in the broad beam of varied experience, he concludes that these were the "ornerriest" cows that browsed in any pasture of all the world. For when he wanted the cows to walk they would stop and when he wanted them to stop they would walk. And "night would gather," as the story-writer would say and the cows, half way home, would stand gazing at the stars, while the boy shivered at the sound of the wind in the trees. When a branch crackled under feet he was sure the darkness-emphasized sound was made by an Indian or a ghost.

But life was not all stubborn cows and fear-breeding night sounds for that boy. They were hours of sheer beauty. They were evenings spent beside the fireplace when his father, a brigadier-general of the Civil War, whom the neighbors and the men of his company called "Thundering Jake" read from the gorld's greatest poets and dramatists. Unconsciously I was learning then what consciously now I know, that the root and spring of beauty are in worthy sentiment.

I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the oacklog for th fireplace. Tehre were two windows. One looked upon a wheat field with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather bare room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possaned the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticized by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, receives a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purpose of beauty because they do not accord with the American setting and sentiment. They are incongrous, and incongruous is never beautiful.

The most beautiful houses in America are but a twntieth part of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness and infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristitcs. Their style is early American, which stems back to the early Greek. One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the South and which was caerd for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small one at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was similar in spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James river, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley House is conceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America. A few months after I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In the Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large rooms at the front and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their settings. They are eloquent of the soul of America. There are houses that had been lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle.—D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.

More than 20,000,000 steel pans are made at Birmingham, England, every week.

VOTE FOR MARK T. LAMBERT, MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY. 13t

New Orleans (La) Times Picayune 9/16/23

Griffith to Make 1776 Film

United States history of the Revolutionary period is to be the basis of a big cinema production to be made by David Wark Griffith. Like his other famous productions having historical background such as "The Two Orphans" of the French Revolution period and "The Birth of a Nation," which had the Civil war as its theme, the new production will have a definite story of the American Revolution period around which the historical event will be grouped.

Griffith will make this production upon the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Frank McGlynn who played Abraham Lincoln in the Drinkwater's play has been cast for George Washington. Carol Dempster will play the feminine lead.

Among the historical events to be depicted probably will be the massacre on Boston Common and the Boston "tea party." Paul Revere's ride, the Nathan Hale episode, and the battles of Concord and Lexington, filmed on the exact location of their historic conflict.

George Washington will be the dominating figure of the production. His disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee; his magnificent stroke upon Tenton after crossing the ice-filled Deleware; his tragic winter at Valley Forge and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown will be pictured upon the screen. The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American republic will form the background for the conclusion of the picture.

Boston American Sep 15 1923

Eugene (Ore) Guard 9/17/23

GRIFFITH PLANS HISTORICAL FILM

Director to Produce Story of the American Revolution

The greatest film undertaking of D. W. Griffith, the noted director, which he has just launched, will be a feature film of the Revolutionary War, and, according to his executiv it will be filmed along the same spectacular lines as "Intolerance," "The Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm."

Through Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the suggestion was made to Will H. Hays, which led to Griffith's planning of this production. It was pointed out that at this time it was opportune to present to the American public the story of the American Revolution, uncolored by prejudice, and showing the struggles and circumstances which led to the founding of the American Government.

All the resources of the Daughters of the American Revolution and other historical societies have been placed at Griffith's disposal, so that he may secure the most accurate historical data. Many of the scenes of the action will take place upon the actual sites where they occured in Revolutionary Days.

At the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck work has already begun upon a series of sets which embrace many of the historical buildings of that period. Next week Griffith will go to Boston to take scenes in the Old North Church, in Paul Revere's home, in the old State House, and many other buildings now existing where the actual scenes of the Revolutionary conflict occurred. Arrangements are also being made for the use of Bunker Hill.

New York Journal Sep. 14. 1923.

D. W. GRIFFITH TO BACK HISTORIC FILM

New York, Sept. 15.—At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting in authentic fashion the stirring episodes of that period in our history for which the society was formed to commemorate America's successful struggle for independence the foundation of the republic which has become the mightiest of the world.

David Wark Griffith.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photodrama should show that the America of today with its workmen living better than the kings of the time of the revolution, and should then portray the struggle and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility of these conditions.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photodrama.

IT'S A REAL SHOW FOR POOR MAN

Chicago (Ill) Journal Sep 15 1923

D. W. Griffith has started work on his Revolutionary War story at Mamaroneck. The production will represent one of Griffith's most ambitious efforts and may cost $1,500,000. The opening sequences shot this week include the ride of Paul Revere to warn the citizens of Lexington of the approach of the British soldiers. Members of the Griffith staff are understood to be dickering for various farms near New York on which will be staged the elaborate battle scenes. It seems quite likely that several important engagements of the Revolution will be filmed on a large scale.

Griffith Busy

D. W. Griffith is hard at work on another historical film, which he declares will outshine his famous "Birth of a Nation." Carol Dempster, Frank McGlynn and Neil Hamilton are large roles.

Minneapolis Minn Journal Sep 16 1923

GRIFFITH AT WORK IN SECRET MAKING REVOLUTION FILM

Will H. Hays and D. A. R. Behind Historical Classic Effort.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily at some of the places at the studio at Mamaroneck to be ready to shoot some scenes which before the new gold effect of Doug Fairbanks' film in the east are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, during the last week of the city of Detroit. It is said that Griffith has secured the services of George Washington.

The cooperation of the committee in charge of the celebration of the sesquicentennial of the Battle of Princeton and the Battle of Trenton, which will be held in Washington, D. C., on Sept. 19 and 20, and of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has been secured by Griffith.

The preliminary work about the celebration of the sesquicentennial of the Battle of Princeton and the Battle of Trenton, which will be held in Washington, D. C., on Sept. 19 and 20, and of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has been secured by Griffith.

Terre Haute (Ind) Tribune Sep 16 1923

Griffith Working on Drama of Revolution

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence and the foundation of the republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily at some of the places at the studio at Mamaroneck to be ready to shoot some scenes which before the new gold effect of Doug Fairbanks' film in the east are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, during the last week of the city of Detroit. It is said that Griffith has secured the services of George Washington.

The cooperation of the committee in charge of the celebration of the sesquicentennial of the Battle of Princeton and the Battle of Trenton, which will be held in Washington, D. C., on Sept. 19 and 20, and of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has been secured by Griffith.

The preliminary work about the celebration of the sesquicentennial of the Battle of Princeton and the Battle of Trenton, which will be held in Washington, D. C., on Sept. 19 and 20, and of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has been secured by Griffith.

NEW GRIFFITH FILM NAMED 'AMERICA'

Picture of the Revolution Costing $1,000,000 Will Require All Winter in Making.

"America" is the title chosen by D. W. Griffith for his picture of the American Revolution which is being filmed at the suggestion of the Daughters of the Revolution. It will cost about $1,000,000 and will not be completed until next Spring at the earliest.

An executive of the Griffith office said to-day that the production will tell the story of the Colonies' struggle for freedom from the inception of the troubles with England to the final success of Washington's army. Robert W. Chambers has written the story, including in it an adaptation of his novel, "The Reckoning."

The most famous men of the period will appear, such as Washington, Adams, Hancock, Nathan Hale, Patrick Henry and Paul Revere. The role of Washington probably will be assumed by Frank McGlynn. It is reported that Mr. Kay Harris will play the part of Walter Butler, a Tory from Brooklyn. Neil Hamilton, introduced by Mr. Griffith in "The White Rose," is to be the romantic hero and Carol Dempster will be the sweetheart.

Events of the Revolution will be shown to the public in actual historic buildings. In order to get the history Mr. Griffith has arranged with the authorities control the film structure to prevent that use in other motion pictures for one year.

At the Griffith office it was said today that Lord Cornwallis, who was captured when at Yorktown, is to be shown the man who fired the shot which ended the battle. The actor who will be cast in the role of Cornwallis is not known, it was said.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Com'l Tribune Sep 16 1923

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM

[illegible]

Rochester (N Y) Dem Chronicle Sep 16 1923

Boston (Mass) Globe Sep 16 1923

Telegraph 16 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 9/16/23

Revolution Film Begun

By Frederick James Smith

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—David Wark Griffith has started work on his big spectacle of the Revolution. The first scenes have just been shot at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Frederick James Smith

The actual story of the reason why "D. W." has launched this historical feature is now told for the first time. The idea grew out of a plea made by the Daughters of the American Revolution to Will Hays, overlord of the cinema. Hays, in turn, put the idea to Griffith—and so the spectacle came into being. This, by the way, is the first time on record that a motion picture has been made on the plea of an organization of the magnitude of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

I am able to tell—also for the first time—something about the story of the spectacle. There will be a love theme running through the opus, but, essentially, the spectacle will be a panorama of the Revolution, introducing every character of the period. The love story will be in the hands of Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, who played a minor role in "The White Rose." Frank McGlyn, who portrayed Abraham Lincoln for such a long time in the John Drinkwater play of that name, is to be the George Washington. Other important characters will be Nathan Hale, Benedict Arnold and Alexander Hamilton.

Griffith tells me he plans to take some seven months on the production, and he expects to make it the biggest thing, in expenditures, anyway, since "Way Down East" and "Intolerance."

Washington (DC) Times 9/17/23

EARLY AMERICA IS PLOT OF GRIFFITH'S NEXT.

It develops that the Daughters of the Revolution, one of the strongest patriotic organizations of this country, is tremendously concerned in the making of D. W. Griffith's next, which will show the founding of the American government.

Correspondence passing between Mrs. Cook, president of the D. A. R., Mrs. Nash, regent of New York, and Griffith, was made public by the Hays office and indicates the import and seriousness of the film, the scenario of which will be prepared by Anthony Paul Kelly.

The committee on public relations of the Hays office is actively interested in the firm.

Bath (Me) Times Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM IS CALLED "AMERICA"

Members of Col. Dummer Sewall chapter, D. A. R., will be interested to learn that "America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Boston Traveler 9/19/23

Chicago (Ill) Journal Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH'S FILM

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent. of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

"America"

D. W. Griffith has decided to name his next picture "America."

Newark (NJ) News Sep 20 1923

"America" Selected as Title For New Griffith Production

After a canvass of six universities, six grade schools and six sporting places, the last of which included a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room and a dance hall, D. W. Griffith selected the title "America" for a Revolutionary film he is preparing to produce at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

More than ninety per cent. of the votes taken were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a close second. Several of those who participated in the voting have been invited to appear in the battle and other group scenes punctuating the action.

Buffalo (NY) Commercial Sep 19 1923

Ziegfeld Follies has gone to Boston.

America will be the name of the new big D. W. Griffith picture of the American Revolution. It is costing $1,000,000 and will not be completed until next spring. The picture will tell the story of the Colonies' struggles for freedom from the inception of the troubles with England to the final success of Washington's Army. Robert W. Chambers has written the story, including in it an adaption of his novel, The Reckoning. The most famous men of the period will appear, such as Washington, Adams, Hancock, Nathan Hale, Patrick Henry and Paul Revere.

The role of Washington probably will be assumed by Frank McGlynn. Neil Hamilton, introduced by Griffith in The White Rose, is to be the romantic hero and Carol Dempster will be the sweetheart.

Variety (Myatt) Sep 20 1923

NAME GRIFFITH SPECTACLE

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of American Revolution.

Morning Telegraph (NY) Sep 22 1923

Griffith to Film Our Revolution

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is to make a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting in authentic fashion the stirring episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic which has become the mightiest in the world.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, with its workmen living better than the kings of the time of the Revolution, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility of these conditions.

Moving Picture World (NY) Sep 22 1923

Griffith Making Patriotic Production

Producing Story of Revolutionary Period on Big Scale at Request of D. A. R. Officials

RESPONDING to a request from officials of the Daughters of the American Revolution, transmitted through Will H. Hays, D. W. Griffith is at work on a motion picture based on the founding of the American Government.

The request, according to announcement this week, was made first to the Committee on Public Relations, affiliated with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Mr. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York Regent, representing the D. A. R. on the Committee, made the request. The Committee sent the request to Mr. Hays who turned it over to Mr. Griffith and obtained his consent.

The film as at present outlined is to show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary Period.

In a letter to Mr. Hays, outlining the picture, Mr. Griffith wrote in part, after pointing out the present world-wide unrest and the danger of Bolshevism: "Our idea of a motion picture that is much needed in America is to show conditions in America as they are today, of various phases of unrest and dissatisfaction, to show how the average workman of today, with his bathroom and plumbing, lives better than the kings of the world up to 150 years ago. In the battles between labor and capital, let them both argue out their troubles as much as they will, but one thing all must remember, to be careful that no act imperils, in any way, the sacred institutions of these United States."

Mr. Griffith then outlined the scope of the picture, which would include the Boston Tea Party, Lexington and Concord, Paul Revere's Ride, the heroism of Nathan Hale, the dark days at Valley Forge, and all the events of the Revolution leading up to the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The romance for such a story has been originally written by Robert W. Chambers," the letter continues. "He will give his time and practically invaluable services, owing to his great knowledge of everything pertaining to the history as well as the romance in of a picture dealing with this theme." The producer will also have the assistance of John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history, and Anthony Paul Kelly, playwright and scenarist.

"No effort should be spared in telling the greatest story we believe possible to tell Americans—the story of their country," Mr. Griffith concludes.

Detroit (Mich) News Sep 23 1923

Spirit of '76 in Film

D. W. Griffith is to make a motion picture that will deal with the early days of the Republic, and embody the great episodes of the American Revolution. Mr. Griffith has consented to make the picture at the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This organization made its request through the Committee on Public Relations, which affiliates in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H Hays is president.

Boston Post 9/22/23

GRIFFITH WORKING ON PATRIOTIC 'AMERICA'

Record of Revolution—McGlyne May Be George Washington

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his next production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and comprising a screen record of the Revolutionary War.

The work so far has been concerned with the reproduction of battle scenes near the hamlet of Ramapo, N. Y., about 18 miles from the Mamaroneck where the studio is. Five big sets have been built there and the hardships of Valley Forge, Mass., have been reproduced.

For the battle scenes the U. S. War Department has given the producers assistance to the extent of more than a hundred men and one of the finest regimental bands. Fifty-six cannon of the period and transported to Ramapo from the training place at Washington, Md.

The scenario of his painted upon his Paul Dickinson and Carol Dempster, and there is a probability that Frank McGlynn, who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's "Lincoln," will be chosen to play General Washington.

Scenes in the drama include one in Faneuil Hall, Boston, in the Old Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's ride will be shown and as the so-called "Minute Men" assemble and are drilled.

The film was started upon after a period of preparation, which included a study of the period, and the Revolutionary War.

Griffith's Next, "America"

D. W. Griffith's next picture which deals with the Revolution will be known as "America," a title which was selected after a poll that included six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sport clubs.

Pittsburgh (Pa) Sun-Telegraph Gazette Times

Hartford (Conn) Courant Sep 20 1923

A Michigan city has followed the lead of France and has declared that "The Birth of a Nation" must not be shown there again. The mayor and chief of police claim it incites race prejudice.

"America" has been selected as the title for the film of the Revolution which will be made by D. W. Griffith at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This is the first instance that a picture has been made at direct request of any organization.

Chicago (Ill) News Sep 21 1923

"America" Title Chosen for Griffith Picture

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep 29 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH is making a picture of the Revolution, sponsored by the D. A. R. It will be known as "America," a title which was selected after a poll that included six universities, six grade schools and six clubs.

"America" Under Way

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 19.—The Hartford Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has

Boston (Mass) Globe Sep 20 1923

Elmira (NY) Gazette Sep 19 1923

Exhibitors Herald Chicago (Ill) Sep 22 1923

Griffith to Make Revolutionary Film at Request of D. A. R.

Production Will Depict Sacrifices and Stuggles During the Period of America's Founding

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Singular honors and further recognition of the motion picture as a medium for fostering Americanism and promoting education is bestowed on the cinema in a request made by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution that a film be made, dedicated to patriotic purposes, and depicting the struggles and sacrifices of the founders of America. This request has been acceded to and the picture will be produced by D. W. Griffith.

THIS is believed to be the first time in the history of the motion picture that a national organization of the prestige of the D. A. R. has requested the industry to produce a photoplay.

* * *

The request was first made to the Committee on Public Relations affiliated in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State Regent, representing the Daughters of the American Revolution on the committee made the request to Mr. Hays who transmitted the idea to Mr. Griffith who readily consented to make the picture.

Preparation of the scenario has started and acording to present plans the picture will graphically show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary period. Prominent figures and scenes of early American history will be introduced and the whole is intended to foster the spirit of Americanism in an appealing manner.

* * *

Mr. Griffith, in outlining his plans for the production in a letter to Will Hays, stated:

"It is an important development in the progress of motion pictures when such an organization takes an active and helpful interest in introducing these larger themes into pictures."

Writing further on his idea of what the picture would embody Mr. Griffith's plans include the picturization of various phases of unrest today; the average working man's condition at present; the battles between capital and labor. Then the story would go into the past and show the great sacrifices made by our forefather to make possible the privileges now enjoyed. This would lead into the story of the Revolution depicting outstanding events and personages of American history.

* * *

Among them would be such scenes and incidents as the battlefield at Concord and Lexington; the road where Paul Revere made his memorable ride; the battle of Bunker Hill; Nathan Hale risking his life to protect another; the disaster at Ft. Washington and the retreat from Ft. Lee and many other scenes of importance.

According to Mr. Griffith, Robert W. Chambers, noted author, whose several books deal with the Revolutionary period will render his time and services in the making of the picture as will John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history and Anthony Paul Kelly, author of "Three Faces East."

* * *

While the picture will be of historical nature it will be a commercial production, appealing to the masses. It will be kept entirely free from political or partisan propaganda.

Motion Picture News (NY) Sep. 22 1923

GRIFFITH DENOUNCES SCREEN INTERIORS

(D. W. Griffith in September Arts and Decoration.)

Motion pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they protograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart to the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's show-room. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel. I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First, they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill-assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them rooms of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's rotund voice poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Longish rooms, not large, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls, of dark furniture in graceful lines and of a few forceful pictures—all portraits, among them a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle philosopher of Concord, Emerson, one of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the great out-of-doors.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee at the moment when, as Earl of French said when he paid a visit to my cottage at Mamaroneck, he faced one of the greatest tragedies of war. When he knew that the supplies he had depended on would not arrive. When the meeting he had hoped for Johnson had failed. When his plan that might have turned the tide of war in the other direction, he know, through unconquerable circumstances had died. I should have the portrait of Gen. Grant, sturdy but gentle, his campaigning hat pulled down over his eyes, saying as he viewed the noble discomfiture of the idol of the south, "The surrender of side arms will not be necessary." There would be one of the old Puritans, too, with their dreams hidden behind stern masks. And in the snow. Always in the snow. Roger Williams, the builder, rather than Miles Standish, the soldier. And Thomas Paine. And a thinker of France: say Rousseau. Each picture would be an epic. Each would be a well of character inspiration.

The trend of Americans away from the cities to country homes is an indication of the desire for such a manner of living. But the trend is slow. The American life of today is so jazzed that we fly constantly but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of any nation. That sense of beauty will not be developed until reading and reflection again become national pastimes.

New American Photoplay By Griffith

Noted Director Secretly at Work on Big Picture of Revolution

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the now quick advance of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show, first, the America of today and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginnings and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Comman and the Tea Party in Boston harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his dasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the [illegible] story.

Albany (NY) News Sep 19 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS TO WAR OF 1776

Working in Secret on Plans for Filming Colonial Days on Big Scale.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past three weeks the Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio in Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Paul Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, and there is a probability that Frank McGlynn, who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's "Lincoln," will be chosen to play General Washington.

Scenes in the drama include one in Faneuil Hall, Boston, in the Old Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's ride will be shown and as the so-called "Minute Men" assemble and are drilled.

The film was started upon after a period of preparation, which included a study of the period, and the Revolutionary War.

"America" is the title of the picture of Revolutionary days which David W. Griffith will make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Wilmington (NC) Dispatch Sep 26 1923

"AMERICA" NEW FILM D. W. GRIFFITH, INC.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 9/21/23

Filmformation

By SARL AIKEN

NAMES OF PEOPLE over high part in a more grueling race than the producers of motion pictures. Every day they are in each trying to beat the other fellow to it. The goal is something different, something sensationally popular or good from something that will cover the most money in the box office.

IN THE MOVIE WORLD.

"America" to Selected as Title for D. W. Griffith's New Film.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM TO BE CALLED "AMERICA"

St Paul (Minn) Pioneer-Press 9/23/23

David W. Griffith To Film History

Work on Production Requested by National D. A. R. Going Forward Rapidly.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first-named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The undertaking came about through the co-operation of the Committee on Public Relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

D. A. R. Behind Undertaking.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president-general of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association. The producer consented and declared that the history of the revolutionary period could be made into a story as dramatic and as appealing as any ever told.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

Wealth of Dramatic Material.

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginning and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Common and the tea party in Boston harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-chilled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the conclusion of the story.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama and it is felt that Mr. Griffith and Mr. Hays can be trusted to see that the best artistic and technical efforts are put into the

N.Y. Telegram Sep 14 1923 4

D. W. Griffith Reveals More of His Plans for Great Picture, Depicting Revolutionary Days—Denison Clift Coming Back After Winning Laurels in Europe.

MARTHA MANSFIELD SIGNS

Charlie Mack, who is another member of the Griffith cast now at work at the Mamaroneck studios, has a part something like that played by Mae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation." It is one of the most sympathetic roles in the picture. Although D. W. Griffith bought the film rights of "The Reckoning," Robert Chambers's novel, it is said that only one character in the whole story will figure in the Griffith picture. Robert W. Chambers, Anthony Kelly and Mr. Pell, the man who is responsible for the story of "Down to the Sea in Ships," are all collaborating with Mr. Griffith on the story. Beyond calling it tentatively "The Spirit of '76," which will be discarded as soon as the picture reaches the screen for the reason that it has been used before, Mr. Griffith has not given the new production a name. Work is going on steadily with many of the historical incidents at the time of the Revolutionary War starting with the Boston Tea Party being put into readiness for filming.

Albert Grey, the manager of the Griffith organization, has had a chance to be an actor. He has been offered the job of Washington, but he withdrew in favor of Frank McGlynn because, he says, he knows McGlynn can act and he isn't sure that he can. He says he would rather manage Mr. Griffith's business than act for him. You can take it anyway you please.

Springfield (Mass) Republican 9/22/23

"AMERICA" TITLE OF NEXT GRIFFITH FILM

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hal and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the voter were for "America," with "The Spirit of 76," a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged. The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Washington (DC) News 9/22/23

GERRITT J. LLOYD, press representative for D. W. Griffith, has written me a long and interesting letter setting me right on the matter of Griff's future activities, and particularly on his connection with the blackface comedy being made at his studio by Lloyd Hamilton. I am glad to be set right on the matter, and pass Mr. Lloyd's information on to you as informative. You may remember that a fortnight ago I wrote a lament on the seeming deterioration of the old master. Lloyd's letter says that Griffith was interested in having Al Jolson do a character in the American Revolution story the old fox was even then cooking. When Al flew to Europe, leaving the blackface picture flat on its back, Griffith dropped the comedy and turned it all over to Hamilton and Hamilton's own director. He has nothing to do with Ham's show as at present constituted.

THE picture of the American Revolution is now on the fire, and sizzling, says Lloyd. Griffith has prepared a scenario of the thing, with the assistance of Robert W. Chambers and others. He has gone over the historical ground at Concord, in Boston and at Valley Forge and Trenton. He hopes, in his picture, to show the causes of the Revolution, and tell the dramatic tale of those stirring days with all the mastery at his command. And that's that. I rescind the order for tuber roses for the "departed" master. I take back the offer of my services as pallbearer. I sit back in my private, keg-lined projection room, waiting for Griffith's next picture to arrive. And certainly I thank Mr. Lloyd for his fine letter on the affairs of the Poo Bah of Mamaroneck.

Boston Globe 9/23/23

GRIFFITH'S PHOTOPLAY OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his new production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and comprising a screen record of the Revolutionary War.

The work so far has been concerned with the reproduction of battle scenes near the hamlet of Summers, N. Y., about 50 miles from the Mamaroneck, where the studio is. Five big sets have been built there and the battlefield of Lexington, Mass. has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes the United States War Department has given the picture producer a detail of more than 1000 men from one of the coast defense points. They are taken up the sound and transported by country from the landing place in Westchester County.

The principals so far decided upon are Neal Hamilton and Carol Dempster and there is a probability that Frank McGlynn, who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's "Lincoln," will be chosen to play Gen Washington.

Scenes in the screen record will be filmed around Boston, in the State House, Paul Revere's ride will be filmed and as far as possible the original surroundings will be used as backgrounds.

The title was decided upon after a canvass of six universities, school clubs and sporting clubs. "America" won by a narrow margin over "The Spirit of '76."

Brockton (Mass) Enterprise 9/21/23

Griffith Film For D. A. R.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post Sep 22 1923

Griffith's Next Film

"America" is the title selected for W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

Orlando (Fla) Star Sep 22 1923

"AMERICA" TITLE OF GRIFFITH'S LATEST

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be man yin the film.

Butte (Mont) Miner Sep 23 1923

"America" Voted Title of Patriotic Film by Griffith

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six," a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be man yin the film.

Spartanburg (SC) Herald 9/19/23

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Griffith is to make a film play depicting America's successful struggle for independence and the development of the republic." The undertaking came about through the cooperation of the committee on public relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will S. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president general of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture and Mr. Hays consulted with Mr. Griffith. The producer consented, declaring that the history of the Revolutionary period could be made into a story "as thrilling, as dramatic and as appealing as any ever told."

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer 9/23/23

pounds overweight for the role and gave her a banting vacation.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight picture is the sensation now attracting the current crowd in New York. A number of theaters are exhibiting it. The picture aroused almost as much discussion as the fight itself.

The most expensive picture production ever made will be D. W. Griffiths' "America," a screen record of the Civil War. First estimates on its cost are $500,000.

With the German mark on a gold standard here

So Norwalk (Conn) Sentinel 9/22/23

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

New Orleans (La) Times-Picayune 9/23/23

GRIFFITH, CHAPLIN ENGLAND'S CHOICE

D. W. Griffith and Charlie Chaplin are the favorites of the British film-going public, according to cable reports of a popularity contest completed recently by the Sunday Pictorial, London.

"Way Down East" was declared the most popular picture by the voting which was carried on throughout the British Isles. "Orphans of the Storm" was named the second most popular, while the film-goers selected Charlie Chaplin's "The Kid" as the third.

"Orphans of the Storm" has received the highest honors ever given to a motion picture, having been declared the best picture of that year through a vote of the motion picture patrons throughout the country.

The poll in the British Isles covers pictures which have been released during the past year.

Schenectady (Ny) Union-Star 9/22/23

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

Detroit (Mich) News 9/23/23

GRIFFITH TURNS TO WAR OF 1776

Working in Secret on Plans for Filming Colonial Days on Big Scale.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Wark Griffith is making a film play, probably the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared, and during the past three weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, well known for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first-named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

Sacramento (Cal) News & Screen 9/22/23

D. W. Griffith has commenced production of a big American historical drama at his Mamaroneck, N. Y. studios. It is laid in the time of the Revolution, and has for some of its chief characters George Washington and Nathan Hale. The cast has not as yet been announced.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Times-Star 9/22

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming film based on stirring historic incidents of the American Revolution.

Indianapolis (Ind) News 9/22/23

Philadelphia Record Sep 23 1923

Griffith's "America"

Cleveland (Ohio) State Journal 9/23/23

GRIFFITH TO PRODUCE FILM CALLED 'AMERICA'

Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer

GRIFFITH LANDS WAR DEP'T AS AID

1000 Men Produce in Making of Forthcoming Film Spectacle

Davenport (Ia) Times 9/22/23

MOVIELAND

Hartford (Conn) Courant 9/23/23

Worcester (Mass) Telegram 9/23/23

Griffith Film Will Be Called "America"

Worcester (Mass) Telegram 9/23/23

Boston (Mass) Herald 9/23/23

New Orleans (La) Times-Picayune 9/23/23

D. W. Griffith's Next Film To Be "America"

Columbia (SC) Record Sep 23 1923

Indianapolis (Ind) Star 9/23/23

AMERICA" TITLE OF Revolutionary Film

Indianapolis (Ind) News 9/23/23

Indianapolis (Ind) 9/22/23

Oklahoma (Okla) Oklahoma 9/23/23

Griffith to Produce Revolutionary Play

GRIFFITH TO PRODUCE BIG FILM SPECIAL FOR D. A. R.

"America" Is Title of Spectacle Play of Revolution.

It Will Be Produced to Answer Request of Patriotic Societies and Boys Work Leaders.

"America" is the title selected for the Revolutionary film D. W. Griffith is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground. More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice.

St Paul (Minn) News Sep 23 1923

AUTOISTS WATCH MOVIE MEN ACT

D. W. Griffith's Company Making Spectacular Picture at Somers, N. Y.

INDIANS IN ATTACK

Cross Cornfield Under Fire to Capture Stockade Held by Whites

D. W. Griffith is staging a big new moving picture at Somers, N. Y., a few miles over the New York state line on the state highway between Danbury and Peekskill. The location is about 45 miles from Waterbury and the roads are good.

It is a story of the Revolutionary war which, according to one of the actors, has not been named yet. Shooting the film commenced yesterday after two weeks of preparation and it is said it will last for six or eight weeks. The neighborhood is historic, being near Yorktown Heights, where there was an engagement between the Americans and British and not far from West Point and Tarrytown where Maj. Andre was caught and hanged as a spy.

What the wayfarers yesterday saw indicated that all preparations have been made for one of Griffith's big spectacles. On a hill-top north of Somers, a stand for the cameras has been erected. They are evidently fitted with telephot lenses because the distances to the scenes of action are considerable. A wooden staircase runs for over 50 yards down the steep face of the hill. Mr. Griffith stood yesterday afternoon at the top of this staircase. He was pointed out as the man in a gray suit and a white hat who, with a megaphone was directing a band of Indians engaging in making an attack upon a wooden stockade containing several houses. The stockade seemed to be about 200 feet square.

The Indians crept and scouted in rushes through a field of cornstacks, hiding behind the stacks. Frequently, one of them would be constructively shot by one of the deadshot marksmen defending the stockade and would flop realistically.

The camera looked down a roadway beside the stockade into a vista extending for nearly a quarter of a mile in which were houses, barns, hay-stacks, all looking real from the front but from the rear looking like large billboards. Sticking out over some trees at the end of the vista was the square white tower of the colonial church in Somers. Big green canvas screens 40 and 50 feet long and 10 to 20 feet high hid the telephone poles and traffic passing on the highway. The highway was patrolled by state police to keep traffic moving. On the highway some of Griffiths supes were burning tar roofing in iron wheelbarrows and tending the fires very carefully, tearing the roofing paper into small pieces and feeding it in regularly. This produced large quantities of smoke in the background to simulate the smoke of battle.

There appear to be several hundred actors and helpers in the company and at least 100 horses. The mounted soldiers were described as "Morgan's cavalry" and were in action just before the Indians attacked the stockade.

On the sides of the hill, on the roads and all over the lot generally are Revolutionary soldiers and heroes in near-buckskin uniforms, or in hunting shirts and pants, sometimes with coonskin or other raw fur hats, sometimes with cocked hats. A number of the villagers of Somers have been drawn into the play. They appear in a scene which evidently takes place at a long distance from the camera because special costumes were not required for the men while the women and children were simply instructed to wear light colored clothes that would show up at a long distance.

Automobiles were clustered yesterday around the moving picture farm and there were many sight-seers.

The Somers small boys are rapturously excited. "Ain't you got three horses to ride, now, ain't you?" said one of them yesterday to a tall young man in fringed near-buckskin hunting trousers and what looked like a buckskin undershirt with a real coonskin for a belt.

"Why, no, son," said the hero patiently. "One horse is enough, isn't it?"

Cleveland (O) News Sep 27 1923

Moving Picture World Oct 6/23

U. S. Helping Griffith

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his next production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and comprising a screen

The work so far has been concerned record of the Revolutionary war. with reproduction of battle scenes near the hamlet of Summers, N. Y. Five big sets have been built there and the battlefield of Lexington has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes, the U. S. war department has given the picture producer a detail of more than 1,000 men from one of the coast defense points.

The principals so far decided upon are Neal Hamilton and Carol Dempster, and there is a probability that Frank McGlyn, who played the name part in John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" will be chosen to play General Washington.

Scenes in the screen record will be filmed around Boston, in the state house, Paul Revere's ride will be pictured, and, as far as possible, the original surroundings will be used as backgrounds.

The title was decided upon after a canvass of six universities, school clubs and sporting clubs. "America" won by a narrow margin over "The Spirit of '76."

New York Telegraph Sep 30

Title Selected

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary screen feature which he now is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This title was selected after a poll of the membership of six leading universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where the slang of the day is most prevalent.

My Review Sep 29 1923

1,000 HORSEMEN IN MR. GRIFFITH'S 'AMERICA' FILM

War Department Co-operates in Making This Big Picture

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marono is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

My Film Daily Sep 30 1923

"America" Under Way

Outdoor Scenes Being Shot Near New York—War Dep't Co-operating With Griffith

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the D. A. R.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes from one half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolution. The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under command of Captain Love, represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

My Times 30 1923

RIDING with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside for about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marono is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love, of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be re-

GRIFFITH SECRETLY WORKING ON BIG DRAMA OF THE REVOLU

Daughters of American Revolution and Will H. Hays Behind Effort Which May Prove Director's Greatest Screen Achievement.

FRANK M'GLYNN IN ROLE

Famous Lincoln Actor Now Playing Part of George Washington—Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton Also in Cast of Historic Classic.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some Summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first-named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The undertaking came about through the co-operation of the Committee on Public Relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

D. A. R. Behind Undertaking.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president-general of the D. A. R. and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association. The producer consented and declared that the history of the revolutionary period could be made into a story as dramatic and as appealing as any ever told.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of to-day, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

Wealth of Dramatic Material.

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginning and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Common and the Tea Party in Boston Harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturisation, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic Winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the conclusion of the story.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama and Mr. Griffith and Mr. Hays can be counted on to see that the best artistic and technical efforts are put into it.

Denver (Colo) Post Sep 23

The Dempsey-Firpo fight film is the sensational box office ... the current week in New York. A number of theaters are exhibiting ... picture arouses almost as much discussion as the fight itself.

The most expensive picture production ever made will be ... Griffith's "America," a screen record of the Civil war. First estimates cost are $2,500,000.

My Film Daily Oct 1, 1923

My Review Oct

Competition

In Revolutionary Pictures Seen—Cosmopolitan to Have One—Griffith at Work—Harry Cohn, Too

Keen competition in Revolutionary War pictures is looked for in some quarters by late Winter or early Spring. It would appear now that there will be at least three pictures dealing with the highlights of that period of American history.

The one that has been widely talked about is "America," on which D. W. Griffith is now busy. He is at present shooting outdoor scenes for it in the hills of Putnam County making Somers, N. Y., his headquarters. For this portion of the story he is using about 1,000 extras.

While nothing has been said at Cosmopolitan, it is understood some tests have been made of possible actors for "Janice Meredith," a Revolutionary story, written by Robert W. Chambers, who incidentally is assisting Griffith on "America." No one at Cosmopolitan cared to talk about "Janice Meredith" yesterday, but it would not prove surprising to learn that Marion Davies had been cast for it, following completion of "Yolanda," her present vehicle.

If Cosmopolitan places the Chambers story in production, it seems to be the opinion that this production and the Griffith picture will appear on the market at the same time.

(Continued on Page 2)

Recently Harry Cohn announced in Los Angeles that he planned to film "The Life of George Washington," and that the important battle sequences would be shot in the East.

Exhibitors Herald Chicago (Ill) Oct 6 1923

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's play-ground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other scenes ...

Washington (DC) Star

MR. GRIFF INVITE TO L

Wants Public Film Sc "Ame

Galleries are to ... taking of the big sc ... tures, according to ... recently reached by ... ducers.

The purpose of ... is to combat the p ... of "faking" in pro ... discredit has been c ... of scenes by various ... tre owners compla ... did not believe any ... legitimately phot ... doctoring."

So the producer ... invite the public ... their presence does ... be work, and this ... ot into effect wit ... ticular scenes for ... production "Americ ... Griffith is reprodu ... important battles o ... War. Unusual effo ... that all the detail ... made with absolute ...

The first test of ... has been unusually ... series varying from ... ten thousand have ... by days. The h ... were the scenes ... for a perfect stad ... view the thousa ... players in action.

The privilege is ... private photographe ... with small mo ... hawk it to sm ... big scenes in mine ... early afternoon th ... flected seven se ... cameras. Capt. P ... Police, made no ar ... guest, the film and ... in the custody ... "America" in rele ...

Deseret (Ill) Jour Sep 23 1923

D. W. Griffith Will Film "America" at D. A. R. Request

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other scenes ... be many in the film.

Portland (Me) Press-Herald 9/25/23

GRIFFITH MAKING BATTLE SCENES

Has Encampment of Several Thousand Actors and Soldiers Ready to Reproduce Revolutionary War.

WAR DEPARTMENT AIDING

David Wark Griffith has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America," by establishing an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers at Somers, N. Y., in the hills of Putnam County. Complete equipment for water supply, commissary, lighting and sanitation has been installed. Three farms have been surrendered to the motion picture people as a site for their camp. The site overlooks a valley beaded with small lakes and the action will extend across this country for a mile or more, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

In accordance with instructions issued by Secretary of War Weeks to the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, the United States Army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marono is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be re-

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/25/23

Ft. Wayne (Ind) News & Sent 9/24/23

Kansas City (Mo) Star Sep 26 1923

Richmond (Va) Times Dispatch Sep 23 1923

Knoxville (Ohio) Sunday Sentinel Sep 23 1923

Chicago Tribune Sep 23 1923

Boston Post Sep 23 1923

Chicago Tribune Sep 23 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/25/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/27/23

Dunkirk News Sep

Cleveland (O) News Sep 27 1923

Cleveland (O) News Sep 27 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Sep 23 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Sep 23 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Sep 23

St Paul (Minn) Pioneer-Press 9/23/23

David W. Griffith To Film History

Work on Production Requested by National D. A. R. Going Forward Rapidly.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first-named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The undertaking came about through the co-operation of the Committee on Public Relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

D. A. R. Behind Undertaking.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president-general of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association. The producer consented and declared that the history of the revolutionary period could be made into a story as dramatic and as appealing as any ever told.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

Wealth of Dramatic Material.

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginning and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Common and the tea party in Boston harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-chilled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the conclusion of the story.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama and it is felt that Mr. Griffith and Mr. Hays can be trusted to see that the best artistic and technical efforts are put forth.

Brockton (Mass) Enterprise 9/21/23

Griffith Film For D. A. R.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post Sep 22 1923

Griffith's Next Film

"America" is the title selected for W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

Topeka (Kansas) Capital Sep 23 1923

GRIFFITH TO PRODUCE BIG FILM SPECIAL FOR D. A. R.

"America" Is Title of Spectacle Play of Revolution.

It Will Be Produced to Answer Request of Patriotic Societies and Boys Work Leaders.

"America" is the title selected for the Revolutionary film D. W. Griffith is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground. More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice.

St Paul (Minn) News Sep 23 1923

Cleveland (Ohio) State Journal 9/23/23

Indianapolis (Ind) News 9/22/23

Sy Telegram Sep 14 1923 4

D. W. Griffith Reveals More of His Plans for Great Picture, Depicting Revolutionary Days—Denison Clift Coming Back After Winning Laurels in Europe.

MARTHA MANSFIELD SIGNS

Charlie Mack, who is another member of the Griffith cast now at work at the Mamaroneck studios, has a part something like that played by Mae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation." It is one of the most sympathetic roles in the picture. Although D. W. Griffith bought the film rights of "The Reckoning," Robert Chambers's novel, it is said that only one character in the whole story will figure in the Griffith picture. Robert W. Chambers, Anthony Kelly and Mr. Pell, the man who is responsible for the story of "Down to the Sea in Ships," are all collaborating with Mr. Griffith on the story. Beyond calling it tentatively "The Spirit of '76," which will be discarded as soon as the picture reaches the screen for the reason that it has been used before, Mr. Griffith has not given the new production a name. Work is going on steadily with many of the historical incidents at the time of the Revolutionary War starting with the Boston Tea Party being put into readiness for filming.

Albert Grey, the manager of the Griffith organization, has had a chance to be an actor. He has been offered the job of Washington, but he withdrew in favor of Frank McGlynn because, he says, he knows McGlynn can act and he isn't sure that he can. He says he would rather manage Mr. Griffith's business than act for him. You can take it anyway you please.

Spartanburg (SC) Herald 9/14/23

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Griffith is to make a film play depicting America's successful struggle for independence and the development of the republic." The undertaking came about through the cooperation of the committee on public relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will S. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president general of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture and Mr. Hays consulted with Mr. Griffith. The producer consented, declaring that the history of the Revolutionary period could be made into a story "as thrilling, as dramatic and as appealing as any ever told."

Sacramento (Cal) News Screen 9/22/23

D. W. Griffith has commenced production of a big American historical drama at his Mamaroneck, N. Y. studios. It is laid in the time of the Revolution, and has for some of its chief characters George Washington and Nathan Hale. The cast has not as yet been announced.

Springfield (Mass) Republican 9/22/23

"AMERICA" TITLE OF NEXT GRIFFITH FILM

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of 76," a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged. The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Orlando (Fla) Star Sep 22 1923

"AMERICA" TITLE OF GRIFFITH'S LATEST

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

So Norwalk (Conn) Sentinel 9/22/23

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Schenectady (NY) Union-Star 9/22/23

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Times-Star 9/22

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming film based on stirring historic incidents of the American Revolution.

Washington (DC) News 9/22/23

GERRITT J. LLOYD, press representative for D. W. Griffith, has written me a long and interesting letter setting me right on the matter of Griff's future activities, and particularly on his connection with the blackface comedy being made at his studio by Lloyd Hamilton. I am glad to be set right on the matter, and pass Mr. Lloyd's information on to you as informative. You may remember that a fortnight ago I wrote a lament on the seeming deterioration of the old master. Lloyd's letter says that Griffith was interested in having Al Jolson do a character in the American Revolution story the old fox was even then cooking. When Al flew to Europe, leaving the blackface picture flat on its back, Griffith dropped the comedy and turned it all over to Hamilton and Hamilton's own director. He has nothing to do with Ham's show as at present constituted.

THE picture of the American Revolution is now on the fire, and sizzling, says Lloyd. Griffith has prepared a scenario of the thing, with the assistance of Robert W. Chambers and others. He has gone over the historical ground at Concord, in Boston and at Valley Forge and Trenton. He hopes, in his picture, to show the causes of the Revolution, and tell the dramatic tale of those stirring days with all the mastery at his command. And that's that. I rescind the order for tuber roses for the "departed" master. I take back the offer of my services as pallbearer. I sit back in my private, keg-lined projection room, waiting for Griffith's next picture to arrive. And certainly I'll ask Mr. Lloyd for his fine letter on the affairs of the Poo Bah of Mamaroneck.

Butte (Mont) Miner Sep 23 1923

"America" Voted Title of Patriotic Film by Griffith

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six," a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be man yin the film.

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer 9/23/23

pounds overweight for the role and gave her a banting vacation.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight picture is the sensational [illegible] attraction the current week in New York. A number of theaters are exhibiting it. The picture around [illegible] almost as much discussion as the fight itself.

The most expensive picture production ever made will be D. W. Griffiths' "America," a screen record of the Civil War. First estimates on its cost are $500,000.

With the German mark on [illegible]

Detroit (Mich) News 9/23/23

GRIFFITH TURNS TO WAR OF 1776

Working in Secret on Plans for Filming Colonial Days on Big Scale.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution David Wark Griffith is making a film play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past three weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first-named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

Boston Globe 9/23/23

GRIFFITH'S PHOTOPLAY OF THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his new production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and comprising a screen record of the Revolutionary War.

The work so far has been concerned with the reproduction of battle scenes near the hamlet of Summers, N. Y., about 50 miles from the Mamaroneck, where the studio is. Five big sets have been built there and the battlefield of Lexington, Mass. has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes the United States War Department has given the picture producer a detail of more than 1000 men from one of the coast defense points. They are taken up the sound and transported by country from the landing place in Westchester County.

The principals so far decided upon are Neal Hamilton and Carol Dempster and there is a probability that Frank McGlyne, who played Abraham Lincoln in John Drinkwater's "Lincoln," will be chosen to play Gen Washington.

Scenes in the screen record will be filmed around Boston, in the State House. Paul Revere's ride will be filmed and as far as possible the original surroundings will be used as backgrounds.

The title was decided upon after a canvass of six universities, school clubs and sporting clubs. "America" won by a narrow margin over "The Spirit of '76."

New Orleans (La) Times-Picayune 9/23/23

GRIFFITH, CHAPLIN ENGLAND'S CHOICE

D. W. Griffith and Charlie Chaplin are the favorites of the British film-going public, according to cable reports of a popularity contest completed recently by the Sunday Pictorial, London.

"Way Down East" was declared the most popular picture by the voting which was carried on throughout the British Isles. "Orphans of the Storm" was named the second most popular, while the film-goers selected Charlie Chaplin's "The Kid" as the third.

"Orphans of the Storm" has received the highest honors ever given to a motion picture, having been declared the best picture of last year through a vote of the motion picture patrons throughout the [illegible]

The [illegible] in the British Isles [illegible]

New Orleans (La) State Sep 23 1923

D. W. Griffith's Next Film To Be "America"

[illegible]

Columbia (SC) Record Sep 23 1923

[illegible] Revolutionary Film

Norfolk (Va) Journal [illegible] 9/23

Boston (Mass) Herald 9/23/23

Davenport (Ia) Times 9/22/23

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer

Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer

Worcester (Mass) Telegram 9/23/23

Hartford (Conn) Courant 9/23/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/22/23

Columbus (Ga) Ledger 9/23/23

Fort Worth (Tex) Star-Telegram 9/23/23

Fort Worth (Tex) Record 9/23/23

Indianapolis (Ind) News 9/23/23

Fresno (Cal) Bee 9/23/23

Sacramento (Cal) Bee 9/23/23

Toronto (Can) Globe 9/23/23

Toronto (Can) Star 9/23/23

Toronto (Can) Mail and Empire 9/23/23

Toronto (Can) Telegram 9/23/23

Toronto (Can) Daily Star 9/23/23

Toronto (Can) World

Watertown (Conn) Republican Sep 23 1923

AUTOISTS WATCH MOVIE MEN ACT

D. W. Griffith's Company Making Spectacular Picture at Somers, N. Y.

INDIANS IN ATTACK

Cross Cornfield Under Fire to Capture Stockade Held by Whites

D. W. Griffith is staging a big new moving picture at Somers, N. Y., a few miles over the New York state line on the state highway between Danbury and Peekskill. The location is about 45 miles from Waterbury and the roads are good.

It is a story of the Revolutionary war which, according to one of the actors, has not been named yet. Shooting the film commenced yesterday after two weeks of preparation and it is said it will last for six or eight weeks. The neighborhood is historic, being near Yorktown Heights, where there was an engagement between the Americans and British and not far from West Point and Tarrytown where Maj. Andre was caught and hanged as a spy.

What the wayfarers yesterday saw indicated that all preparations have been made for one of Griffith's big spectacles. On a hill-top north of Somers, a stand for the cameras has been erected. They are evidently fitted with telephot lenses because the distances to the scenes of action are considerable. A wooden staircase runs for over 50 yards down the steep face of the hill. Mr. Griffith stood yesterday afternoon at the top of this staircase. He was pointed out as the man in a gray suit and a white hat who, with a megaphone was directing a band of Indians engaging in making an attack upon a wooden stockade containing several houses. The stockade seemed to be about 200 feet square.

The Indians crept and scouted in rushes through a field of cornstacks, hiding behind the stacks. Frequently, one of them would be constructively shot by one of the deadshot marksmen defending the stockade and would flop realistically.

The camera looked down a roadway beside the stockade into a vista extending for nearly a quarter of a mile in which were houses, barns, hay-stacks, all looking real from the front but from the rear looking like large billboards. Sticking out over some trees at the end of the vista was the square white tower of the colonial church in Somers. Big green canvas screens 40 and 50 feet long and 10 to 20 feet high hid the telephone poles and traffic passing on the highway. The highway was patrolled by state police to keep traffic moving. On the highway some of Griffiths supes were burning tar roofing in iron wheelbarrows and tending the fires very carefully, tearing the roofing paper into small pieces and feeding it in regularly. This produced large quantities of smoke in the background to simulate the smoke of battle.

There appear to be several hundred actors and helpers in the company and at least 100 horses. The mounted soldiers were described as "Morgan's cavalry" and were in action just before the Indians attacked the stockade.

On the sides of the hill, on the roads and all over the lot generally are Revolutionary soldiers and heroes in near-buckskin uniforms, or if hunting shirts and pants, sometimes with coonskin or other raw fur hats, sometimes with cocked hats. A number of the villagers of Somers have been drawn into the play. They appear in a scene which evidently takes place at a long distance from the camera because special costumes were not required for the men while the women and children were simply instructed to wear light colored clothes that would show up at a long distance.

Automobiles were clustered yesterday around the moving picture farm and there were many sight-seers.

The Somers small boys are rapturously excited. "Ain't you got three horses to ride, now, ain't you?" said one of them yesterday to a tall young man in fringed near-buckskin hunting trousers and what looked like a buckskin undershirt with a real coonskin for a belt.

"Why, no, son," said the hero patiently. "One horse is enough, isn't it?"

Peoria (Ill) Journ Sep 23 1923

D. W. Griffith Will Film "America" at D. A. R. Request

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there are many in the film.

Portland (Me) Press-Herald 9/25/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/27/23

Cleveland (O) News Sep 27 1923

U. S. Helping Griffith

D. W. Griffith has been working quietly for about a month on his next production, a patriotic subject entitled "America" and comprising a screen record of the Revolutionary war.

The work so far has been concerned with reproduction of battle scenes near the hamlet of Summers, N. Y. Five big sets have been built there and the battlefield of Lexington has been reproduced.

For the battle scenes, the U. S. war department has given the picture producer a detail of more than 1,000 men from one of the coast defense points.

The principals so far decided upon are Neal Hamilton and Carol Dempster, and there is a probability that Frank McGlyn, who played the name part in John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" will be chosen to play General Washington.

Scenes in the screen record will be filmed around Boston, in the state house, Paul Revere's ride will be pictured, and, as far as possible, the original surroundings will be used as backgrounds.

The title was decided upon after a canvass of six universities, school clubs and sporting clubs. "America" won by a narrow margin over "The Spirit of '76."

Cleveland (O) News Sep 27 1923

Title Selected

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary screen feature which he now is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This title was selected after a poll of the membership of six leading universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where the slang of the day is most prevalent.

New York Telegraph Sep 20

GRIFFITH MAKING BATTLE SCENES

Has Encampment of Several Thousand Actors and Soldiers Ready to Reproduce Revolutionary War.

WAR DEPARTMENT AIDING

David Wark Griffith has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America," by establishing an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers at Somers, N. Y., in the hills of Putnam County. Complete equipment for water supply, commissary, lighting and sanitation has been installed. Three farms have been surrendered to the motion picture people as a site for their camp. The site overlooks a valley beaded with small lakes and the action will extend across this country for a mile or more, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

In accordance with instructions issued by Secretary of War Weeks to the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance in the making of the patriotic film, the United States Army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry, from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marona is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exactness the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside our maneuvers and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Richmond (Va) Times-Dispatch Sep 23 1923

U. S. HISTORIC FILM NAMED "AMERICA"

Chicago Tribune Sep 26 1923

Motion Picture Notes

Chicago Herald Sep 10

Chicago Herald Sep 26 1923

Chicago Herald Sep 26 1923

Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal Sep 22 1923

El Wayne (Ind) Sentinel 9/24/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/26/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/27/23

Cleveland (O) News Sep 27 1923

Bangor (Me) Daily News Sep 26

Cleveland (O) Plain Dealer Sep 27 1923

Cleveland (O) National Sep 27

Danbury (Conn) News Sep 27

500 MOVIE ACTORS HERE

Bangor (Ind) Daily Times Sep 24

Morning Telegraph Sep 9 1923

GRIFFITH SECRETLY WORKING ON BIG DRAMA OF THE REVOLUTION

Daughters of American Revolution and Will H. Hays Behind Effort Which May Prove Director's Greatest Screen Achievement.

FRANK M'GLYNN IN ROLE

Famous Lincoln Actor Now Playing Part of George Washington—Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton Also in Cast of Historic Classic.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the past two weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some Summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first-named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The undertaking came about through the co-operation of the Committee on Public Relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

D. A. R. Behind Undertaking.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president-general of the D. A. R. and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association. The producer consented and declared that the history of the revolutionary period could be made into a story as dramatic and as appealing as any ever told.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of to-day, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

Wealth of Dramatic Material.

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginning and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Common and the Tea Party in Boston Harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturisation, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic Winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the conclusion of the story.

This is the first time in the history of the moving picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama and Mr. Griffith and Mr. Hays are so interested in this that the best artistic and technical efforts are put into it.

Denver (Colo) Post Sep 23 1923

The Dempsey-Firpo fight film is the sensational box office attraction of the current week in New York. A number of theaters are exhibiting it. The picture arouses almost as much discussion as the fight itself.

The most expensive picture production ever made will be in the D. W. Griffith's "America," a screen record of the Civil war. First estimates on its cost are $2,500,000.

My Film Daily Oct 1, 1923

Competition

In Revolutionary Pictures Seen—Cosmopolitan to Have One—Griffith at Work—Harry Cohn, Too

Keen competition in Revolutionary War pictures is looked for in some quarters by late Winter or early Spring. It would appear now that there will be at least three pictures dealing with the highlights of that period of American history.

The one that has been widely talked about is "America," on which D. W. Griffith is now busy. He is at present shooting outdoor scenes for it in the hills of Putnam County making Somers, N. Y., his headquarters. For this portion of the story he is using about 1,000 extras.

While nothing has been said at Cosmopolitan, it is understood some tests have been made of possible actors for "Janice Meredith," a Revolutionary story, written by Robert W. Chambers, who incidentally is assisting Griffith on "America." No one at Cosmopolitan cared to talk about "Janice Meredith" yesterday, but it would not prove surprising to learn that Marion Davies had been cast for it, following completion of "Yolanda," her present vehicle.

If Cosmopolitan places the Chambers story in production it seems to be the opinion that this production and the Griffith picture will appear on the market at the same time.

Recently Harry Cohn announced in Los Angeles that he planned to film "The Life of George Washington," and that the important battle sequences would be shot in the East.

(Continued on Page 2)

My Review Oct. 6, 1923

MR. GRIFFITH TO INVITE GUESTS TO LOCATIONS

Wants Public to See His Film Scenes in "America"

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that the theatre owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's new production "America." For this Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the most important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive as galleries varying from a thousand to ten thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the galleries to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by the photographers who take the place with small motion picture cameras and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Last Saturday afternoon the State Police detected seven small motion picture companies. Capt. French, of the State Police, made no arrests at Griffith's request, the film and cameras being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Exhibitors Herald Chicago (Ill) Oct 6 1923

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's play-ground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there are many in the film.

Washington (DC) Star Sep 30 1923

Griffith to Use U. S. Army in Revolutionary War Picture

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American R. [illegible]

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marona is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside our maneuvers and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Morning Telegraph Sep 29/23

1,000 HORSEMEN IN MR. GRIFFITH'S 'AMERICA' FILM

War Department Co-operates in Making This Big Picture

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marona is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside our maneuvers and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Richmond (Va) Times-Dispatch Sep 23 1923

GRIFFITH WAR PHOTOPLAY TO COST $2,500,000

Chicago Tribune Sep 26 1923

Chicago Herald Sep 26 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/26/23

Danbury (Conn) News Sep 27

Bangor (Me) Daily News Sep 26

Cleveland (O) National Sep 27

Bangor (Me) Daily News Sep 24

El Wayne (Ind) Sentinel 9/24/23

Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal Sep 22 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/26/23

Cleveland (O) Plain Dealer Sep 27 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 9/27/23

El Wayne (Ind) News-Sentinel 9/24/23

My Times 30 1923

RIDING with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside for about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marona is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside our maneuvers and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

My Film Daily Sep 30 1923

"America" Under Way

Outdoor Scenes Being Shot Near New York—War Dep't Co-operating With Griffith

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the D. A. R.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes from one half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolution. The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under command of Captain Love, represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Evening Star Sep 27 1923 — Danbury (Conn) News Sep 27 1923 — Fort Worth Tex Star-Telegram Sep 30 1923 — Philadelphia Record Sep 30 1923 — Atlanta (Ga) American Sep 30 1923 — St Paul (Minn) Pioneer-Press 9/30/23

...nam County Scene of Big Movie Encampment

...atriotic Film "America" to Be Made—Hundreds of Soldiers and Actors There

(Special to The Evening Star)

CARMEL, Sept. 27.—The historic fields of Putnam County, over which many battles of the Revolutionary War were fought, will again resound to the tread of hundreds of horses and men and the shrill battle days of the country, when a moving picture producer starts work on the picture, "America."

Under the leadership of D. W. Griffith, a corps of actors and soldiers, has already arrived on location. The advance party is established at Somers, near this place where an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside of about a mile.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt; and a medical corps under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken but the major part of the cavalcade will be kept at Somers until late next week. The threatening weather of today and the rain earlier in the week has delayed the picture somewhat but Mr. Griffith has reported that excellent progress has been made. He is also reported as being charmed with the country and is considering locations in the Poughkeepsie district for other pictures.

Brewster Standard N.Y. Sept 28 '23

GRIFFITH CAMERAS HAVE BUSY WEEK

Shooting Big Scenes Depicting Pre-Revolutionary Struggles of American Colonists, Manoeuvers of British Forces Enacted by Infantry and Cavalry of U. S. Army Excite Admiration of Spectators.

Last Sunday the arrival of 400 U. S. Army regulars of the 18 Infantry of Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and of the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island under Division Comander Col. G. P. Pond and 125 horsemen from reserve calvary units under Captain Love, created great interest throughout the country side in the scenes that D. W. Griffith would direct in developing his latest film the "American Revolution." And every day spectators who have visited the location, which extends from Dean's Corners beyond the square in Somers, have witnessed most spectacular performances. The razing of the stockade and dwellings of a colonial settlement and the massacre of the inhabitants, incited by the conniving of British soldiers with Indians, the formation of troops of minute men, cavalry charges and skirmishes thrilled hundreds of onlookers who marveled at the perfection of details which characterized every episode dramatized. The property houses and various appurtenances and costumes and make up of the actors produce the impressions given by master paintings. The work of Director Griffith in filming, like the canvas of Meissonier, is distinguished by the minuteness of execution and breadth of treatment.

During the past week the company of actors has numbered approximately 700. Of this number about 400 soldiers and slaves are accommodated at Pine Tree Lodge. The detachment of troops occupies tents on the property adjoining the Lodge. A commissary department in charge of Lieut. DeWitt and a medical corps unit under Capt. N. T. Davie are kept active ministering to the needs of the 400, besides the regular actors a number of men, women and children of Somers, Croton Falls and Brewster appear in the mobs which the large scenes require. Carroll Dempster, the star of several Griffith productions, and Neil Hamilton, famous since his acting in "The Birth of a Nation," are the most prominent members of the cast. Mr. Griffith has frequently been assisted in staging on location by Robert W. Chambers, whose historical novels form the portion of the screen story of the drama.

The exterior of the company at Pine Tree Lodge will probably continue for six weeks, as the scenes call for a trip to Virginia for the taking of summer scenes. Interior scenes will be taken at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck. During the winter months, when the ground is covered with snow, the scenes will be taken in the Southern states. Many interior scenes and close-up shots will be taken at the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck.

Poughkeepsie (N.Y.) Eagle-Ventz. Sep 28 1923

Thousand Horsemen Used in Movie Scene

With a thousand horsemen D. W. Griffith has been making scenes for his picture "America" in the hills of Putnam County. The picture is being produced at the suggestion of the Daughters of the Revolution, for the scenes are to be those of Revolutionary battles. One thousand men of the United States Army are encamped close by ready to give every reasonable assistance at the order of Secretary of War John Weeks.

Schenectady (N.Y.) Union-Star Sep 29 '23

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, in this state, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment

HUNDREDS SEE MOVIES TAKEN

Griffith Takes Possession of Somers, N. Y., for Staging of Patriotic Film.

Back from the state road just outside Somers, N. Y., the brooding silence of the autumn painted hills is being rent by the shouts of battle as the American War of Indepence, with all its soul-stirring drama, is being re-fought.

Not since the day "Hack" Bailey's "Old Bet" made her triumphal entry into town and the natives glimpsed a view of the first pachyderm ever to set foot on American shores, has the sleepy little village been treated to such a thrill.

It was only a few days ago that an army of eight hundred with horses and impedimenta descended upon the surprised community and proceeded to plunder, burn and lay siege to the countryside. The outfit includes half-naked redskins, British redcoats and colonial minutemen by the hundreds. And to make the company complete, George Washington is there too. But he's not commander-in-chief of these forces. Everybody, from the boisterous savages to George the Third's proud territorials, takes orders from David W. Griffeth, moving picture director extraordinary and giant of the film producing world.

The company with its army of actors, principles and extras, directors, cameramen, mechanics and utility men, is "on location" in the historic region immortalized by Cooper and Irving, for the filming of the big outdoor scenes in a forthcoming screen version of the Revolutionary war based on Robert W. Chambers' series of historical novels. Starred in the drama are Carroll Dempster and Neil Hamilton, popular favorites, and assisting personally in the direction of the production is Mr. Chambers himself, a genial appearing middle-aged man, who was pointed out yesterday as the man wearing a brown suit, brown soft hat, soft shirt of tan and a brown necktie.

This latest and according to a statement made by a member of the directing staff to a reporter of the News, most stupendous of all Griffeth screen dramas, is being produced at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution, under the working title, "America." Whether or not this title will be changed when the picture is released depends upon a number of things, the News' informant said.

Because of the historical and educational nature of the picture, the government has loaned to the company 450 U. S. regulars for the filming of the battle scenes. These, thoroughly disguised as Indians, British redcoats or minutemen, were seen in action yesterday afternoon by hundreds of spectators as an encounter was staged in the fields behind the Pine Tree Lodge Inn.

Camp for 1,000 Soldiers.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33 piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War department is said to be taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as they are giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Tent City Erected.

The company has taken possession of Pine Tree Lodge Inn, which it will make its headquarters during the coming few weeks that it is expected to remain here. A tent city, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment, has sprung up in the fields immediately behind the Inn and across the road and again further down the state road where the troops are quartered. The principals, however, for the most part, motor back and forth daily from Mamaroneck unless working for several days at a stretch, in which case it becomes necessary for them to remain in Somers. Mr. Chambers has been at location several times, motoring from his home in New York city.

But the newly implanted community is not confined to the streets of tents. Some fifteen property houses have been set up in different sections of the town and several truck loads of scenery are also distributed about the city. The site chosen for the cameras overlooks a valley beaded with lakes with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

A spectacular scene was "shot" Monday afternoon in the fields behind the Elephant Inn when a house within a settlers' stockade was burned by "Indians," who proceeded to massacre the inhabitants caught in the flames. Such a scene has its thrills, even though the property houses are of tin covered with painted canvas which is quickly inflammable when a match is applied to the oil-soaked surface. The "inhabitants," in such a case, are, of course dummies.

Indians in Skirmish.

In the taking of a trial scene picture, yesterday afternoon, depicting a skirmish between redcoats and Indians on one side and minute men on the other, spectators saw an improvised bar fence, several hundred feet long, with foliage cut from near by woods apparently growing over it, demolished in a few seconds and then quickly repaired by waiting carpenters for a second "shot" at the same scene. A charge of several hundred cavalry down the hill at top speed was an exciting climax to yesterday afternoon's work.

How long the company will remain in the vicinity is problematical. It may be six weeks or it may be only a few days, one of the directors said. It is understood that when the leaves fall, the company will go to Virginia to take the remaining summer scenes, returning here to go over the same location in the winter when the snow is on the ground. Interior scenes will be taken at the Griffith studios at Orienta Point, Mamaroneck. It is said the filming of the production will take ten months longer, work having been started on it six weeks ago.

Many Spectators.

The vicinity of the "Griffith city" for some distance, with scores of automobiles parked on both sides of the roadside, resembles nothing so much as a circus come to town. Word of the presence of the movie people spread with lightning rapidity through the countryside with the resulting crowds of visitors daily, to the scene of activities. The entertainment of the inhabitants of the vicinity is added to vastly by the presence of the military band which gives concerts in Brewster and Somers nightly.

Scores of Danburians have visited the spot and the influence of the company's presence upon the merchants round about they have felt as far away as Danbury where some trading has already been done. To mention one instance, the Hoyt Green was called upon yesterday to fill an order, for 100 box bushes, which was promptly done and the order dispatched.

Cincinnati Ohio Post Sep 29 1923

'America' Begun

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam co., N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of war, has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment

Toledo (Ohio) Sunday Blade Sep 29 1923

By BARL AIKEN

I CHOSE that we may see them reproduce the Battle of Falling Timbers right here at home, we are especially hoping that D. W. Griffith's new production, dealing with the American Revolution, will be a huge success.

Others may follow in his steps and who knows, someone may be fit to write a romance involving the early struggles in and around Toledo, which, the pioneers are as rich in romance, color and thrills as any other part of any people famous land.

Boston Post 9/29/23

Camden (N.J.) Post-Telegram Sep 29 1923

GRIFFITH ENGAGED IN WORK ON "AMERICA"

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Rochester (N.Y.) 1/1/1923 — Dem & Chron Sep 30

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam Co., N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Newark (N.J.) Ledger Sep 30 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GREATEST FILM TO BE "AMERICA"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes, has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit, under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love, of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Revolutionary Camp

D. W. Griffith, riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation instalment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc. The United States army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy major battles of the Revolutionary War.

WAR FILM IS THE REQUEST OF D. A. R.'s

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six," a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Detroit (Mich) News Sep 30 1923

GRIFFITH SHOOTS FIRST SCENES ON BIG FILM

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment.

"AMERICA" IS TITLE OF GRIFFITH FILM

Charlie Mack, who is another member of the Griffith cast now at work at the Mamaroneck studios, has a part something like that played by Mae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation." It is one of the most sympathetic roles in the picture. Although D. W. Griffith bought the film rights of "The Reckoning," Robert Chambers' novel, it is said that only one character in the whole story will figure in the Griffith picture. Robert W. Chambers, Anthony Kelly and Mr. Fell, the man who is responsible for the story of "Down to the Sea in Ships," are all collaborating with Mr. Griffith on the story. After considering "The Spirit of '76," "America" has finally been decided upon as the title of the new production. Work is going on steadily with many of the historical incidents at the time of the Revolutionary [illegible] starting with the Boston [illegible] being put into [illegible] for filming.

Springfield (Ohio) Sun Sep 30 1923

GRIFFITH IS MAKING PICTURE WITH HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

Film Being Made by Noted Producer at Request of Daughters of American Revolution; Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank M'Glynn Few in Cast

AT the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the last few weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The undertaking came about through the co-operation of the committee on public relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

D. A. R. Behind Undertaking

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president-general of the D. A. R. and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York state regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association. The producer consented and declared that the history of the revolutionary period could be made into a story as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

Wealth of Dramatic Material

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginning and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Common and the Tea Party in Boston harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battle fields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the conclusion of the story.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama and Mr. Griffith and Mr. Hays can be trusted to see that the best artistic and technical efforts are put [illegible]

Washington (D.C.) Times Sept. 1, 1923

New Griffith Film.

"America" was the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prizefighter's camp, a racetrack, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

Springfield (Mass) News Oct 1 1923

Chicago (Ill) Post Oct 2 1923

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 9/30/23

Boston Morning Globe Oct 3 1923

Worcester Mass Eagle Oct 2 1923

PICTURIZING THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Keen interest will attach to the forthcoming Revolutionary war picture, "America," which has been undertaken by one of the biggest men in the motion picture field, none other than David Wark Griffith. Griffith proposed to stage, "with exact accuracy," the major battles of the Revolution and in doing so he is to have the technical advice of federal army officers, the secretary of war, it is announced, having given orders to the war department to "lend every reasonable assistance" in the manufacture of this patriotic film, the idea of which was suggested by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

For various reasons every really patriotic American sincerely hopes that accuracy will guide the producer throughout this effort. This film will be one of the most important ventures of the motion picture industry. If it meets with approval it will appeal with force to the youth of the native land and to every citizen who will see pride in the successful efforts of this land of ours to win independence from a foreign yoke.

The danger which is to be avoided is in the temptation to temper with history in order to strengthen the dramatic or romantic side of the effort, as has been done in the case of so many books which have been authentic throughout in order to make "popular" fiction for many days. There is no more glorious and great theme in the development of this country than pioneering with it the establishment of a nation. Let us hope that the Griffith production will be a great success.

EARLY WAR FILM CALLED AMERICA

Screen Production of Revolution Being Made at the Request of National D. A. R.

GRIFFITH BEGINS GREAT PHOTOPLAY

Famous Director Starts Work on Revolutionary War Story, 'America'

WAR DEPARTMENT TO LEND ASSISTANCE

Griffith at Work on His New Picture

PELL WITH GRIFFITH ON BIG MOVIE PICTURE

Brewster (NY) Standard Oct 1 23

GRIFFITH FORTIFIES FLOOD'S HILL

On Somers-Lincolndale Road Where Hundreds of Spectators Encamp to Witness Filming of the Battle of Bunker Hill. Cameras Cover Action on Three Sides at Once.

During the past week David W. Griffith essayed the role of general with phenomenal success as he directed surveyors in laying out, about a knoll on the Flood farm at Somers, a redoubt and a breastwork similar to those built by Engineer Gridley at Bunker Hill, and then with his major general Charlie Mack issued commands to groups of actors and soldiers, numbering about 300, to enact the battle scenes made famous by the patriot and British armies in 1775. Every important detail recorded in the history of the battle, from the placing of the two field-pieces to the building of the rail fence, partly concealed by hay, the first and last reports of the American forces, was strongly carried out. The costumes of red coats and patriots, the playing of the band and the stimulus of the best of October weather combined to make the occasion memorable for participants and for spectators.

When the signal for heavy bombardment was given, detachments of dummies were detailed to relieve the actors who were holding intrenchments. And the dummies did well. One spectator thought they did too well, for they addressed several remarks to an agreeable looking manikin and received no reply. In time he might have overlooked this unresponsiveness, but the loquaciousness of the friend, who caught him in the act of confiding his opinions to a man of straw will cut down the average of his pride for some time to come.

Besides the "casual casualties" suggested by the director there were several accidents that resulted in serious injuries in the case of two or three men and in minor injuries to several others. Private Fleming of Company A, 18th Infantry, 19 years of age, detailed to fire a cannon, had his right hand blown off and his face badly burned, when he was reloading the chamber for a second discharge. Doctors on the field administered first aid and accompanied the boy to the hospital at Fort Slocum. Two men, whose eyes were injured by musketry fire are improving under expert treatment. And all who received burns and bruises are given first aid treatment and daily dressing by experienced doctors.

Interest and sympathy in the case of Private Fleming was expressed by a substantial purse made up by gifts from members of the Griffith Company, the soldiers and the spectators. Mr. Griffith takes every precaution possible for safeguarding those engaged in the action, and provides the best care for the unfortunate victims of accidents. His personal interest for the welfare of the members of the company is equalled by the high regard the actors entertain for him. There is not a man on location who would not follow the Director into actual battle.

Many of the spectators are becoming habitues of the Griffith location. They can recognize the stars without the aid of field glasses, and out of this familiarity the more youthful members of the feminine gallery have gained courage to stop the stars in their course and request them to pose for snap shots. Neil Hamilton has bravely borne the brunt of the Brownie battery, and from all reports he is admirably equipped by nature and experience to assume this responsibility. His contribution to the fairer members of his public were not, however, confined to mere posing. He submitted to interviews and told the story of his life from his school days up to his first meeting with Mr. Griffith. A naive, credulous, young lady from the Blue Grass was one of the most eager to question the young actor. And his response was adequate. The interviews recorded by the most prolific writers for Photoplay and the Motion Picture Magazine could not have given the thrill of this personal colloquy. It's a great world.

Jersey City (NJ) Review 9/27/23

Thrilling Films

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, one of the famous movie directors is to produce a film of the Revolution. It is his opinion that the story can be made "as thrilling, as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told."

Indeed it can, and with strict adherence to the truth, too. The Daughters are entitled to the thanks of Americans for conceiving the idea. Their organization has been taking a leading part in the Americanization of school history text books that were "revised" along internationalist lines following the war, and now are supplementing that work with the inspiration of a film of the American Revolution.

Toum. Topic (Ny) 9/27/23

DAVID W. GRIFFITH is at work on his latest production, a film of the Colonial period, under the "patronage" of the Daughters of the Revolution. The juvenile role will be acted by Neill Hamilton, whose picture, advertising a hat, is displayed in the foyer of the Ritz, he having long posed for commercial purposes, following trials as a movie "extra." Mr. Griffith has also traveled far since his minor roles in support of James K. Hackett! It was in 1908 that he turned to the movies, first as an actor and later as a director, for the old Biograph Company. His first production was called "The Adventures of Dolly."

San Francisco (Cal) Chronicle 7

Destroying Good Taste

By D. W. GRIFFITH

MOTION pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they photograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart to the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's showroom. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel. I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill-assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them rooms of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's orotund voice poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Longish rooms, not large, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls, of dark furniture in graceful lines of a few forceful pictures—all portraits among them a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle philosopher of Concord, Emerson, one of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the great out-of-doors.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee at the moment when, as Earl French said when he paid a visit to my cottage at Mamaroneck, he faced one of the greatest tragedies of war. When he knew that the supplies he had depended on would not arrive. When the meeting he had hoped for with Johnson had failed. When his plan that might have turned the tide of war in the other direction, he knew through unconquerable circumstances had died. I should have the portrait of General Grant, stubborn but gentle, his campaigning hat pulled down over his eyes, saying as he viewed the noble discomfiture of the idol of the South: "The sword render of side arms will not be necessary." There would be one of the old Puritans, too, with the dreams hidden behind stern mask. And in the snow. Always in the snow. Roger Williams, the builder, rather than Miles Standish the soldier. And Thomas Paine. And thinker of France; say Rousseau. Each picture would be an epic. It would be a well of character and aspiration.

The trend of Americans away from the cities to country homes is an indication of the desire for such a manner of living. But the trend is slow. The American life of today is so jazzed that we fly constantly but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of any nation. That sense of beauty will not be developed until reading and reflection again become national pastimes.—Arts and Decoration.

Canton (Ohio) News 9/21/23

David Wark Griffith is now preparing to film a patriotic spectacle at the request and under the direct auspices of The Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title "America" was selected after a poll, numbering several hundred votes, was taken by the organization in six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places.

All who assisted in selecting the title have been invited to participate in the group scenes of the picture.

* * *

The recent eclipse of the sun which was total on the Pacific coast, is estimated to have cost $3,000 in loss of time at Universal City.

For a full hour the sun was shrouded to such an extent that photoplay was impossible and production was at a standstill while high priced stars and hundreds of lesser lights waited for the phenomenon to pass.

Among the pictures on which work was stopped were the William Desmond-Eileen Sedgwick serial, "Beasts of Paradise," Mary Philbin's "My Mamie Rose" and Herbert Rawlinson's feature, "All for the Love of Gloria."

Portland (Me) Press-Herald 9/29/23

Stage and Screen News

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America". Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand soldiers and players, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. Under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander, the U. S. Army has established an encampment for one thousand men from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops. Griffith plans to stage with accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War, with the assistance of Federal Army officers. Horsemen have been assembled from reserved cavalry units, under the command of Captain Love of the Reserves.

Portland (Me) Evening Express 9/28/23

Griffith Filming Revolutionary Tale

Washington (Pa) Observer 9/29/23

"America" Wins by Big Majority as Film Title

Revolution have taken a hand in the film business. At least they have cooperated with David W. Griffith to make a patriotic [illegible] the glory of our independence which their organization commemorates. The title of the film is "America" and it was selected in an ingenious manner. A poll was taken of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prizefighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's playground. More than ninety percent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" the second choice. The voters are also to be included in the many group scenes in the production.

Newport's secret of the summer has trickled into town with the return of the inhabitants. Many were the secret meetings of important men during the idle days. Dire things were suspected, but it develops that it was but a scheme for the extermination of the pestiferous mosquito, and was headed by no less a generalissimo than T. Suffern Tailer.

Los Angeles (Cal) Record 9/29/23

"AMERICA" IS GRIFFITH'S FILM. New York, Sept. 26.—"America" is the title voted for Griffith's Revolutionary War film after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places—"including a prizefighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground."

Sailing for Algiers October 6, is Edwin Carewe, who will produce "A Son of the Sahara" on the edge of the desert. Carewe's brothers are members of the producing unit, Finis Fox as scenario writer and Wallace Fox as assistant director. Actors and technical staff will follow Carewe about November 1. Bert Lytell has been cast for a leading role.

Atlanta (Ga) Journal 9/30/23

TWO curious motion pictures are promised by noted directors who confess that they have always had a secret longing to do such unusual pictures, but have held back because of the great ogre of the movies—the box office.

The most interesting of these announcements is King Vidor's statement that he has always wanted to make a picture of Gulliver's Travels, and that he intends doing so very soon. The picture will be very difficult to complete, but it will give a wonderful opportunity to the trick photographers. The joy of seeing Dean Swift's quaint character wandering through the land of the Lilliputians and the countries of the giants and of the horses, will make up for the difficulties that must be overcome.

D. W. Griffith says he will soon make a picture of the American Revolution based on the story of "Nathan Hale." There is a poignancy about this bit of American history that gives the story a deep appeal. The stage play of that theme swept thousands into tears, and made one actress faint—Nance O'Neill, who played the moss-Rose of Maine's seashore, and rose to fame in Maine's emotional heights in the scene where she died her lover taken away to the gallows.

Nothing Burbankian would make an appeal to Mr. Griffith.

Lewiston (Me) Evening Journal 9/29/23

Panorama of Revolution to be Griffith's Project

Revolutionary Film Is Made Possible by Gift

Lowell (Mass) Evening Citizen 9/29/23

Revolution Re-Enacted for Movies at Somers

BIG FILM SPECTACLE IS NOW BEING MADE—THOUSANDS TAKE PART

D. W. Griffith is Staging Battles of Revolution with Exacting Fidelity to American History

U. S. ARMY OFFICERS STUDY WAR SCENES

Somers is in the hands of Indians, copper-skinned savages resplendent in their war paint, feathers and with all the implements which have so long endeared them in the hearts of small boys. With barbaric shouts and their well known ruthlessness, they daily attack stockaded villages, burning and pillaging and then the sturdy pioneers appear, mounted on their gallant steeds and scatter them to the forests where they came. In reel life Somers is the scene of all these depradations, and the stolid citizens of 1923 watch the battles and exciting scenes from points of vantage on the nearby hills. The hills near the locations are covered with people who come from all over the countryside, whole families spending the entire day, bringing their lunches and make gala days out of their opportunity to see first hand how pictures are made.

Three farms have been taken over by D. W. Griffith and are being used for the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." The hills around Somers furnish excellent scenery for the action depicting the Colonists' struggle for freedom. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for cameras with the action extending from one-half mile to a mile back. Signal fires and other incidental action is taken as far away as seven miles from the scene.

The picture has been undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The War Department is also interested and is lending every possible assistance. About 1,000 men are in camp near Somers under the command of Col. G. P. Pound and are being used as the soldiers of Revolutionary days. They are the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and the 16 Infantry from Governor's Island. The soldiers have their own commissary and medical units. With the technical advice of Federal military experts, Mr. Griffith is staging with exacting accuracy the major battles of the Revolution.

On Monday a scene showing the American cavalry defeating a band of British and Indians was filmed. The Indians and British took a stockaded town and then the Colonials put them to flight. The horsemen were assembled from the Reserve Cavalry units with Captain Lose of the reserve forces in command. Clad in buckskin shirts and breeches, coonskin caps and laying aside their modern arms for the famous muzzle-loading squirrel gun of by-gone days, they represent as exact duplicate of the mounted strength of the American army in the battles which are being reproduced. On Tuesday about 500 men refought the Battle of Bunker Hill near Pine Tree Inlet on the outskirts of Bronxville.

After watching the army of directors, camera men, property men, carpenters and others busily engaged in getting the ground ready for the scenes, one begins to obtain an idea of the vastness of the attempted drama. All billed tirelessly all Monday afternoon to the three scenes which in themselves took no more than 20 minutes. Men competent with the movies seem to have the proverbial patience of Job coupled with the resourcefulness of a Napoleon. Great days can through several times before the proper effect which the director was striving for was obtained. In one of these a troop of horsemen were lined up ready to charge a fort. The background for action was the very unpretentious ruins of a Revolutionary fort of a number of years ago. Within a road within the range of the camera. These were illuminated by having peek-a-boo panels painted to look like the big war.

Further News also seems to be an other prominent attribute of Director Griffith. The charge was on the top of a hill which was about a half mile away from the place of action. Horses were started down on a gallop and were stopped down in a gallop. Men who were thrown in the battle were picked up and placed in the line of action. Men who were shot down in the battle were picked up and placed in the line of action. Men who were shot down in the battle were picked up and placed in the line of action. Men who were shot down

Star Sep 27 1923

Movie Encampment

"America" to Be Made—Hundreds of Soldiers and Actors There

taken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 23-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt; and a medical corps under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken but the major part of the cavalcade will be kept at Somers until late next week. The threatening weather of today and the rain earlier in the week has delayed the picture somewhat but Mr. Griffith has reported that excellent progress has been made. He is also reported as being charmed with the country and is considering locations in the Poughkeepsie district for other pictures.

Poughkeepsie (N.Y.) Eagle-Ventre Sep 28 1923

Thousand Horsemen Used in Movie Scene

With a thousand horsemen D. W. Griffith has been making scenes for his picture "America" in the hills of Putnam County. The picture is being produced at the suggestion of the Daughters of the Revolution, for the scenes are to be those of Revolutionary battles. One thousand men of the United States Army are encamped close by ready to give every reasonable assistance at the order of Secretary of War John Weeks.

Schenectady (N.Y.) Union-Star Sep 28 23

Danbury (Conn) News Sep 27 1923

HUNDREDS SEE MOVIES TAKEN

Griffith Takes Possession of Somers, N. Y., for Staging of Patriotic Film.

Back from the state road just outside Somers, N. Y., the brooding silence of the autumn painted hills is being rent by the shouts of battle as the American War of Indepence, with all its soul-stirring drama, is being re-fought.

Not since the day "Hack" Bailey's "Old Bet" made her triumphal entry into town and the natives glimpsed a view of the first pachyderm ever to set foot on American shores, has the sleepy little village been treated to such a thrill.

It was only a few days ago that an army of eight hundred with horses and impedimenta descended upon the surprised community and proceeded to plunder, burn and lay siege to the countryside. The outfit includes half-naked redskins, British redcoats and colonial minutemen by the hundreds. And to make the company complete, George Washington is there too. But he's not commander-in-chief of these forces. Everybody, from the boisterous savages to George the Third's proud territorials, takes orders from David W. Griffeth, moving picture director extraordinary and giant of the film producing world.

The company with its army of actors, principles and extras, directors, cameramen, mechanics and utility men, is "on location" in the historic region immortalized by Cooper and Irving, for the filming of the big outdoor scenes in a forthcoming screen version of the Revolutionary war based on Robert W. Chambers' series of historical novels. Starred in the drama are Carroll Dempster and Neil Hamilton, popular favorites, and assisting personally in the direction of the production is Mr. Chambers himself, a genial appearing middle-aged man, who was pointed out yesterday as the man wearing a brown suit, brown soft hat, soft shirt of tan and a brown necktie.

This latest and according to a statement made by a member of the directing staff to a reporter of the News, most stupendous of all Griffeth screen dramas, is being produced at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution, under the working title, "America." Whether or not this title will be changed when the picture is released depends upon a number of things, the News' informant said.

Because of the historical and educational nature of the picture, the government has loaned to the company 450 U. S. regulars for the filming of the battle scenes. These, thoroughly disguised as Indians, British redcoats or minutemen, were seen in action yesterday afternoon by hundreds of spectators as an encounter was staged in the fields behind the Pine Tree Lodge Inn.

Camp for 1,000 Soldiers.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 23 piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno

Cincinnati Ohio Post Sep 29 1923

'America' Begun

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam co. N. Y. D. W. Griffith has begun the [illegible] for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

John W. Weeks, secretary of war, has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

Toledo (Ohio) Sunday Times Sep 29 1923

By BARL AIKEN

THEY [illegible] that we may see them reproduce the Battle of Falling Timbers right here at home, we are especially hoping that D. W. Griffith's new production, dealing with the American Revolution, will be a huge success.

Others may follow in his steps and who knows, someone may use it to write a sensational novel involving the early struggles in and around Toledo, which, we believe, are as rich in romance, color and thrills as any other part of our dear country [illegible]

Camden (N.J.) Post-Telegram Sep 29 1923

GRIFFITH TELLING GREAT PHOTOPLAY

Famous Director Starts Work on Revolutionary War Story, 'America'

WAR DEPARTMENT TO LEND ASSISTANCE

[illegible] of the troops. [illegible] direct co[illegible] advice of the [illegible] the tech[illegible] ers, Griffith is federal army [illegible] ith exact accurpreparing to sta[illegible] cy the major b[illegible] es of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen [illegible] been assembled from reserve [illegible] valry units under the command [illegible] Captain Love of the reserve forc[illegible] It is reported to be perhaps the [illegible] argest cavalry unit ever assemble[illegible] outside war manoeuvres, and rep[illegible] sents an exact duplicate of the cav[illegible] y strength of the American troops [illegible] n the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is said to be taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as they are giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Tent City Erected.

The company has taken possession of Pine Tree Lodge Inn, which it will make its headquarters during the coming few weeks that it is expected to remain here. A tent city, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment, has sprung up in the fields immediately behind the inn and across the road and again further down the state road where the troops are quartered. The principals, however, for the most part, motor back and forth daily from Mamaroneck unless working for several days at a stretch, in which case it becomes necessary for them to remain in Somers. Mr. Chambers has been at location several times, motoring from his home in New York city.

But the newly implanted community is not confined to the streets of tents. Some fifteen property houses have been set up in different sections of the town and several truck loads of scenery are also distributed about the city. The site chosen for the cameras overlooks a valley beaded with lakes with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

A spectacular scene was "shot" Monday afternoon in the fields behind the Elephant Inn when a house within a settlers' stockade was burned by "Indians," who proceeded to massacre the inhabitants caught in the flames. Such a scene has its thrills, even though the property houses are of tin covered with painted canvas which is quickly inflammable when a match is applied to the oil-soaked surface. The "inhabitants," in such a case, are, of course dummies.

Indians in Skirmish.

In the taking of a trial scene picture, yesterday afternoon, depicting a skirmish between redcoats and Indians on one side and minute men on the other, specators saw an improvised bar fence, several hundred feet long, with foliage cut from near by woods apparently growing over it, demolished in a few seconds and then quickly repaired by waiting carpenters for a second "shot" at the same scene. A charge of several hundred cavalry down the hill at top speed was an exciting climax to yesterday afternoon's work.

How long the company will remain in the vicinity is problematical. It may be six weeks or it may be only a few days, one of the directors said. It is understood that when the leaves fall, the company will go to Virginia to take the remaining summer scenes, returning here to go over the same location in the winter when the snow is on the ground. Interior scenes will be taken at the Griffith studios at Orienta Point, Mamaroneck. It is said the filming of the production will take ten months longer, work having been started on it six weeks ago.

Many Spectators.

The vicinity of the "Griffith city" for some distance, with scores of automobiles parked on both sides of the roadside, resembles nothing so much as a circus come to town. Word of the presence of the movie people spread with lightning rapidity through the countryside with the resulting crowds of visitors daily, to the scene of activities. The entertainment of the inhabitants of the vicinity is added to vastly by the presence of the military band which gives concerts in Brewster and Somers nightly.

Scores of Danburians have visited the troops and the influence of the [illegible] upon the [illegible] sound about. [illegible] been felt as far away as Danbury where some leading hte already been gone. To mention one instance, the Post screen was rolled upon yesterday to fill an order, for the first time, which was promptly done and the order dispatched.

Fort-Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram Sep 30 1923

GRIFFITH ENGAGED IN WORK ON "AMERICA"

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

Rochester (N.Y.) Dem & Chron Sep 30

Riding [illegible] men along the hills of Putnam Co., N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Newark (N.J.) Ledger Sep 30 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH'S GREATEST FILM TO BE "AMERICA"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes, has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit, under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love, of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

New Orleans (La) Item Sep 30 1923

Director at Work on His New Picture

Philadelphia Record Sep 30 1923

Revolutionary Camp

D. W. Griffith, riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation instalment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc. The United States army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy major battles of the Revolutionary War.

Detroit (Mich) News Sep 30 1923

GRIFFITH SHOOTS FIRST SCENES ON BIG FILM

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his [illegible] ca."

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, [illegible] mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

Springfield (Ohio) Sun Sep 30 1923

GRIFFITH IS MAKING PICTURE WITH HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

Film Being Made by Noted Producer at Request of Daughters of American Revolution; Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank M'Glynn Few in Cast

AT the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, David Wark Griffith is making a film-play, possibly the most important of his career, depicting the episodes of that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate — America's successful struggle for independence, and the foundation of the Republic.

The scenario has been quietly prepared and during the last few weeks Mr. Griffith has been working secretly and hastily on some of the scenes at his studio at Mamaroneck in an attempt to obtain some summer scenes before the now quick advent of frost. Working with him in the cast are Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton and Frank McGlynn, famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln. It is not known at present what parts the first named players are enacting, but it is certain that Mr. McGlynn will appear in the historic character of George Washington.

The undertaking came about through the co-operation of the committee on public relations, which is affiliated in an advisory way with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president.

D. A. R. Behind Undertaking

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president-general of the D. A. R. and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York state regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association. The producer concurred and declared that the history of the revolutionary period could be made into a story as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told.

It is Mr. Griffith's idea, with which the officials of the D. A. R. agree, that the photo-drama should show first, the America of today, and should then portray the struggles and sacrifices of our forefathers to bring about the possibility.

Wealth of Dramatic Material

There will be a wealth of dramatic historical material from which to select the scenes to be photographed, it is pointed out by the D. A. R. officials and Mr. Griffith. For example, there may be shown the beginning and causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the Revolution, with the massacre on Boston Common and the Tea Party in Boston harbor, Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battle fields of Concord and Lexington, to be filmed on the location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale episode is another of effective drama.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will figure in much of the action; his acceptance of the commandership of our little army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke upon Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge, and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the conclusion of the story.

This is the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a national patriotic organization has requested the making of a photo-drama and Mr. Griffith and Mr. Hays can be trusted to see that the best artistic and technical efforts are put [illegible]

Washington (D.C.) Times Sept. 1 1923

New Griffith Film.

"America" was the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prizefighter's camp, a racetrack, a poolroom, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

Chicago (Ill) Post Oct 2 1923

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 9/30/23

PICTURIZING THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Keen interest will attach to the forthcoming Revolutionary war picture, "America," which has been undertaken by one of the biggest men in the motion picture field, none other than David Wark Griffith. Griffith proposed to stage, "with exact accuracy," the major battles of the Revolution and in doing so he is to have the technical advice of federal army officers, the secretary of war, it is announced, having given orders to the war department to "lend every reasonable assistance" in the manufacture of this patriotic film, the idea of which was suggested by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

For various reasons every really patriotic American earnestly hopes that accuracy will guide the producer throughout this effort. This film will be one of the most important ventures of the motion picture industry. If it meets with approval it will appeal with fervor to the youth of the entire land and to every citizen who still has pride in the successful efforts of this land of ours to win independence from a foreign yoke.

The danger which is to be avoided is the temptation to tamper with history in order to strengthen the dramatic or spectacular side of the effort, as has been done in the case of so many books which have been arbitrarily straightened in order to make "popular" fiction for much more. There is no more sacred or great theme in the Revolutionary war than conducting with it the [illegible] shamefully would be to be [illegible]

Boston Morning Globe Oct 3 1923

Pittsfield (Mass) Eagle Oct 2 1923

PELL WITH GRIFFITH ON BIG MOVIE PICTURE

Atlanta (Ga) America Sep 30 1923

WAR FILM IS THE REQUEST OF D. A. R.'s

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six," a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

St Paul (Minn) Pioneer-Press 9/30/23

"AMERICA" IS TITLE OF GRIFFITH FILM

Charlie Mack, who is another member of the Griffith cast now at work at the Mamaroneck studios, has a part something like that played by Mae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation." It is one of the most sympathetic roles in the picture. Although D. W. Griffith bought the film rights of "The Reckoning," Robert Chambers' novel, it is said that only one character in the whole story will figure in the Griffith picture. Robert W. Chambers, Anthony Kelly and Mr. Pell, the man who is responsible for the story of "Down to the Sea in Ships," are all collaborating with Mr. Griffith on the story. After considering "The Spirit of '76," "America" has finally been decided upon as the title of the new production. Work is going on steadily with many of the historical incidents at the time of the Revolutionary [illegible] starting with the Boston [illegible] being put into [illegible] for filming.

EARLY WAR FILM CALLED AMERICA

Screen Production of Revolution Being Made at the Request of National D. A. R.

Schenectady Standard Oct 5 1923

GRIFFITH FORTIFIES FLOOD'S HILL

On Somers-Lincolndale Road Where Hundreds of Spectators Encamp to Witness Filming of the Battle of Bunker Hill. Cameras Cover Action on Three Sides at Once.

During the past week David W. Griffith essayed the role of general with phenomenal success as he directed surveyors in laying out, about a knoll on the Flood farm at Somers, a redoubt and a breastwork similar to those built by Engineer Gridley at Bunker Hill, and then with his major general Charles Mack issued commands to groups of actors and soldiers, numbering about 800, to enact the battle scenes made famous by the patriot and British armies in 1775. Every important detail recorded in the history of the battle, from the placing of the two field-pieces to the building of the rail fence, partly concealed by hay, the first and last resorts of the American forces, was fittingly carried out. The costumes of red coats and patriots, the playing of the band and the stimulus of the best of October weather combined to make the occasion memorable for participants and for spectators.

When the signal for heavy bombardment was given, detachments of dummies were detailed to relieve the actors who were holding intrenchments. And the dummies did well. One spectator thought they did too well, for they addressed several remarks to an agreeable looking manikin and received no reply. In time he might have overlooked this unresponsiveness, but the loquaciousness of the friend, who caught him in the act of confiding his opinions to a man of straw will cut down the average of his pride for some time to come.

Besides the "casual casualties" suggested by the director there were several accidents that resulted in serious injuries in the case of two or three men and in minor injuries to several others. Private Fleming of Company A, 18th Infantry, 19 years of age, detailed to fire a cannon, had his right hand blown off and his face badly burned, when he was reloading the chamber for a second discharge. Doctors on the field administered first aid and accompanied the boy to the hospital at Fort Slocum. Two men, whose eyes were injured by musketry fire are improving under expert treatment. And all who received burns and bruises are given first aid treatment and daily dressing by experienced doctors.

Interest and sympathy in the case of Private Fleming was expressed by a substantial purse made up by gifts from members of the Griffith Company, the soldiers and the spectators. Mr. Griffith takes every precaution possible for safeguarding those engaged in the action, and provides the best care for the unfortunate victims of accidents. His personal interest for the welfare of the members of the company is equalled by the high regard the actors entertain for him. There is not a man on location who would not follow the Director into actual battle.

Many of the spectators are becoming habitues of the Griffith location. They can recognize the stars without the aid of field glasses, and out of this quasi-familiarity the more youthful members of the feminine gallery have gained courage to stop the stars in their course and request them to pose for snap shots. Neil Hamilton has bravely borne the brunt of the Brownie battery, and from all reports he is admirably equipped by nature and experience to assume this responsibility. His contribution to the fairer members of his public were not, however, confined to mere posing. He submitted to interviews and told the story of his life from his school days up to his first meeting with Mr. Griffith. A naive, credulous, young lady from the Blue Crest was one of the most eager to question the young actor. And his response was adequate. The interviews recorded by the most prolific writers for Photoplay and the Motion Picture Magazine could not have given the thrill of this personal colloquy. It's a great world.

Ashland (Ohio) Times 9/27/23

Jersey City (N J) Review 9/27/23

Thrilling Films

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, one of the famous movie directors is to produce a film of the Revolution. It is his opinion that the story can be made "as thrilling, as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told."

Indeed it can, and with strict adherence to the truth, too. The Daughters are entitled to the thanks of Americans for conceiving the idea. Their organization has been taking a leading part in the Americanization of school history text books that were "revised" along internationalist lines following the war, and now are supplementing that work with the inspiration of a film of the American Revolution.

Portland (Me) Press-Herald 9/29/23

Stage and Screen News

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America". Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand soldiers and players, with complete water supply, commisary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. Under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander, the U. S. Army has established an encampment for one thousand men from the 15th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops. Griffith plans to stage with accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War, with the assistance of Federal Army officers. Horsemen have been assembled from Reserved cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve.

Portland (Me) Express 9/28/23

Canton (Ohio) News 9/21/23

David Wark Griffith is now preparing to film a patriotic spectacle at the request and under the direct auspices of The Daughters of the American Revolution.

The title "America" was selected after a poll numbering several hundred votes, was taken by the organization in six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places.

All who assisted in selecting the title have been invited to participate in the group scenes of the picture.

* * *

The recent eclipse of the sun which was total on the Pacific coast, is estimated to have cost $3,000 in loss of time at Universal City.

For a full hour the sun was shrouded to such an extent that photoplay was impossible and production was at a standstill while high priced stars and hundreds of lesser lights waited for the phenomenon to pass.

Among the pictures on which work was stopped were the William Desmond-Eileen Sedgwick serial, "Beasts of Paradise," Mary Philbin's "My Mamie Rose" and Herbert Rawlinson's feature, "All for the Love of Gloria."

Porterville (Cal) Messenger 9/26/23

Revolution have taken a hand in the film business. At least they have cooperated with David W. Griffith to make a patriotic film [illegible] glory of our independence which their organization commemorates. The title of the film is "America" and it was selected in an ingenious manner. A poll was taken of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prizefighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's playground. More than ninety percent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" the second choice. The voters are also to be included in the many group scenes in the production.

Newport's secret of the summer has trickled into town with the return of the inhabitants. Many were the secret meetings of important men during the idle days. Dire things were suspected, but it develops that it was but a scheme for the extermination of the pestiferous mosquito, and was headed by no less a generalissimo than T. Suffern Tailer.

Los Angeles (Cal) Record 9/29/23

"AMERICA" IS GRIFFITH'S FILM. New York, Sept. 26.—"America" is the title voted for Griffith's Revolutionary War film after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places—"including a prizefighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground."

Sailing for Algiers October 6, is Edwin Carewe, who will produce "A Son of the Sahara" on the edge of the desert. Carewe's brothers are members of the producing unit. Finis Fox as scenario writer and Wallace Fox as assistant director. Actors and technical staff will follow Carewe about November 1. Bert Lytell has been cast for a leading role.

Atlanta (Ga) Journal 9/30/23

TWO [illegible] motion pictures are promised by noted directors who confess that they have always had a secret longing to do such unusual pictures, but have held back because of the great ogre of the movies—the box office.

The most interesting of these announcements is King Vidor's statement that he has always wanted to make a picture of Gulliver's Travels, and that he intends doing so very soon. The picture will be very difficult to complete, but it will give a wonderful opportunity to the trick photographers. The joy of seeing Dean Swift's quaint character wandering through the land of the Lilliputians and the country of the giants and of the horses, will make up for the difficulties that must be overcome.

D. W. Griffith says he will soon make a picture of the American Revolution based on the story of "Nathan Hale." There is a poignancy about this bit of American history that gives the story a deep appeal. The stage play of that name swept thousands into tears, and made one actress famous—Nance O'Neill, who played the part of Hale's sweetheart, and rose to very exalted heights in the scene where she sees her lover taken away to the gallows.

Richard Barthelmess would make an excellent Nathan Hale.

Lewiston (Me) Evening Journal 9/29/23

Panorama of Revolution to be Griffith's Project

Portland (Me) Evening Express 9/28/23

Griffith Filming Revolutionary Tale

Washington (Pa) Observer 9/29/23

'America' Wins by Big Majority as Film Title

Detroit Free Press 9/30/23

Lowell (Mass) Courier-Citizen 9/30/23

Chicago (Ill) Herald and Examiner 9/30/23

Portland (Oregon) Oregonian 9/30/23

DAVID W. GRIFFITH is at work on his latest production, a film of the Colonial period, under the "patronage" of the Daughters of the Revolution. The juvenile role will be acted by Neill Hamilton, whose picture, advertising a hat, is displayed in the foyer of the Ritz, he having long posed for commercial purposes, following trials as a movie "extra." Mr. Griffith has also traveled far since his minor roles in support of James K. Hackett! It was in 1908 that he turned to the movies, first as an actor and later as a director, for the old Biograph Company. His first production was called "The Adventures of Dolly."

Mt Kisco (N Y) Times 9/28/23

Revolution Re-Enacted for Movies at Somers

BIG FILM SPECTACLE IS NOW BEING MADE—THOUSANDS TAKE PART

D. W. Griffith is Staging Battles of Revolution with Exacting Fidelity to American History

U. S. ARMY OFFICERS STUDY WAR SCENES

Somers is in the hands of Indians, copper-skinned savages resplendent in their war paint, feathers and with all the implements which have so long endeared them in the hearts of small boys. With barbaric shouts and their well known ruthlessness, they daily attack stockaded villages, burning and pillaging and then the sturdy pioneers appear, mounted on their gallant steeds and scatter them to the forests where they came. In reel life Somers is the scene of all these depradations, and the stolid citizens of 1923 watch the battles and exciting scenes from points of vantage on the nearby hills. The hills near the locations are covered with people who come from all over the countryside, whole families spending the entire day, bringing their lunches and make gala days out of their opportunity to see first hand how pictures are made.

Three farms have been taken over by D. W. Griffith and are being used for the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." The hills around Somers furnish excellent scenery for the action depicting the Colonists' struggle for freedom. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for cameras with the action extending from one-half mile to a mile back. Signal fires and other incidental action is taken as far away as seven miles from the scene.

The picture has been undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The War Department is also interested and is lending every possible assistance. About 1,000 men are in camp near Somers under the command of Col. G. P. Pound and are being used as the soldiers of Revolutionary days. They are the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and the 16 Infantry from Governor's Island. The soldiers have their own commissary and medical units. With the technical advice of Federal military experts, Mr. Griffith is staging with exacting accuracy the major battles of the Revolution.

On Monday a scene showing the American cavalry defeating a band of British and Indians was filmed. The Indians and British took a stockaded town and then the Colonials put them to flight. The horsemen were assembled from the Reserve Cavalry units with Captain Lose of the reserve forces in command. Clad in buckskin shirts and breeches, coonskin caps and laying aside their modern arms for the famous muzzle-loading squirrel gun of by-gone days, they represent an exact duplicate of the mounted strength of the American army in the battles which are being reproduced. On Tuesday about 500 men refought the Battle of Bunker Hill near Pine Tree Inlet on the outskirts of Brewster.

After watching the army of directors, camera men, property men, carpenters and others busily engaged in getting the ground ready for the scenes, one begins to obtain an idea of the vastness of the picturesque drama. All hailed tiredness all Monday afternoon to film three scenes which in themselves took no more than 20 minutes. Men unpacked with the master ease to have the proverbial patience of Job coupled with the consummate skill of a Machiavelli drove one through several times before the proper effect which the director was striving for was obtained. In one of these a room of barracks was filled with colonists of Revolutionary days. The background for action was the very unfavorable one of Revolutionary days of a country far far packed in a road within the range of the camera. These days differed in being back in the green country to that end in the very middle of the war.

Further from the path to be an other prominent attribute of Griffith's is shown the above page in a scene where the Colonists were fleeing from a British force. The British were about a half mile away from the area of action and were shown being shot down in the rear ranks by the Colonists who were firing from behind a stockade. The British were represented by a company of Reserve Cavalry units under the command of Captain Love.

Springfield (Mass) Republican 9/30/23

GRIFFITH GETS READY FOR WAR SCENES IN "AMERICA"

Thousand Military Reserves Are Encamped with Film Actors, in Putnam County, New York State

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Col G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th infantry at oGvernor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt N. T. Davis. Maj Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary war. The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love.

Allentown (Pa) Chron-News 10-2-23

GRIFFITH STARTS OUTDOOR SCENES FOR "AMERICA"

War Department to Give Reasonable Assistance in Making Patriotic Film.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam Company, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks had instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Col G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt N. T. Davis. Maj Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary war. The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love.

San Francisco (Cal) Chronicle 7

Destroying Good Taste

By D. W. GRIFFITH

MOTION pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they photograph to represent the homes of the rich. Men and women in evening attire depart to the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's showroom. The rooms are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel. I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First they are a replica from memory of some drawing rooms. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill-assorted and undecorative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room in a home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The producer offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in smooth beauty, I shall lose money. If occasion offers, however, I shall tempt the lightning of the gods.

I believe that the sense of beauty is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to develop in them the sense of beauty. To do this I should provide them rooms of such simple beauty as the one in which my father's orotund voice poured forth the music of Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare. Longish rooms, not large, of rather low ceilings and pale gray walls, of dark furniture in graceful lines of a few forceful pictures—all portraits, among them a portrait of the magnificently ugly face of Abraham Lincoln, a portrait of the gentle philosopher of Concord Emerson, one of George Washington, the country gentleman, the man who loved the great out-of-doors.

There would be a portrait of Robert E. Lee at the moment when, as Earl French said when he paid a visit to my cottage at Mamaroneck, he faced one of the greatest tragedies of war. When he knew that the supplies he had depended on would not arrive. When the meeting he had hoped for with Johnson had failed. When his plan that might have turned the tide of war in the other direction, he knew, through unconquerable circumstances had died. I should have the portrait of General Grant, sturdy but gentle, his campaigning hat pulled down over his eyes, saying as he viewed the noble discomfiture of the idol of the South: "The surrender of side arms will not be necessary." There would be one of the old Puritans, too, with their dreams hidden behind stern masks. And in the snow. Always in the snow. Roger Williams, the builder, rather than Miles Standish the soldier. And Thomas Paine. And a thinker of France; say Rousseau. Each picture would be an epic. Each would be a well of character inspiration.

The trend of Americans away from the cities to country homes is an indication of the desire for such a manner of living. But the trend is slow. The American life of today is so jazzed that we fly constantly but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think, the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of any nation. That sense of beauty will not be developed until reading and reflection again become national pastimes.—Arts and Decoration.

Denver (Colo) News Oct 2 1923

"America" Is Title Selected.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a second choice.

Niagara Falls (N Y) Gazette Oct 2 1923

THRILLING

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, one of the famous movie directors is to produce a film of the Revolution. It is his opinion that the story can be made "as thrilling, as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told." Indeed it can, and with strict adherence to the truth, too. The Daughters are entitled to the thanks of Americans for conceiving the idea. Their organization has been taking a leading part in the Americanization of school history text books that were "revised" along internationalist lines following the war, and now are supplementing that work with the inspiration of a film of the American Revolution.

Boston Herald Oct 3 1923

"Battles of America," [illegible] "Columbus," will soon make history easy for the young, by virtue of their accurate presentation of historical events. D. W. Griffith is already planning "America" with the revolutionary period, [illegible] to those who have already [illegible] Janice Meredith, Paul Leicester Ford's romance of the colonies, is now [illegible] as Marion Davies' new picture. It seems as if "The Covered Wagon" [illegible] Americanism. The only disappointing point thus far is that it will not be [illegible] Hall, but Harrison Ford [illegible] Wagon." [illegible] Oct 2 1923

Milwaukee (Wis) Wisconsin News 10/3/23

D. A. R. Film "America," New Griffith Production

"AMERICA" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places, where slang is most prevalent, including a prizefighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground. More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America." "The Spirit of Seventy-six" ran a heavy second.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the film. With the technical advice of federal army officers, Griffith [illegible] be able to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary war.

At Somers, N. Y., Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

It has all the promise of a masterpiece.

* * *

King Baggot has a colored [illegible] sake.

A little pickaninny was recently christened King Baggot Jones, with a great deal of pomp, in the African Methodist church down Mobile Ala. The proud mother is the Universal director and for a matinee idol a photo of her offspring. King Baggot, entering into the spirit of the affair, sent youngster a pair of mean dice, hoping that he will want to shoot craps when he grows up.

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegraph 10/4/23

Griffith Starts New Feature

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

CHAT OF THE SCREEN

My Eve World Oct 4 1923

INVITED GUESTS

With all the talk about stars being barred from all studio lots or positions in the Fall, D. W. Griffith, as usual, has [illegible] the other end of the argument, and again, as usual, has been the idea among those men working out splendidly.

No sooner did Griffith learn that stars were not welcome at other studios and on lots than he broadcasted a notice [illegible] to the actress to come up and be a setting extra in his coming film the big scenes for "America," his story of the Revolution.

As a result of these invitations on [illegible] to succeed, it [illegible] as if D. W.'s guest, and hence, in our assessment, that, not were but one of some [illegible] who had also received there [illegible] the big battle scenes being rehearsed.

So, if you're interested in seeing the parts which go round and in [illegible] the movies, providing of course, you don't mind to get up early [illegible] it's the most productive time and is [illegible] New York Film [illegible] Oct 4 1923

Daily Capital Journal Oct 4 1923

WHAT'S DOIN' IN THE MOVIES

By JAMES W. GRAH

Portland (Ore) Oregonian Oct 4 1923

Portland (Ore) Telegram Oct 4 1923

Hudson (N.Y.) Star Oct. 5, 1923

Elmira (N.Y.) Advertiser Oct. 5, 1923

New Orleans La. Times-Picayune 10/7/23

Muskogee (Okla) Phoenix 9/30/23

Detroit (Mich) Free Press 10/6/23

...E A HUGE ... IN PUTNAM

...to 'Shoot' Patriotic ...re 'America' With Aid of ... United States Army

...Carmel—The historic hills of Put... county, over which many battles ...e Revolutionary War were fought, ... again resound to the tread of hun... of horses and men and the shrill ... days of the country, when a ...ing picture producer starts work on ... picture, "America".

Three Farms Being Used.

...der the leadership of D. W. Griffith, a corps of actors and soldiers has ... arrived on location. The ad... party is established in Somers, ... this place where an encampment ... several thousand players and sol... with complete water supply, com... electric and sanitation install... Three farms have surrendered ... a site for the encampment which ... a hillside of about a mile.

...retary of War Weeks has instruct... the war department to lend every ...stance to the making of the patri... film which is being undertaken at ... suggestion of the Daughters of the ...erican Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded ... lakes has been chosen for the ...eras, with the action extending ... from one-half mile to a mile, ... incidental action as far away as ... miles. The latter is for signal ... etc.

Aid by Thousand Soldiers.

The United States Army has estab... an encampment for about one ...usand men under the direction of ...lonel G. P. Pond, division command... The men are from the 18th Infan... from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, ... from the 16th Infantry at Gover... Island. A 32-piece band from Fort ...locum accompanies the troops. A ...plete commissary department is in ...rge of Lieutenant DeWitt and a ...edical corps under the command of ...aptain N. T. Davie, Major Arturo Ma... is in direct command of the ...ops.

...th the technical advice of the Fed... army officers, Griffith is preparing ... stage with exact accuracy the major ...ttles of the Revolutionary War.

Assemblage of Cavalry.

...e horsemen have been assembled ... reserve cavalry units under the ...mand of Captain Love of the re... forces. It is reported to be per... the largest cavalry unit ever as... ...d outside war manoeuvres, and ...ents an exact duplicate of the ... strength of the American troops ... engagements that are to be repro...

...War Department is taking a ... interest in the manoeuvres, as it ...ing observers for the department ...portunity to study from a milit... ...iewpoint the struggles of the ...an colonists with a precision ...efore made possible because of ...penses involved.

...Battle of Bunker Hill.

...great deal of the action will be ... in the area between Brewster ... Mahopac. The duplication of ...master battle of Bunker Hill will be done ...r Griffith's district as will many oth... ...of Meisterscenes. Some of the scenes ...ve ...t minutes been taken.

Berry (Conn) Herald Oct 5 1923

TO MAKE FILMS IN PUTNAM COUNTY

Carmel, Oct. 4.—The historic hills of Putnam county, over which many battles of the Revolutionary War were fought, will again resound to the tread of hundreds of horses and men and the shrill battle days of the country when a moving picture producer starts work on the picture, "America."

Under the leadership of D. W. Griffith, a corps of actors and soldiers has already arrived on location. The advance party is established in Somers, near this place where an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside of about a mile.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending back from one half mile to a mile with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 32-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt; and a medical corps under the command of Captain N. T. Davis, Major Truro Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres, as it is giving observers of the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken.

Washington (D.C.) News 10/5/23

Thrilling Films

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, one of the famous movie directors is to produce a film of the Revolution. It is his opinion that the story can be made "as thrilling, as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told." Indeed it can, and with strict adherence to the truth, too. The Daughters are entitled to the thanks of Americans for conceiving the idea. Their organization has been taking a leading part in the Americanization of school history text books that were "revised" along internationalist lines following the war, and now are supplementing that work with the inspiration of a film of the American Revolution.

Middletown (N.Y.) Times-Press 10/8/23

HILLS OF PUTNAM TO BE SCENE OF MOVIE BATTLE

Carmel, Oct. 4—The historic hills of Putnam county, over which many battles of the Revolutionary War were fought, will again resound to the tread of hundreds of horses and men and the shrill battle days of the country, when a moving picture producer starts work on the picture, "America."

Under the leadership of D. W. Griffith, a corps of actors and soldiers has already arrived on location. The advance party is established in Somers, near this place, where an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside of about a mile.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

Aid by Thousand Soldiers.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 32-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

Assemblage of Cavalry.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken.

Chicago (Ill) American Oct 6 1923

CITY LOSES FIGHT TO STOP GRIFFITH PICTURE

Circuit Judge Francis S. Wilson entered an order restraining the city authorities from interfering with the showing of D. W. Griffith's latest moving picture, "The White Rose." Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, appearing for the United Artists' Corporation of Illinois, said the film had been passed by the local board of censors and a permit had been granted for the showing. He said that $30,000 had already been spent for the presentation when the chief of police asked for a revocation of the license on the grounds that the picture was immoral.

Easton (Pa) Free Press Oct. 6 1923

"AMERICA" WILL BE TITLE OF FILM AS REQUESTED BY D. A. R.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film which he is preparing to make, at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools six clubs, and six sporting places, where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall, and a boys' playground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America" with the "Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there are so many in the film.

Cincinnati (O) Times-Star Oct 6 1923

The Secretary of War Weeks has directed the War Department to assist D. W. Griffith in the making of the Revolutionary War picture, "America," undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

San Francisco (Cal) Examiner 10/8/23

GRIFFITH PRODUCING BATTLE SCENE OF '76

Has Camp of Several Thousand Actors and Soldiers Ready.

David Wark Griffith has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America," by establishing an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers at Somers, N. Y., in the hills of Putnam county. Complete equipment for water supply, commissary, lighting and sanitation has been installed. Three farms have been surrendered to the motion picture people as a site for their camp. The site overlooks a valley beaded with small lakes and the action will extent across this country for a mile or more, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

In accordance with instructions issued by Secretary of War Weeks to the war department to lend every reasonable assistance in the making of the patriotic film, the United States army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry, from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy the major battles of the Revolution.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers and represents exactly the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is taking an interest in the maneuvers as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study, from a military viewpoint, the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken.

Chicago (Ill) Post Oct 6 1923

D. W. Griffith's New Offering

An artistic and heart-appealing story has been produced by David Wark Griffith in his new feature motion picture, "The White Rose," opening at the Orpheum theater today.

The tale involves an orphan girl and a young divinity student, who meet when the latter is making a walking tour to learn of the world and its ways. The denouement is said to be compliments powerful and tenderly beautiful.

With his company Mr. Griffith journeyed thru the Bayou Teche country of western Louisiana, where many of the scenes were taken.

The orphan girl is played by Mae Marsh, who returns to the screen after a long absence. The young preacher is in the hands of Ivan Abrams. Carol Dempster, cast as the mischievous girl of high family, takes the part of one of the rather naive and intelligent souls that populate the bayous. Lillian Gish is prominent in the picture, appearing and leading in Venus and Cupid dances.

Denver (Colo) Post 10/7/23

AMERICA TO BE GRIFFITH'S NEXT

Portland (Ore) Journal Oct 7 1923

"AMERICA" CHOSEN AS TITLE FOR D. A. R. FILM

"America" Is Title Picked For Big Film

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is producing for the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places, where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's playground.

More than 90 percent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there are so many in the film.

Albany (N.Y.) Times Union Oct 7 1923

"America" Title A Griffith New One

Lincoln (Neb) Journal Oct 7 1923

FILM REVOLUTIONARY WAR

Production May Be Entitled 'America' Requested by D. A. R.

"America" is the title selected for which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's playground.

More than 90 percent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

San Francisco (Cal) Call-Post 9/29/23

Panorama of Revolution To Be Griffith's Biggest

D. W. Griffith, in letters to friends, reveals some of the details of the most ambitious work he has ever undertaken.

To match and outdo his "Birth of a Nation," he has set out upon the making of the cinema's greatest historical spectacle.

It has been reported that he was to make "a story" of revolutionary days.

He says now that it will be a complete panorama of the fight of the American colonies for independence.

Washington, Arnold, Andre, Hamilton, Hale and all the most famous characters of the war will be portrayed.

Washington will be done by Frank McGlynn, who became noted in Drinkwater's stage version of "Abraham Lincoln" as the martyr-President.

Running through the spectacle will be a love story in which Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will be the principals.

Probably nearly a year, including the time on research, will be spent on the production.

Griffith was persuaded by the Daughters of the American Revolution to undertake the...

St Louis (Mo) Globe Democrat 10/7/23

Among the Movies.

D. W. Griffith hasn't been doing much of late or if he has, he has been very quiet about it. Mr. Griffith like Mr. Chaplin, is very secretive about what he does. But now he has started on a picture that takes up so much outdoor space that he coudn't keep it quiet if he wanted to. Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, New York, he has begun scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America." This patriotic film has been undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance in its making. The United States army has established an encampment for about a thousand men, a thirty-three piece band accompanying them.

Detroit (Mich) Free Press 10/4/23

GRIFFITH TO MAKE GREAT PATRIOTIC FILM

D. W. Griffith has started work on what promises to be one of the most notable productions of his career, "America," a picture based on the American revolution.

At the present time Griffith can be seen with a thousand horsemen riding along the hills of Putnam county, New York, where most of the outdoor scenes will be filmed.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment of several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissionary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrended as a site for the camp, which covers a hillside about a mile in length. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back for one-half mile to a mile, and with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

Lincoln (Neb) Journal Oct 4 1923

REVOLUTIONARY FILM

Picture Being Made at Suggestion of the D. A. R.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam Co., N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the camp, which covers a hillside about a mile in length. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back for one-half mile to a mile, and with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

Cleveland (O) News Oct 7 1923

Revolution Panorama To Be Griffith's Biggest

D. W. Griffith is busy in his studio at Mamaroneck, one of the Sound towns, on his latest production, "America." For this work, involved in representing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War, unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this period be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The task consists of showing the people of the United States, from the time of landing of the Pilgrims to the Civil War, the struggle for independence, the growth of the United States, the settlement of the country, the Indian wars, the Civil War and the period after the Civil War, the development of the country, the Indian wars, the Civil War and the period after the Civil War, the development of the country, the Indian wars, the Civil War and the period after the Civil War, the development

Springfield (Mass.) Herald. Oct. 7 1923

Picture Plays and Players

RIDING with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Preparation for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is 40 per cent complete, according to W. W. Kerrigan, business manager. The first set, a replica of the banquet hall of Haddon, is practically finished and 750 costumes are now being made. Each of the five principals in the cast will wear from five to eight costumes.

Four horses are being trained for their parts, and Starrett Ford, production manager, is scouring the country for 400 more, to be used as "extras."

Variety (Nye) 10/11/23

CENTRAL BUREAU FOR HISTORICAL RESEARCH

Plan to Put It Up to Hays—May Turn It Over to Harvard

A central bureau for historical research backed by the Hays organization is being agitated, the idea being to form a clearing house for "costume play" information to which all the producers may put up their problems, paying pro-rata for the service.

The suggestion comes from D. W. Griffith, who has met a multitude of difficulties in his making of "America," the story of the American revolution. It has been the experience of makers of "period" plays that the principal events of certain times are easily studied, but it is often difficult to get designs of clothes, the sort of a horse Paul Revere rode, the uniforms of Colonial soldiers and the like obscure data.

It calls for a considerable force of librarians to work up this kind of data and the research is an important item in production costs. Griffith's proposal is that the producers and distributors concentrate on the work of this kind so that any producer could secure the best service available at low cost.

The plan awaits the return of Will Hays, who sailed from England Monday, but his aids probably will suggest that the work be turned over to Harvard, which recently has been turning out a number of historical subjects and is believed to have the nucleus for just a scientific organization already working and this could be expanded into a bureau that would cover the ground.

Baltimore Sun Oct 7 1923

Public To See Making Of Big Scenes

Leading Producers Agree To Have People Watch Filming Of Large Scenes In Endeavor To Dispel Disbelief

GALLERIES are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to understanding recently reached by the leading producers. "The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of 'faking' in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without 'doctoring.'"

TO INVITE PUBLIC.

SO the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America."

For this work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

FIRST TEST IMPRESSIVE.

THE first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers, where the scenes are being staged, offers a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by private photographers, who take the action with small motion-picture cameras and sell it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon the State police confiscated seven small motion-picture cameras. Captain French, of the State police, made no arrests at Griffith's request, the film and cameras being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

My Home News Oct. 7, 1923

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed.

So the producers decided to invite the public to see all scenes where their presence will not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made to have all the details faithful to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually successful. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the company of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by private photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras and sell to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon the State Police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Capt. French of the State Police made no arrests at Griffith's request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Columbus (Ohio) Oct 7, 1923 Dispatch

While we are posting signboards, we want to point the index finger to D. W. Griffith's article in the September Arts and Decoration, which may be found in the libraries. He hits beautifully on the practice of the movie directors overloading the rooms which are supposed to designate homes of the rich. No producer, not even himself, he admits, has the courage to use absolute good taste in this regard. The public is not yet ready for actualists, it would seem.

Mr. Griffith, in three sentences, has epitomized pleasure-seeking America: "The American life of today is so jazzed that we fly constantly, but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think, the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of a nation."

WHAT WAS COLOR OF HORSE RIDDEN BY PAUL REVERE?

Mr. Griffith Has Spent Hundreds Trying to Find Out

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

Detroit (Mich) News Oct 14 1923

Director Seeks Color of Paul Revere's Horse

AMERICA doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists. Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays. Griffith already has spent considerable time and money seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

Oakland (Cal) Tribune Oct 14 1923

Springfield (Mass) Union Oct 12 1923

WHAT WAS THE COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

Northampton (Mass) Chronicle Oct 12 1923

HAYES TO CONDUCT RESEARCH BUREAU

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used by the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

M. P. News (New York) Oct 13 1923

Thousand Horsemen For Griffith's "America"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile.

My Telegraph Oct 14 1923

SOMERS, N. Y., has been put on the map and by a motion picture company. Never since the days when the revolutionary army in reality passed through this picturesque little town has there been so much excitement and even then the excitement was probably tame compared with what one can see any day now. D. W. Griffith has furnished that excitement. For weeks past he has camped with his army near Somers, attracting the attention of thousands of tourists. It is estimated that fully 30,000 motorists have visited Somers during the last few weeks to have a look at the stockade and other 1776 sets. Sunday, Mrs. Albert Gray telephoned and said that only four more days remained of the filming in this little town and if we wanted to see it we better make haste.

We missed the scenes in the stockade, but we did see the battle of Bunker Hill and learned more about that momentous occasion than all the histories we studied in our childhood.

Picture if you can an Autumn day with the leaves turning golden brown and crimson. The British army dressed in the scarlet uniform and gold braid and the colonists dressed in their simpler homespun outfits charging up Breed's Hill with the Union Jack waving in the breeze. Picture again the background of this scene of Colonial days, a black mass of automobiles wedged in four deep with thousands of people lined up on the grassy knolls watching what David W. Griffith himself says is going to be his best work.

"Louella Parsons," he said, "this is going to be better than 'The Birth of a Nation.'" And although I had only seen him take three or four scenes, I said:

"I believe you." I don't know why I said it. Probably because his earnestness convinced me that he knew what he was talking about. I have known him ten years and I have never before heard him say what he said last Sunday. This is a warning that "America" is going to be the rival of "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Covered Wagon," so far the two best film stories founded on our own American history.

Crowd Furnishes Entertainment.

Remarks of the crowd that gathered to watch Mr. Griffith were both amusing and enlightening. One little old woman, who by great effort had succeeded in getting to the top of the hill, said to her companion:

"I see Griffith."

"Which is he?" asked her companion.

"That's him—giving orders, she answered, pointing to a red-coated general leading his troops up the slippery hay to try and vanquish the struggling colonists.

If she had seen the real Griffith, we are afraid she would have been sadly disappointed. Instead of the brilliant scarlet-coated general, pompous and impressive, the real Griffith was dressed in a pair of light trousers and a light coat that did not match. He wore a battered straw hat and an old green topcoat. He has been so busy making his picture that he had not even had time to get a haircut. His hair hangs long and he is tanned and burned until he is three or four shades darker than his usual complexion. When Griffith works, he works, and a little thing like clothes never bothers him. He is up at six in the morning and he is the last one in bed at night. His company says that he has the strength of ten men.

Hay Used to Hold Back Troops.

The hay which we had always thought was used to form a barricade we learned last Sunday was used to make the British slip when they tried to rush up Breed's Hill and on to Bunker Hill. If it served its purpose in the revolutionary days as well as it did last Sunday it must have been mighty effective. Even with the aid of Carol Dempster and Mae Grey it was almost impossible to get up the hill without slipping. One has to be like a goat to climb these heights and not take a tumble.

The wigs worn by the armies caused considerable consternation because they kept slipping and one of the twentieth century touches was Maston, the hairdresser, who went into the trenches after every skirmish to fix the wigs of the fighters. Griffith, whose sense of humor is good, and who and everybody laughing called to his army:

"Hurry! Don't choke his wig, rubbing his neck. His wig is more important."

Then after this quiet remark, he added: "All those who are not on go ready for the tight scene." This he noticed he forgot and removed the one of the actors who had lost his hat when he was charged by the Hessians of a British officer. We got an exciting scene with Mr. Griffith, Carol Dempster and Lillian Gish. After the scene the Hessians at the Bunkhill. After the scene the Hessians at the British camp had to hand in the ground and sighed.

Patriotism Runs in Our Blood.

If an Irish girl could get an exciting job like this, I'd offer her an Irish.

The patriotism caused by the revolutionary blood and if the people on the people who in the audience felt as much as we felt proud of our Sunday [illegible] we are going to have some [illegible]

Daily Times Reporter 9/27/23

GRIFFITH STARTS ON "AMERICA"

U. S. Department of War Co-operates

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam Co., N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War Picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside of war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the Department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Rockland (Ill) Argus Union 9/29/23

Salt Lake (Utah) Telegram 10/2/23

ARMY IS AIDING GRIFFITH WITH AMERICA FILM

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside of war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Preparation for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is 40 per cent complete, according to W. W. Kerrigan, business manager. The first set, a replica of the banquet hall of Haddon, is practically finished and 750 costumes are now being made. Each of the five principals in the cast will wear from five to eight costumes.

Four horses are being trained for their parts, and Starrett Ford, production manager, is scouring the country for 400 more, to be used as "extras."

War Departments Aid In War Picture Making

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside of war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Preparation for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is 40 per cent complete, according to W. W. Kerrigan, business manager. The first set, a replica of the banquet hall of Haddon, is practically finished and 750 costumes are now being made. Each of the five principals in the cast will wear from five to eight costumes.

Four horses are being trained for their parts, and Starrett Ford, production manager, is scouring the country for 400 more, to be used as "extras."

San Francisco (Cal) Organ Oct 10 1923

Crawfordsville (Ind) Journal Sept 29 1923

Hudson (N.Y.) Star Oct. 5, 1923 — Kingston (N.Y.) Advertiser Oct. 5, 1923 — New Orleans La. Times-Picayune 9/9/23 — Muskogee (Okla) Phoenix 9/30/23 — Detroit (Mich) Free-Press 10/6/23

...E A HUGE ... IN PUTNAM

...to 'Shoot' Patriotic 'America' With Aid of United States Army

...The historic hills of Putnam, over which many battles ... Revolutionary War were fought, ... resound to the tread of hundreds of horses and men and the shrill ... of the country, when a ... picture producer starts work on ... "America."

...ves Farms Being Used.

...the leadership of D. W. Griffith, ... of actors and soldiers has ... arrived on location. The advance party is established in Somers, ... place where an encampment ... thousand players and soldiers ... complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installations. Three farms have surrendered ... for the encampment which ... hillside of about a mile.

...ry of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every ... to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at ... tion of the Daughters of the ... Revolution.

...overlooking a valley beaded ... has been chosen for the ... with the action extending ... one-half mile to a mile, ... ental action as far away as ... The latter is for signal ...

...by Thousand Soldiers.

...ited States Army has established an encampment for about one ... men under the direction of ... P. Pond, division commander. ... men are from the 18th Infantry ... Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, ... the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 23-piece band from Fort ... companies the troops. A ... commissary department is in ... Lieutenant DeWitt; and a ... corps under the command of ... T. Davie, Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the ...

...technical advice of the Federal officers, Griffith is preparing ...th exact accuracy the major ... the Revolutionary War.

...semblage of Cavalry.

...emen have been assembled ... cavalry units under the ... of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

...Department is taking a ...st in the manoeuvres, as it ...bservers for the department ...nity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the ...ican colonists with a precision ...e made possible because of ...s involved.

...ite of Bunker Hill.

...deal of the action will be ... the area between Brewster ...Mahopac. The duplication of ...e of Bunker Hill will be done ...trict as will many other ...e scenes. Some of the scenes ...ve been taken.

Jersey City (N.J.) News 10/5/23

TO MAKE FILMS IN PUTNAM COUNTY

Carmel Oct. 4.—The historic hills of Putnam county, over which many battles of the Revolutionary War were fought, will again resound to the tread of hundreds of horses and men and the shrill battle days of the country when a moving picture producer starts work on the picture, "America."

Under the leadership of D. W. Griffith, a corps of actors and soldiers has already arrived on location. The advance party is established in Somers near this place where an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside of about a mile.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending back from one half mile to a mile with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 23-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt; and a medical corps under the command of Captain N. T. Davie, Major Truro Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken.

Washington (D.C.) News 10/5/23

I NEVER see a D. W. Griffith picture but what I want to take the heroine out and purchase her a six-inch beefsteak.

Griff's heroines are spiritueile or anemic, according to the sensibilities of the speaker. From his earliest day D. W. has devoted his studio to developing hungry-looking female stars—white sisters. His masterpieces are flickering avertisements for red-meat diets.

Lillian Gish was his first Lily Maid of Astolat. Althe I am a blood relative of the pallid Lil, I cannot definitely say that the Gish has ever eaten a T-bone steak. Griff used to hire Walter Long and Donald Crisp by the hour to beat her white body till she looked like a dainty dear bit of toast. Her little sister Dorothy made showers signs of a hearty appetite, and consequent embarrassment, you will remember that Dot never attained the prominence in Griffith "masterpieces" that the sister Lillian achieved.

Griffith found Carol Dempster somewhere. For five years the Dempster girl has been working for the big boss, and I will take my Bible oath that she has never weighed more than 90 in the shade in that time. Look at her in The White Rose, now at the Columbia. Her shoulderpads haven't yet arrived in season, but her other charms are enough of her other charms to compensate, may I be confounded to hell and damnation for the use of the word.

Some people seem to think that the public loves the sight of hungry people. It is not implied that the public will go to see starving people without paying in advance a sample of their money.

...Y BAND HERE.

...Pleasing Two-Hour ... in Front of Green.

...her army band from Fort ... which is being used ... W. Griffith Co. in the ... photoplay at Somers, N. ... a delightful two-hour ... night in front of the ... It was the first ap... the band in Kingsbury, ... it seems have unan... large audience compa... in the music. The ... during during the two hour ... the band was delighted ...

...were crowded ... the Auditorium ... the band ...

Chicago (Ill.) American Oct. 6, 1923

CITY LOSES FIGHT TO STOP GRIFFITH PICTURE

Circuit Judge Francis S. Wilson entered an order restraining the city authorities from interfering with the showing of D. W. Griffith's latest moving picture, "The White Rose." Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, appearing for the United Artists' Corporation of Illinois, said the film had been passed by the local board of censors and a permit had been granted for the showing. He said that $30,000 had already been spent for the presentation when the chief of police asked for a revocation of the license on the grounds that the picture was immoral.

Easton (Pa) Free Press Oct. 6, 1923

"AMERICA" WILL BE TITLE OF FILM AS REQUESTED BY D. A. R.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film which he is preparing to make, at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places, where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall, and a boys' playground.

More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America" with the "Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take part in the big battle and other group scenes of which there are so many in the film.

Cincinnati (O.) Times-Star Oct 6 1923

"Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to assist D. W. Griffith in the making of the Revolutionary War picture, "America," under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

San Francisco (Cal) Examiner 10/8/23

Thrilling Films

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, one of the famous movie directors is to produce a film of the Revolution. It is his opinion that the story can be made "as thrilling, as dramatic, and as appealing as any ever told." Indeed it can, and with strict adherence to the truth, too. The Daughters are entitled to the thanks of Americans for conceiving the idea. Their organization has been taking a leading part in the Americanization of school history text books that were "revised" along internationalist lines following the war, and now are supplementing that work with the inspiration of a film of the American Revolution.

Middletown (N.Y.) Times-Press 10/8/23

HILLS OF PUTNAM TO BE SCENE OF MOVIE BATTLE

Carmel, Oct. 6—The historic hills of Putnam county, over which many battles of the Revolutionary War were fought, will again resound to the tread of hundreds of horses and men and the shrill battle days of the country, when a moving picture producer starts work on the picture, "America."

Under the leadership of D. W. Griffith, a corps of actors and soldiers has already arrived on location. The advance party is established in Somers, near this place, where an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside of about a mile.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

Aid by Thousand Soldiers.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 23-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

Assemblage of Cavalry.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

A great deal of the action will be centered in the area between Brewster and Lake Mahopac. The duplication of the battle of Bunker Hill will be done in that district as will many other battle scenes. Some of the scenes have already been taken.

Chicago (Ill) Post Oct 6 1923

D. W. Griffith's New Offering

An artistic and heart-appealing story has been produced by David Wark Griffith in his new feature motion picture, "The White Rose," opening at the Orpheum theater today.

The tale involves an orphan girl and a young divinity student, who meet when the latter is making a walking tour to learn of the world and its ways. The denouement is said to be compellingly powerful and tenderly beautiful.

With his company Mr. Griffith journeyed thru the Bayou Teche country of western Louisiana where most of the scenes were taken.

The photo play is placed in March 1918 after a year's stay in the trenches. The young preacher is in the hands of the brothers of the Holy Cross, who are the parents of the young lady, Carol Dempster, cast as the heroine. The young preacher is in the hands of the brothers of the Holy Cross, who are the parents of the young lady, Carol Dempster, cast as the heroine.

Denver (Colo) Post 10/7/23

GRIFFITH PRODUCING BATTLE SCENE OF '76

Has Camp of Several Thousand Actors and Soldiers Ready.

David Wark Griffith has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America," by establishing an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers at Somers, N. Y., in the hills of Putnam county. Complete equipment for water supply, commissary, lighting and sanitation has been installed. Three farms have been surrendered to the motion picture people as a site for their camp. The site overlooks a valley beaded with small lakes and the action will extent across this country for a mile or more, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

In accordance with instructions issued by Secretary of War Weeks to the war department to lend every reasonable assistance in the making of the patriotic film, the United States army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry, from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy the major battles of the Revolution.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers and represents exactly the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is taking an interest in the maneuvers as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study, from a military viewpoint, the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Lincoln (Nebr) Journal Oct 7, 1923

Among the Movies.

D. W. Griffith hasn't been doing much of late, or if he has, he has been very quiet about it. Mr. Griffith like Mr. Chaplin, is very secretive about what he does. But now he has started on a picture that takes up so much outdoor space that he couldn't keep it quiet if he wanted to. Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, New York, he has begun scenes for his revolutionary war picture, "America." This patriotic film has been undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance in its making. The United States army has established an encampment for about a thousand men, a thirty-three piece band accompanying them.

Portland (Ore) Journal Oct 7, 1923

"America" Is Title Picked For Big Film

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film which, in producing, he plans to dedicate to the organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Secretary of War Weeks has assisted directly in the making of the film.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 percent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there are so many in the film.

FILM REVOLUTIONARY WAR

Production To Be Entitled 'America' Requested by D. A. R.

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize-fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's playground.

More than 90 percent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of Seventy-Six" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which all the returns were judged.

The several hundred people who selected the title, have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes of which there will be many in the film.

San Francisco (Cal) Call-Post 9/29/23

Panorama of Revolution Is Griffith's Biggest

D. W. Griffith, in letters to friends, reveals some of the details of the most ambitious work he has ever undertaken.

To match and outdo his "Birth of a Nation," he has set out upon the making of the cinema's greatest historical spectacle.

It has been reported that he was to make "a story" of revolutionary days.

He says now that it will be a complete panorama of the fight of the American colonies for independence.

Washington, Arnold, Andre, Hamilton, Hale and all the most famous characters of the war will be portrayed.

Washington will be done by Frank McGlynn, who became noted in Drinkwater's stage version of "Abraham Lincoln" as the martyr-President.

Running through the spectacle will be a love story in which Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will be the principals.

Probably nearly a year, including the time on research, will be spent on the production.

Griffith was persuaded by the Daughters of the American Revolution to undertake it.

"PIRATE" CAMERAMEN STEAL FILM SCENES

In order to combat the persistent rumors of "faking" in many moving picture scenes, several producers have resorted to the practice of inviting the public to witness the filming of certain outdoor scenes where the presence of a crowd does not interfere with the work of the actors.

Of late so much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various writers as to bring repeated complaints from theater owners, who say that patrons do not believe any scene in a film was photographed without "doctoring."

D. W. Grimth, now filming his patriotic production, "America," in which several of the important battles of the Revolutionary war will be reproduced, is one of the first to invite the public, and crowds of from 5,000 to 15,000 have gathered on the hills in Putnam county, New York, where much of the picture will be made.

Then another trouble developed. Its was discovered that in the crowd were several "pirate" photographers with moving picture cameras who were taking scenes and peddling them among small producers to be used in future pictures. One day the state police confiscated seven cameras, which will be held until the Grimth picture is released.

St Louis (Mo) Globe Democrat 10/7/23

Movie Producers Are Discovering America

Puppy love and hectic crook themes for stories are giving way to the romance of reality.

History has the call. While D. W. Griffith is up in Connecticut filming early scenes for his picture of the revolution, another era of American history has been chosen for a twelve-reel epic picture.

The Rockett Brothers, who have just completed "The Life of Abraham Lincoln," are to produce "Dixie," a sweeping story of the old South.

Its scenes will be far-flung—from the old St. Louis on the west to New Orleans on the south and Richmond on the north.

Steamboat life on the Mississippi as Mark Twain knew it; the charm and gayety of the old plantations; the seething politics of the days when one race did the work and left the other to grand and petty intrigues; the slave marts will be shown with fidelity to the chronicles.

A feature is to be made of the famous race between the steamboat Natchez and the Robert E. Lee, which caught the imagination of the entire country.

The movie makers are discovering America.

Omaha (Nebr) Bee Oct 7 1923

D. W. G... film 'pirate... is being pestered by ... about where he says. They hang ... he is shooting his big ... scenes out of ... doors and shoot scenes ... and sell them ... to fly-by-night ... ducers. Gosh, ... that flatter...

Detroit (Mich) Free-Press 10/4/23

GRIFFITH TO MAKE GREAT PATRIOTIC FILM

D. W. Griffith has started work on what promises to be one of the most notable productions of his career, "America," a picture based on the American revolution.

At the present time Griffith can be seen with a thousand horseman riding along the hills of Putnam county, New York, where most of the outdoor scenes will be filmed.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment of several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissionary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the camp, which covers a hillside about a mile in length. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back for one-half mile to a mile, and with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

Manchester (N.H) Union Leader 10/7/23

Visitors Welcome at Film Studios

Producers Wish To Combat Impression That "Faking" Is Common

GAZERS are to be invited to the filming of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater-owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the largest spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work, Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this period be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The idea of inviting the public has been successfully tried on a smaller scale during the past year, and the more recent productions have attracted the crowds day by day. The whole neighborhood where the scenes are being staged after a period enough for the novelty to wear off turns out in force to view the thousands of soldiers and slaves in action.

The attitude, however, is being altered by press photographers who take the action and sneak away into the woods and rush it to the nearest city to be developed and printed.

Omaha (Nebr) Bee Oct 8 1923

Cleveland (O) News Oct 7 1923

Revolution Panorama To Be Griffith's Biggest

D. W. GRIFFITH is going to ... Revolutionary War ... of the U. S. ... and intends ... to be his greatest ... to date. He is ... to film a panorama of the ... of the American colonies ... independence. Washington, Arnold, Andre, Hamilton, Hale and all the most famous characters of the war will be portrayed.

Washington will be done by Frank McGlynn, who became noted in Drinkwater's stage version of "Abraham Lincoln" as the martyr-President.

Running through the spectacle will be a love story in which Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will be the principals.

Probably nearly a year, including the time on research, will be spent on the production.

Griffith was persuaded by the Daughters of the American Revolution to undertake it.

Grand Rapids Herald Oct 7 1923

Telegraph Oct 3

D. W. Griffith to Make Revolutionary War Picture; Will Call It America

Cleveland (Ohio) Press Oct 7 1923

"AMERICA" CHOSEN AS TITLE FOR D.A.R. FILM

"America" Title Is Griffith's New One

Cleveland (Ohio) News Oct 7 1923

Springfield (Mass.) Herald. Oct. 7, 1923

Picture Plays and Players

RIDING with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside for about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war manoeuvres and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Preparation for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is 40 per cent complete, according to W. W. Kerrigan, business manager. The first set, a replica of the banquet hall of Haddon, is practically finished and 750 costumes are now being made. Each of the five principals in the cast will wear from five to eight costumes.

Four horses are being trained for their parts, and Starrett Ford, production manager, is scouring the country for 400 more, to be used as "extras."

Variety (Nye) 10/11/23

CENTRAL BUREAU FOR HISTORICAL RESEARCH

Plan to Put It Up to Hays—May Turn It Over to Harvard

A central bureau for historical research backed by the Hays organization is being agitated, the idea being to form a clearing house for "costume play" information to which all the producers may put up their problems, paying pro-rata for the service.

The suggestion comes from D. W. Griffith, who has met a multitude of difficulties in his making of "America," the story of the American revolution. It has been the experience of makers of "period" plays that the principal events of certain times are easily studied, but it is often difficult to get designs of clothes, the sort of a horse Paul Revere rode, the uniforms of Colonial soldiers and the like obscure data.

It calls for a considerable force of librarians to work up this kind of data and the research is an important item in production costs. Griffith's proposal is that the producers and distributors concentrate on the work of this kind so that any producer could secure the best service available at low cost.

The plan awaits the return of Will Hays, who sailed from England Monday, but his aids probably will suggest that the work be turned over to Harvard, which recently has been turning out a number of historical subjects and is believed to have the nucleus for just a scientific organization already working and this could be expanded into a bureau that would cover the ground.

Baltimore Sun Oct 7 1923

Public To See Making Of Big Scenes

Leading Producers Agree To Have People Watch Filming Of Large Scenes In Endeavor To Dispel Disbelief

GALLERIES are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

"The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of 'faking' in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without 'doctoring.'"

TO INVITE PUBLIC.

SO the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America."

For this work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

FIRST TEST IMPRESSIVE.

THE first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers, where the scenes are being staged, offers a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers, who take the action with small motion-picture cameras and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon the State police confiscated seven small motion-picture cameras. Captain French, of the State police, made no arrests at Griffith's request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

My Home News Oct. 7, 1923

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed.

So the producers decided to invite the public to see all scenes where their presence will not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work GGriffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made to have all the details faithful to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually successful. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the company of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and sell to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon the State Police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Capt. French of the State Police made no arrests at Griffith's request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Columbus (Ohio) Oct. 7, 1923 Dispatch

While we are posting signboards, we want to point the index finger to D. W. Griffith's article in the September Arts and Decoration, which may be found in the libraries. He hits beautifully on the practice of the movie directors overloading the rooms which are supposed to designate homes of the rich. No producer, not even himself, he admits, has the courage to use absolute good taste in this regard. The public is not yet ready for actualists, it would seem.

Mr. Griffith, in three sentences, has epitomized pleasure-seeking America: "The American life of today is so jazzed that we fly constantly, but don't light. If we would only light long enough to read and think, the golden age of America would arrive. It is a developed sense of beauty that gilds the golden age of civilization."

Atlanta (Ga) Georgian 10/7/23

Atlanta (Ga) Constitution 10/7/23

Atlanta (Ga) Journal Oct 7 1923

Pittsburgh (Pa) Gazette Times

Philadelphia Oct 12 1923

WHAT WAS THE COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used by the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historica record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America," Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

Oakland (Cal) Tribune Oct 14 1923

Rockford (Ill) Register Oct 7 1923

Detroit (Mich) News Oct 14 1923

Director Seeks Color of Paul Revere's Horse

AMERICA doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists. Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Oakland (Cal) Tribune Oct 14 1923

WHAT WAS COLOR OF HORSE RIDDEN BY PAUL REVERE?

Mr. Griffith Has Spent Hundreds Trying to Find Out

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

M. P. News (Nye) Oct 13 1923

Thousand Horsemen For Griffith's "America"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile.

My Telegraph Oct 14 1923

SOMERS, N. Y., has been put on the map and by a motion picture company. Never since the days when the Revolutionary army in reality passed through this picturesque little town has there been so much excitement and even then the excitement was probably tame compared with what one can see any day now. D. W. Griffith has furnished that excitement. For weeks past he has camped with his army near Somers, attracting the attention of thousands of tourists. It is estimated that fully 20,000 motorists have visited Somers during the last few weeks to have a look at the stockade and other 1776 sets. Sunday, Mrs. Albert Gray telephoned and said that only four more days remained of the filming in this little town and if we wanted to see it we better make haste.

We missed the scenes in the stockade, but we did see the battle of Bunker Hill and learned more about that momentous occasion than all the histories we studied in our childhood.

Picture if you can an Autumn day with the leaves turning golden brown and crimson. The British army dressed in the scarlet uniform and gold braid and the colonists dressed in their simpler homespun outfits charging up Breed's Hill with the Union Jack waving in the breeze. Picture again the background of this scene of Colonial days, a black mass of automobiles wedged in four deep with thousands of people lined up on the grassy knolls watching what David W. Griffith himself says is going to be his best work.

"Lonella Parsons," he said, "this is going to be better than 'The Birth of a Nation.'" And although I had only seen him take three or four scenes, I said:

"I believe you." I don't know why I said it. Probably because his earnestness convinced me that he knew what he was talking about. I have known him for years and I have never before heard him say what he said last Sunday. This is a warning that "America" is going to be the rival of "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Covered Wagon," so far the two best film stories founded on our own American history.

Crowd Furnishes Entertainment.

Remarks of the crowd that gathered to watch Mr. Griffith were both amusing and enlightening. One little old woman, who by great effort, had succeeded in getting to the top of the hill, said to her companion:

"I see Griffith."

"Which is he?" asked her companion.

"That's him—giving orders, she answered, pointing to a red-coated general leading his troops up the slippery hay to try and vanquish the struggling colonists.

If she had seen the real Griffith, we are afraid she would have been sadly disappointed. Instead of the brilliant scarlet-coated general, pompous and impressive, the real Griffith was dressed in a pair of light trousers and a light coat that did not match. He wore a battered straw hat and an old green topcoat. He has been so busy making his picture that he had not even had time to get a haircut. His hair hangs long and he is tanned and burned until he is three or four shades darker than his usual complexion. When Griffith works, he works, and a little thing like clothes never bothers him. He is up at six in the morning and he is the last one in bed at night. His company says that he has the strength of ten men.

Hay Used to Hold Back Troops.

The hay which we had always thought was used to form a barricade we learned last Sunday was used to make the British slip when they tried to rush up Breed's Hill and on to Bunker Hill. If it served its purpose in the revolutionary days as well as it did last Sunday it must have been mighty effective. Even with the aid of Carol Dempster and Mae, first it was almost impossible to get up the hill without slipping. One has to be like a goatie to climb those heights and not take a tumble.

The edge seen by the armies caused considerable annoyance because they kept slipping and one of the twentieth century touches was Mantua, the hairdresser, who went into the trenches after every skirmish to fix the edge of the fighters' curlers, which some of honor to get gone, and who had everybody laughing called to his aims.

"Here! Don't make his wig stand up each. His wig is more important."

Then after this quiet rhetoric, he called: "All those who not get up in ready for the next scene." He was called to order and inquired the cost of the curlers and was told by the man to was charged to the Department of a Boston concern. We got in touch on point with Mr. Griffith, during the rehearsal of the Bunker Hill. After the smoke of the Battle of the British cleared and it lined in the ground and called.

Rockland (Ill) Argus Union 9/29/23

ARMY IS AIDING GRIFFITH WITH AMERICA FILM

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N.Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his revolutionary picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American revolution.

At Somers Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside of war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the Department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Daily Home Reporter 9/27/23

GRIFFITH STARTS ON "AMERICA"

U. S. Department of War Co-operates

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam Co., N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War Picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established an encampment for about one thousand men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside of war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the Department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Salt Lake (Utah) Telegram 10/2/23

War Departments Aid In War Picture Making

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside of war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the Department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

San Francisco (Cal) Organ Nov 10/6/23

Crawfordsville Ind Journal Sept 29 1923

Makes ... e Of War ... Of Revolution

...ding with a thousand horse... along the hills of Putnam ... N. Y., D. W. Griffith has be... the big outdoor scenes for his ...olutionary War picture, "Amer...

Secretary of War Weeks has in...ructed the War Department to ...lend every reasonable assistance ...the making of the patriotic ...film which is being undertaken at ...the suggestion of the Daughters ...the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has estab...lished an encampment for several ...thousand players and soldiers, with ...complete water supply, commis...sary, electric and sanitation in...stallment. Three farms have been ...surrendered as a site for the en...campment which covers a hillside ...about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley bead...ed with lakes has been chosen for ...the cameras, with the action ex...tending back from one half mile ...to a mile, with incidental action ...as far away as seven miles. The ...latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. Army has established ...an encampment for about one ...thousand men under the direction ...of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Com...mander. The men are from the ...18th Infantry from Forts Hamil...ton and Schuyler, and from the ...16th Infantry at Governor's Is...land. A 33-piece band from Ft. ...Slocum accompanies the troops. ...A complete commissary depart...ment is in charge of Lieut. ...DeWitt; and a medical corps unit ...under the command of Capt. N. T. ...Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is ...in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the ...Federal army officers, Griffith is ...preparing to stage with exact ac...curacy the major battles of the ...Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assem...bled from Reserve cavalry units ...under the command of Captain ...Love of the Reserve forces. It is ...reported to be perhaps the largest ...cavalry unit ever assembled out...side war manoeuvres, and repre...sents an exact duplicate of the cav...alry strength of the American ...troops in the engagements that are ...to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a ...keen interest in the manoeuvres ...as it is giving observers for the ...Department an opportunity to ...study from a military view-point ...the struggles of the American col...onists with a precision never be...fore made possible because of the ...expenses involved.

Shreveport (La) Times oct 7 1923

The war department will co-operate with D. W. Griffith in the making of the picture, "America." Among the scenes will be reproductions of famous battles of the revolutionary war.

San Francisco (Cal) Journal 10/7/23

...NEW GRIFFITH FILM

"America" is the title selected for ...W. Griffith's Revolutionary film ...ch he is preparing to make at ...suggestion of the Daughters of ...American Revolution. This is ...first instance where a film has ...requested directly by a public ...anization.

...he title was selected after a poll ...ix universities, six grade schools, ...clubs and six sporting places ...e slang is most prevalent. In...ing a prize fighter's camp, a ...track, a pool room, a dance ...and a boys' playground.

...several hundred people who ...ected the title have been invited ...take parts in the big battle and ...other group scenes of which there ...be many in the film.

Chicago (Ill) Post oct 6 1923

...bout Griffith's 'America'

Riding with a thousand horsemen ...ong the hills of Putnam county, N. ..., D. W. Griffith has begun the big ...utdoor scenes for his revolutionary ...ar picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has in...ructed the War Department to lend ...very reasonable assistance to the ...aking of the patriotic film which is ...ing undertaken at the suggestion ...f the Daughters of the American ...evolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established ...n encampment for several thousand ...layers and soldiers, with complete ...ater supply, commissary, electric and ...anitation installment.

A site overlooking a valley beaded ...ith lakes has been chosen for the ...ameras, with the action extending ...ack from one-half mile to a mile, ...ith incidental action as far away as ...even miles. The latter is for signal ...res, etc.

With the technical advice of the federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary war. The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Ny Eve World 10/11/23

...riffith Is on ...nother Big Picture

...MERICA" is the title defi...nitely selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary ...film feature which he now is pre...paring to make at the suggestion ...of the Daughters of the American ...Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of the membership of six lead...ing universities, six grade schools, ...clubs and six sporting places ...where the slang of the day is most ...prevalent, including a prize-fight...ing training camp, a race track pad...dock and betting ring, a dance hall ...and a boy's playground.

...ty per cent of the ...votes for the title, "Ame...rica," with "The Spirit of Seventy-...six" a heavy second choice. Beav...ty, evidence and broad compre...hension were the standards by ...which all the returns were judged. ...In several hundred persons who ...voted the title, "America," have ...been invited by Mr. Griffith to ...take parts in the big battle and ...other group scenes of which there ...will be many in the film.

A army has established ...an encampment of about 1000 men ...under the direction of Col. G. P. ...Pond, Division Commander. The ...men are from the 18th infantry from ...Fort Hamilton and Schuyler and ...the 16th infantry at Governor's ...Island. A 33-piece band from ...Fort Slocum accompanies the ...troops. A complete commissary ...department is in charge of Lieut. ...DeWitt and a medical corps unit ...under the command of Capt. N. T. ...Davie, Major Arturo Mareno is ...in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the ...Federal army officers, Griffith is ...preparing to stage with exact ac...curacy the major battles of the ...Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assem...bled from Reserve cavalry units ...under the command of Captain ...Love of the Reserve forces. It is ...reported to be perhaps the largest ...cavalry unit ever assembled out...side war manoeuvres, and repre...sents an exact duplicate of the cav...alry strength of the American ...troops in the engagements that are ...to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a ...keen interest in the manoeuvres ...as it is giving observers for the ...Department an opportunity to ...study from a military view-point ...the struggles of the American col...onists with a precision never be...fore made possible because of the ...expenses involved.

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram 10/11/23

...Was the color of Paul Revere's horse? D. W. Griffith wants the information; research dept. busy.

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse ... one ridden by Paul Revere when ... made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion-picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

To Invite Galleries.

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to counteract the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war. Thousands of men have been made ready for the battle of the action, on each side, with absolute fidelity to history.

This first test of inviting the public has been successful, the number of people who have followed the action day by day, ...

Portland (Ore) Press Herald 10/12/23

...America has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Union (N J) Hudson Dispatch oct 11, 1923

WHAT COLOR WAS PAUL REVERE'S HORSE? RESEARCH DEPARTMENTS CAN'T DISCOVER

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee oct 12 1923

Moving Picture Bureau Will Tell Many Old Truths

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America."

Eugene (Ore) Guard oct 13 1923

GRIFFITH INVITES PEOPLE TO WATCH MAKING OF FILMS

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to counteract the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public to all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work. This policy was first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." The galleries varied from a thousand to fifteen thousand and they followed the action day by day.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers, who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Whenever these fellows are caught, the police confiscate the film and cameras and hold it in custody until "America" is released.

Lawrence (Mass) Telegram oct 13 1923

Chicago (Ill) News oct 13 1923

Marion (Ohio) Dispatch oct 13 1923

D. W. Griffith to Make Revolutionary War Picture; Will Call It America

Charleston (W Va) Gazette oct 14 1923

START FILM WORK FOR WAR PICTURES

Lincoln (Neb) Star oct 13 1923

Lincoln (Neb) Journal oct 13 1923

GRIFFITH DESIRES TO KNOW COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE

Chicago (Ill) Herald oct 13 1923

Chicago (Ill) Post oct 13 1923

Shreveport (La) Times oct 7 1923

Elizabeth (N J) Journal 10/11/23

Oleans (N Y) Times oct 10 1923

Watertown (N Y) Standard oct 12 1923

Newark (N J) Ledger 10/13/23

Pittsburgh (Pa) Sun-Telegraph oct 13 1923

Saginaw (Mich) News-Courier oct 10 1923

Syracuse (N Y) Telegram 10/12/23

Los Angeles (Cal) Record oct 13 1923

Baltimore News oct 11, 1923

Huntington (W Va) Advertiser 10/7/23

Flint (Mich) Journal 10/13/23

Madison (Wis) Wisconsin News oct 9 1923

Milwaukee (Wis) Sentinel oct 10 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Times 10/7/23

Lewiston (Me) Journal 10/7/23

Vancouver (BC) Province 10/7/23

Morwalk (Conn) Hour oct 12 1923

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee oct 12 1923

WORK ON "AMERICA" BEGINS

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam county N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Maj. Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers, and represents a duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the maneuvers as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

The war department will co-operate with D. W. Griffith in the making of the picture, "America." Among the scenes will be reproductions of the famous battles of the revolutionary war.

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

RESEARCH BUREAU.

Because so far it has been impossible for D. W. Griffith's investigators to discover just what was the color of Paul Revere's horse, Will H. Hays, head of the movies, will soon organize a big research bureau.

The bureau will be financed by the different picture producers now members of the Hays's organization and will fill a long-felt want in the industry.

With the research bureau functioning and ascertaining just what's what, some of these big historical films will be greatly improved in so far as the history end of it goes.

It has been the case in many instances to put something in a scene to make it more artistic or to add to the lighting effect, but henceforth the makers of historical stories will have the fund of information gathered by the trained searchers of the Hays's outfit to draw upon.

In the future we hope we won't go to a movie dealing with the past and see Lincoln holding a telephone conversation with Grant, Washington wearing a brown derby or the imprint of garters on the calves of Ben Hur.

"ALL MEMBERS!"

WHAT WAS COLOR OF REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best-known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion-picture industry has taken steps for the formation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion-picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

THE War Department will co-operate with D. W. Griffith in the making of the picture, "America." Among the scenes will be reproductions of the famous battles of the Revolutionary War.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

CHAT OF THE SCREEN AND ITS PLAYERS

Producers Invite Galleries to Witness Filming of Big Scenes in Pictures

GALLERIES are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding reached by the leading producers. The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public to all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work. This policy was first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." The galleries varied from a thousand to fifteen thousand and they followed the action day by day.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers, who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Whenever these fellows are caught, the police confiscate the film and cameras and hold it in custody until "America" is released.

SEEKING COLOR OF HORSE PAUL REVERE RODE

Griffith Wants to Know Exact Shade of Famous Steed for New Production

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

WHAT WAS COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern Armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Davenport (Iowa) Times 10-6-23

Government Aids Griffith in New Patriotic Picture

Begins with a thousand men along the hills of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the first outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley headed with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the Eighteenth infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marano is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary war.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is taking a keen interest in the maneuvers, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Racine (Wis) Journal-News 10-10-23

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

Louisville (Ky) Herald oct 14 1923

Joliet (Ill) Herald News 10/11/23

D. W. Griffith is now using 10-cent dyes for local color. His film, "The White Sister," will be dyed sepia for the South American trade.

David Wark Griffith has definitely decided upon "America" as the title for his Revolutionary feature. The picture is being produced at the suggestion of Daughters of the American Revolution.

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer oct 14.

D. W. GRIFFITH explaining to Inez Wallace of Cleveland, former screen actor and director, the scene in the new play, "America," which depicts the start of the battle of Lexington. Miss Wallace conducts a column for photo play fans in The Sunday Plain Dealer.

Quincy (Ill) Whig-Journal 10/5/23

Atlantic City (N.J.) Press oct 13 1923

Grand Rapids (Mich) Herald October 14 1923

"America," is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he has begun filming in Putnam county, New York, at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which the returns were judged. The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes, of which there will be many in the film.

INVITED GUESTS

With all the talk about visitors being barred from all studio lots or locations in the Far West, D. W. Griffith, as usual, has taken the other end of the argument, and again, as usual, has found his idea along these lines working out splendidly.

No sooner did Griffith learn that visitors were not welcome at other studios and on locations than he broadcasted a blanket invitation to the universe to come up and be a gallery while he is shooting the big scenes for "America," his story of the Revolution.

As a result of these invitations we journeyed out to Somers, N. Y., yesterday as R. W.'s guest, and found, to our amazement, that we were but one of some 3,000 who had also journeyed there to watch the big battle scenes being re-enacted.

So, if you're interested in seeing the movie wheels go round and in watching big movies in the making, you'll be perfectly welcome at Somers, providing, of course, you don't walk in on any scenes.

It's the most interesting thing going on around New York these days and is bigger than a three-ring circus.

Public to See Movies Made, Producers Say

Galleries of observers are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production.

The producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers, N. Y., where the scenes are being staged, offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

Charlestown (W Va) Gazette 10/14/23

Will Invite Galleries to Filming of the Big Scenes

First Test of Permitting Public to See Actual Production Succeeds; Will Correct Mistaken Impressions

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in prodcution. So much reality of scenes by various writers that theatre owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for "America." For this work, Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public, has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying form a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Recently the state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the state police made no arrests by request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Toledo (Ohio) Times oct 14 1923

Mansfield (Ohio) 10/14/23

GRIFFITH MAKING BATTLE SCENES

Has Encampment of Several Thousand Ready to Reproduce Revolutionary War.

David Wark Griffith has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America," by establishing an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers at Somers, N. Y. Complete equipment for water supply, commissary, lighting and sanitation has been installed. Three farms have been surrendered to the motion picture people as a site for their camp. The site overlooks a valley bended with small lakes and the action will extend across the country for a mile or more, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

In accordance with instructions issued by Secretary of War Weeks to the war department to lend every reasonable assistance in the making of the patriotic film, the United States Army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond. The men are from the 18th Infantry, from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and from the 16th Infantry at Governors Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marono is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy the major battles of the revolution.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers and represents exactly the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is taking an interest in the maneuvers, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a [illegible] never before made possible [illegible]

DETERMINE COLOR OF FAMOUS HORSE

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern army during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

Topeka (Kans) Capital October 14, 1

PICTURE PRODUCERS INV[illegible] GALLERIES TO BIG SCE[illegible]

Would Combat General [illegible] pression Scenes Are "Fa[illegible]

Griffith First to "Show 'Em" [illegible] Really See What Can [illegible] Did.

Galleries are to be invited [illegible] taking of the big scenes in mot[illegible] tures according to an unders[illegible] recently reached by the lead[illegible] ducers.

The purpose of inviting th[illegible] is to combat the prevalent im[illegible] of "faking" in production. So m[illegible] credit has been cast upon the r[illegible] scenes by various writers that [illegible] owners complained their pat[illegible] not believe any scene in a fil[illegible] gitimately photographed with[illegible] toring".

So the producers have dec[illegible] vite the public at all scenes w[illegible] presence does not interfere [illegible] work, and this policy is bein[illegible] into effect with the larger [illegible] scenes for D. W. Griffith's [illegible] duction "America".

For this work, Griffith [illegible] ing all the more important [illegible] the Revolutionary war. Unu[illegible] have been made that all th[illegible] this action be made with [illegible] it's to history.

Lincoln (Neb) Jou[illegible] October 14 19[illegible]

Film Accuracy.

America doesn't know the co[illegible] its best known horse, the one r[illegible] by Paul Revere when he ma[illegible] famous ride to Lexington and [illegible] cord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy [illegible] torical records, the motion [illegible] industry has taken steps fo[illegible] foundation of an independent [illegible] cal research bureau, under [illegible] rection of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the [illegible] events, but nowhere is there [illegible] the record of exactly how [illegible] looked. For instance, when [illegible] Griffith wanted to know [illegible] of wagons were used with [illegible] ers during the Revolutionary [illegible] not a single historical [illegible] them.

As the motion picture industry [illegible] planning to make a great num[illegible] of historical films with absolu[illegible] accurate details, the pictorial [illegible] histories must be corrected, and [illegible] this purpose that the producers [illegible] jointly subscribe for the re[illegible] bureau.

Griffith has already spent hun[illegible] of dollars seeking to learn [illegible] color of Paul Revere's horse [illegible] the scenes in his next produc[illegible] "America." Edwin B. Worthen, [illegible] president of the Lexington [illegible] Historical society declares there [illegible] no available record, although [illegible] it is known the horse was not [illegible] white as pictured in illustra[illegible] tions. Griffith's research depart[illegible] ment is now conducting search [illegible] through personal correspondence [illegible]

Pittsburg (Pa) Gazette Times Oct 14 1923

[illegible] doesn't know the color o[illegible] its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked.

For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern army during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for a research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, says there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

Muskogee (Okla) Shawnee 10/14/23

SPECTATORS AT FILMING

To Permit Public to View Scenes to Pacify Skeptical

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for the production "America."

For this work, directors are reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public, has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. The state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras, the film and camera to be held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

San Francisco (Cal) Bulletin October 14 1923

Griffith Asks the Public to Watch He Doesn't Fake

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public, has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon the State police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the State police made no arrests at [illegible] request, the film [illegible] camera being held in the [illegible] of the police until "A[illegible]

Sacramento (Cal) Union 10/14/23

"America" Selected for Title of Griffith Play

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which the returns were judged. The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes, of which there will be many in the film.

Laconia (N.H.) Evening Times October 14 1923

FILM HISTORY EXPERTS WANT COLOR OF HORSE

RIDDEN BY PAUL REVERE ON HIS FAMOUS RIDE

Washington (DC) Herald oct. 14 1923

Paul Revere Had A Horse; That Much We Know

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there the record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern army during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

Reading (Pa) Eagle oct 14 1923

Philadelphia Record oct 14 1923

Public on Hand for Big Scenes

Griffith Invites Visitors

Oakland (Cal) Tribune

PUBLIC INVITED TO SEE FILMS "SHOT"

Laconia (N.H.) News-Courier October 14 1923

PUBLIC ADMITTED TO VIEW SCENES

In Filming "America," D. W. Griffith Encourages "Galleries"

Sacramento (Cal) Union oct 1[illegible]

San Francisco (Cal) Journal 10/14/23

Springfield (Ohio) News 10/14/23

Long Beach (Cal) Telegram oct 1[illegible]

Santa Ana (Cal) Register 10/14/23

Shreveport (La) Times 10/7/23 — Los Angeles (Cal) Times 10/7/23 — Milwaukee (Wis) Wisconsin News Oct 9 1923

Makes ... Of War ... Revolution

... a thousand horse-... hills of Putnam ... W. Griffith has be-... outdoor scenes for his ... War picture, "Amer-

... War Weeks has in-... War Department to ... reasonable assistance ... of the patriotic ... being undertaken at ... of the Daughters ... Revolution.

... Griffith has estab-... ampment for several ... and soldiers, with ... supply, commis-... and sanitation in-... ree farms have been ... a site for the en-... ich covers a hillside

... ooking a valley bead-... has been chosen for ... with the action ex-... from one half mile ... seven miles. The ... signal fires, etc.

... has established ... for about one ... under the direction ... Pond, Division Com-

Chicago (Ill) Post Oct 8 1923

Outdoor Scenes Being Shot for Movie 'America'

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America." Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the D. A. R.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes from one half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

With the technical advice of the Federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolution. The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under command of Captain Love, represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

Shreveport (La) Times Oct 9 1923

The war department will co-operate with D. W. Griffith in the making of the picture, "America." Among the scenes will be reproductions of famous battles of the revolutionary war.

Elizabeth (N.J.) Journal 10/11/23

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

My Eve World 10/11/23

WORK ON "AMERICA" BEGINS

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills of Putnam county N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film, which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States Army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, Division Commander. The men are from the Eighteenth Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt; and a medical corps unit under the command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Maj. Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve cavalry units under the command of Capt. Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers and represents a duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department is taking a keen interest in the maneuvers as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Huntington (W Va) Advertiser 10/7/23

The war department will co-operate with D. W. Griffith in the making of the picture, "America." Among the scenes will be reproductions of the famous battles of the revolutionary war.

Saginaw (Mich) News-Courier Oct 10 1923

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Ocean (N.J.) Times Oct 10 1923

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Baltimore News Oct 11, 1923

WHAT WAS COLOR OF REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best-known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion-picture industry has taken steps for the formation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion-picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence with the [illegible]

Syracuse (N.Y.) Telegram 10/12/23

THE War Department will co-operate with D. W. Griffith in the making of the picture, "America." Among the scenes will be reproductions of the famous battles of the Revolutionary War.

Los Angeles (Cal) Record Oct 13 1923

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills of Putnam county, N. Y., D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

Portland (Ore) Press Herald 10/12/23

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Union (N.J.) Hudson Dispatch Oct 11, 1923

WHAT COLOR WAS PAUL REVERE'S HORSE? RESEARCH DEPARTMENTS CAN'T DISCOVER

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Flint (Mich) Journal 10/13/23

Jersey Topics Oct 11, 1923

Chicago (Ill) News Oct 13 1923

Chicago (Ill) News Oct 13 1923

Camden (N.J.) Post Telegram Oct 13 1923

Elmira (N.Y.) Times Star Oct 13 1923

CHAT OF THE SCREEN AND ITS PLAYERS

Producers Invite Galleries to Witness Filming of Big Scenes in Pictures

GALLERIES are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding reached by the leading producers. The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public to all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work. This policy was first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." The galleries varied from a thousand to fifteen thousand and they followed the action day by day.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers, who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Whenever these fellows are caught, the police confiscate the film and cameras and hold it in custody until "America" is released.

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee Oct 12 1923

By EARL AIKEN.

DOES anyone in Toledo know the color of its best known horse—the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord?

That is the problem confronting D. W. Griffith who is filming "America." When the scenes were ready for the Revere ride, an episode in the production, it suddenly dawned that no one knew what color of horse to select.

Historical records were searched and no description of the animal could be found. And when Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

A historical research department was organized and the vast search is under way. If you can remember the color of Paul Revere's horse, Griffith undoubtedly will reward you satisfactorily.

Watertown (N.Y.) Standard Oct 12 1923

SEEKING COLOR OF HORSE PAUL REVERE RODE

Griffith Wants to Know Exact Shade of Famous Steed for New Production

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America", Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Newark (N.J.) Ledger 10/13/23

WHAT COLOR WAS PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America."

Eugene (Ore) Guard Oct 13 1923

Pittsburgh (Pa) Sun-Spirit Oct 13 1923

Moving Picture Bureau Will Tell Many Old Truths

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America."

GRIFFITH INVITES PEOPLE TO WATCH MAKING OF FILMS

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes of motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public to all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work. This policy was first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work, [illegible] reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Thousands of people have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first use of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillsides near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Whenever these fellows are caught, the police confiscated the film and cameras and hold it in custody until "America" is released.

Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

Many View Scenes.

The first use of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillsides near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon, the State Police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras, Captain French of the State Police [illegible]

Lawrence (Mass) Telegram Oct 13 1923

Chicago (Ill) News Oct 13 1923

Maine (Me) Dispatch Oct 13 1923

D. W. Griffith to Make Revolutionary War Picture; Will Call It America

Charleston (W Va) Gazette Oct 14 1923

GRIFFITH DESIRES TO KNOW COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE

START FILM WORK FOR WAR PICTURES

Davenport (Ia) Times 10-6-23

Government Aids Griffith in New Patriotic Picture

Building with a thousand men along the hills of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside about a mile.

A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending back from one-half mile to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The U. S. army has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the direction of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. The men are from the Eighteenth infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and from the Sixteenth infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marano is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the federal army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battles of the Revolutionary war.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is taking a keen interest in the maneuvers, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the expenses involved.

Racine (Wis) Journal-News 10-12-23

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

Louisville (Ky) Herald oct 14 1923

Joliet (Ill) Herald News 10/11/23

D. W. Griffith is now using 10-cent dyes for local color in his film, "The White Sister," will be dyed sepia for the South American trade.

David Wark Griffith has definitely decided upon "America" as the title for his Revolutionary feature. The picture is being produced at the suggestion of Daughters of the American Revolution.

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer oct 14.

D. W. GRIFFITH explaining to Inez Wallace of Cleveland, former screen actor and director, the scene in the new play, "America," which depicts the start of the battle of Lexington. Miss Wallace conducts a column for photo play fans in The Sunday Plain Dealer.

Quincy (Ill) Whig-Journal 10/5/23

Atlantic City (N.J.) Press oct 13 1923

Grand Rapids (Mich) Herald October 14 1923

Topeka (Kans) Capital october 14, 1923

"America," is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he has begun filming in Putnam county, New York, at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which the returns were judged. The several hundred people who selected the title have been invited to take parts in the big battle and other group scenes, of which there will be many in the film.

INVITED GUESTS

With all the talk about visitors being barred from all studio lots or locations in the Far West, D. W. Griffith, as usual, has taken the other end of the argument, and again, as usual, has found his ideas along these lines working out splendidly.

No sooner did Griffith learn that visitors were not welcome at other studios and on locations than he broadcasted a blanket invitation to the universe to come up and be a gallery while he is shooting the big scenes for "America," his story of the Revolution.

As a result of these invitations we journeyed out to Somers, N. Y., yesterday as R. W.'s guest, and found, to our amazement, that we were but one of some 3,000 who had also journeyed there to watch the big battle scenes being re-enacted.

So, if you're interested in seeing the movie wheels go round and in watching big movies in the making, you'll be perfectly welcome at Somers, providing, of course, you don't walk in on any scenes.

It's the most interesting thing going on around New York these days and is bigger than a ninety-ring circus.

Public to See Movies Made, Producers Say

Galleries of observers are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production.

The producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers, N. Y., where the scenes are being staged, offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

Charlestown (W Va) Gazette 10/14/23

Will Invite Galleries to Filming of the Big Scenes

First Test of Permitting Public to See Actual Production Succeeds; Will Correct Mistaken Impressions

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for "America." For this work, Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Recently the state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the state police made no arrests by request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Toledo (Ohio) Times oct 14 1923

Mansfield (Ohio) 10/14/23

GRIFFITH MAKING BATTLE SCENES

Has Encampment of Several Thousand Ready to Reproduce Revolutionary War.

David Wark Griffith has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary war picture, "America," by establishing an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers at Somers, N. Y. Complete equipment for water supply, commissary, lighting and sanitation has been installed. Three farms have been surrendered to the motion picture people as a site for their camp. The site overlooks a valley beaded with small lakes and the action will extend across the country for a mile or more, with incidental action as far away as seven miles.

In accordance with instructions issued by Secretary of War Weeks to the war department to lend every reasonable assistance in the making of the patriotic film, the United States Army has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the direction of Colonel G. P. Pond. The men are from the 18th Infantry, from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler and from the 14th Infantry at Governors Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt and a medical corps unit under the command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Marano is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the army officers, Griffith is preparing to stage with accuracy the major battles of the revolution.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside war maneuvers and represents exactly the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department is taking an interest in the maneuvers, as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study, from a military viewpoint, the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the [illegible]

DETERMINE COLOR OF FAMOUS HORSE

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

PICTURE PRODUCERS INVITE GALLERIES TO BIG SCENES

Would Combat General Impression Scenes Are "Faked."

Griffith First to "Show 'Em" That He Really See What Camera Did.

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that threater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring".

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America".

For this work, Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

Lincoln (Neb) Journal october 14 1923

Pittsburg (Pa) Gazette Times oct 14 1923

FILM HISTORY EXPERTS WANT COLOR OF HORSE RIDDEN BY PAUL REVERE ON HIS FAMOUS RIDE

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for a research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, says there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

Muskogee (Okla) Shawnee 10/14/23

SPECTATORS AT FILMING

To Permit Public to View Scenes to Pacify Skeptical

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for the production "America."

For this work, directors are reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. The state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the state police made no arrests by request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

San Francisco (Cal) Bulletin October 14 1923

Griffith Asks the Public to Watch He Doesn't Fake

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon the State police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the State police made no arrests at [illegible] request, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Sacramento (Cal) Union 10/14/23

"America" Selected for Title of Griffith Play

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

The title was selected after a poll of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boys' playground.

More than 90 per cent of the votes were for "America," with "The Spirit of '76" a heavy second choice. Brevity, vividness and comprehension were the standards by which the [illegible]

San Francisco Cal Journal 10/14/23

PUBLIC ADMITTED TO VIEW SCENES

In Filming "America," D. W. Griffith Encourages "Galleries"

[illegible]

Reading (Pa) Eagle oct 14 1923

Washington (DC) Herald oct. 14 1923

Paul Revere Had A Horse; That Much We Know

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, says there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

Lagrange (Ind) News-Courier october 14, 1923

Oakland (Cal) Tribune oct 14 1923

PUBLIC INVITED TO SEE FILMS "SHOT"

Philadelphia Record oct 14 1923

Public on Hand for Big Scenes

Sioux City (Iowa) Tribune 10/14/23

Griffith Invites Visitors

Springfield (Mass) News 10/14/23

Sacramento (Cal) Union oct 14 19[illegible]

Film Accuracy.

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars in learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, says there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence [illegible]

Long Beach (Cal) Telegram 10/14/23

Filmfersation

By EARL AIKEN.

REALLY, there are so many different things about "The White Rose" that attracted our attention yesterday at the Valentine that it becomes a bit difficult to center one's interest in any one idea in connection with this latest work of Griffith's.

Perhaps it would be better to mention a few things that are first brought to one's attention, the dreamy scenery, the classic features of Ivor Novello, the work of Mae Marsh.

The story is as old as the incidents with which it deals, often handled—but seldom in the manner D. W. presents it this week.

Even before the story is started, Griffith leads us off the highway and into the bypaths of etheral scenes, where, under lazy cottony trees that guard a stately mansion from Louisiana sunshine, one slowly becomes convinced that something of pathos, of tragedy of intense romance is sure to take place. And one is not disappointed.

It was strangely silent there yesterday, near the end of this southern story. Situations that have come to be known as hokum, somehow had one tied up, bound and intensely interested.

Getting away from the theater and reflecting a bit as to just why one is caught by a situation that has often been tried and often found wanting, one is inclined to blame one man for catching and holding that interest—Griffith.

Some men can tell a new story badly, and some can tell an old story very well. Griffith is one of the few in the latter class.

His cameraman and his players did their work well—very well.

This chap, Novello, is a study. Somehow he baffles any attempt to picture him, typographically. Go see him.

Mae Marsh is better than she has ever been at any time in the past. And she's been wonderful in the past.

Together Mae Marsh and Ivor Novello are irrestible.

Neil Hamilton, formerly with the Toledo Theater Stock Co., has a minor role in the production. He has small opportunity to display his ability, but he's in front of the camera long enough to show that he screens very well.

Paul Revere's Horse

America doesn't know the color or its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

D. W. Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America."

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

America is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

Finishes Battle Scenes

D. W. Griffith has completed the battle scenes for "America", shot in and around Somers, N. Y. The company goes South later for more exteriors. The production will not be finished until Spring.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

"America," has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

DO YOU KNOW COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of army wagons were used during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations.

What Color Was Revere's Horse?

AMERICA doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse, for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Werthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND VIEWS

Louise Fazenda and Freddie, a trained seal, will be the headliners in "The Galloping Fish," the next Thomas H. Ince production. A horse was starred in "The Hottentot" and an elephant in "The Soul of a Beast" and now Ince has found a seal for a performer. "Anna Christie" is now in the cutting room.

Through the co-operation of the war department, D. W. Griffith has enough men on horses in the hills around Somers, N. Y., to use the same number of cavalrymen in his representations of the battles of the Revolution as were actually engaged. Included in the detachment of regular troops helping in the picture is a [illegible]

Zangwill Says Perfect Motion Picture Far Off

Tells Council of Jewish Women American Stage Is Improved.

Even D. W. Griffith has fallen far short of producing the perfect motion picture, Israel Zangwill, author and playwright, said last night in "A Little Chat on the Drama," before the New York Council of Jewish Women in Temple Emanu-El. The perfect picture, he said, will be the one that does away with "immense letters and glaring sub-titles," and flows along in a continuity that is understanding to the audience.

"I can't follow the film at all," he said. "The youngsters seem to know which is the heroine and which the villain, but I don't." He bemoaned what American producers had done to his "beautiful play, 'Merry Mary Ann.'" He hesitated to say his idea of the perfect picture would soon be realized, for he said such a picture could be sold in all languages, and therefore the price would be reduced, which was not what the producers wanted. He added that business is ruining the theater too closely.

Drama is not an abstract thing, he said, but is a concrete visualization of comparatively long periods in life, condensed into the time limit of two and a half hours. He said true drama must not be put second even to religious matters, for great teachings are made through the medium of the stage, and he was not so sure but that the Son of the carpenter, were he to come to earth today, would use the theater rather than parables to teach his lessons.

He accused the majority of modern playgoers as not wanting intellectual plays and consequently not getting them, but he said he was glad the American stage had improved greatly over what it was when he previously visited America in 1912. He said generally an actor helped the play, but too often the actor, despite Euclid, thought the part was greater than the whole. In consequence, he said, America has built up a system where if a play is a success it belongs to the star, and if a failure it belongs to the author.

He poked fun at what he termed freak plays and turned his pointed shafts of satire on the new idea of the apron stage, in which the players mingle with the spectators.

"The freak says one ought to write his plays so the audience feels itself a part of the action," Mr. Zangwill said. "I attended one such in London, 'Pasteur,' in which some of the actors sitting in the audience made all sorts of remarks. So I joined in with various cries that nearly upset the action of the play. I'm going to another soon in which at a certain moment the auctioneer gets no more bids and brings down his hammer. But he's going to get another bid from me. I'm going to be so thrilled with the action of the play I'll help as much as I can."

He laughed also at the idea of elaborate scenery and asserted that producers are attempting to reduce high drama to a puppet show. He said too much money is being spent on scenery and that the play should be so constructed that the audience would know the setting without seeing it, much as one notes a man is well dressed without knowing how he is dressed.

That Jews control the business of the theater he admitted freely, but he also said he had fought the modern stage because business too often interfered with the fine art. His notes, he said, were at random and like the Talmud in that they skipped about.

GRIFFITH GOES TO BOSTON

D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

GRIFFITH HERE TO TAKE SCENES FOR NEW FILM

Scenes for D. W. Griffith's new historical photoplay of the American Revolution, "America," will be made in Boston today and possibly tomorrow. Mr Griffith, accompanied by Charles Mack, an actor in his company, Gerrit J. Lloyd and other officials of D. W. Griffith, Inc. arrived last night at the Parker House, prepared to start work on "America" today. Scenes will be made in the old North Church. Later scenes will be made in Lexington and Concord.

"America" is a story of the Revolutionary War, which Mr Griffith is making at the request of the D. A. R.

The Lexington Historical Society will cooperate with the producer-director in making scenes for the film. Buckman Tavern and the Adams House, where John Hancock and John Adams were asleep the night the British unexpectedly came, will be used as settings.

ON GRIFFITH FILM

John L. E. Pell is making the historical arrangement of the story for Griffith's next picture, "America." Pell is the author of "Down to the Sea in Ships" and is an authority on New England history.

Griffith Here for Photoplay Scenes

D. W. Griffith and his company of film players arrived in Boston last night to [illegible] connection with his new photoplay drama of the American Revolution, "America."

Today scenes will be taken in the old North Church, and later in the day the cameraman will journey to Concord and Lexington, where other episodes will be filmed on the actual sites where battles of the Revolution were fought.

D.W.G. Broadcasts S O S Call

Griffith Is Here

New England has opened its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and Mr. D. W. Griffith has come to Boston with over a hundred members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes are to be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's Tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Mr. Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prohibit, but in every action scene photographs of the actual sites [illegible]

Public Invited to View Filming of D. W. Griffith's 'America'

The public is invited to witness the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theatre owners report that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

Some producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being put into effect by D. W. Griffith whose next production is "America."

For this screen work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War.

Censors Revoke Approval Given "White Rose;" It Was Passed Last July

BY W. WARD MARSH.

No photoplay is "safe" in the state of Ohio under present laws. The law says that the censor board may pass or reject a picture or make eliminations. Further, after the picture has been passed, whole or in part, the censor board may revoke the blessing given the picture, and kill it deader than the proverbial doornail.

It is in that little catch, the right to revoke the pass, that the happiness and longevity of every picture and the contracts made between exhibitors and distributors are in constant jeopardy.

There are only two major instances I can recall wherein the censor board has fallen back on its right to revoke. The board is invested with that right, and therefore the king can do no wrong, but the authority which gives the board that power is not quite fair. Once a man is freed of a charge, he cannot be brought to trial again on the same count. The censor board should work so that revokes aren't necessary. They stir up no end of discontent—among those who do not favor censorship and work an exceeding hardship on exhibitors and distributors.

The two instances I have referred to are Betty Compson in "The Law and the Woman" which, you may recall, played one of the Loew theaters here one day and had been shown elsewhere in Ohio. It was cancelled after its first day's showing here. The second case is D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose," which recently played the Stillman.

"The White Rose" has just finished its third week in Columbus. It had, I am told, played a month in Cincinnati. Contracts have been set here for the showing of this picture in many neighborhood theaters for next week. The picture was condemned early in the week by the censor board on the grounds that it is "immoral." According to Morris Safier, manager of United Artists exchange here,

* * *

This is a pretty late date to discover that "The White Rose" is "immoral." I'm beginning to wonder just what constitutes immorality in the eyes of the censor board. Is it in the picture itself or in the word, authority, and pressure brought to bear by certain groups or cliques who visit the picture at late dates and carry their grief to the director of education who listens, believes and condemns?

What was unusually immoral in "The White Rose"? I agree that the theme was based upon sex, but I declare that in the handling of the theme it was made beautiful, and if morals (that is, lessons) are to be taught on the screen where can you find one to measure up with this picture? True, there was an illegitimate child, but there was that in "Way Down East" in "Tess of the Storm Country," and in many, many other pictures. Surely, that baby could not have caused the film to be condemned.

The hero was a young man who was studying for the ministry. I have heard that the picture has been approved by many ministers. The sudden disgrace in the eyes of the world—into which this too human man fell was introduced before the young man entered the pulpit; therefore, one concludes and I believe rightly, that "The White Rose" constitutes no sorry reflection on the clergy. The hero was intensely human. He never for an instant became above the mass. In that lay his power for whipping up and holding the emotions of his stock. Too, after the advent of the pulpit, the weight of his past life became too much for him. Because he loved his Lord, he acknowledged his errors. Such a man as that is worthy of Love. No, I cannot believe that the cloth was brought into unfavorable light. I did not think of that at the time I saw the picture and now that the case has come up, I do not consider that Mr. Griffith has ground any ax with clergy, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish or any other group.

There was a great sin in "The White Rose." That was the basis of the story. It was delicately handled. Never offending. The sin was righted at the end of the story. The reunion was, but far-fetched, based on an improbable coincidence, but that in no way affected the moral tone of the story.

Manager Safier [illegible] that he had permission to fulfill his contracts with exhibitors up to Monday, and then unless something happens "The White Rose" will be completely crushed in Ohio.

* * *

It may interest you to know that Betty Compson's "Law and the Woman," rejected more than a year ago, was recalled a few weeks ago and passed with some eliminations. "Law and the Woman" led a "wild" life. It was passed. The pass revoked. The picture again looked at and passed the second time.

"The White Rose" was passed complete last July. It has been showing since that time, and now it is done.

Which brings up the question of what constitutes immorality. When "The White Rose" played here I compared it with Elinor Glyn's "Six Days," which was also passed. I am told, without eliminations. Both were well directed. "The White Rose" was skillful. "Six Days" was typically Glynish, and it came to the screen with all the fire and heat the well known Elinor can put in her novels.

"The White Rose" was white. "Six Days" I am holding in mind as the year's most salacious picture. But then, you see, I'm not on the censor board and there is no written law of my own which says that I shall not revoke opinions.

Thousand Horsemen Film Film.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming revolutionary war picture, for which "America" has been chosen as the title. Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

NEW ENGLAND has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, costumes, drums, vehicles, etc., used in the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern, and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prohibit, but in every action scene photographs of the actual sites [illegible]

PAUL REVERE HAS TO POSTPONE RIDE

Beasick Nag and Calendar Upset Griffith's Plans

[illegible]

GRIFFITH GOES TO BOSTON WITH 'AMERICA' CAST

Scenes Are to Be Reproduced on Actual Historical Sites

[illegible]

GRIFFITH LEAVES FOR NEW ENGLAND

Scenes for "America" Will Be Filmed on Sites of Historic Episodes Near Boston.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY AID

[illegible]

Boston (Mass) Traveler Oct 20 1923 — 13 Boston (Mass) Morning Globe Oct 20

Sleepy Lexington Green Again the Scene of an Invasion, but This Time It's by Movie People

"Makin' movies at Lexington." "Paul Revere" at left, played by Harry O'Neil. At right, Mr. Griffith directing a group of Minute Men. Below, left to right, William Gregory as "Hancock"; Miss Harrison as "Dorothy Quincy"; Miss Burke as Dorothy's aunt and James Moy Bennett as "the Rev. Mr. Clark." Mr. Clark's children played by Edwin B. Worthen Jr., and Virginia LaMont of Lexington, are in the oval.

D. W. Griffith Himself Is Handling Megaphone There

By AGNES CARR

Lexington has had a second invasion.

This time it's movies instead of redcoats.

D. W. Griffith, whose "Birth of a Nation," "Hearts of the World" and "Way Down East" placed him in the lead of motion picture directors, has planned a mammoth picture of American independence from the stormy days of '75, down to the present time.

Hence there came into the staid little town of Lexington today a curious group of men and women in the quaint costumes of colonial days, headed by an alert looking gentleman in a grey suit who needed not the labeled megaphone to distinguish him as the master artist, Griffith himself.

CHOOSE BACKGROUND

The old Hancock house, a few minutes walk from historic Lexington green, was chosen as the background for the arrival of Paul Revere on his prancing charger. The house is an old-fashioned frame dwelling, painted brown, with two rows of windows along the front.

The first scene taken was the arrival of John Hancock and John Quincy Adams at the house, which was then occupied by the Rev. Mr. Clark and his family. Greetings were exchanged between Dorothy Quincy, her aunt and the men folks. There were courtly bows and dainty courtesies before the group entered the house.

RAKE UP THE LEAVES

"Let's get those leaves out of the way before we start," Mr. Griffith was remarking, as Jimmy Jones, with his faithful camera, and I arrived. "Never do to have autumn leaves on the ground in April."

So two of the sturdy "Minute Men" laid down their guns and got busy with brooms, on the walk in front of the house. Lilac bushes were on both sides of the walk, but fortunately for the camera's eye, they were still green.

"What about the door? Will it open? Oh, there's a plate on it, that won't do."

Here Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, came to the rescue.

APPRECIATES CO-OPERATION

"We can take it off, Mr. Griffith," he volunteered, and off it came.

By the way, Mr. Griffith mentioned to me later the gratitude he and his company felt for the co-operation and assistance of Mr. Worthen and the officers of the association.

"They have helped us over many snags," said the great director, "and when you're dealing with history you meet with little slips but usually when it comes to small points, the color of a horse, or what kind of a sermon Dorothy Quincy was supposed to talk on one occasion, Mr. Worthen has made our task much lighter. I can assure you."

"ALL READY! CAMERA!"

The lens covered the vanishing point behind back out of camera range, the place of the door, Mr. Griffith stood ready. "All ready! Mr. La Fonda, ready! Mr. Gregory, in the camera box. Now in the house, the camera. Come on Minute Men, wait for Hancock's door to open, now the greeting, Dorothy's turn, now the group, Dorothy's aunt and the Rev. Mr. Clark, all in the house, and go!"

"That was good, now we'll do it again. The ladies come forward a little after the Hancock greeting. And Parson Clark, don't go into the house at once. Wait for the group. Now, ready. Camera."

REPEAT AND REPEAT

And the actors and actresses walked the scene few yards over and over and over. And Mr. Griffith suggested and ordered and encouraged and urged, while delighted spectators increased in number and the cameras clicked on steadily.

But the director never lost patience even on the 25th repetition of the scene, which on the screen won't last more than a moment or so. I counted, as I sat back of the lens.

And he never changed its element, nearly each time when an actor [illegible] his instructions and [illegible] the house instead of out.

"COME" THE HORSE

Now for the arrival of Revere. Mr. Harry Oneil, from Boston, mounted on a horse, rode down the road, dashed up the walk, leaped to the ground, ran up the steps and pounded on the door. Mr. La Fonda, ready. Mr. Gregory, in the camera box. Now in the house, the camera. Come on Minute Men, wait for Hancock's door to open, now the greeting, Dorothy's turn, now the group, Dorothy's aunt and the Rev. Mr. Clark, all in the house, and go!

Filmforgation

By EARL AIKEN.

REALLY, there are so many different things about "The White Rose" that attracted our attention yesterday at the Valentine that it becomes a bit difficult to center one's interest in any one idea in connection with this latest work of Griffith's.

Perhaps it would be better to mention a few things that are first brought to one's attention, the dreamy scenery, the classic features of Ivor Novello, the work of Mae Marsh.

The story is as old as the incidents with which it deals, often handled—but seldom in the manner D. W. presents it this week.

Even before the story is started, Griffith leads us off the highway and into the bypaths of etheral scenes, where, under lazy cottony trees that guard a stately mansion from Louisiana sunshine, one slowly becomes convinced that something of pathos, of tragedy of intense romance is sure to take place. And one is not disappointed.

It was strangely silent there yesterday, near the end of this southern story. Situations that have come to be known as hokum, somehow had one tied up, bound and intensely interested.

Getting away from the theater and reflecting a bit as to just why one is caught by a situation that has often been tried and often found wanting, one is inclined to blame one man for catching and holding that interest—Griffith.

Some men can tell a new story badly, and some can tell an old story very well. Griffith is one of the few in the latter class.

His cameraman and his players did their work well—very well.

This chap, Novello, is a study. Somehow he baffles any attempt to picture him, typographically. Go see him.

Mae Marsh is better than she has ever been at any time in the past. And she's been wonderful in the past.

Together Mae Marsh and Ivor Novello are irrestible.

Neil Hamilton, formerly with the Toledo Theater Stock Co., has a minor role in the production. He has small opportunity to display his ability, but he's in front of the camera long enough to show that he screens very well.

Zangwill Says Perfect Motion Picture Far Off

Tells Council of Jewish Women American Stage Is Improved.

Even D. W. Griffith has fallen far short of producing the perfect motion picture, Israel Zangwill, author and playwright, said last night in "A Little Chat on the Drama," before the New York Council of Jewish Women in Temple Emanu-El. The perfect picture, he said, will be the one that does away with "immense letters and glaring sub-titles," and flows along in a continuity that is understanding to the audience.

"I can't follow the film at all," he said. "The youngsters seem to know which is the heroine and which the villain, but I don't." He bemoaned what American producers had done to his "beautiful play, 'Merely Mary Ann.'" He hesitated to say his idea of the perfect picture would soon be realized, for he said such a picture could be sold in all languages, and therefore the price would be reduced, which was not what the producers wanted. He added that business is stalking the theater too closely.

Drama is not an abstract thing, he said, but is a concrete visualization of comparatively long periods in life, condensed into the time limit of two and a half hours. He said true drama must not be put second even to religious matters, for great teachings are made through the medium of the stage, and he was not so sure but that the Son of the Carpenter, were he to come to earth today, would use the theater rather than parables to teach his lessons.

He accused the majority of modern playgoers as not wanting intellectual plays and consequently not getting them, but he said he was glad the American stage had improved greatly over what it was when he previously visited America in 1912. He said generally an actor helped the play, but too often the actor, despite Euclid, thought the part was greater than the whole. In consequence, he said, America has built up a system where if a play is a success it belongs to the star, and if a failure it belongs to the author.

He poked fun at what he termed freak plays and turned his pointed shafts of satire on the new idea of the apron stage in which the players mingle with the spectators.

"The freak says one ought to write his plays so the audience feels itself a part of the action," Mr. Zangwill said. "I attended one such in London, 'Pasteur,' in which some of the actors sitting in the audience made all sorts of remarks. So I joined in with various cries that nearly upset the action of the play. I'm going to another soon in which at a certain moment the auctioneer gets no more bids and brings down his hammer. But he's going to get another bid from me. I'm going to be so thrilled with the action of the play I'll help as much as I can."

He laughed also at the idea of elaborate scenery and asserted that producers are attempting to reduce high drama to a puppet show. He said too much money is being spent on scenery and that the play should be so constructed that the audience would know the setting without seeing it, much as one notes a man is well dressed without knowing how he is dressed.

That Jews control the business of the theater he admitted freely, but he also said he had fought the modern stage because business too often interfered with the fine art. His notes, he said, were at random and like the Talmud in that they skipped about.

Censors Revoke Approval Given "White Rose;" It Was Passed Last July

BY W. WARD MARSH.

No photoplay is "safe" in the state of Ohio under present laws. The law says that the censor board may pass or reject a picture or make eliminations. Further, after the picture has been passed, whole or in part, the censor board may revoke the blessing given the picture, and kill it deader than the proverbial doornail.

It is in that little catch, the right to revoke the pass, that the happiness and longevity of every picture and the contracts made between exhibitors and distributors are in constant jeopardy.

There are only two major instances I can recall wherein the censor board has fallen back on its right to revoke. The board is invested with that right, and therefore the king can do no wrong, but the authority which gives the board that power is not quite fair. Once a man is freed of a charge, he cannot be brought to trial again on the same count. The censor board should work so that revokes aren't necessary. They stir up no end of discontent—among those who do not favor censorship and work an exceeding hardship on exhibitors and distributors.

The two instances I have referred to are Betty Compson in "The Law and the Woman" which, you may recall, played one of the Loew theaters here one day and had been shown elsewhere in Ohio. It was cancelled after its first day's showing here. The second case is D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose," which recently played the Stillman.

"The White Rose" has just finished its third week in Columbus, it had, I am told, played a month in Cincinnati. Contracts have been let here for the showing of this picture in many neighborhood theaters for next week. The picture was condemned early in the week by the censor board on the grounds that it is "immoral," according to Morris Safier, manager of United Artists exchange here.

* * *

This is a pretty late date to discover that "The White Rose" is "immoral." I'm beginning to wonder just what constitutes immorality in the eyes of the censor board. Is it in the picture itself or in the word, authority, and pressure brought to bear by certain groups or cliques who visit the picture at late dates and carry their grief to the director of education who listens, believes and condemns?

What was unusually immoral in "The White Rose"? I agree that the theme was based upon sex, but I declare that in the handling of the theme it was made beautiful, and if morals (that is, lessons) are to be taught on the screen, where can you find one to measure up with this picture? True, there was an illegitimate child, but there was that in "Way Down East" in "Tess of the Storm Country," and in many, many other pictures. Surely, that baby could not have caused the film to be condemned.

The hero was a young man who was studying for the ministry. I have heard that the picture has been approved by many ministers. The sudden disgrace—in the eyes of the world—into which this too human man fell was introduced before the young man entered the pulpit; therefore, one concludes and I believe rightly, that "The White Rose" constitutes no sorry reflection on the clergy. The hero was intensely human. He never for an instant became above the mass. In that lay his power for whipping up and holding the emotions of his flock. Too, after the advent to the pulpit, the weight of his past life became too much for him. Because he loved his Lord, he acknowledged his errors. Such a man as that is worthy of Love. No, I cannot believe that the cloth was brought into unfavorable light. I did not think of that at the time I saw the picture, and now that the case has come up, I do not consider that Mr. Griffith has ground any ax with clergy, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish or any other group.

There was a great sin in "The White Rose." That was the basis of the story. It was delicately handled. Never offending. The sin was righted at the end of the story. The reunion was a bit far-fetched, based on an improbable coincidence, but that in no way affected the moral tone of the story.

Manager Safier [illegible] that he has permission to fulfill his contracts with exhibitors up to Monday, and then unless something happens, "The White Rose" will be completely crushed in Ohio.

* * *

It may interest you to know that Betty Compson's "Law and the Woman," rejected more than a year ago, was recalled a few weeks ago and passed with some eliminations. "Law and the Woman" led a "wild" life. It was passed. The pass revoked. The picture again looked at and passed the second time.

"The White Rose" was passed complete last July. It has been showing since that time, and now it is done.

Which brings up the question of what constitutes immorality. When "The White Rose" played here I compared it with Elinor Glyn's "Six Days," which was also passed, I am told, without eliminations. Both were well directed. "The White Rose" was white. "Six Days" was typically Glynish, and it came to the screen with all the fever and heat the well known Elinor can put in her novels.

"The White Rose" was white. "Six Days" I am holding in mind as the year's most salacious picture. But then, you see, I'm not on the censor board, and there is a section law of my own which says that I shall not revoke opinions.

Paul Revere's Horse

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

D. W. Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America."

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

America is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Finishes Battle Scenes

D. W. Griffith has completed the battle scenes for "America", shot in and around Somers, N. Y. The company goes South later for more exteriors. The production will not be finished until Spring.

"America," has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

DO YOU KNOW COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of army wagons were used during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations.

What Color Was Revere's Horse?

AMERICA doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse, for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND VIEWS

Louise Fazenda and Freddie, a trained seal, will be the headliners in "The Galloping Fish," the next Thomas H. Ince production. A horse was starred in "The Hottentot" and an elephant in "The Soul of a Beast" and now Dorothy Dalton is expected for a performance in "Anna Christie" [illegible] in a bathing room.

Through the co-operation of the war department, D. W. Griffith has enough men on hand on the hills around Somers, N. Y., to use the same number of cavalrymen in his representations of the battles of the Revolution as were actually engaged. Included in the detachment of regular troops belonging in the picture is a [illegible]

[illegible] which D. W. Griffith will make after he completes "America." It is said that her picture will be made in England if her company materializes.

JOHN GRIFFITH FILM

John L. B. Pell is making the historical arrangement of the story for Griffith's next picture, "America." Pell is the author of "Down to the Sea in Ships" and is an authority on New England history.

New England has agreed to open its treasure of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America."

GRIFFITH GOES TO BOSTON

D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

GRIFFITH HERE TO TAKE SCENES FOR NEW FILM

Scenes for D. W. Griffith's new historical photoplay of the American Revolution, "America," will be made in Boston today and possibly tomorrow. Mr. Griffith, accompanied by Charles Mack, an actor in his company, Gerrit J. Lloyd and other officials of D. W. Griffith, Inc. arrived last night at the Parker House, prepared to start work on "America" today. Scenes will be made in the old North Church. Later scenes will be made in Lexington and Concord.

"America" is a story of the Revolutionary War, which Mr. Griffith is making at the request of the D. A. R.

The Lexington Historical Society will cooperate with the producer-director in making scenes for the film. Buckman Tavern and the Adams House, where John Hancock and John Adams were asleep the night the British unexpectedly came, will be used as settings.

Scenes for D. W. Griffith's new historical photoplay of the American Revolution, "America," will be made in Boston today and possibly tomorrow. Mr. Griffith, accompanied by Charles Mack, an actor in his company, Gerrit J. Lloyd and other officials of D. W. Griffith, Inc. arrived last night at the Parker House, prepared to start work on "America" today. Scenes will be made in the old North Church. Later scenes will be made in Lexington and Concord.

"America" is a story of the Revolutionary War, which Mr. Griffith is making at the request of the D. A. R.

The Lexington Historical Society will cooperate with the producer-director in making scenes for the film. Buckman Tavern and the Adams House, where John Hancock and John Adams were asleep the night the British unexpectedly came, will be used as settings.

Public Invited to View Filming of D. W. Griffith's 'America'

The public is invited to witness the taking of big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theatre owners report that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

Some producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being put into effect by D. W. Griffith whose next production is "America."

For this screen work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War.

Griffith Here for Photoplay Scenes

D. W. Griffith and his company of film players arrived in Boston last night to [illegible] his new photodrama of the American Revolution, "America."

D. W. GRIFFITH.

Today scenes will be taken in the Old North Church, and later in the day the company will journey to Concord and Lexington, where other scenes will be filmed on the actual sites where battles of the Revolution [illegible]

Griffith Is Here

New England has opened its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and Mr. D. W. Griffith has come to Boston with over a hundred members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes are to be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's Tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Mr. Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought.

PAUL REVERE HAS TO POSTPONE RIDE

Hessian Nag and Calendar Upset Griffith's Plans

[illegible]

GRIFFITH GOES TO BOSTON WITH 'AMERICA' CAST

Scenes Are to Be Reproduced on Actual Historical Sites

[illegible]

D.W.G. Broadcasts S O S Call

[illegible]

Thousand Horsemen Film.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming revolutionary war picture, for which "America" has been chosen as the title. Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

GRIFFITH LEAVES FOR NEW ENGLAND

Scenes for "America" Will Be Filmed on Sites of Historic Episodes Near Boston

HISTORICAL SOCIETY AID

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, costumes, drums, vehicles, etc., used in the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prohibit, but in every action down [illegible]

Boston (Mass) Traveler Oct 20 1923 — 13 — Boston (Mass) Morning Globe Oct 20

Sleepy Lexington Green Again the Scene of an Invasion, but This Time It's by Movie People

"Makin' movies at Lexington." "Paul Revere" at left, played by Harry O'Neil. At right, Mr. Griffith directing a group of Minute Men. Below, left to right, William Gregory as "Hancock"; Miss Harrison as "Dorothy Quincy"; Miss Burke as Dorothy's aunt and James Moy Bennett as "the Rev. Mr. Clark." Mr. Clark's children played by Edwin B. Worthen Jr., and Virginia LaMont of Lexington, are in the oval.

D. W. Griffith Himself Is Handling Megaphone There

By AGNES CARR

Lexington has had a second invasion.

This time it's movies instead of redcoats.

D. W. Griffith, whose "Birth of a Nation," "Hearts of the World" and "Way Down East" placed him in the lead of motion picture directors, has planned a mammoth picture of American independence from the stormy days of '75, down to the present time.

Hence there came into the staid little town of Lexington today a curious group of men and women in the quaint costumes of colonial days, headed by an alert looking gentleman in a grey suit who needed not the labeled megaphone to distinguish him as the master artist, Griffith himself.

CHOOSE BACKGROUND

The old Hancock house, a few minutes walk from historic Lexington green, was chosen as the background for the arrival of Paul Revere on his prancing charger. The house is an old-fashioned frame dwelling, painted brown, with two rows of windows along the front.

The first scene taken was the arrival of John Hancock and John Quincy Adams at the house, which was then occupied by the Rev. Mr. Clark and his family. Greetings were exchanged between Dorothy Quincy, her aunt and the men folks. There were courtly bows and dainty curtesies before the group entered the house.

RAKE UP THE LEAVES

"Let's get those leaves out of the way before we start," Mr. Griffith was remarking, as Jimmy Jones, with his faithful camera, and I arrived. "Never do to have autumn leaves on the ground in April."

So two of the sturdy "Minute Men" laid down their guns and got busy with brooms, on the walk in front of the house. Lilac bushes were on both sides of the walk, but fortunately for the camera's eye, they were still green.

"What about the door? Will it open? Oh, there's a plate on it, that won't do."

Here Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, came to the rescue.

APPRECIATES CO-OPERATION

"We can take it off, Mr. Griffith," he volunteered, and off it came.

By the way, Mr. Griffith mentioned to me later the gratitude he and his company felt for the co-operation and assistance of Mr. Worthen and the officers of the association.

"They have helped us over many snags" and the grand director, "and when you're doing this history you meet with little but that stage when it comes to small points, like the color of a house or what kind of a carriage Dorothy Quincy was supposed to ride in on occasion. Mr. Worthen has made our task much lighter, I can assure you."

"ALL READY! CAMERA!"

The time approached for the opening scene which took place at Hancock's house. Mr. Griffith called out "All ready! Mr. Le Picard, right, Mr. Harrison, to the center walk. Miss Burke, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Gregory, Mr. Worthen, wait on Hancock's door step. Miss Harrison, Miss Burke, Mr. Bennett, Mr. Gregory, Mr. Worthen, take your positions. Ready? Camera."

REPEAT AND REPEAT

And the actors and actresses walked the scene two, three, four and five times over. And Mr. Griffith suggested and ordered and encouraged and urged, while delighted spectators increased in number and the camera clicked on apace.

But the director never lost patience even on the 25th repetition of the scene, which on the screen won't last more than a minute or so. I counted, as I watched, 25 times.

And the actors never changed its pleasant, pretty note from start to finish. Mr. Griffith was surrounded by a dozen men who were his friends of long years, and they did their best to please their friend in all.

"GRACE THE HORSE"

Then for the arrival of Revere, a man was sent down town, hunting up a horse. Grace, the horse, was found, and Mr. Harry O'Neil, who looks the part of Revere, was dressed in the costume of the period, and posed for the camera.

Grace, the horse, was quite pleased with the attention she received and behaved like a lady, except that she would not stand still long enough for the camera to get a good picture of her.

Then the scene was taken, the camera man having to wait for Grace's movements, and Mr. Griffith, Mr. Worthen, Mr. Le Picard and Mr. Harrison, who had been in the house, came out and posed for the camera. Then the scene was taken again. The ladies came forward a little after the Hancock greeting. And Parson Clark, don't go into the house at all. Wait for the group. Now, ready.

Trenton (N.J.) State Gazette Oct 15 1923

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee Oct 15 1923

N.Y. Herald Oct 19, 1923

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer Oct 19 1923

Filmforgation

By EARL AIKEN.

REALLY, there are so many different things about "The White Rose" that attracted our attention yesterday at the Valentine that it becomes a bit difficult to center one's interest in any one idea in connection with this latest work of Griffith's.

Perhaps it would be better to mention a few things that are first brought to one's attention, the dreamy scenery, the classic features of Ivor Novello, the work of Mae Marsh.

The story is as old as the incidents with which it deals, often handled—but seldom in the manner D. W. presents it this week.

Even before the story is started, Griffith leads us off the highway and into the bypaths of etheral scenes, where, under lazy cottony trees that guard a stately mansion from Louisiana sunshine, one slowly becomes convinced that something of pathos, of tragedy of intense romance is sure to take place. And one is not disappointed.

It was strangely silent there yesterday, near the end of this southern story. Situations that have come to be known as hokum, somehow had one tied up, bound and intensely interested.

Getting away from the theater and reflecting a bit as to just why one is caught by a situation that has often been tried and often found wanting, one is inclined to blame one man for catching and holding that interest—Griffith.

Some men can tell a new story badly, and some can tell an old story very well. Griffith is one of the few in the latter class.

His cameraman and his players did their work well—very well.

This chap, Novello, is a study. Somehow he baffles any attempt to picture him, typographically. Go see him.

Mae Marsh is better than she has ever been at any time in the past. And she's been wonderful in the past.

Together Mae Marsh and Ivor Novello are irrestible.

Neil Hamilton, formerly with the Toledo Theater Stock Co., has a minor role in the production. He has small opportunity to display his ability, but he's in front of the camera long enough to show that he screens very well.

Selected for ... of Griffith Play

... the title selected for ... th's revolutionary film ... preparing to make a ... of the Daughters of ... Revolution. This is ... where a film has ... directly by a public ... was selected after a poll ... ersities, six grade schools ... and six sporting places ... g is most prevalent, in ... prize fighter's camp, a ... pool room, a dance ... boys' playground. ... per cent of the votes ... "America," with "The ... enty-Six" a heavy sec ... Brevity, vividness and ... were the standards ... all the returns were ... ral hundred people who ... title have been invited ... rts in the big battle and ... scenes of which there ... y in the film.

Lowell (Mass) Sun 10/15/23

Paul Revere's Horse

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

D. W. Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America."

Florence (Ala) News 10/15/23

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Portland (Me) Ex. + Adv. Oct 16 1923

America is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This is the first instance where a film has been requested directly by a public organization.

NY Film Daily 10/16/23

Finishes Battle Scenes

D. W. Griffith has completed the battle scenes for "America", shot in and around Somers, N. Y. The company goes South later for more exteriors. The production will not be finished until Spring.

Detroit (Mich) Free Press Oct 16 1923

Elmira (N.Y.) Gazette Oct 15 1923

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Boston (Mass) Post Oct 16 1923

'America,' has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 10/16/23

Hartford (Conn) Courant 10/17/23

DO YOU KNOW COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of army wagons were used during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations.

Detroit (Mich) News Oct 17 1923

What Color Was Revere's Horse?

AMERICA doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Griffith has already spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse, for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Hartford (Conn) Courant Oct 14 1923

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Boston (Mass) Traveler Oct 18 1923

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND VIEWS

Louise Fazenda and Freddie, a trained seal, will be the headliners in "The Clinging Fish," the next Thomas H. Ince production. A horse was starred in "The Hottentot" and an elephant in "The Boat of a Boozer" and now Doris Kenyon is cast for a part in "Anna Christie" being filmed at the Lasky studio.

Baltimore (Md) News Oct 18 1923

Zangwill Says Perfect Motion Picture Far Off

Tells Council of Jewish Women American Stage Is Improved.

Even D. W. Griffith has fallen far short of producing the perfect motion picture, Israel Zangwill, author and playwright, said last night in "A Little Chat on the Drama," before the New York Council of Jewish Women in Temple Emanu-El. The perfect picture, he said, will be the one that does away with "immense letters and glaring sub-titles," and flows along in a continuity that is understanding to the audience.

"I can't follow the film at all," he said. "The youngsters seem to know which is the heroine and which the villain, but I don't." He bemoaned what American producers had done to his "beautiful play, 'Merely Mary Ann.'" He hesitated to say his idea of the perfect picture would soon be realized, for he said such a picture could be sold in all languages, and therefore the price would be reduced, which was not what the producers wanted. He added that business is stalking the theater too closely.

Drama is not an abstract thing, he said, but is a concrete visualization of comparatively long periods in life, condensed into the time limit of two and a half hours. He said true drama must not be put second even to religious matters, for great teachings are made through the medium of the stage, and he was not so sure but that the Son of the Carpenter, were he to come to earth today, would use the theater rather than parables to teach his lessons.

He accused the majority of modern playgoers as not wanting intellectual plays and consequently not getting them, but he said he was glad the American stage had improved greatly over what it was when he previously visited America in 1912. He said generally an actor helped the play, but too often the actor, despite Euclid, thought the part was greater than the whole. In consequence, he said, America has built up a system where if a play is a success it belongs to the star, and if a failure it belongs to the author.

He poked fun at what he termed freak plays and turned his pointed shafts of satire on the new idea of the apron stage in which the players mingle with the spectators.

"The freak says one ought to write his plays so the audience feels itself a part of the action," Mr. Zangwill said. "I attended one such in London, 'Pasteur,' in which some of the actors sitting in the audience made all sorts of remarks. So I joined in with various cries that nearly upset the action of the play. I'm going to another soon in which, at a certain moment the auctioneer gets no more bids and brings down his hammer. But he's going to get another bid from me. I'm going to be so thrilled with the action of the play I'll help as much as I can."

He laughed also at the idea of elaborate scenery and asserted that producers are attempting to reduce high drama to a puppet show. He said too much money is being spent on scenery and that the play should be so constructed that the audience would know the setting without seeing it, much as one notes a man is well dressed without knowing how he is dressed.

That Jews control the business of the theater he admitted freely, but he also said he had fought the modern stage because business too often interfered with the fine art. His notes, he said, were at random and like the Talmud in that they skipped about.

Boston Traveler Oct. 19. 1923

GRIFFITH HERE

D. W. Griffith arrived here late last night, accompanied by players and technical staff to make scenes for "America." It is planned to take scenes for the battles of Concord and Lexington in the original location, so far as is possible. Considering how modernized the original spots have become, it does seem as if Mr. Griffith had a task ahead of him. One might also wonder how our October landscape can be made to resemble that of the 19th of April in 1775.

Boston (Mass) Post Oct. 19. 1923

GRIFFITH GOES TO BOSTON

D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Boston (Mass) Morning Globe Oct. 19, 1923

Griffith Is Here

New England has opened its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and Mr. D. W. Griffith has come to Boston with over a hundred members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes are to be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's Tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Mr. Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prevent, but to every action, photographs of the actual sites will be made.

Mr. Gt Bostonian Trade Review Oct 20 1923

GRIFFITH HERE TO TAKE SCENES FOR NEW FILM

Scenes for D. W. Griffith's new historical photoplay of the American Revolution, "America," will be made in Boston today and possibly tomorrow. Mr Griffith, accompanied by Charles Mack, an actor in his company, Gerrit J. Lloyd and other officials of D. W. Griffith, Inc. arrived last night at the Parker House, prepared to start work on "America" today. Scenes will be made in the old North Church. Later scenes will be made in Lexington and Concord.

"America" is a story of the Revolutionary War, which Mr Griffith is making at the request of the D. A. R.

The Lexington Historical Society will cooperate with the producer-director in making scenes for the film. Buckman Tavern and the Adams House, where John Hancock and John Adams were asleep the night the British unexpectedly came, will be used as settings.

GRIFFITH HERE TO MAKE FILM

John L. E. Peil is making the historical arrangement of the story for Griffith's next picture, "America." Peil is the author of "Down to the Sea in Ships" and is an authority on New England history.

Boston (Mass) Advertiser Oct 19 1923

Griffith Here for Photoplay Scenes

D. W. Griffith and his company of film players arrived in Boston last night to [illegible] scenes of the American Revolution [illegible]

Today [illegible] in the old North Church, [illegible] Lexington and Concord. [illegible] will be taken on the actual sites where battles of the Revolution [illegible]

Boston (Mass) Herald Oct 20, 1923

Public Invited to View Filming of D. W. Griffith's 'America'

The public is invited to witness the taking of big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theatre owners report that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

Some producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being put into effect by D. W. Griffith whose next production is "America."

For this green work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War.

Boston (Mass) Herald Oct 20, 1923

PAUL REVERE HAS TO POSTPONE RIDE

Hackney Nag and Calendar Upset Griffith's Plans

[illegible]

Boston (Mass) Herald Oct 20, 1923

GRIFFITH GOES TO BOSTON WITH 'AMERICA' CAST

Scenes Are to Be Reproduced on Actual Historical Sites

[illegible]

Boston (Mass) Herald Oct 20, 1923

D.W.G. Broadcasts S O S Call

[illegible]

Chicago Tribune Oct 18, 1923

Chicago Tribune Oct 18, 1923

Chicago Tribune Oct 18, 1923

Chicago Tribune Oct 20, 1923

Censors Revoke Approval Given "White Rose;" It Was Passed Last July

BY W. WARD MARSH.

No photoplay is "safe" in the state of Ohio under present laws. The law says that the censor board may pass or reject a picture or make eliminations. Further, after the picture has been passed, whole or in part, the censor board may revoke the blessing given the picture, and kill it deader than the proverbial doornail.

It is in that little catch, the right to revoke the pass, that the happiness and longevity of every picture and the contracts made between exhibitors and distributors are in constant jeopardy.

There are only two major instances I can recall wherein the censor board has fallen back on its right to revoke. The board is invested with that right, and therefore the king can do no wrong, but the authority which gives the board that power is not quite fair. Once a man is freed of a charge, he cannot be brought to trial again on the same count. The censor board should work so that revokes aren't necessary. They stir up no end of discontent—among those who do not favor censorship and work an exceeding hardship on exhibitors and distributors.

The two instances I have referred to are Betty Compson in "The Law and the Woman" which, you may recall, played one of the Loew theaters here one day and had been shown elsewhere in Ohio. It was cancelled after its first day's showing here. The second case is D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose," which recently played the Stillman.

"The White Rose" has just finished its third week in Columbus. It had, I am told, played a month in Cincinnati. Contracts have been let here for the showing of this picture in many neighborhood theaters for next week. The picture was condemned early in the week by the censor board on the grounds that it is "immoral." According to Morris Safier, manager of United Artists exchange here.

* * *

This is a pretty late date to discover that "The White Rose" is "immoral." I'm beginning to wonder just what constitutes immorality in the eyes of the censor board. Is it in the picture itself or in the word, authority, and pressure brought to bear by certain groups or cliques who visit the picture at late dates and carry their grief to the director of education who listens, believes and condemns?

What was unusually immoral in "The White Rose"? I agree that the theme was based upon sex, but I declare that in the handling of the theme it was made beautiful, and if morals (that is, lessons) are to be taught on the screen, where can you find one to measure up with this picture? True, there was an illegitimate child, but there was that in "Way Down East" in "Tess of the Storm Country," and in many, many other pictures. Surely, that baby could not have caused the film to be condemned.

The hero was a young man who was studying for the ministry. I have heard that the picture has been approved by many ministers. The sudden disgrace—in the eyes of the world—into which this too human man fell was introduced before the young man entered the pulpit; therefore, one concludes and I believe rightly, that "The White Rose" constitutes no sorry reflection on the clergy. The hero was intensely human. He never for an instant became above the mass. In that lay his power for whipping up and holding the emotions of his flock. Too, after the advent to the pulpit, the weight of his past life became too much for him. Because he loved his Lord, he acknowledged his errors. Such a man as that is worthy of Love. No, I cannot believe that the cloth was brought into unfavorable light. I did not think of that at the time I saw the picture, and now that the case has come up, I do not consider that Mr. Griffith has ground any ax with clergy, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, or any other group.

There was a great sin in "The White Rose." That was the basis of the story. It was delicately handled. Never offending. The sin was righted at the end of the story. The reunion was a bit far-fetched, based on an improbable coincidence, but that in no way affected the moral tone of the story.

Manager Safier says that he had permission to fulfill his contracts with exhibitors up to Monday, and then unless something happens, "The White Rose" will be completely crushed in Ohio.

* * *

It may interest you to know that Betty Compson's "Law and the Woman," rejected more than a year ago, was recalled a few weeks ago and passed with some eliminations. "Law and the Woman" led a "wild" life. It was passed. The pass revoked. The picture again looked at and passed the second time.

"The White Rose" was passed complete last July. It has been showing since that time, and now it is done.

Which brings up the question of what constitutes immorality. When "The White Rose" played here I compared it with Elinor Glyn's "Six Days," which was also passed, I am told, without eliminations. Both were well directed. "The White Rose" was white. "Six Days" was typically Glynish, and it came to the screen with all the fever and heat the well known Elinor can put in her novels.

"The White Rose" was white. "Six Days" I am holding in mind as the year's most salacious picture. But then, you see, I'm not on the censor board, and there is no section law of my own which says that I shall not revoke opinions.

Chicago Ill News Oct 20 1923

Thousand Horsemen ... New Film.

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming revolutionary war picture, for which "America" has been chosen as the title. Secretary of War Weeks has directed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Newark (N.J.) Star-Eagle Oct 20 1923

NEW ENGLAND has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, costumes, drums, vehicles, etc., used in the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prevent, but to every action, photographs of the actual sites

My Telegraph 10/18/23

GRIFFITH LEAVES FOR NEW ENGLAND

Scenes for "America" Will Be Filmed on Sites of Historic Episodes Near Boston

HISTORICAL SOCIETY ASSIST

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, costumes, drums, vehicles, etc., used in the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prevent, but to every action, photographs of the actual sites

Boston (Mass) Traveler Oct 20 1923 — 13 Boston (Mass) Morning Globe Oct 20

Sleepy Lexington Green Again the Scene of an Invasion, but This Time It's by Movie People

"Makin' movies at Lexington." "Paul Revere" at left, played by Harry O'Neil. At right, Mr. Griffith directing a group of Minute Men. Below, left to right, William Gregory as "Hancock"; Miss Harrison as "Dorothy Quincy"; Miss Burke as Dorothy's aunt and James Mey Bennett as "the Rev. Mr. Clark." Mr. Clark's children played by Edwin B. Worthen Jr., and Virginia LaMont of Lexington, are in the oval.

D. W. Griffith Himself Is Handling Megaphone There

By AGNES CARR

Lexington has had a second invasion.

This time it's movies instead of redcoats.

D. W. Griffith, whose "Birth of a Nation," "Hearts of the World" and "Way Down East" placed him in the lead of motion picture directors, has planned a mammoth picture of American independence from the stormy days of '75, down to the present time.

Hence there came into the staid little town of Lexington today a curious group of men and women in the quaint costumes of colonial days, headed by an alert looking gentleman in a grey suit who needed not the labeled megaphone to distinguish him as the master artist, Griffith himself.

CHOOSE BACKGROUND

The old Hancock house, a few minutes walk from historic Lexington green, was chosen as the background for the arrival of Paul Revere on his prancing charger. The house is an old-fashioned frame dwelling, painted brown, with two rows of windows along the front.

The first scene taken was the arrival of John Hancock and John Quincy Adams at the house, which was then occupied by the Rev. Mr. Clark and his family. Greetings were exchanged between Dorothy Quincy, her aunt and the men folks. There were courtly bows and dainty courtesies before the group entered the house.

RAKE UP THE LEAVES

"Let's get those leaves out of the way before we start," Mr. Griffith was remarking, as Jimmy Jones, with his faithful camera, and I arrived. "Never do to have autumn leaves on the ground in April."

So two of the sturdy "Minute Men" laid down their guns and got busy with brooms, on the walk in front of the house. Lilac bushes were on both sides of the walk, but fortunately for the camera's eye, they were still green.

"What about the door? Will it open? Oh, there's a plate on it, that won't do."

Here Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, came to the rescue.

APPRECIATES CO-OPERATION

"We can take it off, Mr. Griffith," he volunteered, and off it came.

By the way, Mr. Griffith mentioned to me later the gratitude he and his company felt for the co-operation and assistance of Mr. Worthen and the officers of the association.

"They have helped us over many snags," said the grand director, "and when you're dealing with history you must with little slip but stage when it comes to such points, the the color of a house, or what kind of a carriage Dorothy Quincy was supposed to ride in on his occasion. Mr. Worthen has made our task much lighter, I can assure you."

"ALL READY! CAMERA!"

The horse carrying the vanishing [illegible] left out of sight round the corner of the house, Mr. Griffith gave the word. Mr. La Picarda, cameraman, in the camera box, turned the crank, the camera clicked, the Minute Men went for Hancock's door, the door opened, Dorothy's aunt appeared, a [illegible] and the scene was on film.

"Cut! Cut! Cut!" Mr. Griffith was on his feet. "Not a good start. This time we must get a good start. This time the door must open and the actors come out. Let's try it again."

"Take your place and we'll go in."

again. The ladies come forward a little after the Hancock greeting. And Parson Clark, don't go into the house at all. Wait for the group. Now, ready. Camera."

REPEAT AND REPEAT

And the actors and actresses walked the skirts few yards over and over and over. And Mr. Griffith suggested and ordered and encouraged and urged, while delighted spectators increased in number and the cameras clicked on steadily.

But the director never lost patience even on the 16th repetition of the scene, which on the screen may last more than a minute or so. I counted, as I stood by the side of the director.

And the more times changed to present, finally quite true, when at last [illegible] the Revolutionary [illegible] hear the shouting below. And Dorothy Q. will rush to the window at the other side. Wait a minute. I wonder if she did?"

Mr. Worthen and the group about him didn't believe any woman could sleep with the noise Revere made in the yard, so it was agreed that Dorothy and her aunt would look out a window.

The property man, who to his dismay had been trying the window,

WINDOWS STICK

"Only two of you will open, Mr. Griffith," he shouted down, "and the sash below cuts of the view from them."

Mr. Griffith united with reluctance.

"Another little movie problem."

"Why don't they open?" demanded Mr. Worthen. "Let me try them."

And open they did, to the unfortunate, for the sash fell back of the Minute Men, which disclosed the camera's lens and the [illegible]

"The House Has Been Painted Twice Since Revere Rode" and Other Lexington Natives

[illegible]

REVERE RIDES HORSE

[illegible]

SCENES FILMED IN NEW YORK

"We'll make a couple of scenes at the Revere tavern and one or two at the old North church. We've got a splendid site for Revere. We tried it out by riding before we got one who could ride satisfactorily.

"This character has a dreamy note in the picture, but her words and those of Mr. Hancock have been made in New York."

Included among the actresses in the Lexington scenes were William Gregory as John Hancock, Miss Irene Harrison as Dorothy Quincy, Miss Mary Burke as Dorothy's aunt, and James Mey Bennett as the Rev. Mr. Clark.

SHOW LOYALTY

[illegible]

People Playing Parts Are Descendants of Minute Men

George D. Harrington, Everett S. Locke, Frank P. Cutter, Elinus Hadley, Joseph and Arthur Fiske, Clarence Cutler and Maj. Alfred Pierce.

Parson Clark's children are played by Edwin B. Worthen, Jr., and Virginia LaMont, both of Lexington.

The Minute Men doze while on duty and are roused by the thunder of a horse's hoofs. Paul Revere, played by Harry O'Neil, dashed up to the house.

"Wake up, wake up, the British are coming, the British are coming."

REVERE ARRIVES—16 TIMES

The heads of Parson Clark and Miss Quincy and her aunt appeared at the windows and Revere was invited inside to tell his story.

Paul made his entrance upon the scene 16 times today, and 15 times he rode away again, upon the director's orders.

The daylight faded and giant flare lights were brought into use. As their sparkling glow fell upon cocked hats and ancient muskets, one might well believe that a Fourth of July celebration was in progress.

Mr. Griffith regrets that some of the big scenes of the production could not be taken in Lexington.

BUILT OWN GREEN

"We wanted to take the battle on the green," he explained, "but the green has changed so much and the buildings are so close, we found it impossible.

"So we built a green and a Concord bridge and a Bunker Hill at the studio and reproduced the originals very faithfully.

"We had more than 1000 soldiers in our battle of Bunker Hill and more in other battles. We have left nothing undone to make each scene historically correct. You wouldn't believe that we spent weeks trying to find out the color of Paul Revere's horse? Well, we did.

"Artists have always painted it white. We found that Revere's own horse was white, but that he didn't ride it that night. He borrowed one from the deacon among the war.

DIRECTOR GRIFFITH SHOOTING MOVIE SCENES IN LEXINGTON

Minute Men Guard Historic House, Paul Revere Rides Seasick Horse For Screen Production, "America"

DESCENDANTS OF MINUTE MEN PLAY ANCESTORS' ROLES.

Left to Right—Clarence Cutler, Howard M. Monroe, George D. Harrington, Joseph Fiske, Arthur Fiske, Elinus Hadley, Frank P. Cutler, Everett S. Locke, Alfred Pierce.

Special Dispatch to the Globe

LEXINGTON, Oct 19—Lexingtotn townspeople turned out this afternoon in large numbers to witness their first view of high-class motion picture "shooting." D. W. Griffith, the great motion picture producer, with a score of motion picture actors, actresses, and others, motored out from Boston to take closeup scenes for the picture "America," which Griffith is producing.

The scenes "shot" this afternoon were at the Hancock-Clarke House on Hancock st. The Lexington Historical Society is cooperating with the motion picture people. The arrival from Concord, April 18, 1775, of John Hancock and Samuel Adams, was pictured at the front entrance of the Hancock-Clarke House, and also the arrival of Paul Revere that night on his famous ride from Boston.

A feature of local interest was the enacting of the parts of the Minutemen, who guarded the Hancock-Clarke House, by Lexington men, who are descendants of the original Lexington Minutemen. Those taking part from Lexington were Howard M. Munroe, George D. Harrington, Everett S. Locke, Frank P. Cutter, Elinus Hadley, Joseph Fiske, Arthur Fiske, Clarence Cutler and Maj Alfred Pierce. Mr Harrington and Mr Locke are veterans of the Civil War. Little Virginia Lamont and Edwin B. Worthen Jr of Lexington played the parts of the children of Parson Jonas Clarke.

The horse used in the ride of Paul Revere was shipped over from New York, making the trip by boat Thursday night and getting seasick on the trip. The horse was brought to Lexington in an ambulance.

Most of the picture, which is a stupendous undertaking, has been made in the New York studios of Griffith, where exact reproductions of Lexington and Concord as they were in April 19, 1775, have been built. Several hundred United States Regulars have played the part of the Red Coats in the picture.

The movie men were forced to rake leaves, for no leaves were wanted in an April scene. The wind kept blowing down more leaves, and once Griffith became rather excited and shouted "Leaves, leaves, leaves."

The movie men also very carefully covered up with earth a stone curbing in front of the Hancock-Clarke House so that it would not show in the picture. More pictures will be taken tomorrow. The Lexington police provided a special detail of officers to keep the crowd back.

"I KNOW, BUT THE 'SCRIPT SAYS ——"

D. W. Griffith explaining motion picture production to Pres Edwin B. Worthen of the Lexington Historical Society.

San Francisco (Cal) Journal Oct. 14. 192

PUBLIC ADMITTED TO VIEW SCENES

In Filming "America," D. W. Griffith Encourages "Galleries"

YD

Galleries are to be invited to [illegible] taking of the big scenes in mo[illegible] pictures, according to an un[illegible] standing recently reached by [illegible] leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the g[illegible] is to combat the prevalent impr[illegible] sion of "faking" in production [illegible] much discredit has been cast u[illegible] the reality of scenes by va[illegible] writers that theater owners [illegible] plained their patrons did not [illegible] lieve any scene in a film was [illegible] mately photographed without [illegible] toring."

So the producers have decid[illegible] invite the public at all scenes [illegible] their presence does not int[illegible] with the work, and this poli[illegible] being first put into effect wit[illegible] larger spectacular scenes for [illegible] Griffith's next production, "A[illegible] ica." For this work Griffith [illegible] producing all the more imp[illegible] battles of the Revolutionary [illegible] Unusual efforts have been [illegible] that all the details of this act[illegible] made with absolute fidelity [illegible] tory.

The first test of inviting the [illegible] lls has been unusually impr[illegible] as galleries varying from a thou[illegible] to fifteen thousand have fol[illegible] the action day by day. The [illegible] near Somers, where the scen[illegible] being staged, offers a perfect [illegible] dium for the gallery to vi[illegible] thousands of soldiers and play[illegible] action.

The privilege is being abus[illegible] pirate photographers, who tak[illegible] action with small motion p[illegible] cameras and hawk it to [illegible] companies for big scenes in [illegible] productions. Recently the [illegible] police confiscated seven small [illegible] tion picture cameras. [illegible] French [illegible] police [illegible] arr[illegible] at [illegible] film and camera being held [illegible] custody of the police until [illegible] ica" is released.

San Francisco News Oct 16, 19

"America" has been definit[illegible] cided upon as the title for [illegible] Griffith's revolutionary film [illegible] preparing to make at the s[illegible] tion of the Daughters of the A[illegible] can Revolution.

Louisville (Ky) Courier-Journal Oct. 21, 192

Syracuse (NY) American 10/21/23

Rochester (NY) American Oct 21 192

Washington D.C. Star Oct. 21, 19

Griffith Starts Work On Film 'America'

YD

D. W. GRIFFITH has begun the outdoor scenes for his Revolutionary War picture, "America."

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the making of the patriotic film which is being undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At Somers, Conn, he has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete camp equipment, cooking and sanitary facilities. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a minute for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one half to a mile, with [illegible] extending as far away as seven miles. The valley is the [illegible]

Thousand Horsemen Used in "America"

YD

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes of his forthcoming Revolutionary war picture, "America."

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete camp equipment, commissary, sanitary and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a minute for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one half to a mile, with [illegible] extending as far away as seven miles. The valley is the [illegible]

Wants To Know Color of Paul Revere's Horse

YD

WHAT color of a horse did Paul Revere ride on his historic trip from Boston to Lexington and Concord? This is probably the most famous animal in the history of the United States and it seems to be next to impossible to learn any details of its physical appearance.

D. W. Griffith wants to know for scenes in his next picture, "America." He has requested the Lexington Historical Society. All that he has been able to learn thus far is that the horse was not white. No information has been obtained from historical societies in New England, except that the horse was not white.

Griffith is and having searched some personal correspondence of the early Revolutionary days in the hope of finding some clue to the color of this animal.

Griffith to Film 'Amer

YD

D. W. GRIFFITH has gone to [illegible] to film the members [illegible] staff and players in [illegible] incidents of the revolutionary [illegible] the actual sites for the [illegible] "America."

By arrangement with [illegible] the historical societies, including [illegible] institutes the Lexington [illegible] Society, the Wayside Drum [illegible] Tavern, Concord, etc., and Bunker Hill will be used. It will be the [illegible] these sites have ever [illegible] Griffith will film the [illegible] Revolutionary [illegible] Portland (Me) Press-Herald

Boston (Mass) Post Oct. 21, 1923

Harrisburg (Pa) Oct 21 Daily Times 1923

New Haven (Ct) Oct. 21, 1923

GRIFFITH LEAVES FOR NEW ENGLAND

YD

[illegible] will be [illegible] of Historic [illegible]

FILMING ENDS IN LEXINGTON

Griffith Completes Scenes for Historic Picture

D. W. GRIFFITH

[illegible]

Philadelphia Inquirer Oct. 21, 1923

Harrisburg Pa Home News Oct. 21

YD

[illegible]

Harlem (Ky) Home News Oct. 21, 1923

Portland (Me) Oct. 21, 1923

GRIFFITH AT WORK

[illegible]

[illegible]

Item Denver (Colo) Times, Oct 20, 1923

1,000 Regular U. S. Troops Assist in Making Revolutionary War Film

Riding with 1,000 horsemen along the hills and thru the valleys of Putnam county, New York, W. D. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary war picture, for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras, with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires and the like.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about 1,000 men, under the command of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the Eighteenth infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and the Sixteenth infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under command of Capt. N. T. Davie. Maj. Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

Rochester (N.Y.) Herald, Oct 21, 1923

Thousand Horsemen Taking Part in Filming of Griffith's "American"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires and the like.

The United States Army group has established an encampment for about a thousand men under the command of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry from Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under the command of Captain N. T. Davies. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Mr. Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battle scenes of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve Cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside actual war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department and Secretary Weeks are taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the enormous expenses involved.

Sentinel 10/20/23

Frank I. E. Pell is making the historical arrangements of the story for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America." Pell is the author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," with a thorough knowledge of New England history.

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee Oct 20

D. W. Griffith has completed the battle scenes for "America," shot in and around Somers, N. Y. The company goes south later for more exteriors. The production [illegible] not be finished until [illegible]

Columbus (O.) State Journal Oct. 21, 1923

Griffith's "America"

Riding with 1,000 horsemen along the hills and through and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming revolutionary war picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, and the like.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the command of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Ft. Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Ft. Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

Bronx (N.Y.) Home News, Oct 21, 1923

John [illegible] who is making the historical arrangement of the story for D. W. Griffith's big production, "America," is the author of "Down to the Sea in Ships." Also, his thorough knowledge of New England history makes him an authority on the subject, and the ideal person for his present work on the feature [illegible] by the Daughters of the Revolution.

Springfield (Ohio) Sun, Oct 22, 1923

Griffith's New Screen Feature

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary film. Eric Mayne the Earl of Rutland, Lottie Pickford who has not appeared with her sister for years, will be Jenny Faxton and Allan Forrest will be the dashing Sir John Manners.

N.Y. Journal of Commerce, Oct. 25, 1923

[illegible] agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings. The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prohibit.

N.Y. American, Oct 25, 1923

SEMI-SICK horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical picture, "America."

A committee of historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, and the horse, ordered from New York, arrived by boat through a stormy voyage.

N.Y. Motion Picture News, Oct. 27, 1923

Revolutionary War Relics for Griffith Feature

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

Quincy (Ill) Whig Journal, Oct 19, 1923

Revolutionary Relics in "America."

New England has agreed to open its treasures of revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action.

It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures. Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as [illegible]

Eugene (Ore) Guard, Oct 20, 1923

WHAT COLOR HORSE DID PAUL RIDE IS PROBLEM OF MOVIES

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

Accuracy Essential.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

N.Y. Picture Play Magazine, December 1923

Griffith's Next Picture

D. W. Griffith is now at work on what is hoped to be another of his big, significant productions. It is to be a historical picture which will depict the hardships and struggles that the founders of this country underwent in order that we might have the prosperity and plenty which we enjoy to-day. The Revolutionary War will play a large part in the picture, and a great many historic locations will be used. These include Lexington, Concord, Bunker Hill, Trenton, Valley Forge, and so on. Paul Revere's ride is to be one of the high spots of the picture.

Frank McGlyn, the actor who played the title rôle in Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," will portray General Washington, and other character actors are being chosen to enact the many historical personages of that period who are to be woven into the picture.

There will be, of course, a love story running through the picture, in which Neil Hamilton will play the boy and Carol Dempster the girl.

Every attempt is being made to reproduce faithfully the historical scenes, and Mr. Griffith is being aided by all of the historical societies.

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, who has made extended research into early American history in connection with his books on the Colonial period, wrote the story from which Mr. Griffith is working.

Nashville (Tenn) Tennessean, Oct 21, 1923

1,000 HORSEMEN TO TAKE PART IN FILM

D. W. Griffith Begins Taking Outdoor Scenes for "America."

Riding with 1,000 horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every assistance to the production. At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment.

Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the command of Colonel G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler and the 16th Infantry from Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

Buffalo (N.Y.) Express, Oct 21, 1923

NEW ENGLAND'S HISTORIC TREASURES TO BE FILMED

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, America.

By arrangement with the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the Lexington common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, excepting where improvements prohibit, but in every [illegible] photographs of the [illegible]

Review, 10/27/23

[illegible]LICS OF REVOLUTION IN THIS GRIFFITH FILM

Priceless Treasures Are to Be Used in "America"

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary War relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next film production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the Revolutionary War will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through the [illegible] of the motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be photographed on famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's Tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings. The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites excepting where improvements prohibit, but in every [illegible] photographs of the [illegible]

N.Y. Motion Picture News, 10/27/23

IT'S been a long, long time since Paul Revere, astride his horse, rode madly through Lexington—yet history has never recorded any facts concerning the color of the steed. No one knows to this day whether the dashing Paul rode a bay or a chestnut or a white or a roan or a mottled gray or a black. Of course darkness had enveloped him and the good farmers along the road side were unable to identify the rider, or the horse.

This is apropos of D. W. Griffith's picturization of the eventful years of the American Revolution. Steps have been taken for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will Hays so that in the future there may be an authentic record of exactly how things looked.

Historians may not have erred in detailing the figures and facts, but they haven't possessed photographic minds. As a result Griffith has spent a snug sum seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's galloping steed. Furthermore, no one could tell him the sort of wagons used by the Colonists. And the historians have again failed on the smaller details in dwelling upon the larger facts.

The illustrations of the rider who aroused the slumbering Minute Men indicate that the horse was not white—still that is no certain proof that he wasn't white for it may have been the artist's fancy to paint him black. Nothing like being a stickler for detail, for the chances are some octogenarian's great grandfather may have sold or traded the horse to Revere and know its exact color—and the old gentleman would waste no time in telling the whole world that the stepper shown galloping through Lexington was out of character if his color did not match his great grandfather's description.

We hope that the incident of Washington crossing the Delaware will be straightened out at the same time. Here again the artist fools us. For one thing we refuse to subscribe to the popular belief that the leader of the Continental Army was ever so foolhardy as to stand up in the boat in a river packed with ice. Washington may have possessed a charmed life and the artist with a sense of the dramatic has painted him immune to injury—whether in a boat or on a horse—but the chances are he didn't indulge in unnecessary heroics.

Mr. Hays' historical research bureau can set a lot right and the Revolutionary War made a [illegible] of things here and there.

Atlanta (Ga) Journal, Oct 20, 1923

What was the color of the horse ridden by Paul Revere in his midnight journey to Lexington?

America doesn't know. D. W. Griffith, who is now making a picture of the American revolution, is finding that there is a dearth of information about the Revolutionary war, and the result is that the motion picture industry is taking steps to found an independent historical bureau under the direction of Will H. Hays.

What kind of wagons did the American armies use to transport their supplies? What did their camps look like?

A director trying to follow the actual happenings in detail is handicapped. Mr. Griffith is spending hundreds of dollars digging up these odd but necessary facts.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Enquirer, 10/21/23

A thousand horsemen will take part in the outdoor scenes of D. W. Griffith's newest production, "America."

That ought to make Ibanez look like a pikes[illegible]

Memphis (Tenn) Press-Scimitar, Oct 21, 1923

According to an announcement recently made, D. W. Griffith's next production will be "America," in which it is said, all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war will be reproduced.

Charleston (W. Va) Mail, Oct 21, 1923

DECIDE ON TITLE

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Lexington (Ky) Leader, Oct. 21, 1923

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Spokane (Wash) Spokesman-Review, Oct. 21, 1923

Revolution on Screen Next

America's history is now being portrayed on screen productions. David Wark Griffith, as noted before, has borrowed the New England states, and, with a carte blanche from the United States government to help himself to troops, is making the epic of the Revolution.

Jesse Hawthorne is going on the road in one of the industry's most ambitious productions to date. Harry Cohn is to film the life of George Washington, and Richard Barthelmess is getting ready to make "Nathan Hale."

Charles Ray has already done a page in history with his "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Portland (Me) Press Herald, 10/21/23

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists. Because of many inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

Lowell (Mass) Leader, Oct 22, 1923

Revolutionary War

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary screen feature which he is now preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Atlanta (Ga) Constitution, 10/21/23

WAR DEPARTMENT AIDS GRIFFITH

United States Army Officers Help Stage Battles for "America"

Chicago (Ill) Evening Post, Oct 22, 1923

Chicago (Ill) Herald-Examiner, Oct 22, 1923

Erie (Pa) Times, Oct 22, 1923

Lewiston (Me) Sun, Oct 22, 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune, Oct 22, 1923

Chicago (Ill) Herald-Examiner, Oct 22, 1923

Charleston (W. Va) Gazette, 10/21/23

Pittsburgh (Pa) Gazette, Oct 22, 1923

Pittsburgh (Pa) Post, Oct 21, 1923

Hollywood (Cal) Telegram, 10/23/23

Portland (Ore) Oregonian, Oct 21, 1923

Portland (Ore) Telegram, Oct 22, 1923

Memphis (Tenn) Commercial Appeal, Oct 21, 1923

Memphis (Tenn) Commercial Appeal, Oct 22, 1923

WHAT WAS COLOR OF REVERE'S NAG?

Motion Picture Producer Spends Fortune to Find Out Information for "America"

[illegible] OF HORSE OF REVERE IS UNKNOWN

[illegible] Work for Griffith "America," Is Handicapped

Take Part in Next Griffith's Picture

Hartford (Conn) Times, Oct 22, 1923

Movie Weekly (NY) Oct 27 1923 — Post Chester NY Item Oct 25 1923 — Pottstown (Pa) Ledger Oct 25 1923

D. W. Griffith to Film American History

Noted producer for the screen will join hands with Daughters of Revolution and create historical film masterpieces

By Charles E. Dexter

THAT part of American history which is nearest the heart of true Americans is to be transferred to the screen by the greatest of American directors, D. W. Griffith, who is to produce as his next venture a film based on the American Revolution.

Mr. Griffith has already given the world historical records of several of the high lights of the past, notably the Civil War, in "The Birth of a Nation"; ancient Babylon, the period of Christ and that of the struggle in France between the Huguenots and the Catholics, in "Intolerance"; the French Revolution, in "Orphans of the Storm"; and the Great War in "Hearts of the World."

This new picture promises to be the greatest of Mr. Griffith's career. Its production now comes really as the result of the incident which resulted in the sudden break between Al Jolson, the comedian, and Mr. Griffith. Mr. Jolson, as related in a story in Movie Weekly, was signed by Mr. Griffith to appear in his next picture. A company was assembled and rehearsals were begun. Suddenly, because of the terrific summer heat at the time, and because of the strain of overwork, Mr. Jolson, taking passage to Europe, quit the company. Mr. Griffith was unable to find anyone to take his place and so was forced to choose another story for production.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mr. Griffith turned his efforts toward finding a story which would illustrate that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence and the foundation of the Republic.

A scenario was quietly prepared and approved by Mr. Griffith. He began work without any public announcement during the last week in August, in the hope of taking some summer scenes before the quick advent of frost.

The cast already assembled includes Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, both of whom appeared in "The White Rose," and Frank McGlynn, who is famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln in John Drinkwater's drama, "Abraham Lincoln." In accordance with the usual Griffith custom of keeping secret details of a picture until it is completed, it is not known what parts Miss Dempster and Mr. Hamilton are playing, but Mr. McGlynn has been cast for the historic character of George Washington.

Ivor Novello and Mae Marsh in a scene from "The White Rose." Mr. Griffith's most recent picture.

Possibly for the first time in the history of motion pictures, public pressure will have played the largest part in the creation of a film masterpiece. The new Griffith picture came into being directly as a result of co-operation between the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is the head.

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE SCOTT, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association.

When Mr. Griffith received the suggestion, he immediately responded to the possibilities of such a picture. He indicated that the picture would first show the America of today and then in relation to the America of 1776.

Thus the picture will show many of the famous historical scenes which are familiar to every American school child. For example, there will be shown the beginning and the causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the American Revolution with the massacre on Boston Common and the Tea Party in Boston Harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, which are to be filmed on the actual location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale drama will also be shown.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will also dominate the action. The picture will show his acceptance of the commandership of our army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke at Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the concluding episodes of the picture.

When you recall Mr. Griffith's knack of getting into the hearts of those who view his films, you will realize how fine an undertaking this picture is, and with what interest its production and screening will be awaited.

Certainly it will be one of the most worth-while productions ever filmed, not only from the standpoint of the artistry which Mr. Griffith always injects into his pictures, but also because of its educational value.

What a difference it will make to the children learning history, for instance, if they can go to the movies and see the historical episodes in question presented on the screen.

And it is such pictures as this that form the greatest argument in the world in defense of the movie—in case movies should need defending.

Sea-Sick Horse Delays Historial Picture Filming

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of of Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten to marshall them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 10/25/23

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE PUT OFF; HORSE SICK

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the distoric ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of the Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

Tacoma (Wash) News Tribune Oct 25 1923

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshall them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Arlington (Mass) Ad

LEXINGTON IN THE MOVIES "AMERICA" BEING FILMED

Lexington had its first taste of real high-class motion picture "shooting" on Friday afternoon last week, when D. W. Griffith, the great motion picture producer, with a score of motion picture actors, actresses, and others, took close-up scenes for the stupendous picture "America," which Mr. Griffith is producing. A large number of townspeople witnessed the motion picture taking with deep interest. Patrolmen Edward C. Maguire and John C. Russell, of the local police were detailed to keep back the crowd.

The motion picture people motored out to Lexington in the forenoon from Boston, and after getting the lay of the land about the Hancock-Clarke house, on Hancock street, where all the scenes were made, and taking a few "stills," the motion picture folks went to the Russell house for lunch, returning about two o'clock, for the actual rehearsing and taking of the motion pictures.

The Lexington Historical Society cooperated most heartily with Mr. Griffith, taking a deep interest, in view of the fact that historical accuracy was aimed for, knowing that this will mean a pictured history of the happenings in Lexington, back in that memorable April, in 1775. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the society, was the official representative of the Historical Society, and he was on hand to help the motion picture people in any details that they might need his assistance.

The arrival from Concord, on April 18, 1775, of John Hancock and Samuel Adams, was pictured at the entrance of the Hancock-Clarke house, and the arrival of Paul Revere that night on his famous ride from Boston to warn of the coming of the British, was rehearsed.

A feature of local interest was the enacting of the parts of the Minute Men, who guarded the Hancock-Clarke house, back in 1775, by Lexington men, who are descendants of the original Lexington Minute Men. This was done at the suggestion of Mr. Griffith. Those taking part from Lexington were, Howard M. Munroe, George D. Harrington, Everett S. Locke, Frank P. Cutter, Elinus Hadley, Joseph Fiske, Arthur Fiske, Clarence Cutler and Major Alfred Pierce. Little Virginia Lamont and Edwin B. Worthen, Jr., of this town played the parts of the children of Parson Jonas Clarke.

The horse used in the ride of Paul Revere, was shipped over from New York, making the trip by boat Thursday night, and getting seasick on the trip. The horse was brought to Lexington in an ambulance. By its actions after landing in Lexington, it would seem that the horse had well gotten over the effects of its ride.

Most of the picture, which depicts scenes in the Revolutionary period, has been made in New York studios of Mr. Griffith, where exact reproductions of Lexington and Concord, as they were on April 19th, 1775, have been built. Several hundred United States Regulars have played the part of the Red Coats in the picture.

The movie men were forced to rake leaves much of the afternoon last Friday, for none were wanted in an April scene. The wind kept blowing down more leaves, and the task became such an arduous one, that Mr. Griffith became rather excited and shouted "Leaves, leaves, leaves."

The movie men also very carefully covered up with earth a new stone curbing in front of the Hancock-Clarke house so that it would not show in the pictures.

The motion picture people worked in Lexington again last Saturday and finished their work. As on Friday, the pictures were made at the Hancock-Clarke house, and as on the first day, Mr. Griffith personally directed the acting. Paul Revere's ride, which was to be filmed the afternoon before, was "shot" and also the departure of Adams and Hancock for Burlington in an old hack, the property of the Lexington Historical Society, as were the departures in the carriage of Dorothy Quincy and Mistress Hancock for Jonas Clarke's home, where Hancock and Adams were when the news of Paul Revere's ride came.

WHAT COLOR WAS REVERE'S HORSE?

No Definite Record as to What Paul Was Riding

America doesn't know the color of its best-known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Modesto (Cal) News Oct. 18. 1923

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the Amer...

Los Angeles (Cal) Times Oct 21 1923

Descendents of "Minute Men" appearing in Griffith's new production.

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boson to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, bpt when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of the Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshall them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

PHOTOPLAY EDITOR

What Was Color of Paul Revere's Famous Steed?

Jacksonville (Ill) Journal Oct 18 1923

Erie (Penn) Dispatch Oct 22 1923

DID PAUL RIDE A BAY OR A SORREL?

Unofficial sources of American history are to be dug into if Will Hays and the motion picture men can secure correct information.

It all comes out of the fact that they found that no one knows the color of America's best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in history records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Mr. Hays.

Historians have told the main events but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what kind of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

Hundreds of dollars were spent seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in the big production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. The motion picture research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

SPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGRAM

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has come to Washington to obtain the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scene showing Washington's home life, and the historical buildings which surrounded them.

Officials for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the pictures showing the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual grounds in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and one car of players to the Virginia location, where he will spend several weeks.

COOLIDGE VIEWS FILM 'AMERICA'

Introduced by Cong. Treadway Griffith Shows Scenes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Congressman Charles Allen Treadway of Massachusetts today showed President Coolidge Paul Revere's midnight ride, George Washington and Lexington, who directed the Revolutionary war, and the history of the Colonists, in a series of scenes from the motion picture "America" which D. W. Griffith is producing for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The President said he was much pleased with the pictures and asked Representative Treadway to take them to the Red House to show to Mrs. Coolidge.

Mr. Treadway said Griffith had taken a large staff and one car of players to the Virginia location, where he will spend several weeks.

Tacoma (Wash) News Tribune Oct 18 1923

Elmira (N.Y.) Star Gazette Oct 28 1923

Sacramento (Cal) Bee Oct 25 1923

Bell Gardens (Ind) Inq Oct 18 1923

Ind Oregonian (Portland) Oct 25 1923

Pasadena (Cal) Star News Oct 25 1923

Pasadena (Cal) Star News Oct 25 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Oct 21 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Oct 21 1923

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Oct 21

1,000 Regular U. S. Troops Assist in Making Revolutionary War Film

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills and thru the valleys of Putnam county, New York, W. D. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary war picture, for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment, which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires and the like.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about 1,000 men, under the command of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the Eighteenth infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and the Sixteenth Infantry at Governors Island. A thirty-three-piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Maj. Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

Thousand Horsemen Taking Part in Filming of Griffith's "American"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires and the like.

The United States Army group has established an encampment for about a thousand men under the command of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry from Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under the command of Captain N. T. Davies. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army officers, Mr. Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battle scenes of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve Cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside actual war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department and Secretary Weeks are taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible because of the enormous expenses involved.

Griffith's "America"

Riding with 1000 horsemen along the hills and through and through the valleys of Putnam County, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming revolutionary war picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film, which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, and the like.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about 1000 men under the command of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Ft. Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Ft. Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

Griffith's Next Picture

D. W. Griffith is now at work on what is hoped to be another of his big, significant productions. It is to be a historical picture which will depict the hardships and struggles that the founders of this country underwent in order that we might have the prosperity and plenty which we enjoy to-day. The Revolutionary War will play a large part in the picture, and a great many historic locations will be used. These include Lexington, Concord, Bunker Hill, Trenton, Valley Forge, and so on. Paul Revere's ride is to be one of the high spots of the picture.

Frank McGlyn, the actor who played the title rôle in Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," will portray General Washington, and other character actors are being chosen to enact the many historical personages of that period who are to be woven into the picture.

There will be, of course, a love story running through the picture, in which Neil Hamilton will play the boy and Carol Dempster the girl.

Every attempt is being made to reproduce faithfully the historical scenes, and Mr. Griffith is being aided by all of the historical societies.

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, who has made extended research into early American history in connection with his books on the Colonial period, wrote the story from which Mr. Griffith is working.

Revolutionary War Relics for Griffith Feature

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

A SEA-SICK horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical picture, "America."

Hope Hampton

A committee of historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, and the horse, ordered from New York, arrived by boat through a stormy voyage.

WHAT COLOR HORSE DID PAUL RIDE IS PROBLEM OF MOVIES

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

Accuracy Essential.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

1000 HORSEMEN TO TAKE PART IN FILM

D. W. Griffith Begins Taking Outdoor Scenes for "America."

Riding with 1,000 horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every assistance to the production. At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment.

Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, etc.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about 1,000 men under the command of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry from Governors Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieut. DeWitt, and a medical corps unit under command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

NEW ENGLAND'S HISTORIC TREASURES TO BE FILMED

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, America.

By arrangement with the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

Take Part in Next Griffith's Picture

WHAT WAS COLOR OF REVERE'S NAG?

Boston Prize Professor Needs Patrons to Find the Information for "America"

WAR DEPARTMENT AIDS GRIFFITH

United States Army Officers Help Stage Battles for "America"

Revolutionary Relics in "America."

New England has agreed to open its treasures of revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action.

It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures. Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

DECIDE ON TITLE

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Accordingly to an announcement recently made, D. W. Griffith's next production will be "America," in which it is said, all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war will be reproduced.

A thousand horsemen will take part in the outdoor scenes of D. W. Griffith's newest production, "America."

That ought to make Ibanez look like a pikes.

What was the color of the horse ridden by Paul Revere in his midnight journey to Lexington?

America doesn't know. D. W. Griffith, who is now making a picture of the American revolution, is finding that there is a dearth of information about the Revolutionary war, and the result is that the motion picture industry is taking steps to found an independent historical bureau under the direction of Will H. Hays.

What kind of wagons did the American armies use to transport their supplies? What did their camps look like?

A director trying to follow the actual happenings in detail is handicapped. Mr. Griffith is spending hundreds of dollars digging up these odd but necessary facts.

Revolutionary War Relics for Griffith Feature

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

IT'S been a long, long time since Paul Revere, astride his horse, rode madly through Lexington—yet history has never recorded any facts concerning the color of the steed. No one knows to this day whether the dashing Paul rode a bay or a chestnut or a white or a roan or a mottled gray or a black. Of course darkness had enveloped him and the good farmers along the road side were unable to identify the rider, or the horse.

This is apropos of D. W. Griffith's picturization of the eventful years of the American Revolution. Steps have been taken for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will Hays so that in the future there may be an authentic record of exactly how things looked.

Historians may not have erred in detailing the figures and facts, but they haven't possessed photographic minds. As a result Griffith has spent a snug sum seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's galloping steed. Furthermore, no one could tell him the sort of wagons used by the Colonists. And the historians have again failed on the smaller details in dwelling upon the larger facts.

The illustrations of the rider who aroused the slumbering Minute Men indicate that the horse was not white—still that is no certain proof that he wasn't white for it may have been the artist's fancy to paint him black. Nothing like being a stickler for detail—for the chances are some octogenarian's great-grandfather may have sold or traded the horse to Revere and knew its exact color—and the old gentleman would waste no time in telling the whole world that the stepper shown galloping through Lexington was out of character if his color differed from his great-grandfather's description.

We hope that the incident of Washington crossing the Delaware will be straightened out at the same time. Here again the artist fools us. For one thing we refuse to subscribe to the popular belief that the leader of the Continental Army was so foolhardy as to stand up in the boat in a river packed with ice. Washington may have possessed a charmed life and the artist with a sense of the dramatic has painted him immune to injury—whether in a boat or on a horse—but the chances are he didn't indulge in unnecessary heroics.

Mr. Hays' historical research bureau can set a lot of things right and the Revolutionary War people may have had a few things right, and the Revolutionary War people may have had a few things wrong.

Movie Weekly (N.Y.) Oct 27 1923

D. W. Griffith to Film American History

Noted producer for the screen will join hands with Daughters of Revolution and create historical film masterpieces

Ivor Novello and Mae Marsh in a scene from "The White Rose." Mr. Griffith's most recent picture.

By Charles E. Dexter

THAT part of American history which is nearest the heart of true Americans is to be transferred to the screen by the greatest of American directors, D. W. Griffith, who is to produce as his next venture a film based on the American Revolution.

Mr. Griffith has already given the world historical records of several of the high lights of the past, notably the Civil War, in "The Birth of a Nation"; ancient Babylon, the period of Christ and that of the struggle in France between the Huguenots and the Catholics, in "Intolerance"; the French Revolution, in "Orphans of the Storm"; and the Great War in "Hearts of the World."

This new picture promises to be the greatest of Mr. Griffith's career. Its production now comes really as the result of the incident which resulted in the sudden break between Al Jolson, the comedian, and Mr. Griffith. Mr. Jolson, as related in a story in Movie Weekly, was signed by Mr. Griffith to appear in his next picture. A company was assembled and rehearsals were begun. Suddenly, because of the terrific summer heat at the time, and because of the strain of overwork, Mr. Jolson, taking passage to Europe, quit the company. Mr. Griffith was unable to find anyone to take his place and so was forced to choose another story for production.

At the request of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mr. Griffith turned his efforts toward finding a story which would illustrate that period in our history which the society was formed to commemorate—America's successful struggle for independence and the foundation of the Republic.

A scenario was quietly prepared and approved by Mr. Griffith. He began work without any public announcement during the last week in August, in the hope of taking some summer scenes before the quick advent of frost.

The cast already assembled includes Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton, both of whom appeared in "The White Rose," and Frank McGlynn, who is famous for his portrayal of the role of Lincoln in John Drinkwater's drama, "Abraham Lincoln." In accordance with the usual Griffith custom of keeping secret details of a picture until it is completed, it is not known what parts Miss Dempster and Mr. Hamilton are playing, but Mr. McGlynn has been cast for the historic character of George Washington.

Possibly for the first time in the history of motion pictures, public pressure will have played the largest part in the creation of a film masterpiece. The new Griffith picture came into being directly as a result of co-operation between the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is the head.

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE SCOTT, president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State regent, requested the making of the picture. Mr. Hays concurred and consulted with Mr. Griffith, who is a member of his association.

When Mr. Griffith received the suggestion, he immediately responded to the possibilities of such a picture. He indicated that the picture would first show the America of today and then in relation to the America of 1776.

Thus the picture will show many of the famous historical scenes which are familiar to every American school child. For example, there will be shown the beginning and the causes of the war for independence both here and in England; then the outbreak of the American Revolution with the massacre on Boston Common and the Tea Party in Boston Harbor. Paul Revere's ride lends itself to picturization, as well as the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, which are to be filmed on the actual location of these clashes. The Nathan Hale drama will also be shown.

George Washington, the dominating figure of the period, will also dominate the action. The picture will show his acceptance of the commandership of our army, his disasters at Fort Washington and Fort Lee, his magnificent stroke at Trenton after crossing the ice-filled Delaware, his tragic winter at Valley Forge and his final triumph over Cornwallis at Yorktown.

The signing of the Declaration of Independence and the actual beginning of the American Republic will form the background for the concluding episodes of the picture.

When you recall Mr. Griffith's knack of getting into the hearts of those who view his films, you will realize how fine an undertaking this picture is, and with what interest its production and screening will be awaited.

Certainly it will be one of the most worth-while productions ever filmed, not only from the standpoint of the artistry which Mr. Griffith always injects into his pictures, but also because of its educational value.

What a difference it will make to the children learning history, for instance, if they can go to the movies and see the historical episodes in question presented on the screen.

And it is such pictures as this that form the greatest argument in the world in defense of the movie—in case movies should need defending.

Erie (Penn) Dispatch Oct 22 1923

DID PAUL RIDE A BAY OR A SORREL?

Unofficial sources of American history are to be dug into if Will Hays and the motion picture people can get proper information.

It all comes out of the fact that they found that no one knows the color of America's best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Mr. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

Hundreds of dollars were spent seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in the Griffith production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

Fort Chester (N.Y.) Item Oct 25 1923

Sea-Sick Horse Delays Historical Picture Filming

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of of Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten to marshall them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 10/25/23

Descendents of "Minute Men" appearing in Griffith's new production.

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boson to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of the Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshall them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Fottstown (Pa) Leader Oct 25 1923

PAUL REVERE'S RIDE PUT OFF; HORSE SICK

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of the Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshall them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Tacoma (Wash) News Tribune Oct 25 1923

WHAT COLOR WAS REVERE'S HORSE?

No Definite Record as to What Paul Was Riding

America doesn't know the color of its best-known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Modesto (Cal) News Oct. 18. 1923

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the Ameri

Los Angeles (Cal) Times Oct. 26 1923

What Was Color of Paul Revere's Famous Steed?

Arlington (Mass) Advocate 10/25

LEXINGTON IN THE MOVIES; "AMERICA" BEING FILMED

Lexington had its first taste of real high-class motion picture "shooting" on Friday afternoon of last week, when D. W. Griffith, the great motion picture producer, with a score of motion picture actors, actresses, and others, took close-up scenes for the stupendous picture "America," which Mr. Griffith is producing. A large number of townspeople witnessed the motion picture taking with deep interest. Patrolmen Edward C. Maguire and John C. Russell, of the local police were detailed to keep back the crowd.

The motion picture people motored out to Lexington in the forenoon from Boston, and after getting the lay of the land about the Hancock-Clarke house, on Hancock street, where all the scenes were made, and taking a few "stills," the motion picture folks went to the Russell house for lunch, returning about 2 o'clock, for the actual rehearsing and taking of the motion pictures.

The Lexington Historical Society cooperated most heartily with Mr. Griffith, taking a deep interest, in view of the fact that historical accuracy was aimed for, knowing that this will mean a pictured history of the happenings in Lexington, back in that memorable April, in 1775. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the society, was the official representative of the Historical Society, and he was on hand to help the motion picture people in any details that they might need his assistance.

The arrival from Concord, on April 18, 1775, of John Hancock and Samuel Adams, was pictured at the entrance of the Hancock-Clarke house, and the arrival of Paul Revere that night on his famous ride from Boston to warn of the coming of the British, was rehearsed.

A feature of local interest was the enacting of the parts of the Minute Men, who guarded the Hancock-Clarke house, back in 1775, by Lexington men, who are descendants of the original Lexington Minute Men. This was done at the suggestion of Mr. Griffith. Those taking part from Lexington were, Howard M. Munroe, George D. Harrington, Everett S. Locke, Frank P. Cutter, Elinus Hadley, Joseph Fiske, Arthur Fiske, Clarence Cutler and Major Alfred Pierce. Little Virginia Lamont and Edwin B. Worthen, Jr., of this town played the parts of the children of Parson Jonas Clarke.

The horse used in the ride of Paul Revere, was shipped over from New York, making the trip by boat Thursday night, and getting seasick on the trip. The horse was brought to Lexington in an ambulance. By its actions after landing in Lexington, it would seem that the horse had well gotten over the effects of its ride.

Most of the picture, which depicts scenes in the Revolutionary period, has been made in New York studios of Mr. Griffith, where exact reproductions of Lexington and Concord, as they were on April 19th, 1775, have been built. Several hundred United States Regulars have played the part of the Red Coats in the picture.

The movie men were forced to rake leaves much of the afternoon, last Friday, for none were wanted in an April scene. The wind kept blowing down more leaves, and the task became such an arduous one, that Mr Griffith became rather excited and shouted "Leaves, leaves, leaves."

The movie men also very carefully covered up with earth a few stone curbing in front of the Hancock-Clarke house so that it would not show in the picture.

The motion picture people were out in Lexington again last Saturday and finished their work. As on Friday, the pictures were made at the Hancock-Clarke house, and as on the first day, Mr Griffith personally directed the acting. Paul Revere's special, which was rehearsed the afternoon before, was shot, and also the departure of Adams and Hancock for Burlington in an old Hack, the property of the Lexington Historical Society, as were the departures in the same place of Dorothy Dalton and Mae Marsh, for Paul, and the arrival in Boston, from Burlington, took place after the period of Paul Revere.

The capture of Prescott's horse and the real events that took place in the Hancock-Clarke house on the night of April 18th, 1775, and also the ride of Paul Revere, were also shot, and the Paul Revere's ride, being the last of the pictures. That night also were made of the Minute Men.

Sunbury (Pa) Telegram 10/25

COOLIDGE VIEWS FILM 'AMERICA'

Introduced by Cong. Treadway Griffith Shows Scenes

Boston Traveler Oct. 3

GRIFFITH HERE TO "SHOOT" SCENES

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Scott, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has come to Washington to confer with the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion of Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical buildings which abounded there.

Whenever the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important events in the taking of the scenes including the laying of Lexington and the battle at Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington earlier life will be taken on the actual grounds at Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and full cast of players to the Washington grounds, where he will spend several weeks.

Jonesville (Ark) Chronicle 10/26/23

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the Ameri

Eureka (Nev) Sun Oct 26 1923

Screen News Sacramento (Cal) Oct 29 1923

Bellingham (Wash) Herald 10/25/23

Long Beach (Cal) Press Telegram Oct 27 1923

Great Falls (Mont) Tribune 10/28/23

GRIFFITH DEPARTS FOR NEW ENGLAND

Chicago Tribune Oct 28 1923

Chicago Sun Oct 28 1923

Chicago Herald Oct 28 1923

Chicago Tribune

Producers "Scout" New England for Historic Film Locations

Beauty and Interest in Country and City Reward Search for New Settings

Fitfully, and not to its full beauty, Boston has been utilized for screen play locations. But during the last two weeks there has appeared a tendency to "scout," as the saying has it, for suitable surroundings in which to produce new pictures.

The obvious first selection is of historic settings.

David Wark Griffith has recently been here, taking exteriors for his "America," sponsored, it is said, by the Daughters of the American Revolution, and research for which Mr. Griffith has been making intermittently since 1915. Lexington and Concord are beautiful in their own right, without the rich background of a history that has purpled the years between. Any number of times Scarsdale, N. Y., and the Westchester Hills, and parts of Long Island have been used as locations for pictures which would have been more beautiful set in the serenities of New England. Thus far the tendency toward utilizing New England for scenes has been limited mainly to the necessities of history. Boston has, however, beautiful modernities as well as quaintness.

A second group of film people, however, have been searching Boston and neighboring towns this week for suitable locations. So it is possible that in time Boylston Street and the Public Gardens will partly do away with the boresome Fifth Avenue and Central Park, and that Wellesley and the low, mauve slopes of Sudbury and the remotenesses of Chestnut Hill may displace happily the monotonies of "country estates on fashionable Long Island" or the Sound. Astonishing assertions are noted constantly concerning the expenditures made on most current pictures. Transportation costs for companies to the regions about Boston might well be balanced by the freshening, scenically, that films would find generally in discarding the old threadbare backgrounds for the flavor and atmosphere of the quaint suavities and the dignity of New England, of which Boston is a part.

Film stars happily are not above an intense interest in historic sites for their own sake. One of the trio, who have been spending several days here looking over the ground for a production shortly to be made, said that she was accustomed to what she dared call the aridities of California for such long periods of time that it was exasperating to be torn away from even the most advertised historic sites, to say nothing of those which take searching and a specialized interest to find, and to which she wanted to give days.

In the course of his visit in Boston, Elliott Dexter came across the extra-theater, as it might be called, belonging to the children of the North and West Ends. Saturday afternoons they gather in a room over the Lancaster Theater where they entertain themselves under the shepherding of Charles Dimick. Prizes are offered in singing competitions. An unmercenary premium is placed on politeness and manners. The children are induced to various forms of self-expression. Mr. Dexter was much interested in the potentialities of such a venture for youth and this afternoon is speaking to the children at his own request.

The Washington Elm did not topple to the ground until after the visitors had seen it.

What the Name Griffith Means to Picture World

Ever a Pioneer, Working Independently, Celebrated Producer and Director Stands Out Boldly as One Who Has Led in Photoplay Development to Its Present Status.

D. W. Griffith was born at La Grange, Kentucky, January 16, 1830. His father was Brigadier General Jacob Wark Griffith of the Second Kentucky Cavalry, known as "Roaring Jake" because it was reputed his commands carried two miles along the valleys. So far as known, his father is the only commanding officer who led a cavalry charge riding in a buggy. His mount was shot, his right leg and left arm broken. He was put in a buggy and raced at the head of his troops. He was one of few who did not surrender, merely returned home, and was a member of Jeff Davis' bodyguard.

D.W. GRIFFITH

Got a job in a stock company theater. His mother and sister had directed his reading and study toward his becoming a Baptist minister. When church heard of his going into theater, meeting was held to read him out of the church.

The prayers of his mother not to publicly accept his youthful fascination for theater by casting him out, availed, and his name was continued on church rolls, on probation.

He joined small traveling companies out of Louisville, salary $5 a week and "cakes."

Played once in Barney Bernard's company and every pay day Bernard started poker game, winning all salaries back.

Began practicing playwrighting from start. Wrote 39 plays. One produced by James K. Hackett, entitled "The Fool and The Girl," Fannie Ward played lead. Never learned a line—all prompt. Play failed in Washington. Other plays rejected as "too strong." William Winter sent telegram after he had read a play with Frohman, saying Griffith had greatest potentialities of any young playwright. Griffith had one dollar.

Worked in a coal mine, as peddler in steel mill, scraped girders on subway, etc.

Worked up to places in company of Mansfield, Nance O'Neill, etc. No particular success. Studied operatic singing. Lived 28 weeks on $18 while studying voice.

Went to Biograph studios to sell scenarios. Became an actor; induced the acting one week, and became director. Immediate success. Only gross part of a picture to Griffith, and immediate success.

All his experience added up to qualify him for this job, especially character, vitality and energy, imagination, stage experience and an ear for beauty.

Made his stamp the rest is photoplay. The company targeted Griffith as the man who could do anything, and Griffith did it.

Griffith's pictures have run the gamut of human emotions, from the sweetness of "Lady Rose's Daughter" to the grim tragedy of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance." Griffith's pictures have made more money than any other pictures, and have been more discussed than any other pictures.

Griffith's pictures have been the most pretentious, the most costly, the most elaborate, the most spectacular, the most dramatic, the most human, the most universal, the most cosmopolitan, the most educational, the most moral, the most patriotic, the most inspirational, the most entertaining, the most successful, the most beautiful, the most perfect, the most wonderful, the most marvelous, the most stupendous, the most sensational, the most epoch-making, the most revolutionary, the most evolutionary, the most, the most, the most.

Griffith's pictures have been the most pretentious, the most costly, the most elaborate, the most spectacular, the most dramatic, the most human, the most universal, the most cosmopolitan, the most educational, the most moral, the most patriotic, the most inspirational, the most entertaining, the most successful, the most beautiful, the most perfect, the most wonderful, the most marvelous, the most stupendous, the most sensational, the most epoch-making, the most revolutionary, the most evolutionary, the most, the most, the most.

Public Invited To See Filming Of Griffith Picture

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theatre owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work, Griffith is producing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public, has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside at Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect amphitheatre for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and artillery in action.

Gone to Boston for Film Scenes

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph incidents of the early war on actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be employed in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on Lexington Common, where the "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings. The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites, exceptions where improvements prohibit, but in every action some photograph of the actual site will be included.

To Film America.

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph incidents of the early war on actual sites for his next production "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, etc., vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in this action.

D. W. Griffith and 150 members of his staff and screen players are in Boston where incidents of the Revolutionary war will be pictured on the actual cities where they took place for his next picture, "America." The Griffith picture is being made for the Daughters of the Revolution and Mr. Griffith expects it to excel anything he has ever attempted.

GRIFFITH'S REVOLUTIONARY PLAY.

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Grimth's revolutionary screen feature which he is now preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

FAMOUS RIDE POSTPONED

A seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical picture, "America." A committee of historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, and the horse, ordered from New York, arrived by boat through a stormy voyage.

Hays to Head Bureau for Film Research

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but numbers in these are authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with authentic backgrounds, the director-general of the movies, Mr. Hays, has taken up the matter with the Daughters of the Revolution, who are the leaders in the movement that will produce the most pretentious film of the Revolutionary War, the D. W. Griffith production "America."

1000 Horsemen Take Part in 'America'

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley headed with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, and the like.

The United States Army group has established an encampment for about a thousand men under the command of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under command of Captain N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army Officers Mr. Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battle scenes of the Revolutionary War.

The horseman have been assembled from Reserve Cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps, the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside actual war maneuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department and Secretary Weeks are taking a keen interest in the maneuvres as it is giving observers for the Department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggle of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible of the enormous expenses involved.

$85,000 Spent for Gowns Thus Far in Filming "America"

[illegible] than 4,000 costumes ranging in cost from $1 to $60 each have gone to the production of the motion picture "America," now being filmed by David W. Griffith, according to that Allen in an article in the New York Evening [illegible] the least one of [illegible] costumes thus far in films, he asserts.

"In order to avoid the stiff appearance in pictures, these costumes are made of real homespun," Mr. Allen writes. "This expense was considered absolutely necessary, as we felt, because of a certain [illegible] that the majority of the [illegible] would see to it that the [illegible]

Griffith, Movie Producer, Pays Call On Coolidge

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—D. W. Griffith, motion-picture producer, called at the White House today to meet and talk with President Coolidge. He is filming a picture at a military post near Washington.

Griffith was a warm friend of the late President Harding.

LAWRENCE VETERAN IN GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

MARTIN S. FORD

Martin S. Ford, Jr., of 22 Portland street, this city, a former student at Wagner's School of Art and Design in Boston, will take the role of a Revolutionary hero in D. W. Griffith's production of "America" which is now being prepared at one of the famous playwright's studios in New York. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin S. Ford. During the war he was an armed guard on the battleship Minnesota.

A brother, James Ford, is also associated with the D. W. Griffith productions and is taking an important role in another big production which will shortly be completed.

Both young men will spend the Thanksgiving holidays at their home in this city.

Warren Newcombe Engaged by D. W. Griffith

Warren A. Newcombe has been engaged by D. W. Griffith to work on his picture, "America," which begins in course of production.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes from D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

D. W. GRIFFITH, motion picture producer, who is in this city, photographed with Representative Allen T. Treadway, Massachusetts, following a conference yesterday at Capitol.

PLANS FILMS OF "AMERICA"

D. W. Griffith is making arrangements for D. W. Griffith to take scenes of George Washington's home life at his home at Mt. Vernon, Va., for use in "America."

The Lexington Times. Oct. 26-1923

BATTLE OF APRIL 19th REENACTED LAST WEEK

Nine Residents, Descendents of the "Original 77" Act as Guards

Virginia Lamont and Edwin B. Worthen, Jr., Act as Parson Clarke's Children

HISTORICAL SOCIETY'S HELP RESULTS IN ACCURACY OF EVERY DETAIL

Griffith's Smile and Simple "Thank You" Follow Each Little Act in "Close-Ups" in His Big Movie "America."

Lexington again has had the opportunity of seeing enacted some of the stirring scenes of April 19, 1775. Friday and Saturday of last week automobiles hurried through our streets bearing John Hancock, Samuel Adams, minute-men and many others to the old Hancock-Clarke House where they were to portray the events which made that dwelling one of the most venerated memorials in America. Thither also went many of our townspeople, not only to watch the "shooting" of a movie, but to see Mr. David W. Griffith himself, for he had come in person to direct the work. What had brought the greatest movie producer in the world to Lexington? Mutual interest—there is but one Lexington, and there is but one D. W. Griffith—it was inevitable that the producer of the "Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm" should sometime reproduce the events which ushered in the independence of the Colonies.

Some two years ago Mr. John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," that glorious picture of whaling days, suggested to Mr. Griffith a movie based on the American Revolution, and almost immediately thereafter the Daughters of Revolution requested him to stage a production covering the same period. The decision was made at once and "America," a romance dealing with the formative period in U. S. history, from the pen of Robert W. Chambers, is the result.

Mr. Griffith says it is the most difficult work he has ever undertaken. Not that the events to be portrayed demanded untold labor in construction work or amazing feats of daring on the part of the actors, but because Mr. Griffith decided that "America" should be accurate in the details of all events to be produced. On his great estate at Maramoneck, N. Y., he has had the Battles of the Revolution fought over and over again on hills and plains and rivers with fidelity to detail which will confound all critics. "Oh, yes," you say, "but they can 'fake' the stuff." "Well," Mr. Griffith answered "We had for the British Army at Bunker Hill 800 soldiers from the U. S. regular army. Drilled them for weeks on military tactics of 1775 and then made the Battle of Bunker Hill and burning of Charlestown sufficiently real so that two men were badly hurt and a third had a hand blown off. You will never say 'fake' after you see the picture."

But what about Lexington? What did Mr. Griffith do about the day that ushered in the Dawn of Liberty? Mr. Pell, who has had charge of all matters of historical accuracy answers us: Lexington. Early in the summer Mr. Griffith and Mr. Pell and his associate were here quietly at work measuring and photographing the Common, Buckman Tavern, the Hancock-Clarke House, etc. Then with the help of Doubtless famous photos of the Battle made a few months after the Regulars were here, they reproduced at Maramoneck the Lexington Common on April 19, 1775. Pages have been written about Paul Revere's ride and the Battle at Lexington so that these scenes could be reproduced with intensity assured to a whole Lexington village, surely assures beauty to artistic effects on our art screen. That is one of the reasons for Lexington's fame at other portrayals. So Mr. Pell, as Mr. Griffith, secured the services of one Mr. Lawrence Langstaff Buckley, who is a descendant of the Colonel of the 77 who fell first in action, by Mr. Frank Wright, president of Lexington Banking Co., a descendant of the 77 and prominent in Lexington. The whole town was interested very keenly in the project and those of us who were fortunate enough to be there felt all those who were in the battle of April 19 were there in spirit.

Mr. Griffith and his assistants

Producers "Scout" New England for Historic Film Locations

Beauty and Interest in Country and City Reward Search for New Settings

Fitfully, and not to its full beauty, Boston has been utilized for screen play locations. But during the last two weeks there has appeared a tendency to "scout," as the saying has it, for suitable surroundings in which to produce new pictures.

The obvious first selection is of historic settings.

David Wark Griffith has recently been here, taking exteriors for his "America," sponsored, it is said, by the Daughters of the American Revolution, and research for which Mr. Griffith has been making intermittently since 1915. Lexington and Concord are beautiful in their own right, without the rich background of a history that has purpled the years between. Any number of times Scarsdale, N. Y., and the Westchester Hills, and parts of Long Island have been used as locations for pictures which would have been more beautiful set in the serenities of New England. Thus far the tendency toward utilizing New England for scenes has been limited mainly to the necessities of history. Boston has, however, beautiful modernities as well as quaintness.

A second group of film people, however, have been searching Boston and neighboring towns this week for suitable locations. So it is possible that in time Boylston Street and the Public Gardens will partly do away with the boresome Fifth Avenue and Central Park, and that Wellesley and the low, mauve slopes of Sudbury and the remotenesses of Chestnut Hill may displace happily the monotonies of "country estates on fashionable Long Island" or the Sound. Astonishing assertions are noted constantly concerning the expenditures made on most current pictures. Transportation costs for companies to the regions about Boston might well be balanced by the freshening, scenically, that films would find generally in discarding the old threadbare backgrounds for the flavor and atmosphere of the quaint suavities and the dignity of New England, of which Boston is a part.

Film stars happily are not above an intense interest in historic sites for their own sake. One of the trio, who have been spending several days here looking over the ground for a production shortly to be made, said that she was accustomed to what she dared call the aridities of California for such long periods of time that it was exasperating to be torn away from even the most advertised historic sites, to say nothing of those which take searching and a specialized interest to find, and to which she wanted to give days.

In the course of his visit in Boston, Elliott Dexter came across the extra-theater, as it might be called, belonging to the children of the North and West Ends. Saturday afternoons they gather in a room over the Lancaster Theater where they entertain themselves under the shepherding of Charles Dimick. Prizes are offered in singing competitions. An unmercenary premium is placed on politeness and manners. The children are induced to various forms of self-expression. Mr. Dexter was much interested in the potentialities of such a venture for youth and this afternoon is speaking to the children at his own request.

The Washington Elm did not topple to the ground until after the visitors had seen it.

What the Name Griffith Means to Picture World

Ever a Pioneer, Working Independently, Celebrated Producer and Director Stands Out Boldly as One Who Has Led in Photoplay Development to Its Present Status.

D. W. Griffith was born at La Grange, Kentucky, January 16, 1830. His father was Brigadier General Jacob Wark Griffith of the Second Kentucky Cavalry, known as "Roaring Jake" because it was reputed his commands carried two miles along the valleys. So far as known, his father is the only commanding officer who led a cavalry charge riding in a buggy. His mount was shot, his right leg and left arm broken. He was put in a buggy and raced at the head of his troops. He was one of few who did not surrender, merely returned home, and was a member of Jeff Davis' bodyguard.

D.W. GRIFFITH

Got a job in a stock company theater. His mother and sister had directed his reading and study toward his becoming a Baptist minister. When church heard of his going into theater, meeting was held to read him out of the church.

The prayers of his mother not to publicly accept his youthful fascination for theater by casting him out, availed, and his name was continued on church rolls, on probation.

He joined small traveling companies out of Louisville, salary $5 a week and "cakes."

Played once in Barney Bernard's company and every pay day Bernard started poker game, winning all salaries back.

Began practicing playwrighting from start. Wrote 29 plays. One produced by James K. Hackett, entitled "The Fool and The Girl." Fannie Ward played lead. Never learned a line—all prompt. Play failed in Washington. Other plays rejected as "too strong." William Winter sent telegram after he had read a play with Frohman, saying Griffith had greatest potentialities of any young playwright. Griffith had one dollar.

Worked in a coal mine, as puddler in steel mill, scraped girders on subway, etc.

Worked up to places in company of Mansfield, Nance O'Neill, etc. No spectacular success. Studied opera singing. Lived 26 weeks on $10 while studying voice.

Went to Biograph studios to sell scenarios. Became an actor; finally played the acting for bread, and finally as director. Immediate success. Finally given part of a protege to develop as director. Immediate success.

All his experiences seemed to qualify him for this job, experience, stories and money, his education, stage experience and to crown all, strong, big heart.

Made history. Made the rest in photoplay, creating the entire technique of the photoplay. Made the rest in photoplay, creating the entire technique of the photoplay. Made the rest in photoplay, creating the entire technique of the photoplay.

Paul Revere's Ride Delayed as Horse Becomes Seasick

A seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat after a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendants of the Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshal them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging lanterns in the Old North Church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Public Invited To See Filming Of Griffith Picture

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theatre owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public at all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production "America." For this work, Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public, has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from a thousand to fifteen thousand have followed the action day by day. The hillside at Somers where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect amphitheatre for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

Gone to Boston for Film Scenes

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph incidents of the early war on actual sites for his next production, "America." By arrangement with several historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be employed in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on Lexington Common, where the "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings. The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites excepting where improvements prohibit, but in every action some photographs of the actual site are included.

To Film America.

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc. used during the war will be used in this action.

D. W. Griffith and 150 members of his staff and screen players are in Boston where incidents of the Revolutionary war will be pictured on the actual cities where they took place for his next picture, "America." The Griffith picture is being made for the Daughters of the Revolution and Mr. Griffith expects it to excel anything he has ever attempted.

GRIFFITH'S REVOLUTIONARY PLAY.

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary screen feature which he is now preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

FAMOUS RIDE POSTPONED

A seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical picture, "America." A committee of historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, and the horse, ordered from New York, arrived by boat through a stormy voyage.

The Imagination Department of D. W. Griffith announces that a seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington last week. Mr. Griffith is filming scenes for his historical film, "America." It took a committee to decide the color of the horse that Revere rode, and it chances that it is one which contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was agreed upon, the horse, for some reason, was ordered from New York, and it arrived by boat after an alleged stormy passage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still possessed the illusion of being on a rocking vessel. Lexington, report has it, entered heartily into the making of this picture and all male descendants were conscripted by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their fathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact copies of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns, heirlooms in their families. The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshal them into action.

Hays to Head Bureau for Film Research

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere in these any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, this historical information is to be made available to all producers.

1000 Horsemen Take Part in 'America'

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers, Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley beaded with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, and the like.

The United States Army group has established an encampment for about a thousand men under the command of Colonel G. P. Pond, Division Commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A thirty-three piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant DeWitt, and a medical corps unit is under command of Captain N. T. Davie. Major Arturo Mareno is in direct command of the troops.

With the technical advice of the Federal Army Officers Mr. Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battle scenes of the Revolutionary War.

The horsemen have been assembled from Reserve Cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the Reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps, the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside actual war maneuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The War Department and Secretary Weeks are taking a keen interest in the maneuvres as it is giving observers for the Department an opportunity to study from a military viewpoint the struggle of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible of the enormous expenses involved.

$85,000 Spent for Gowns Thus Far in Filming "America"

More than 4,000 costumes ranging in cost from $1 to $50 each have gone to the production of the motion picture "America," now being filmed by David W. Griffith, according to Tom Allen in an article in the New York Sun. The total cost of costumes thus far is $85,000, he reports.

"In order to avoid the soft appearance in pictures, these costumes are made of real homespun," Mr. Allen writes. "The appearance was considered absolutely necessary, and were built because of a sentiment that the majority of the people desire that the atmosphere of the Revolution shall live to such a degree."

Griffith company in Washington.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes from D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Griffith, Movie Producer, Pays Call On Coolidge

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—D. W. Griffith, motion-picture producer, called at the White House today to meet and talk with President Coolidge. He is filming a picture at a military post near Washington.

Griffith was a warm friend of the late President Harding.

LAWRENCE VETERAN IN GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

MARTIN S. FORD

Martin S. Ford, Jr., of 32 Portland street, this city, a former student at Wagner's School of Art and Design in Boston, will take the role of a Revolutionary hero in D. W. Griffith's production of "America" which is now being prepared at one of the famous playwright's studios in New York. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin S. Ford. During the war he was an armed guard on the battleship Minnesota.

A brother, James Ford, is also associated with the D. W. Griffith producers and is taking an important role in another big production which will shortly be completed.

Both young men will spend the Thanksgiving holidays at their home in this city.

Warren Newcombe Engaged by D. W. Griffith

Warren A. Newcombe has been engaged by D. W. Griffith to work on his picture, "America," which is now in course of production.

GRIFFITH SEES COOLIDGE.

Drum That Called Minute Men To War Used in Patriotic Film

The Lexington Times Oct. 26, 1923

BATTLE OF APRIL 19th REENACTED LAST WEEK

Nine Residents, Descendents of the "Original 77" Act as Guards

Virginia Lamont and Edwin B. Worthen, Jr., Act as Parson Clarke's Children

HISTORICAL SOCIETY'S HELP RESULTS IN ACCURACY OF EVERY DETAIL

Griffith's Smile and Simple "Thank You" Follow Each Little Act in "Close-Ups" in His Big Movie "America."

Lexington again has had the opportunity of seeing enacted some of the stirring scenes of April 19, 1775. Friday and Saturday of last week automobiles hurried through our streets bearing John Hancock, Samuel Adams, minute-men and many others to the old Hancock-Clarke House where they were to portray the events which made that dwelling one of the most venerated memorials in America. Thither also went many of our townspeople, not only to watch the "shooting" of a movie, but to see Mr. David W. Griffith himself, for he had come in person to direct the work. What had brought the greatest movie producer in the world to Lexington? Mutual interest—there is but one Lexington, and there is but one D. W. Griffith—it was inevitable that the producer of the "Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm" should sometime reproduce the events which ushered in the independence of the Colonies.

Some two years ago Mr. John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," that glorious picture of whaling days, suggested to Mr. Griffith a movie based on the American Revolution, and almost immediately thereafter the Daughters of Revolution requested him to stage a production covering the same period. The decision was made at once and "America," a romance dealing with the formative period in U. S. history, from the pen of Robert W. Chambers, is the result.

Mr. Griffith says it is the most difficult work he has ever undertaken. Not that the events to be portrayed demanded untold labor in construction work or amazing feats of daring on the part of the actors, but because Mr. Griffith decided that "America" should be accurate in the details of all events to be produced. On his great estate at Maramoneck, N. Y., he has had the Battles of the Revolution fought over and over again on hills and plains and rivers with fidelity to detail which will confound all critics. "Oh, yes," you say, "but they can 'fake' the stuff." "Well," Mr. Griffith answered "We had for the British Army at Bunker Hill 800 soldiers from the U. S. regular army, drilled them for weeks on military tactics of 1775 and then made the Battle of Bunker Hill and burning of Charlestown sufficiently real so that two men were badly hurt and a third had a hand blown off. You will never say 'faked' after you see the picture."

But what about Lexington? What did Mr. Griffith do about the day that ushered in the Dawn of Liberty? Mr. Pell, who has had charge of all matters of historical accuracy concerning Lexington. Early in the summer Mr. Griffith and Mr. Pell and his assistants were here quietly at work measuring and photographing the Common, Buckman Tavern, the Hancock-Clarke House, etc. Then with the help of Doubleday's famous picture of the Battle, made a few months after the Regulars were here, they reconstructed at Maramoneck the Lexington Common on April 19, 1775. Much has been written about Paul Revere's ride and the Battle of Lexington so that these scenes could be reproduced with tolerable accuracy in a rebuilt Lexington village, surely accurate enough to satisfy Harbors critical Mr. Griffith. That is one of the reasons he sought aboard all other producers. So Mr. Pell as Mr. Griffith's personal representative, assisted the re-opening of the Lexington Historical Society. The chief a member of the Council he was advised that to executive. The Battle of April 19, 1775, by Mr. Frank Warren Coburn of Lexington became the textbook of the day for Council as well as for Lexington. The chapter was duly and richly illustrated, bearing Mr. Griffith's approach and those of his staff as well.

Mr. Griffith has labored all these days in Lexington. Early in the morning he was on the ground with his assistants and his cameras. Late in the afternoon he was still there. Not only did he direct the taking of the scenes, but he was ever on the ground to see that every detail was correct. Not only was he there himself, but he had his assistants there to see that every detail was correct. Not only was he there himself, but he had his assistants there to see that every detail was correct. Not only was he there himself, but he had his assistants there

Morning Telegraph Nov Ember 4, 1923

Impressions of the Filming of D. W. Griffith's "America"

Spokane (Wash.) Sp'K'S'man—Review Oct 28 1923

THE COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S NAG HOLDS UP WHOLE SHOW

Filming American Revolution Stopped While Experts Try to Learn More About Ancient Steed—Griffith Means to Get Exact Movie at Any Price.

The color of one horse has thrown a monkey wrench into the makings of the American Revolution—D. W. Griffith's celluloid version, now being "shot" at Somers, N. Y.—and brought the whole thing to a halt.

It came time for the property man, or whatever they call a man of similar capacity in the movies, to bring on a horse that would undertake to jitney Paul Revere to Lexington-Concord and back for the prescribed amount per day and lunch.

And the property man spoke up and asked, "What color of a horse?"

Mr. Griffith did not know the color of Paul Revere's horse. Neither did Will Hays, nor the production's research department.

The research department fled to Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society. This historical sage knew only that Paul Revere's horse was not white, said that all the illustrations picturing Paul Revere on a white steed were wrong, but that was all.

But that is not enough for Mr. Griffith. This production is to be so meticulously correct that he refuses even to let a horse go wrong. So the famous director has now set his research department conducting a search through personal correspondence of that period.

Some of the Daughters or Sons of the Revolution, who made the roster from the fact that one of their forefathers "held Paul Revere's horse" ought to be able to offer [illegible]

San Francisco (Cal) Examiner 11/2/23

[illegible] a sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes [illegible] historical film "America." A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Canton (Ohio) News Nov 2 1923

David Wark Griffith is now conducting negotiations for permission to use George Washington's mansion at Mt. Vernon for some of the scenes of "America," which he is now filming.

So far as is possible all the incidents in the life of Washington were filmed on the actual scenes and episodes of his early life have already been photographed in Virginia. His [illegible] ed, will be filmed [illegible] and about his Mt. Vernon home.

The battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill have already been photographed, observers of the Daughters of the American Revolution having assisted in preserving historical accuracy. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the D. A. R., has gone to Washington to confer with Griffith on the Mount Vernon scenes.

Waterbury (Conn) Democrat 11/1/23

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Manchester (Conn) Herald Nov. 2, 1923

Newark (N J) Ledger 11/1/23

Movies of the Future

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH is perhaps the greatest figure in the movie world. The producer of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" may be termed the Napoleon of the screen, and, as such, his views are entitled to more than ordinary consideration.

Mr. Griffith sounds the death knell of the vampire and the pie comedian, two movie characters that have an immense following among the gum-chewing section of the country's population. Soon, he says, these species of screen actors will be as extinct as is the dodo in the animal kingdom.

The historical film, Mr. Griffith believes, tells the fundamental story; all others are simply variations. At the present time the producer is at work on a picture which he will call "America." This picture will depict Colonial and Revolutionary days. George Washington, Patrick Henry and a host of other heroes of that time will stalk across the stage.

"We have had our share of Bolshevism and all forms of doctrine that tend to destroy social order and respect for law and industry," Mr. Griffith comments. "I believe we need a revival of respect for the great men who founded the nation and a realization of what they dared and suffered for posterity. It is this I shall seek to portray in 'America,' which, I hope, will be ready for release in a few months' time."

There is no doubt that moving pictures, potentially, are one of the greatest instruments for good we have in modern times. Their field of achievement is as yet practically untouched. Mr. Griffith probably is stretching it a bit in saying that the vampire and the pie comedian are slated to make their final exeunt, but it is certain the movies of the future are destined to play a great part in the serious work of the world. Nothing they could do would be more valuable than inspiring a people to greater things by keeping before them constantly the examples of worthy forbears.

INTEREST SHOWN IN NEW FILM "AMERICA."

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Washington Post Nov 3 1923

The Film Flapper Says---

By INEZ KLUMPH.

Entering a side box at the Capitol, I stumbled over the Flapper's feet and woke her out of a sound sleep.

"I'm just taking a nap during the slapstick comedy," she protested when I urged that she do her sleeping at home. "This is the most wonderful place in the world to get rested in; it's so soothing. I come up early in the afternoon or early in the evening and catch up with myself, just waking up for my favorite parts of the pictures and the program. I love everything about the Capitol but the gowns the women singers wear.

"It's such a relief to have 'The Follies' actually open. I got the habit of going to rehearsals and simply couldn't get over it. The opening night was wonderful—Mr. Ziegfeld gave a buffet supper, you know, and everybody had the time of their lives. But I think I liked the dress rehearsal even better. Brooke Johns certainly should go into the movies. And so ought that cunning blonde chorus girl that I was telling you about the other day—May Door or Mis D'Or, or however she spells her name! She looks like Marilynn Miller at 16, long yellow curls and all.

"She's what Mae Murray might have been as a very young girl, only she's prettier. She dances beautifully, with every modern edge on each little movement, you know what I mean, my dear! She has a beautiful figure, of course, or she wouldn't be in 'The Follies.' And she seems to photograph like seventeen million dollars. I have a hunch that she's an artists' model—seems to me I've seen her on magazine covers more than once.

"I don't imagine that she can act; she'll need some training. But she could start in pictures where she just had to stand around and look pretty. You mark my words, that girl is going to be a big find for somebody.

"Oh, before I forget it—did you know that some pirate tried to steal some of Mr. Griffith's film in 'The Spirit of '76,' or 'America,' or whatever he's going to call this new picture of his? Well, they did; I hear that there were camera men scattered around in various places, shooting his stuff, but he caught them—by an aeroplane patrol, my dear! and so he's safe."

(Copyright, 1923, by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Tacoma (Wash) News Tribune Oct. 30. 1923

Rialto

Tacomans are certainly taxing the seating capacity of the Rialto theater, where D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose" is being shown. The story concerns an orphan girl and a youth studying for the ministry. The student goes away, becomes ordained and meets with immediate success in his pulpit. With the girl, it is the old story. The flapper days are gone, and soon a woeful little mother seeks vainly a home for the child and herself. At last, when she is believed to be dying, the young clergyman is brought to give consolation to her. This he does with unexpected effectiveness, and a marriage ceremony is performed right there, making the way clear for a happy ending to a film that carries much emotional seriousness in some of the episodes.

Mae Marsh is seen as the orphan and Ivor Novello makes his bow to American audiences as the minister. Along the slender and unoriginal thread of the story the producer has strung reels of enchanting Southern scenery, with exquisitely photographed bits of bayous, something of New Orleans and sketches of picturesque negro life. It is a picture entirely worthy of the Griffith name. A special presentation has been arranged with [illegible] Cheney as soloist [illegible] Ernie Russell on the [illegible]

Allentown (Pa) Chronicle 10/26/23

"America" has been definitely decided upon as the title for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chicago (Ill) News 11/2/23

[illegible] the Filming of Historic Play.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Toledo Ohio News Bee Nov 2, 1923

[illegible] Arrangements have been made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for scenes showing the home life of George Washington and the historical incidents which transpired there. It is for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming production, "America."

Observers for the Daughters of the American Revolution have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Vir-

Sandusky Ohio Star Nov 2 1923

[illegible] the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington. Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there. Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill. All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia. D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Recent Motion Pictures.

Admirer Decries the Stories Used Now.

[illegible] THE NEW YORK HERALD: It has been stated in the news columns that many of the moving picture producers are closing down for several months and that this is largely due to a falling off in business. It seems to me that it would be of benefit to the producers and the public if your paper would make an effort to obtain the views of fans on why they have ceased to attend the pictures as they did formerly. There must be some reason, and this reason must lie with the pictures themselves, for we are all lovers of amusement, especially when it can still be had for a few cents a night at the neighborhood motion picture theatre.

I used to go to the pictures from two to four times a week, but for the last year I have gone only about once a month and have then either been forced to attend an expensive theater in order to see a good picture or have found that the one we wanted with the [illegible] in it was not due to any special attraction in our own theater but because it is all there is of the common variety in New York [illegible] you further and think of many friends who are as bitter. The great change appears to have occurred at about the time when the movie "stars" were put on a pedestal and their salaries made so lavish that the producers are not to blame for the high prices charged for pictures, but the fault seems that the industry commenced to [illegible] the standard of acting and attractiveness in pictures so far as to be [illegible]

I wish to say that I am not alone in my views. I have talked with many people who have left the pictures for good because they could not find anything worth while. Perhaps there are some who would like to see the movies continue as they are, but I think they are a very small minority. Perhaps the producers have lost touch with the public and are trying to make pictures for people who are not in the majority. Perhaps they are trying to educate the public to a higher standard of acting and attractiveness in pictures, but if so they are going about it in the wrong way. Perhaps they are trying to make pictures for people who are not in the majority. Perhaps they are trying to educate the public to a higher standard of acting and attractiveness in pictures, but if so they are going about it in the wrong way.

MASTER," I[illegible] COMING TO SHOOT 'AMERICA' SCENES

Will Work With Cavalry on the 'Ginny Side

D. W. GRIFFITH, the Old Master, of Mamaroneck, is due in town today.

Bringing his technical staff, his megaphone and his goodies, Griffith is arriving to make scenes for his big picture of Revolutionary war times, "America."

Over on the Virginia side he will pitch camp, and with the assistance of the third cavalry from Ft. Myer will make cavalry charges for his latest big picture.

In this work, it is said, he has the full advice and cooperation of the war department.

THE cavalry scenes will be the biggest mounted charge ever made for pictures, Everett Lloyd, his press representative, promises.

Griffith has just returned from a stay in Boston and the surrounding countryside, where he made scenes for "America" on the battlefields where Paul Revere rode and the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard around the world.

He there he received help from all the New England historical societies, who lent the use of their charts and supplementary properties for pictures.

Work on "America" is being rushed. Griffith has a big film of the people ready to show on Nov. 15. New York state, where he made some of the big scenes, will be left behind and Washington is expected to become second base.

Look out for Harlem people.

Dayton (Ohio) News 10/27/23

D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 100 members of his staff to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next production of "America." He has completed arrangements with various historical societies for photographing such articles as figured in the Revolutionary War.

Grand Forks (N D) Herald 10/28/23

[illegible]

Richmond (Va) News Leader Oct. 30, 1923

Petersburg (Va) Progress Oct. 30, 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH PLANS TO MAKE FILM IN VA.

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 4—David Lloyd George was not the most distinguished visitor who came unannounced to town Monday. The city authorities, however, an international figure in the person of David Wark Griffith, known whenever moving pictures are shown as the producer of "The Birth of a Nation."

With his technical staff and several film stars, who are of course expected to assist in a great production for Washington, Mr. Griffith came to Richmond in a very important mission, one that will cause interest among all lovers of Colonial Virginia, of the setting of its stirring national drama.

Staging a reel of incidents in the life of Patrick Henry, general manager of the war of the Revolution, Mr. Griffith, personal representative of Mr. Lloyd George, and his staff left Richmond after a conference in the Jefferson hotel. It is understood that the film company will be in Virginia a considerable time, making pictures in various parts of Virginia.

Mr. Griffith made short work in getting down to business. He was in the city a few hours only, but he succeeded in getting all the information he desired from the Virginia Historical society, the Richmond Chamber of Commerce and the Virginia Conservation and Development commission.

Waterbury (Conn) Standard 11/2/23

D. A. R. OFFICERS SEE FILMING OF "AMERICA"

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Observers for the Daughters of the American Revolution have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Vir-

Norwalk Conn Gleaner Nov 2 1923

[illegible] the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington. Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there. Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill. All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia. D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Washington Star Nov 1 1923

GRIFFITH MAY BRING CAST HERE TOMORROW

[illegible] Products Leaves for Washington After Viewing Historical Films Here

Peoria (Ill) Journal 10/31/23

[illegible]

Chicago Journal of Commerce Nov 1 1923

[illegible]

19

ENLISTED ONLY FOR THE "DURATION" OF THE FILM: MEMBERS OF THE THIRD UNITED STATES CAVALRY From Fort Myer, Va., Charging at Full Speed Toward the Camera, Dressed Up to Impersonate Morgan's Raiders in Their First and Only Appearance as Screen Actors in the New Griffith Picture, "America," in Which, by Permission of the President, Regular Troops of the Army Took Part in Various Scenes. (International.)

THE CONTINENTAL MANUAL OF ARMS AT FORT MYER: D. W. GRIFFITH, Motion-Picture Producer, Giving Directions on How to Hold a Revolutionary Gun to Charles Mack and Estelle Alderson, Before a Scene With Carol Dempster in the Filming of one of the Episodes of "America," a Historical Picture, Part of Which Has Been Produced With Members of the Third Cavalry at "Napoleon." (International.)

Richmond (Va) News Leader
Nov. 3. 1923

RICHMOND GIRLS AID IN TAKING OF SCREEN PLAY

Thirty at Westover Today Taking Part in David Wark Griffith's "America."

Westover, the Byrd mansion on the James, today is rubbing its eyes. Two centuries have fallen away. It is again pre-revolution days. A charming young woman in colonial dress enters unobtrusively at a back door, mounting spiral steps. Neighbors, dressed in the colorful clothing of the early eighteenth century, flock to call. The talk is of politics and other affairs of the day.

But the talk is soon cut short by Miss Mary W. Chamberlayne who calls for it. The charming young woman, mistress of the mansion, rise a bit in the disappointed surprise Miss Chamberlayne and her lover is playing there.

The directions are curt, issued through a megaphone held by a young member of the party, a young man who is the director of the Griffith Company, a D. W. Griffith picture is being made.

The Griffith party left the Boat Club Friday, and for the week they have been at Westover, the Byrd mansion, on the James, near Charles City, Va., where the Griffith company is filming a D. W. Griffith picture.

The Griffith party left the Boat Club in a motor bus for "location." They will be entertained at the Blue Parrot for lunch with members of the Griffith party, Miss Parrish said.

Members of the Griffith group remaining at the hotel expected that today's scenes will be romantic rather than historical. The Little Theatre Lovers "supers" are participating not in a historical incident but in a love story. All will return at 4 P. M.

Costumes were provided for the Richmond girls and they will be used in a number of Revolutionary topics which will appear in the play. Location at this point will last through today and probably Monday.

Mr. Griffith is sparing no effort to make this play as true to historical facts as he succeeded in making "The Birth of a Nation," as "America" is to show the birth and freedom and the dawning of a western leader among nations. The cast for "America" includes, besides over thirty minor characters, such well-known screen stars as Carol Dempster, Niel Hamilton, Charles Mack and Estelle Alderson.

Richmond (Va) Times Dispatch
Nov 3, 1923

Roanoke (Va) Times
Nov 3 1923

GRIFFITH IN RICHMOND WILL TAKE NEW FILM

Denver (Colo) Times
Nov 3 1923

Washington Star 11/1/23

New England Opens Treasures of Revolution for Film Use

Evening Bulletin
Nov 3 1923

Washington Star. Nov. 4, 1923

David Wark Griffith.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, the famous film producer, was in Washington during the past week to make scenes for his newest superfeature, "America," which might well have for its slogan "America for America," judging from the ideas Mr. Griffith expressed while in town.

This is an endeavor to establish a picture of the revolutionary period of American history that will equal "The Birth of a Nation," Mr. Griffith's early picture of the civil war period. Many scenes in this new picture, he says, will be of the present day, with a love story of interest aside from the historical scenes.

"We really have been working on 'America' for the past seven years," said Mr. Griffith. "Immediately upon the completion of 'Intolerance' we began work on this picture, not the actual filming, which was begun late recently as last June, but on the involved research work to secure absolutely correct data. On one occasion I myself searched through the official records of nine authorities, both American and British, to determine definitely who really fired the first shot 'heard round the world.' And I discovered that all these authorities differ in the matter.

"Because of the many changes in the historic towns, we have built Lexington and Concord at the studios, but we have taken many scenes in and about Boston and show the ride of Paul Revere to Lexington with the exact type of lanterns hung in the correct windows of the old North Church. Real, present-day soldiers, dressed in the uniforms of that period, fought the battle of Bunker Hill for us. The cavalry troops of Fort Myer, costumed in revolutionary uniforms, are used in the action of the film.

"My chief difficulty right now is to find a man to impersonate George Washington. We have tried under studies so far, and although I have been looking constantly for such a type, I have not yet found a single man who will do, and the picture is to be completed some time in February."

Mr. Griffith gave as his belief the statement that the greatest evil of the film industry at present is the running of feature pictures so that audiences can enter the theater at any time during the showing of the picture.

"I believe that the big features should be run on a two-a-day schedule, and people should not be allowed to come into the theater after the picture was begun, as it spoils the continuity of the story. Many pictures that otherwise would be fine successes fall flat because of the audience's coming and going during the showing."

Mr. Griffith also expressed himself as of the opinion that the man and woman of average means would rather pay 50 cents and sit upstairs to see a big picture than pay the same amount to sit downstairs and see a smaller and less expensive picture.

D. W. Griffith himself has a pleasing personality. He is tall, sandy-haired, with a ruddy complexion and keen blue eyes that have many twinkles when he is amused, and look right through one in serious conversation. He is a man of strong purpose with ideals that he materializes and deep absorption in his work.

Asbury Park N.J. Press Nov. 4, 1923

Detroit Mich Free Press Nov 4, 1923

Sioux City (Ia) Journal 11/4/23

Richmond Va Times Dispatch Nov 5 1923

Washington Boston Traveler Nov. 5, 1923

Thousands Gather to Watch D. W. Griffith Film History of America

The public is invited to witness the taking of the big scene in motion pictures according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theater owners have complained that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

So leading producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where there presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America." For this screen work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all details of these military actions be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public to view the shooting of such big scenes has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near the village of Somers, in Putnam county, New York, where the scenes are being staged, offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by private photographers who take parts of the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk them to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. On a recent Saturday afternoon the State police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the State police made no arrests as a result of a request by Mr. Griffith, but the cameras and their film will be held in custody [illegible] police [illegible] "America" has been finished and released.

SEA-SICK HORSE DELAYS THE RIDE OF PAUL REVERE

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of the minute men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshal them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

GRIFFITH IS WORKING ON FILM, "AMERICA"

Producer Gathering Atmosphere and Shooting Scenes at "Westover."

Getting filled up on Revolutionary War history is David W. Griffith's dish these days. He is producing his biggest picture, "America," and is using "Westover," the James River home of Richard Crane, as a background for some of his most important scenes.

Yesterday Mr. Griffith spent with Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, president of William and Mary College, going over historic spots in Williamsburg, Yorktown and Jamestown. Some of the scenes of America will be taken at Yorktown and probably some at Jamestown.

The drama will continue today, weather permitting, and the staff of movie people, who are quartered at the Jefferson Hotel, are looking forward hopefully to clear skies, but the weather man says there is little to hope for—the prospect is for rain. Since the arrival of the famous producer in Richmond, he has worked incessantly getting material together for his play. He has been a close reader of historic works, in fact, spends half the night lying in bed, propped up with pillows, reading about the romance and history of the Revolution, having supplied himself with books from the State Library.

A number of local "stars" are assisting the cast in producing "America" at Westover. The membership of the Little Theatre League was canvassed and among those who are working from this group are Misses Eleanor Parrish, Martha Waller, Francis and Margaret Heindl, Agnes Mojler, Martha Mary Hoadley, Mildred Ragland, Thelma Hill, Nellie Meade, Alice Cole, Virginia Donnan, Elizabeth Gwathmey, Elizabeth Owens, Catherine Patterson, Elizabeth Knox, Julia Wickham, Ruby Bigger, Anna Cole and Judith Tompkins.

Camera men, principals and extras will leave the Jefferson early this morning to continue their work. They are expected to be here all this week.

GRINS and from the CAPITOL by W. G. GAVIN

All these well intended articles by Will Hays and other citizens of prominence about the need of relieving the President of some of his work to conserve his health are appreciated by the gentleman now in the White House, but he is getting along pretty well. He informs visitors that he never felt so well in his life. That early morning walk of his puts him in good shape for the day's work.

COOLIDGE SEES MOVIES

David W. Griffith recently showed President Coolidge some "stills" from his motion picture "America," which will give the silver sheet a picture story of the war for independence. Griffith believes this will be his masterpiece, far surpassing his famous "Birth of a Nation." A Massachusetts man, John L. E. Pell of Great Barrington, is co-operating with Robert Chambers in writing the story of the film, much of which has been made. Pell wrote the scenario of "Down to the Sea in Ships," and this brought him to Griffith's attention.

Lexington (Ky) Leader Nov 4, 1923.

D. W. Griffith is in Boston completing preliminary arrangements for reproducing the battles of Lexington and Concord on the original sites for his big film, "America."

Zanesville (Ohio) Signal Nov 4, 1923

D. W. Griffith and 150 members of his company have gone to Boston to make scenes for "America" [illegible] "Richard, the Lion Hearted"

Quincy (Mass) Post-Ledger, Nov. 8, 1923

USES MT. VERNON IN FILM

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America", relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired here.

Milwaukee (Wis) Sentinel Nov 4 1923

J. S. SOLDIERS AID GRIFFITH FILM "AMERICA"

Some thousand doughboys of the 16th and 18th Infantry regiments got the honor of being the first United States soldiers to appear officially in a dramatic motion picture. These men, from Forts Hamilton, Schuyler, and Governors Island, under command of Colonel G. P. Pond, and accompanied by a 33-piece band from Fort Slocum, have recently been detailed thru the War department, under instructions from Secretary of War Weeks, to aid D. W. Griffith in the making of "America."

"America," upon which Griffith and an army of film folks are now working, with the aid of United States troops from various forts thruout the country, is a patriotic photoplay of the American revolution undertaken at the suggestion and under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the present time Mr. Griffith and his forces, assisted by the 3rd Cavalry from Fort Myer, are taking pictures at Washington, D. C.

The local infantrymen, accompanied by a complete commissary in charge of Lieut. De Witt and a medical unit under Capt. N. T. Davis, camped at Somers, Putman county, N. Y., for days during the filming of several scenes.

It was a novel experience for the men, for not only were they going thru war maneuvers and getting valuable practice, but under the expert direction of Mr. Griffith they donned costumes of British and Continental troops and went thru formations which have been obsolete since revolutionary days.

Altho at times it was strenuous work, this reenacting of scenes of the War of Independence, the soldiers, none of whom had ever before figured as motion picture actors, found it great sport.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington settings, where he will spend several weeks.

Seattle (Wash) Miner 11/4/23

Reading (Pa) Eagle Nov. 4 1923

Griffith Starts Work on Revolutionary Film

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers, Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile. A site overlooking a valley headed with lakes has been chosen for the cameras with the action extending from one-half to a mile, with incidental action as far away as seven miles. The latter is for signal fires, and the like.

The United States army group has established an encampment for about a thousand men under the command of Col. G. P. Pond, division commander. These men are from the 18th Infantry from Fort Hamilton and Schuyler, and the 16th Infantry at Governor's Island. A 33-piece band from Fort Slocum also accompanies the troops. A complete commissary department is in charge of Lieutenant [illegible] and a medical corps unit is under command of Capt. N. T. Davis. Major Arturo Ma[illegible]no is in direct command of that troops.

With the technical advise of the federal army officers, Mr. Griffith is preparing to stage with exact accuracy the major battle scenes of the revolutionary war.

The horsemen have been assembled from reserve cavalry units under the command of Captain Love of the reserve forces. It is reported to be perhaps the largest cavalry unit ever assembled outside actual war manoeuvres, and represents an exact duplicate of the cavalry strength of the American troops in the engagements that are to be reproduced.

The war department and Secretary Weeks are taking a keen interest in the manoeuvres as it is giving observers for the department an opportunity to study from a military view-point the struggles of the American colonists with a precision never before made possible of the enormous expenses involved.

Cleveland Ohio News 11/4/23

D. A. R. LEADER GOES TO SEE AMERICA FILM

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the falling of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

Newark N.J. Star Eagle Nov 5, 1923

SEASICK HORSE DELAYS GRIFFITH

Animal Was Too Wobbly to Go on Paul Revere's Famous Ride.

A seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord recently, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film, "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boate after a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the production of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendants of the Minute Men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

Toledo Ohio Times, Nov. 1923

Toledo (Ohio) Times Nov. 4, 1923

WHAT WAS COLOR OF REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Hessians around the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with accuracy, [illegible] the political [illegible] of the American [illegible] and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith himself has spent months [illegible] to have the color of the horse Paul Revere rode for the scenes of his film, "America," [illegible] Historical society, Boston, Massachusetts, [illegible] Paul Revere did on the night of April 18, 1775, [illegible] the Revolutionary War.

Wilmington Del. Journal Nov. 5. 1923

18

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie, "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

21 Syracuse (N.Y.) Journal Nov. 5. 1923

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie, "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

Moline (Ill.) Dispatch. Nov. 5. 1923

18

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie, "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

Newport News (Va) Press. Nov. 6. 1923

PENINSULA FEATURE GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM

18

Famous Producer "Birth of a Nation" Will Screen Early Life of Colonies.

DAILY PRESS BUREAU,
Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 5.

David W. Griffith, widely known throughout this country country as the producer of that wonderful screen, "Birth of a Nation," is completing plans for the production of another "pictured" history of the early life of this grand Republic, and this time the background of the play will be laid in Jamestown, Williamsburg and Yorktown. The title of the new film will be "America," and the cost of its production will probably exceed one million dollars. It is expected that the forthcoming film, to be styled "America," will meet with even greater success, for many of its settings will be more realistic and the subject matter of the production of more actual interest to the masses than the "Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Griffith, accompanied by two of his leading ladies, several photographers, and others connected with his studio in New York, visited Williamsburg Sunday. The party spent some time at the college and in going over the town. Mr. Griffith's original plan was to select a street where actors might carry out their roles amid Colonial surroundings, but was greatly disappointed in his failure to find a street with sufficiently colonial features left to make it practical for his purpose. His only alternative is to build a temporary street, and this, very likely, will be done.

The days of the American Revolution will be largely illustrated with scenes obtained in old Yorktown. The two streets between which in the Watson House gardens are, according to Mr. Griffith, the most perfect types of Colonial streets to be found in the United States. He was agreeably pleased when informed that the people of Yorktown have determined to permit no future building in the place other than that of distinct Colonial type.

Mr. Griffith plans to make the new film the greatest production of the kind ever attempted in the history of motion picture industry, and it is said the company works for the camera will spare no expense. It appears to bring a large troop of cavalry to Yorktown, in the way of [illegible] the Civil War. The [illegible] will be utilized in the filming of the battle which at Yorktown and the battle scenes about will appear in the film. Lieutenant Colonel J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Monroe, will be in charge of the troops, and Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led the cavalry charge for one "shot" in the film, "America," will be in charge of the troops.

There are many points of historic interest in Williamsburg, which will be utilized in the film. The Raleigh Tavern, the Governor's Palace, the Capitol, the Powder Magazine, the Bruton Parish Church, the Wren Building, the Brick House, the Wythe House, the Ludwell-Paradise House, the Nicholas House, the Tyler House, the Blair House, the Ewell House, the Lightfoot House, the Tucker House, the Cole House, the Prentis House, the Galt House, the Bracket House, the Chowning's Tavern, the Christiana Campbell Tavern, the Shield's Tavern, the Kimball House, the Charles City Court House, the Williamsburg Court House, the Williamsburg Inn, the Williamsburg Lodge, the Williamsburg Theatre, the Colonial Theatre, the Williamsburg Hotel, the Williamsburg Apartments, the Williamsburg Apartment House, the Williamsburg Apartment House, the Williamsburg Apartment House

Washington Star Nov. 4, 1923

David Wark Griffith.

WARK GRIFFITH, the fa- film producer, was in Wash- uring the past week to make or his newest superfeature, ", which might well have slogan "America for Ameri- ", judging from the ideas Mr. expressed while in town. an endeavor to establish a of the revolutionary period of n history that will equal "The a Nation," Mr. Griffith's early of the civil war period. Many this new picture, he says, ork on the present day, with s of interest aside from the scenes. lly have been working on for the past seven years," Griffith. "Immediately upon pletion of 'Intolerance' we ork on this picture, not the ming, which was begun as last June, but on the fa- search work to secure abso- rect data. On one occasion searched through the official of nine authorities, both and British, to determine who really fired the first rd round the world." And ed that all these authorities the matter. e of the many changes in c towns, we have built Lex- t Concord at the studios. ave taken many scenes in Boston and show the ride vere to Lexington with the of lanterns hung in the indows of the old North Real, present-day soldiers, the uniforms of that pe- ht the battle of Bunker s. The cavalry troops of costumed in revolutionary are used in the action of f difficulty right now is to n to impersonate George n. We have used under- far, and although I have ng constantly for such a not yet found a single ll do, and the picture is to d some time in February." th gave as his belief the that the greatest evil of dustry at present is the feature pictures so that an enter the theater at uring the showing of the e that the big features un on a two-a-day sched- ple should not be allowed to the theater after the begun, as it spoils the of the story. Many pic- otherwise would be fine ll flat because of the au- ting and going during the also expressed himself as of the opinion that the man and woman of average means would rather pay 50 cents and sit upstairs to see a big picture than pay the same amount to sit downstairs and see a smaller and less expensive picture.

D. W. Griffith himself has a pleasing personality. He is tall, sandy-haired, with a ruddy complexion and keen blue eyes that have many twinkles when he is amused, and look right through one in serious conversation. He is a man of strong purpose with ideals that he materializes and deep absorption in his work.

Asbury Park N.J. Press Nov. 4, 1923

Ohio Nov. 1923

CK HORSE AYS GRIFFITH

as Too Wobbly to Paul Revere's mous Ride.

horse postponed the ride re from Boston to Lex- ncord recently, while D. as there taking scenes ical film, "America. of Lexington and Bos- had agreed upon the horse Revere rode, one te most of the paint- the color was decided s ordered from New ived by boats after a . The streets were spectators to watch the the historic ride, but appeared it still had being on the deck of n entered so heartily of the picture that contents of the Mis- ing conscripted from ommons from the ntial military to ap- ourtesters did in the ions. These ent each section of the ssaries were made ent and gave their aces ... William Fra- ing the Battle of the Colonies was Mr. Griffith's ... Historical Society, ... Mr. Griffith, president of the Washington Historical Society, ... There is an available record ... It is known the horse was not white ... in Hillsboro, Ohio ... in Epic

WHAT WAS COLOR OF REVERE'S HORSE?

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary War, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is attempting to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the physical appearance of the actors must be considered and it is for this purpose that the producers will gladly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds

Toledo (Ohio) Times Nov. 4, 1923

U. S. SOLDIERS AID GRIFFITH FILM "AMERICA"

Three thousand doughboys of the 16th and 18th Infantry regiments got the honor of being the first United States soldiers to appear officially in a dramatic motion picture. These men, from Forts Hamilton, Schuyler, and Governors Island, under command of Colonel G. P. Pond, and accompanied by a 33-piece band from Fort Slocum, have recently been detailed thru the War department, under instructions from Secretary of War Weeks, to aid D. W. Griffith in the making of "America."

"America," upon which Griffith and an army of film folks are now working, with the aid of United States troops from various forts thruout the country, is a patriotic photoplay of the American revolution undertaken at the suggestion and under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the present time Mr. Griffith and his forces, assisted by the 3rd Cavalry from Fort Myer, are taking pictures at Washington, D. C.

The local infantrymen, accompanied by a complete commissary in charge of Lieut. De Witt and a medical unit under Capt. N. T. Davis, camped at So mers, Putman county, N. Y., for days during the filming of several scenes.

It was a novel experience for the men, for not only were they going thru war maneuvers and getting valuable practice, but under the expert direction of Mr. Griffith they donned costumes of British and Continental troops and went thru formations which have been obsolete since revolutionary days.

Altho at times it was strenuous work, this reenacting of scenes of the War of Independence, the soldiers, none of whom had ever before figured as motion picture actors, found it great sport.

Detroit Mich Free Press Nov 4, 1923

Thousands Gather to Watch D. W. Griffith Film History of America

The public is invited to witness the taking of the big scene in motion pictures according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theater owners have complained that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

So leading producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where there presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America." For this screen work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary War. Unusual efforts have been made that all details of these military actions be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public to view the shooting of such big scenes has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near the village of Somers, in Putnam county, New York, where the scenes are being staged, offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by private photographers who take parts of the action with small motion picture camera, and hawk them to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. On a recent Saturday afternoon the State police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the State police made no arrests, as a result of a request by Mr. Griffith, but the cameras and their film will be held in custody [illegible] "America" has been finished and released.

Milwaukee (Wis) Sentinel Nov 4 1923

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington settings, where he will spend several weeks.

Sioux City (Ia) Journal 11/4/23

SEA-SICK HORSE DELAYS THE RIDE OF PAUL REVERE

A sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the illusion of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the male descendents of the minute men have been conscripted from their work by summons from the Lexington Historical society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was beaten again to marshal them into action.

When the scenes of the hanging of the lanterns in the Old North church were taken, the narrow streets in the district were crowded with people who started singing "America." The filming has started a patriotic revival there.

Richmond Va. Times Dispatch Nov 5 1923

GRIFFITH IS WORKING ON FILM, "AMERICA"

Producer Gathering Atmosphere and Shooting Scenes at "Westover."

Getting filled up on Revolutionary War history is David W. Griffith's dish these days. He is producing his biggest picture, "America," and is using "Westover," the James River home of Richard Crane, as a background for some of his most important scenes.

Yesterday Mr. Griffith spent with Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, president of William and Mary College, going over historic spots in Williamsburg, Yorktown and Jamestown. Some of the scenes of America will be taken at Yorktown and probably some at Jamestown.

The drama will continue today, weather permitting, and the staff of movie people, who are quartered at the Jefferson Hotel, are looking forward hopefully to clear skies, but the weather man says there is little to hope for—the prospect is for rain. Since the arrival of the famous producer in Richmond, he has worked incessantly getting material together for his play. He has been a close reader of historic works, in fact, spends half the night lying in bed, propped up with pillows, reading about the romance and history of the Revolution, having supplied himself with books from the State Library.

A number of local "stars" are assisting the cast in producing "America" at Westover. The membership of the Little Theatre League was canvassed and among those who are working from this group are Misses Eleanor Parrish, Martha Waller, Francis and Margaret Heindl, Agnes Moyler, Martha Mary Hoadley, Mildred Ragland, Thelma Hill, Nellie Meade, Alice Cole, Virginia Donnan, Elizabeth Gwathmey, Elizabeth Owens, Catherine Patterson, Elizabeth Knox, Julia Wickham, Ruby Bigger, Anna Cole and Judith Tompkins.

Camera men, principals and extras will leave the Jefferson early this morning to continue their work. They are expected to be here all this week.

Washington Boston Traveler Nov 5, 1923

GRINS and from the CAPITOL by W. G. GAVIN

All these well intended articles by Will Hays and other citizens of prominence about the need of relieving the President of some of his work to conserve his health are appreciated by the gentleman now in the White House, but he is getting along pretty well. He informs visitors that he never felt so well in his life. That early morning walk of his puts him in good shape for the day's work.

COOLIDGE SEES MOVIES

David W. Griffith recently showed President Coolidge some "stills" from his motion picture, "America," which will give the silver sheet a picture story of the war for independence. Griffith believes this will be his masterpiece, far surpassing his famous "Birth of a Nation." A Massachusetts man, John L. E. Pell of Great Barrington, is co-operating with Robert Chambers in writing the story of the film, much of which has been made. Pell wrote the scenario of "Down to the Sea in Ships," and this brought him to Griffith's attention.

Lexington (Ky) Leader Nov 4, 1923

D. W. Griffith is in Boston completing preliminary arrangements for reproducing the battles of Lexington and Concord on the original sites for his big picture, "America."

Zanesville (Ohio) Signal Nov 4, 1923

D. W. Griffith and 150 members of his company have gone to Boston to make scenes for "America" and "Richard the Lion Hearted"

Syracuse (N.Y.) American 11/4/23

Wants to Know Color of Paul Revere's Horse

WHAT color of a horse did Paul Revere ride on his historic trip from Boston to Lexington and Concord? This is probably the most famous animal in the history of the United States and it seems to be next to impossible to learn any details of its physical appearance.

D. W. Griffith wants to know for scenes in his next picture, "America." He has consulted the Lexington Historical Society. All that he has been able to learn thus far is that the horse was not white. No information has been obtained from historical societies in New England other than that the horse was not white.

Rochester (N.Y.) Herald 11/4/23

Cleveland Ohio News 11/4/23

Film Players to Have Gallery for Big Scenes

GALLERIES are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

So the producers have decided to invite the public to all scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America." For this work Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war. Unusual efforts have been made that all the details of this action be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public has been unusually impressive, as galleries ranging from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near Somers, where the scenes are being staged, offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view thousands of soldiers and actors.

Reading (Pa) Eagle Nov. 4 1923

D. A. R. LEADER GOES TO SEE AMERICA FILM

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

Philadelphia (Pa) Inquirer Nov 4 1923

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington. Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Newark N.J. Star Eagle Nov 5, 1923

Talk of the Day ABOUT Footlight and Film

BY H. S.

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE COOK, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon, to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All of the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington settings, where he will spend several weeks.

Gainesville (Mass) Pat Ledger, Nov. 8, 1923

USES MT. VERNON IN FILM

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America", relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired here.

Harlowite 11/10

Coolidge Sees "America"

Congressman Treadway presented to President Coolidge David W. Griffith Motion picture Director and producer, who showed the President several scenes of his "America" a picture of the war for Independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary Days, and will show the battles in which the American farmers and militia men struck the first telling blows for freedom.

American soldiers of today, attired in uniforms of those earlier soldiers, reenacted the battle scenes. Many of the historic relics of those days, [illegible]

New Orleans (La) Item Nov. 4, 1923

New England museums have loaned D. W. Griffith their treasures of Revolutionary relics in motion pictures [illegible] D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the battlefields of the early war of the actual sites for his next picture, America.

Nashville (Tenn) Banner 11/4/23

D. A. R. Head to View Film of America

D. A. R. OFFICER PRESENT AT FILMING OF "AMERICA"

Tampa (Fla) Tribune Nov 4 1923

Buffalo (N.Y.) Times Nov. 5, 1923

Wilmington Del Journal Nov. 5. 1923

18

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie, "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

21 Syracuse (N.Y.) Journal Nov. 5. 1923

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie, "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

Moline (Ill.) Dispatch. Nov. 5. 1923

18

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie, "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins, commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

Newport News (Va) Press. Nov. 6. 1923

PENINSULA FEATURE GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM

18

Famous Producer "Birth of a Nation" Will Screen Early Life of Colonies.

DAILY PRESS BUREAU,
Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 5.

David W. Griffith, widely known throughout this country country as the producer of that wonderful screen, "Birth of a Nation," is completing plans for the production of another "pictured" history of the early life of this grand Republic, and this time the background of the play will be laid in Jamestown, Williamsburg and Yorktown. The title of the new film will be "America," and the cost of its production will probably exceed one million dollars. It is expected that the forthcoming film, to be styled "America," will meet with even greater success, for many of its settings will be more realistic and the subject matter of the production of more actual interest to the masses than the "Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Griffith, accompanied by two of his leading ladies, several photographers, and others connected with his studio in New York, visited Williamsburg Sunday. The party spent some time at the college and in going over the town. Mr. Griffith's original plan was to select a street where actors might carry out their roles amid Colonial surroundings, but was greatly disappointed in his failure to find a street with sufficiently colonial features left to make it practical for his purpose. His only alternative is to build a temporary street, and this, very likely, will be done.

The days of the American Revolution will be largely illustrated with scenes obtained in old Yorktown. The two streets between which in the Nelson House gardens are, according to Mr. Griffith, the most perfect types of Colonial streets to be found in the United States. He was agreeably pleased when advised that the people of Yorktown have determined to permit no frame building in the town other than that of distinctly Colonial type.

Mr. Griffith plans to make the new film the greatest production of the kind ever attempted in the history of motion picture industry, and to this end he intends which for the moment will cost a fortune, if needed, to bring a large force of people and equipment to the city of Williamsburg. Mr. Griffith is a man of great energy, of the highest ideals in the history of the motion picture industry, a man of high character, and of great resources, and the people of Williamsburg are proud of the honor which it has conferred upon the town in selecting it as the place in which to film the story of the birth of the American Republic. Mr. Griffith is a man of great genius

New Bedford (Mass) Mercury Nov 9. 1923

"AMERICA" IN THE FILMS.

John L. E. Pell, Scenario Writer of "Down to the Sea in Ships," in Charge of the Historic Arrangement of D. W. Griffith's Production.

(Richmond, Va., Dispatch)

D. W. Griffith and the cast for his motion picture, "America," arrived in Richmond early yesterday afternoon on a special car attached to a Seaboard Air Line train from Washington and are quartered at the Jefferson.

The negotiations for the use of "Westover," as announced exclusively in The Evening Dispatch last Monday, were perfected, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crane will do all in their power to make the play, "America," an artistic success.

An invitation has been extended the Little Theatre League to take a prominent part in the scenes near Richmond.

Mr. Griffith and party went on location at "Westover" early this morning and commenced filming scenes in which the historic mansion will have a prominent part. From "Westover" the company will move to "Shirley," where additional pictures will be shot, all of which will help to tell the story of what our forefathers suffered and bled for when they gave this country its birth. To The Evening Dispatch man Mr. Griffith said that he considered "America" to be his greatest opportunity since "The Birth of a Nation." It was suggested to him for reproduction by the Daughters of the Revolution, and the scenario is from the pen of Robert W. Chambers. "America" was conceived with the idea of bringing before the American people in this day of social and national unrest those sterling rights and liberties for which we owe an eternal debt of gratitude to our forbears, and which we, as a people, do not realize or appreciate. The play is being put on at an expense of over a million dollars, and every technical and artistic source has been called on in this country and in England to make it the renaissance of American patriotism.

The first scenes are laid in England prior to the Revolution when in Parliament a few fearless souls dared the wrath of the licentious George III. The action shifts to the Boston Tea Party, Lexington, Trenton and then to a stately mansion on the James and the drama has a wonderful climax at historic Yorktown.

The historic arrangement of Mr. Chamber's scenario is by John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships." The production is on such a gigantic scale that a special car is necessary to handle the costumes alone, beside fourteen cameras to make the films.

In Mr. Griffith's studios special coaches of the period have been built and are now en route to "Westover," where they are expected to arrive early this morning.

In producing the Virginia scenes, Mr. Griffith said last night that he was especially anxious that the very best blood in Virginia should be represented, and after a conference with G. Watson James, Jr., general historian, Sons of the Revolution, and his brother, John Q. James, secretary of the Virginia Society, it was decided to enlist the aid of the Little Theatre League. If this is successful, the league will leave the Jefferson Hotel at 8:30 Saturday morning in special cars and will be entertained at lunch by Mr. Griffith on location.

While in Washington taking some of the scenes in "America," Mr. Griffith was given a private audience with President Coolidge, who went over the details of the picture at length with the producer. He will be introduced to Governor Trinkle by Mr. James and will discuss the Virginia side of the play with the State's chief executive.

In Mr. Griffith's cast are Carrol Dempster, who played the lead in "Dream Street" and "One Exciting Night"; Neil Hamilton, who starred in "The White Rose"; Charles Mack and Earville Alderson.

Washington (DC) Star Nov 4. 1923

Girls and Their Affairs.

Conducted by Helen H. Fetter.

D. W. GRIFFITH, who has probably had a hand in making more screen stars, feminine and otherwise, than any other motion picture director in the field today, is in town and has expressed considerable relief that Washington girls don't run around in knickerbockers all the time. Although Mr. Griffith, who is a charming person to listen to, hesitates in true masculine fashion to make definite statements on what women should or shouldn't wear, he showed definite pleasure that the girls of the Capital city don't wear their hiking clothes all the time on the street.

It seems that up in the old puritanical towns of history around Boston, Mass., Mr. Griffith saw many girls wearing knickers for general utility service. They wore them shopping and to work and could be seen in them at all hours of the day.

"Really," said Mr. Griffith, "I was quite surprised and it seemed to me they looked so out of place in the majority of cases."

The Griffith forces were north making scenes for the big new production to be entitled "America," which will have many scenes of the revolutionary war in it, although there will also be a modern story. Now the company is in Washington taking scenes around Alexandria and other Virginia and Maryland towns, as well as in Washington itself.

"It is the way of each generation to hold up its hands in horror at the doings of the succeeding generation," said Mr. Griffith, "but surely in feminine costumes the present-day styles of dresses are much more modest, if not so beautiful as those, say, of the empire period. Women's dress is a matter for women themselves to decide and also other feminine problems.

"If women are going into professional work and don't take care of their children it would seem that Plato's idea would be the correct remedy. He said we should have the state care for the children and bring them up. It is a couple of hundred years now since the fathers did much to care for their children in the actual training of them, and now it looks as though many modern women were going to shift their responsibilities of family upbringing. Some one will have to be responsible for the children or the nation will fail; therefore, it seems these duties are about to devolve upon the state."

* * * *

IN speaking of the flapper, Mr. Griffith said that she was just a reflection in her attitude toward life of the unrest, which is prevalent throughout the world today and which must subside.

"There are people who make it their business to tell the young people of today what they must do and what they do that is wrong. I have no time to handle other people's problems," asserted the big producer, "I am too busy trying in my actual work to fulfill the ideals that I have always tried to hold before me. I dare say many of these other folk are more than capable of handling these questions. I know little or nothing about them and do not feel that I should pass opinions on these problems."

What Mr. Griffith says about the gradual evolution of home life is indeed interesting, in view of the fact that each year thousands of girls feel that it is up to each one of them individually to choose between a career and marriage. Many of the young married women try domestic life for a while and go back to professional work because they have so much spare time. Even those with children often send them to schools where they are taught everything from how to brush their teeth to folk dances. Many do not make of home-making a definite career. It is only here and there nowadays that father and mother sit in the same room with the children, either reading or working while the boys and girls get their lessons. Yet as important a woman as Mary Roberts Rinehart, playwright and novelist, insists that the "home" was her real "career" and the other work secondary to her in importance until her children reached an age when they no longer needed her.

It is a bundle of problems, apparently more tangled than ever before, that lies awaiting the unraveling process by each girl who is ambitious, yet wants married life. And only patient investigation, experimentation and the weighing of all particular factors in the case will result in success for the girl of today.

New Bedford (Mass) Standard Nov. 9. 1923

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, AND ENVIRONS FIGURE IN HISTORIC MOVIE

"America," Written by Pell, Being Filmed by D. W. Griffith

Just as New Bedford and its history figured prominently in "Down to the Sea in Ships," so Richmond, Va., and its environs will be brought into the historic motion picture, "America," which D. W. Griffith is making from a scenario by Robert W. Chambers, arranged by John L. E. Pell, author of the scenario of "Down to the Sea in Ships." Mr. Griffith's company is just now in Richmond, wher it has obtained the use of two fine old estates for its scenes. The Richmond Dispatch says of Mr. Griffith's undertaking:

"Mr. Griffith and party went on location at Westover early this morning and commenced filming scenes in which the historic mansion will have a prominent part. From Westover the company will move to Shirley, where additional pictures will be shot, all of which will help to tell the story of what our forefathers suffered and bled for when they gave this country its birth. To The Evening Dispatch man Mr. Griffith said that he considered "America" to be his greatest opportunity since "The Birth of a Nation." It was suggested to him for reproduction by the Daughters of the Revolution, and the scenario is from the pen of Robert W. Chambers. "America" was conceived with the idea of bringing before the American people in this day of social and national unrest those sterling rights and liberties for which we owe an eternal debt of gratitude to our forbears, and which we, as a people, do not realize or appreciate. The play is being put on at an expense of over a million dollars, and every technical and artistic source has been called on in this country and in England to make it the renaissance of American patriotism.

"The first scenes are laid in England prior to the Revolution when in Parliament a few fearless souls dared the wrath of the licentious George III. The action shifts to the Boston Tea Party, Lexington, Trenton and then to a stately mansion on the James and the drama has a wonderful climax at historic Yorktown.

The historic arrangement of Mr. Chamber's scenario is by John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships." The production is on such a gigantic scale that a special car is necessary to handle the costumes alone, beside fourteen cameras to make the films.

"In Mr. Griffith's studios special coaches of the period have been built and are now en route to "Westover," where they are expected to arrive early this morning.

"In producing the Virginia scenes, Mr. Griffith said last night that he was especially anxious that the very best blood in Virginia should be represented, and after a conference with G. Watson James, Jr., general historian, Sons of the Revolution, and his brother, John Q. James, secretary of the Virginia Society, it was decided to enlist the aid of the Little Theatre League. If this is successful, the league will leave the Jefferson Hotel at 8:30 Saturday morning in special cars and will be entertained at lunch by Mr. Griffith on location.

"While in Washington taking some of the scenes in "America," Mr. Griffith was given a private audience with President Coolidge, who went over the details of the picture at length with the producer. He will be introduced to Governor Trinkle by Mr. James and will discuss the Virginia side of the play with the State's chief executive.

"In Mr. Griffith's cast are Carrol Dempster, who played the lead in "Dream Street" and "One Exciting Night"; Neil Hamilton, who starred in "The White Rose"; Charles Mack and Earville Alderson."

Chicago (Ill) Post Nov 10 1923

Cavalry Troop Aids Griffith.

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Va., played the part of Morgan's raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America."

Maj. Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Col. Hawkins, in command of Fort Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges without serious injuries.

Erie (Pa) Times Nov 10 1923

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, was recent caller on President Coolidge. (Int'l Newsreel)

Schenectady (NY) Nor Union-Star. 10. 1923

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Moving Picture World Trade Review Nov 10 1923

One thousand horsemen were used by D. W. Griffith in making the opening scenes of his latest production, which will be titled, "America."

Wilmington (Del) News. Nov. 10. 1923.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH

Washington (DC) Herald Nov. 11. 1923

D.A.R. Lends Aid to Griffith Film

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE COOK, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is in Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington season at Mt. Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the making of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's farewell life will be taken on the actual acreage in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith and a large staff and two cars of players are in Washington now, where he will spend several weeks.

Oregon Leader Nov. 9. 1923

GRIFFITH FILM NORMALCY AID

Collaborates With Weeks to Spread Contentment Among Americans.

By LAURENCE TODD,
Staff Correspondent Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—David Wark Griffith has just completed a big job of collaboration with the Coolidge administration and its militarist allies in "put over" on the American nation most pitiful film intended to make them enthusiastic for nothing.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people for a change, and we want to warn them against this and stamp out militarism," said the producer after calling upon Coolidge at the White House. "We hope to impress upon people that they are better off today than they ever have been before. The military environment in Germany has for many years been the cause of the country first started. Prussian militarism and other elements of the aristocratic class have been growing in prominence so as to put military ideals, ideas, being put forward as well as the more basic ideals of the people, and I think it is time to let the people know that to let militarism grow unchecked means the destruction of the people's liberties. Now the government is in the hands of the people, and we want to warn them against militarism."

Mr. Griffith was among those present in the Coolidge party at the Ford theater in Washington, the night he attended the play put on in respect for the memory of the South's greatest hero, Stonewall Jackson, entered the footlight a few minutes only with a play written around the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln.

Cohoes (NY) American Nov 9 1923

Pittsburgh (Pa) Gazette Times Nov 11 1923

GRIFFITH MEETS PRESIDENT

Congressman Treadway recently presented President Coolidge David W. Griffith, who showed the President several scenes of his "America," a picture of the war for Independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary days and will show the battles in which the Americans fought and million men struck the fetters off for freedom.

Moving Picture World Trade Review Nov. 11 1923

Fremont (Ohio) News Oct 30 1923

Moving Picture World Nov. 17. 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH was among those present in the Coolidge party at the Ford theater in Washington, the night he attended the play put on in respect for the memory of the South's greatest hero, Stonewall Jackson, entered the footlight a few minutes only with a play written around the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln.

Post Times (NY) Times Nov 2 1923

Griffith's "America" Now in Washington

St Paul (Minn) Pioneer Press Nov 4 1923

Salt Lake (Utah) Telegram Nov 2 1923

Oakland (Calif) Tribune 11/4/23

Rock Island (Ill) Argus Nov 3 1923

RECENT VERSION OF TRIUMPHS FOR AMERICA FILM

Louisville (Ky) Courier-Journal Nov 2 1923

St. Paul (Minn) Dispatch Nov 7 1923

Moline (Ill) Dispatch Nov. 10, 1923

Yes, 1924 Home-Coming Has Lure For Griffith, Busy With New Film

That 2 By 4 Creek Near La Grange and Shelby County Fair First In His Memories.

The Courier-Journal Washington Bureau.

Washington, Nov. 1. — If anybody "down home" should quietly invite David Wark Griffith to attend Kentucky's 1924 home-coming, he would be "mighty pleased."

Then, in all probability, he would slip down to Kentucky, steal out to a spot near La Grange and explore once more the mysteries of a certain creek that is bulging with more adventure than all the movies in the world.

This is the way the producer of "The Birth of a Nation" felt about home-comings today after he had visited President Coolidge and "had spent a hard day in the Virginia hills, trying to make a squadron of United States cavalry act like George Washington's pet troopers did in the revolutionary battles.

Mr. Griffith was invited to talk about the Ku Klux Klan and the belief of some that its revival got momentum, though unforeseen, from "The Birth of a Nation." But somehow the conversation always got back to Louisville, or La Grange, and Kentucky home coming plans. The only klan he knew was that of the Old South.

"Why, man," Mr. Griffith exclaimed, "there are just two places in the world that stand out to me now as marking the end of the rainbow. One is my old home place now near La Grange. The other is the Shelby County Fair. Did you ever go to the county fair at Shelbyville, barefoot, and stand around and eat popcorn? Did you ever—?"

Mr. Griffith smacked his lips. And then he remembered something else.

"And there's a certain creek up around that old place," he went on, "just a little two by four creek, tucked away up there in the woods. But, believe me, man, it's peopled with more perils and thrills than any place I know. There is always some big adventure lurking around every bend—Indians and wild animals and things and Lord knows what. It's been a long time ago, but I've been there and I know."

Mr. Griffith wants to go back to see if his illusions are still there, but he is "almost afraid" to for fear the years have been fooling him.

Just now he is trying to prove through his cherished medium that a constructive work can be done through that medium just as the old masters once swayed public thought by the written word. The theme of his new picture is modern unrest. It will show what hardships the fathers of the nation endured and contrast them to the comforts of today, when $15-a-day bricklayers and $500,000-a-year financiers think fate is doing them wrong.

"Why," he exclaimed, "I starved around on a farm until I was 22 years old and I worked on your old Courier-Journal for $3 a week in the old days when I wanted a lot of things and could not quite get them. Now, after I have been able to get some of these things, I look back and find I was a good deal more satisfied down there in Kentucky. Well, anyhow, we are trying to show by this picture that we are a good deal better off now than we used to be and we are trying to make it our best picture yet."

Mr. Griffith is modest about his achievements in the motion picture field, but boasts boldly of the prowess he showed as a barefoot mariner on the obscure streamlet that led to the edge of the world. He may go down there for the home-coming, but perhaps it would be kinder to let the creek ripple along in his memory.

Chicago (Ill) News Nov 3 1923

U. S. CAVALRYMEN AID IN FILMING HISTORICAL SPECTACLE. Members of the Third United States cavalry at Fort Myer, Va., are being used in filming some of the military scenes in "America" being produced by D. W. Griffith. Photo shows Griffith with some of the principals of the cast.

Elizabeth (N J) Journal 11/9/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 9, 1923

Public Invited to View Filming of D. W. Griffith's Latest Photoplay

The public is invited to witness the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theater owners have complained that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

So leading producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where there presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, America. For this screen work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war. Unusual efforts have been made that all details of these military actions be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public to view the shooting of such big scenes has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near the village of Somers, in Putnam county, where the scenes are being staged, offers a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take parts of the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk them to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. On a recent Saturday afternoon the state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the state police, made no arrests, as a result of a request by Mr. Griffith.

Sacramento (Cal) Screen News Nov. 10, 1923

Duluth (Minn) Herald 11/10/23

San Francisco Journal Nov. 11, 1923

CRACK CAVALRY IN FILM

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third, stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

U. S. Third C

Will Appear ture, "Amer Along Line Companies Bring Down

BY JAMES MUIR

David W. Griffith, the Michael Angelo of the moving picture, is at work on an all-surpassing superfilm to be named—"America." As might be guessed, it is of a patriotic nature. It will contain battle scenes from various wars, to produce which the whole U. S. Third Cavalry, it is said, has been requisitioned and attired by Griffith in the costumes of the respective historical periods to be re-created. President Coolidge himself has been favored with a preliminary showing of several scenes connected with the Revolutionary War. To direct them Griffith had the assistance of Col. Hawkins, commandant at Ft. Meyer, Va., where the third is stationed, and of Maj. Wainwright, aide to War Secretary Weeks. In reproducing the exploits of Morgan's Raiders, Maj. Wainwright led the troop in the role of the Yankees. In the first film in which a cavalry unit has taken part, "America" is reported to be the first film in which a cavalry unit has taken part.

Los Angeles (Cal) Express 11/7/23

Dayton (Ohio) News Nov. 8, 1923

D. A. R. President to See Film's Making

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

Hopkinsville (Ky) New Era Nov 7 1923

Chicago (Ill) Post 11/7/23

Richmond (Va) News-Leader Nov 9, 1923

BEGIN FILMING AT "SHIRLEY" TODAY

AMERICAN HISTORY TO BE SHOWN ON SCREEN

Well Known Producer Visits Virginia Historical Places For Story of Republic

Manchester (Va) News 11/9/23

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, was recent caller on President Coolidge. (Int'l Newsreel)

Cincinnati Ohio Times-Star Nov 10, 1923

The Boston Traveler says: Washington, Oct. 31.—Congressman Tinkham today presented to President Coolidge David W. Griffith, motion picture director and producer, who showed the President several scenes of his "America", a picture of the war for Independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary days, and will show the battles in which the American farmers and militia men struck the first telling blows for freedom.

American soldiers of today, attired as were these earlier soldiers, re-enacted the battle scenes. Many of the historic relics of those days were used.

Geneva (Ohio) Times Nov. 10, 1923

D. A. R. Chief to Watch Picturization of 'America'

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the historical incidents which took place there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

To Use Mount Vernon In Historical Picture

Arrangements are and under way for the use of the Washington home at Mount Vernon as the setting for some of the principal scenes in D. W. Griffith's historical picture, "America." The film deals with the dramatic episodes of the Revolutionary war and Mount Washington is one of the chief characters. Scenes of Washington's home life will be shown in their exact historical setting, which is being assisted in the work by the inventors of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the D. A. R., is in charge of Washington's home life, and has been in consultation with Griffith over various details of the scenery and costumes, and has obtained permission from the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union to use the Washington home as the setting for the scenes.

Screen News Sacramento (Cal) Nov. 10, 1923

Trenton (N J) Times 11/10/23

Rochester (N Y) American Nov. 11, 1923

Movie of Revolution To Be Filmed Appropriately

NEW ENGLAND is being ransacked for Revolutionary relics to give color to D. W. Griffith's latest picture, "America." Besides the value of a pictorial history of the Revolution which reveals in detail and authenticity, the historical edifices of Massachusetts are upon the eve of a revival of interest.

Rochester (N Y) American Nov 11, 1923

Washington's Life at Home To Be Depicted

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE COOK, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as the setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the historic incidents which transpired there.

Urbanna (Va) Sentinel Nov 9 1923

David W. Griffith, big figure in the movie world, says the vampire and the pie comedian will soon be as "extinct in the movies as the dodo is in the animal world." Mr. Griffith was the producer of the "Birth of a Nation," and he promises pictures in the future that will have a tendency to make the world better. Pictures will in the future play a big part in the educational and moral welfare of the nation and should be made wholesome and uplifting.

Louisville (Ky) Herald Nov. 11, 1923

Duluth (Minn) News-Tribune Nov. 11, 1923

Revolutionary Film Is Photographed

Atlanta (Ga) Journal Nov 11, 1923

Omaha (Nebr) World-Herald Nov 11, 1923

Tampa (Fla) Tribune Nov 11 1923

Detroit (Mich) Free Press Nov 4 1923

New Bedford (Mass) Mercury Nov 9.1923

"AMERICA" IN THE FILMS.

John L. E. Pell, Scenario Writer of "Down to the Sea in Ships," in Charge of the Historic Arrangement of D. W. Griffith's Production.

(Richmond, Va., Dispatch)

D. W. Griffith and the cast for his motion picture, "America," arrived in Richmond early yesterday afternoon on a special car attached to a Seaboard Air Line train from Washington and are quartered at the Jefferson.

The negotiations for the use of "Westover," as announced exclusively in The Evening Dispatch last Monday, were perfected, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crane will do all in their power to make the play, "America," an artistic success.

An invitation has been extended the Little Theatre League to take a prominent part in the scenes near Richmond.

Mr. Griffith and party went on location at "Westover" early this morning and commenced filming scenes in which the historic mansion will have a prominent part. From "Westover" the company will move to "Shirley," where additional pictures will be shot, all of which will help to tell the story of what our forefathers suffered and bled for when they gave this country its birth. To The Evening Dispatch man Mr. Griffith said that he considered "America" to be his greatest opportunity since "The Birth of a Nation." It was suggested to him for reproduction by the Daughters of the Revolution, and the scenario is from the pen of Robert W. Chambers. "America" was conceived with the idea of bringing before the American people in this day of social and national unrest those sterling rights and liberties for which we owe an eternal debt of gratitude to our forbears, and which we, as a people, do not realize or appreciate. The play is being put on at an expense of over a million dollars, and every technical and artistic source has been called on in this country and in England to make it the renaissance of American patriotism.

The first scenes are laid in England prior to the Revolution when in Parliament a few fearless souls dared the wrath of the licentious George III. The action shifts to the Boston Tea Party, Lexington, Trenton and then to a stately mansion on the James and the drama has a wonderful climax at historic Yorktown.

The historic arrangement of Mr. Chamber's scenario is by John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships." The production is on such a gigantic scale that a special car is necessary to handle the costumes alone, beside fourteen cameras to make the films.

In Mr. Griffith's studios special coaches of the period have been built and are now en route to "Westover," where they are expected to arrive early this morning.

In producing the Virginia scenes, Mr. Griffith said last night that he was especially anxious that the very best blood in Virginia should be represented, and after a conference with G. Watson James, Jr., general historian, Sons of the Revolution, and his brother, John Q. James, secretary of the Virginia Society, it was decided to enlist the aid of the Little Theatre League. If this is successful, the league will leave the Jefferson Hotel at 8:30 Saturday morning in special cars and will be entertained at lunch by Mr. Griffith on location.

While in Washington taking some of the scenes in "America," Mr. Griffith was given a private audience with President Coolidge, who went over the details of the picture at length with the producer. He will be introduced to Governor Trinkle by Mr. James and will discuss the Virginia side of the play with the State's chief executive.

In Mr. Griffith's cast are Carrol Dempster, who played the lead in "Dream Street" and "One Exciting Night"; Neil Hamilton, who starred in "The White Rose"; Charles Mack and Earville Alderson.

Washington (D.C.) Star Nov 4.1923

Girls and Their Affairs.

Conducted by Helen H. Fetter.

D. W. GRIFFITH, who has [illegible] hand in "making" more screen stars, feminine and otherwise, than any other motion picture director in the field today, is in town and has expressed considerable relief [illegible] Washington girls don't run around in knickerbockers all the time. Although Mr. Griffith, who is a charming person to listen to, hesitates in true masculine fashion to make definite statements on what women should or shouldn't wear, he showed definite pleasure that the girls of the Capital city don't wear their hiking clothes all the time on the street.

It seems that up in the old puritanical towns of history around Boston, Mass., Mr. Griffith saw many girls wearing knickers for general utility service. They wore them shopping and to work and could be seen in them at all hours of the day.

"Really," said Mr. Griffith, "I was quite surprised and it seemed to me they looked so out of place in the majority of cases."

The Griffith forces were north making scenes for the big new production to be entitled "America," which will have many scenes of the revolutionary war in it, although there will also be a modern story. Now the company is in Washington taking scenes around Alexandria and other Virginia and Maryland towns, as well as in Washington itself.

"It is the way of each generation to hold up its hands in horror at the doings of the succeeding generation," said Mr. Griffith, "but surely in feminine costumes the present-day styles of dresses are much more modest, if not as beautiful as those, say, of the empire period. Women's dress is a matter for women themselves to decide and also other feminine problems.

"If women are going into professional work and don't take care of their children it would seem that Plato's idea would be the correct remedy. He said we should have the state care for the children and bring them up. It is a couple of hundred years now since the factors did much to care for their children in the actual training of them, and now it looks as though many modern women were going to shift their responsibilities of family upbringing. Some one will have to be responsible for the children or the nation will fail; therefore, it seems these duties are about to devolve upon the state."

* * * * *

IN speaking of the flapper, Mr. Griffith said that she was just a reflection in her attitude toward life of the unrest which is prevalent throughout the world today and which must subside.

"There are people who make it their business to tell the young people of today what they must do and what they do that is wrong. I have no time to handle other people's problems," asserted the big producer, "I am too busy trying in my actual work to fulfill the ideals that I have always tried to hold before me. I dare say many of these other folk are more than capable of handling these questions. I know little or nothing about them and do not feel that I should pass opinions on these problems."

What Mr. Griffith says about the gradual evolution of home life is indeed interesting. In view of the fact that each year thousands of girls feel that it is up to each one of them individually to choose between a career and marriage. Many of the young married women try domestic life for a while and go back to professional work because they have so much spare time. Even those with children often send them to schools where they are taught everything from how to brush their teeth to folk dances. Many do not make of home-making a definite career. It is only here and there nowadays that father and mother sit in the same room with the children, either reading or working while the boys and girls get their lessons. Yet as important a woman as Mary Roberts Rinehart, playwright and novelist, insists that the "home" was her real "career" and the other work secondary to her in importance until her children reached an age when they no longer needed her.

It is a bundle of problems, apparently more tangled than ever before, that lies awaiting the unraveling process by each girl who is ambitious, yet wants married life. And only patient investigation, experimentation and the weighing of particular factors in the [illegible] will result in success [illegible] girl of today.

Chicago (Ill) Post Nov 10 1923

Cavalry Troop Aids Griffith.

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Va., played the part of Morgan's raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America."

Maj. Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Col. Hawkins, in command of Fort Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the [illegible] without serious injuries.

Erie (Pa) Times Nov 16 1923

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, was recent caller on President Coolidge. (Int'l Newsreel)

New Bedford (Mass) Standard Nov. 9.1923

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, AND ENVIRONS FIGURE IN HISTORIC MOVIE

"America," Written by Pell, Being Filmed by D. W. Griffith

Just as New Bedford and its history figured prominently in "Down to the Sea in Ships," so Richmond, Va., and its environs will be brought into the historic motion picture, "America," which D. W. Griffith is making from a scenario by Robert W. Chambers, arranged by John L. E. Pell, author of the scenario of "Down to the Sea in Ships." Mr. Griffith's company is just now in Richmond, wher it has obtained the use of two fine old estates for its scenes. The Richmond Dispatch says of Mr. Griffith's undertaking:

"Mr. Griffith and party went on location at Westover early this morning and commenced filming scenes in which the historic mansion will have a prominent part. From Westover the company will move to Shirley, where additional pictures will be shot, all of which will help to tell the story of what our forefathers suffered and bled for when they gave this country its birth. To The Evening Dispatch man Mr. Griffith said that he considered "America" to be his greatest opportunity since "The Birth of a Nation." It was suggested to him for reproduction by the Daughters of the Revolution, and the scenario is from the pen of Robert W. Chambers. "America" was conceived with the idea of bringing before the American people in this day of social and national unrest those sterling rights and liberties for which we owe an eternal debt of gratitude to our forbears, and which we, as a people, do not realize or appreciate. The play is being put on at an expense of over a million dollars, and every technical and artistic source has been called on in this country and in England to make it the renaissance of American patriotism.

"The first scenes are laid in England prior to the Revolution when in Parliament a few fearless souls dared the wrath of the licentious George III. The action shifts to the Boston Tea Party, Lexington, Trenton and then to a stately mansion on the James and the drama has a wonderful climax at historic Yorktown.

"The historic arrangement of Mr. Chamber's scenario is by John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships." The production is on such a gigantic scale that a special car is necessary to handle the costumes alone, beside fourteen cameras to make the films.

"In Mr. Griffith's studios special coaches of the period have been built and are now en route to "Westover," where they are expected to arrive early this morning.

"In producing the Virginia scenes, Mr. Griffith said last night that he was especially anxious that the very best blood in Virginia should be represented, and after a conference with G. Watson James, Jr., general historian, Sons of the Revolution, and his brother, John Q. James, secretary of the Virginia Society, it was decided to enlist the aid of the Little Theatre League. If this is successful, the league will leave the Jefferson Hotel at 8:30 Saturday morning in special cars and will be entertained at lunch by Mr. Griffith on location.

"While in Washington taking some of the scenes in "America," Mr. Griffith was given a private audience with President Coolidge, who went over the details of the picture at length with the producer. He will be introduced to Governor Trinkle by Mr. James and will discuss the Virginia side of the play with the State's chief executive.

"In Mr. Griffith's cast are Carrol Dempster, who played the lead in "Dream Street" and "One Exciting Night"; Neil Hamilton, who starred in "The White Rose"; Charles Mack and Earville Alderson."

Schenectady (N.Y.) Union-Star. Nov 10.1923

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Moving Picture World Trade Review Nov 10 1923

One thousand horsemen were used by D. W. GRIFFITH in making the opening scenes of his latest production, which will be titled, "America."

Wilmington (Del) News. Nov. 10. 1923.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, who was recently a caller on President Coolidge.

Washington (D.C.) Herald Nov. 11. 1923

D.A.R. Lends Aid to Griffith Film

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE COOK, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is in Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mt. Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Cheerios for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's farewell to his officers and the social settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith and a large staff and few dozen of players are in Washington now, where he will spend weeks more.

Mrs. Eve. Leader Nov. 9. 1923

GRIFFITH FILM NORMALCY AID

Collaborates With Weeks to Spread Contentment Among Americans.

By LAURENCE TODD,
Staff Correspondent Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—David Wark Griffith has just completed a big job of collaboration with the Coolidge administration and its militarist allies to "put over" on the American voters next year a film intended to make them enthusiastic for nothing.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people for a change, and we want to turn them against this and among all politicians," said the producer after calling upon Coolidge at the White House. "We hope to impress upon people that they are better off today than they ever have been before. The reform movement in Congress has been very grievous to us, and we have spent months, even years, and other our movement, as well as the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] property, and [illegible] that he has [illegible] Carol Dempster, who plays her brother in the picture, is authority for the story that whenever Carol's car goes flashing up the road all the old ladies take to cover.

"It's that movie girl again," cried one the other day. "You are never safe on the streets when she is in an automobile."

We had a sample of Carol's speed, but it is not nearly as bad as the little old lady says, for we timed our train by ten minutes and had to wait another hour.

Carol Attracts Attention.

Dressed in a red striped coat and a little whitesport hat with a red scarf, Carol was the cynosure of all eyes while the picture was being filmed. So much so that she made a vow never to wear a red coat on a Sunday when the whole world turned out to see the picture being made. The invasion of the motion picture company has stimulated business around Sonnets, N. Y., pleasing some and making other merchants unhappy because they hate to work too hard. One storekeeper who has about twenty articles in stock and who spends his time in reading and the other day when one of the boys called in his usual expression.

"I wish those movie people would get out of town. I don't had a chance to think since they got here."

Will Harold Ainsworth will get his wish. They are having dances and meeting in Monmouth this coming week, while the workmen will remain in the town where the American army fought for freedom and liberty. So far the film [illegible] as good as we talked we are going to be greatly disappointed to see we have lost to D. W. Griffith, and we believe as he says it is going to disclose "the birth of a Nation" to have not an [illegible] one person.

Pittsburgh (Pa) Gazette Times Nov 11 1923

GRIFFITH MEETS PRESIDENT

Congressman President recently presented President Coolidge with D. W. Griffith who showed the President several scenes of his "America," a picture of the war for independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary days and will show the manner in which the Americans fought and battle now stands the [illegible] hours for freedom.

Cohoes (N.Y.) American Nov 9 1923

Moving Picture World Trade Review Nov. 11 1923

Evening Herald (Ohio) Nov 30 1923

Kansas City Star Nov 2 1923

Griffith's "America" Now in Washington

St. Paul (Minn) Pioneer Press Nov 4 1923

Moving Picture World Nov. 17. 1923

Rock Island (Ill) Argus Nov 3 1923

Salt Lake Tribune Nov 3 1923

Oakland (Calif) Tribune Nov 11 1923

Louisville (Ky) Nov 2 1923 Courier-Journal

Yes, 1924 Home-Coming Has Lure For Griffith, Busy With New Film

That 2 By 4 Creek Near La Grange and Shelby County Fair First In His Memories.

The Courier-Journal Washington Bureau.

Washington, Nov. 1. — If anybody "down home" should quietly invite David Wark Griffith to attend Kentucky's 1924 home-coming, he would be "mighty glad."

Then, in all probability, he would slip down to Kentucky, steal out to a spot near La Grange and explore once more the mysteries of a certain creek that is bulging with more adventure than all the movies in the world.

This is the way the producer of "The Birth of a Nation" felt about home-comings today after he had visited President Coolidge and "had spent a hard day in the Virginia hills, trying to make a squadron of United States cavalry act like George Washington's pet troopers did in the revolutionary battles.

Mr. Griffith was invited to talk about the Ku Klux Klan and the belief of some that its revival got momentum, though unforeseen, from "The Birth of a Nation." But somehow the conversation always got back to Louisville, or La Grange, and Kentucky home coming plans. The only klan he knew was that of the Old South.

"Why, man," Mr. Griffith exclaimed, "there are just two places in the world that stand out to me now as marking the end of the rainbow. One is my old home place now near La Grange. The other is the Shelby County Fair. Did you ever go to the county fair at Shelbyville, barefoot, and stand around and eat popcorn? Did you ever—?"

Mr. Griffith smacked his lips. And then he remembered something else.

"And there's a certain creek up around that old place," he went on, "just a little two by four creek, tucked away up there in the woods. But, believe me, man, it's peopled with more perils and thrills than any place I know. There is always some big adventure lurking around every bend—Indians and wild animals and things and Lord knows what. It's been a long time ago, but I've been there and I know."

Mr. Griffith wants to go back to see if his illusions are still there, but he is "almost afraid" to for fear the years have been fooling him.

Just now he is trying to prove through his cherished medium that a constructive work can be done through that medium just as the old masters once swayed public thought by the written word. The theme of his new picture is modern unrest. It will show what hardships the fathers of the nation endured and contrast them to the comforts of today, when $16-a-day bricklayers and $500,000-a-year financiers think fate is doing them wrong.

"Why," he exclaimed, "I starved around on a farm until I was 22 years old and I worked on your old Courier-Journal for $3 a week in the old days when I wanted a lot of things and could not quite get them. Now, after I have been able to get some of these things, I look back and find I was a good deal more satisfied down there in Kentucky. Well, anyhow, we are trying to show by this picture that we are a good deal better off now than we used to be and we are trying to make it our best picture yet."

Mr. Griffith is modest about his achievements in the motion picture field, but boasts boldly of the prowess he showed as a barefoot mariner on the obscure streamlet that led to the edge of the world. He may go down there for the home-coming, but perhaps it would be kinder to let the creek ripple along in his memory.

Chicago (Ill) News Nov 3 1923

U. S. CAVALRYMEN AID IN FILMING HISTORICAL SPECTACLE. Members of the Third United States cavalry at Fort Myer, Va., are being used in filming some of the military scenes in "America" being produced by D. W. Griffith. Photo shows Griffith with some of the principals of the cast.

St. Paul (Minn) Dispatch Nov 7 1923

Public Invited to View Filming of D. W. Griffith's Latest Photoplay

The public is invited to witness the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theater owners have complained that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

So leading producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where there presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America," for the screen. Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war. Unusual efforts have been made that all details of these military actions be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public to view the shooting of such big scenes has been unusually impressive, galleries varying from 1000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near the village of Somers, in Putnam county, where the scenes are being staged, offers a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take parts of the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk them to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. On a recent Saturday afternoon the state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the state police, made no arrests as a result of a request by Mr. Griffith.

But the cameras and their films will be held in custody by the police until after America has been finally released.

San Francisco (Cal) Journal Nov. 11, 1923

CRACK CAVALRY IN FILMS

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third, stationed at Ft. Myer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Sacramento (Cal) Screen News Nov. 10, 1923

Duluth (Minn) Herald 11/10/23

IN NEW GRIFFITH FILM

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Va., played the part of Morgan's raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Maj. Wainright, aide to Secretary of Work Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Col. Hawkins, in command at Fort Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Rochester (N.Y) American Nov 11. 1923

Washington's Life at Home To Be Depicted

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE COOK, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as the setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the historic incidents which transpired there.

Urbanna (Va) Sentinel Nov 9 1923

Elizabeth (N.J) Journal 11/9/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 9. 1923

Lexington Is Ready for Paul Revere Ride

Washington, Oct. 31.—Congressman Tinkham today presented to President Coolidge David W. Griffith, motion picture director and producer, who showed the President several scenes of his "America," a picture of the war for Independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary days, and will show the battles in which the American farmers and militia men struck the first telling blows for freedom.

American soldiers of today, attired as were these earlier soldiers, re-enacted the battle scenes. Many of the historic relics of those days were used.

Geneva (Ohio) Times Nov. 10. 1923

D. A. R. Chief to Watch Picturization of 'America'

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the historical incidents which took place there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

Los Angeles (Cal) Express 11/7/23

D. A. R. President to See Film's Making

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

Hopkinsville (Ky) New Era Nov 7 1923

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, was recent caller on President Coolidge. (Int'l Newsreel)

Cincinnati Ohio Times-Star Nov 10, 1923

Danville (Va) News 11/9/23

To Use Mount Vernon In Historical Picture

Arrangements are now under way for the use of the Washington home at Mount Vernon as the setting for some of the principal scenes in D. W. Griffith's historical picture, "America." The city fathers and the patriotic societies of the Revolution are now and Mount Vernon is one of the chief characters. Scenes of Washington's home life will be taken in his own personal apartments, which it is being arranged to have furnished by the inventory of the last owner, the Antiquarian Revolution, the Antiquarian Society of Boston, the Society of Colonial Dames, the Society of Colonial Wars, the Society of the Cincinnati, the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, the Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution

Moline (Ill) Dispatch Nov. 10. 1923

Asbury Park (N.J.) Press 24 Nov 11 1923

Washington (DC) Star Nov 11 1923

Public Invited to View Filming of D. W. Griffith's Latest Photoplay

The public is invited to witness the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently arrived at among the leading producers.

The reason for permitting "galleries" to be present is to combat a prevalent impression of "faking" in film productions. So much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazine and newspaper writers that theater owners have complained that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

So leading producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where there presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular scenes for D. W. Griffith's next production, America. For this screen work Mr. Griffith is reproducing all the more important battles of the Revolutionary war. Unusual efforts have been made that all details of these military actions be made with absolute fidelity to history.

The first test of inviting the public to view the shooting of such big scenes has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day. The hillside near the village of Somers, in Putnam county, where the scenes are being staged, offers a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take parts of the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk them to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. On a recent Saturday afternoon the state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Captain French of the state police, made no arrests, as a result of a request by Mr. Griffith, but the cameras and their films will be held in custody by the police until after America has been finished and released.

New Bedford (Mass) Standard Nov 11. 1923

U. S. ARMY—Aids D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture producer, in his new super-movie "America." Photo shows Griffith discussing filming of scenes with Col. J. Hamilton Hawkins commandant at Fort Meyer, Va., where scenes were taken. On horseback is Major Jonathan Wainwright, who led cavalry charge for one "shot."

San Francisco (Cal) Journal 11/11/23

And it all happened just across the Potomac in Virginia. David Wark Griffith, photoplay producer, brought a company to Washington, enlisted the aid of the Fort Myer cavalry, and proceeded to "shoot" some scenes for his historical spectacle, "America." These are "Indian fighters."

Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch Nov 12. 1923

Watertown (N.Y.) Standard Nov 14 1923

READY TO FILM "AMERICA"

J. L. E. Pell, left, and D. W. Griffith

Mr. Pell, who wrote "Down to the Sea in Ships", is now assisting Mr. Griffith in his historical picture which will do for Richmond, Va., what the whaling film did for New Bedford.

Spokane (Wash) Spokesman-Review Nov 11 1923

Kinney (Ill) Journal Nov 6 1923

St Paul (Minn) Pioneer Press 11/11/23

To See Filming of "America"

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington. Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there. Observers for D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia. D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington [illegible]

D. A. R. WATCH "AMERICA."

Filming of Great Historical Drama Being Made in Washington.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington [illegible]

CRACK CAVALRY IN FILMS

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third, stationed at Ft. Myer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch Nov 11 1923

John L. E. Pell is making the historical arrangement of the story for D. W. Griffith's "America." Pell is author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," and has a thorough knowledge of New England history.

Richmond (Va) Times-Dispatch Nov. 12. 1923

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, was recent caller on President Coolidge. (Int'l Newsreel)

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, noted film producer, was recent caller on President Coolidge. (Int'l Newsreel)

Newark (N.J.) Star Eagle Nov 13 1923

Newport News (Va) Press Nov 13 1923

SEASICK HORSE DELAYS REVOLUTION FILM AGAIN

Settle Color of Paul Revere's Nag, but Ocean Voyage Makes Him Wobbly—Descendants of Lexington Warriors Conscripted for Historical Movie.

[illegible]

San Francisco (Cal) Chronicle Nov 11 1923

Denver (Colo) Rocky Mt News Nov. 11. 1923

'Paul Revere's' Pony Sick; Film Waits

A seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and removed romantic, white D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for the historical film, "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that somewhere most of the patriots. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The animal was fitted with spectacles to watch the reproduction of the historic ride. But when the horse disembarked it staggered like a drunken man on the deck of a moving ship. [illegible]

Charlotte (N.C.) Observer Nov 11 1923

President of D. A. R. Seen Taking Scenes in 'America.'

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon, to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Norwalk (Conn) Courier-Citizen Nov. 11. 1923

Canton (Ohio) Repository Nov. 12. 1923

YORKTOWN IS TAKEN BY GRIFFITH'S PARTY

Surrenders to Film Producer Screening Spectacle "America."

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

YORKTOWN, VA., Nov. 11.—Forty-seven, silent, stoic photographs and most genuine of Revolutionary backgrounds surrendered once more to-day this time, however, it was to David Wark Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," who is filming "America" in Virginia just now.

The second of scenes of the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] with [illegible] at [illegible] [illegible]

A [illegible] was postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and removed last week, when D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for the historical film, "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that somewhere most of the patriots. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The animal was fitted with spectacles to watch the reproduction of the historic ride. But when the horse disembarked it staggered like a drunken man on the deck of a moving ship. [illegible]

Richmond (Va) News Leader Nov 13 1923

"AMERICA" SCENES ARE FILMED IN YORKTOWN

[illegible] to reports brought from Newport News yesterday by citizens of that section, D. W. Griffith's cast for the making of the picture "America," had arrived there and is making ready for the staging of the picture. The entire population of Yorktown has been offered places as "[illegible]" and the noted director yesterday arranging everything in readiness. All kinds of paraphernalia suggesting colonial times have been added and are being set up in preparation for the filming.

Herald Duluth (Minn) Nov. 14. 1923

D. A. R. CHIEF TO WITNESS FILMING

Screenland January 25 - 1924

ABBE

A remarkable portrait—never before published—of David Wark Griffith, presenting a different phase of the famous director.

Since Intolerance, D. W. Griffith has been struggling for independence with bill collectors at his elbow

The WOLF at the Studio Door

By Frederick James Smith

THERE is an interesting side to the career of David Wark Griffith that has never been revealed. This presents the director fighting for financial freedom for seven years—and struggling desperately with creditors at the studio door.

Possibly this tells the story of why Griffith isn't the screen adventurer of old. It isn't easy to dare with a bill collector at your elbow.

Only the other day Griffith paid off another note on the huge debt he acquired in making Intolerance. Stretching between Intolerance and today is a path barbed with financial perils. Now that Griffith has fought his way through the truth may be told.

Who, but Griffith, has contributed five such poignant screen moments as these:

The return of the little colonel after the Civil War in The Birth of a Nation.

The tenement girl sobbing in the courtoom of Intolerance.

The hysterical waif trapped in the tiny closet of Broken Blossoms.

The death of the unwanted baby in Way Down East.

The moment when Henriette hears the distant singing of the lost and blind Louise in Orphans of the Storm.

Used Personal Fortune on Intolerence

BACK in 1916 "D. W." decided to make Intolerance. It was a daring venture and a labor of love in one. Today this spectacle would cost well over two million dollars to produce. Intolerance actually ran to $650,000 before it was completed. Most of this money was Griffith's own—his profits from The Birth of a Nation. (Incidentally, this is the only instance on record of a director putting his entire personal fortune into his own venture). As the production progressed, Griffith ran beyond his own pocketbook. He began to borrow. He secured money here and there—and finally finished the spectacle. But he was badly in debt.

America entered the war and Griffith tossed his own plans aside to do Hearts of the World as his contribution to the conflict. While Hearts of the World did not cost a great deal, due to the aid given Griffith by the Allied governments, it ran the director further in debt. Hearts of the World was completed, released and seemed well on its way to make a fortune—when the war ended. Audiences would have no more "war stuff" and Griffith lost a million.

Gives Up Freedom Temporarily

THE director was in a serious position and he decided to give up his independence temporarily that his creditors might be paid. He signed a contract with Famous Players for twelve pictures.

Here again the fates took a hand. With the war ended, the purchasing power of the dollar dwindled and the cost of production mounted. Griffith found that the Famous Players contract, which had looked so promising, was developing into a Frankenstein monster. Before four pictures were completed, Griffith discovered that he was actually receiving less for his productions than a third rate star.

Griffith found he couldn't buy expensive stories. He couldn't employ costly players. He couldn't maintain the necessary all-round staff. But, despite this, he did make Broken Blossoms, still a milestone of film progress. And he bought it back from Famous Players at a loss in order to present it as he felt it should be presented.

All this may sound like bad business. But it came of two things: Griffith's desire to keep faith with his creditors and the most unusual business conditions the country ever saw.

Mounting Costs Overtakes Griffith

AFTER his contract with Famous Players, Griffith accepted an order to do three productions for First National. Again he under-estimated business conditions. Again he was overtaken by mounting production costs. He lost once more.

Then came his connection with his present releasing organization, United Artists. In order to have time to do Way Down East, Griffith bought back The Love Flower from First National—again at a loss—and turned it over to United.

The beginning of Way Down East Found Griffith badly in debt. The money for this production was raised by stock selling, Griffith receiving seven dollars for every $15 worth of stock sold. Thus $1,600,000 was raised—of which Griffith received some $750,000 for production use.

Way Down East Costs $700,000

MEANWHILE, in order to carry on his elaborate plans, Griffith acquired his Mamaraneck, N. Y., studios. This was an added financial burden, but Griffith considered it a necessary one. Way Down East was finished, scored a popular success and began earning money.

But the returns from a film filter back slowly. Griffith again had little working capital, but this time he had a big studio overhead. He made Dream Street to help meet this.

Then he did Orphans of the Storm with the money that was now being steadily turned in by Way Down East. He finished it, and once more had the familiar bill collector at his side.

In succession Griffith did One Exciting (Continued on page 101)

Night and The White Rose as pot boilers. There was still the studio overhead to be met—and yet Griffith could afford no real casts, no real producing staff and no real stories, for real stories cost money. In fact he had to sell some of the stories which he had secured, such as Java Head and Wild Oranges.

Stakes Future on New Film

SUCH is the Griffith story to September, 1923, when he launched upon his production of America, his Revolutionary spectacle, staking his future upon it. America will either make or break him. And there will be nothing indefinite about the outcome on that point.

The spectacle of the one big screen producer hounded by creditors is really an astonishing commentary upon the making of pictures. It is amazing that no financial interests have gone to his aid.

It is equally amazing that Griffith accomplished what he had. At any point Griffith might have allied himself permanently with some big producing organization, after the fashion of the Civil War Miller and the Rex Ingrams, but he would have lost the very freedom for which he has fought since the first days of pictures.

Griffith is Film's Own Independent

THIS is not a defense of Griffith. Despite my great personal admiration for the man it may well be that Griffith is a hard headed man and that of the obstacles that had blocked his path many [illegible] were of his own making. But it must be remembered that Griffith, save for Chaplin, is the one and only lonely independent in the world of picture-making. And an most independent!

[illegible] everything him self. Where other directors have batteries of assistant directors, huge technical staffs and elaborate scenario departments, he fights a lone battle. And he has never taken over six months for any single production in his whole career.

While Griffith has thrown himself completely into America, I think there is just a certain tinge of cynicism about him now.

"I'm beginning to worship the dollar, too," he told me the other day. "After all, it means a kind of freedom. It's maddening to always need money. Sometimes I wish I could leave picture-making forever. Yes, I think a little place somewhere along Chesapeake Bay would be the spot to dream away the days with a sailboat and never a mention of motion pictures.

What Lies Ahead of Our Photoplay?

SOMETIMES I think that I never want to see another picture and most of the time I feel that I never want to make another. They exhaust and consume you. And yet I probably couldn't stop.

"Possibly I couldn't because I want to find out what lies ahead of our pictures of today. We have proven that the field of the spectacle is open, that the stage is so much more [illegible] I wouldn't be surprised if we ultimately proved that the screen could be far more intimate and intimate than the stage in revealing the inner human [illegible]

[illegible]

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer Nov 18 1923

Manchester (Conn) Herald Nov. 15, 1923

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee Nov. 16, 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN MAKING FILM

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the other families of Virginia are his guests.

G. Watson James, of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrd Mansion at Westover on the James River. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League, are acting as extra people for the scenes exhibiting their pageant.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

GRIFFITH TURNS "GYPSY" IN MAKING FILM

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the other families of Virginia are his guests.

G. Watson James, of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

[illegible]

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov. 16, 1923

Stamford (Conn) Advocate Nov 16, 1923

FILMING AMERICA ON HISTORIC GROUNDS

Railroad Company Seeks to Relieve Shortage of Fuel at Plant in Rowayton.

Nov. 11, 1923

Waltham (Mass) News Nov 16 1923

MOVIELAND GOSSIP

Crack Army Troop Used For Movies

CLEVELAND

of the Theaters

She Has the Leading Feminine Role in New Griffith Picture

Cleveland Plain Dealer Nov 18 1923

26

Picture Play

The Imagination Department of D. W. Griffith announces that a sea-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington. Mr. Griffith is filming scenes for his historical film, "America." It took a committee to [illegible] color of the horse that Revere rode, and it chances that is one which contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was agreed upon, the horse, for some reason, was ordered from New York, and it arrived by boat after an alleged stormy passage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still possessed the illusion of being on a rocking vessel. Lexington report has it entered heartily into the making of this picture and all male descendants were conscripted by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their fathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact copies of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns, heirlooms in their families. The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was [illegible] again to bring them into action for the film.

Meriden (Conn) Record Nov. 16. 1923

GRIFFITH GETTING READY TO PRODUCE "BEN HUR"

At last David Wark Griffith is engaged on the task for which he has yearned many years. Ever since the days of "The Birth of a Nation," the director has longed to film a few of the more colorful episodes of the Revolution of 1776. Now, out among the hills of Putnam County, N. Y., he is leading several thousand players, "extras" and soldiers through scenes of skirmishing and foraging such as actually took place a century and a half ago. "America" will be the name of the photoplay, and as starting point for the romantic narrative which Mr. Griffith will weave into his reconstructed history, he has purchased the rights to Robert W. Chamber's early novel, "The Reckoning." Only one character from the novel is said to fit into the contemplated picture, however, and Mr. Chambers, Anthony Kelly and Mr. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," are busy at the work of revising and amplifying the material. The Boston Tea Party will supply an early incident in the plot, and Mr. Griffith will presumably come to Massachusetts for a portion of the filming. Frank McGlynn will play the part of Washington. The venture is said to have the support of the Daughters of the American Revolution, but whether Mr. Hirschberg, too, has been consulted does not appear.

Long months of discussion [illegible] over the project.

Screen News (Nyc.) Nov 17 1923

THIRD U. S. CAVALRY IN FILM SCENE "AMERICA"

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous 3d, stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 17 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY DE LUXE ON PULLMANS

"F. F. V.'s" of Richmond His Guide on Locations for Film America

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theatre League are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Billboard 11/17/23

D. W. MEETS COOLIDGE

Washington, Nov. 10.—D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture director, was presented to President Coolidge last week at the White House. Griffith showed the President scenes from the great production "America", upon which he is now at work. Griffith was in Washington with a large company taking scenes for the picture.

Portland (Me) Press-Herald 11/17/23

Now the motion pictures have given a modern twist to gypsying. The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans. Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America". A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides. G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith. One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence. All the historic scenes along the James River will be photographed including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives. The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

Almost all motion picture fans have laughed over the sea incident

Manchester (N.H) Mirror 11/17/23

REVOLUTIONARY PLAY

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary screen picture which he is now preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Sedalia (Mo) Sentinel 11/17/23

Charleston (W Va) Gazette Nov. 18, 1923

ESTATES FILMED FOR NEW PICTURE

Movie Person Has Taken Root in "America," With Pullmans As the Wagons

Enact Revolutionary War Scene In Filming Griffith's 'America'

"You men on the hill there, die! You farther down use your own judgment. All ready, boys!" Next the crash of discharged rifles, clouds of smoke, frantic horses running madly among fallen bodies. Red coats flashing among the shrubs and timber. Naked Indians falling with tomahawks on their victims.

All the time the camera on its high scaffold grinds steadily.

In such manner the D. W. Griffith Company on location at Raven's Wood, the old Higginbotham place near Richmond, yesterday re-enacted the Revolutionary war scene in which General Butler's Tory "Greens" aided by the Indians, supposedly in the Mohawk Valley, New York, attacked a convoy of supplies on its way to General Washington's army. A number of the Richmond Howitzers took the part of the continental army troops aiding in the Tory raid.

The wooded hill with its narrow road along which the wagons and pack horses moved to be suddenly attacked by the hidden Tories and Indians, the green uniforms of Butler's troops, the red coats of the British, the weirdly painted Indians and the drab, tattered costumes of the Colonials made altogether a colorful picture. And those who watched were as varied. Little darkies looked on wonderingly, ready to run, but too fascinated by the sight of wild Indians and falling soldiers; while school children found their Revolutionary history suddenly come to life.

Though yesterday's work was long shots, in which individual actors are not starred, there were a number of prominent players taking part. Jim Mileidy and Will Willis, of long experience on the legitimate stage, took prominent parts as colonials. Frank McGlynn, Jr., the son of Frank McGlynn, who took the role of Abraham Lincoln in Drinkwater's play, a young Hercules in strength and stature; Arthur Dewey, who takes the part of General Washington in other scenes of "America," and Don Carney, also a successful actor on the legitimate stage, took the parts of Mohawk Indian chiefs.

Herbert Sutch, Griffith's assistant director, is in Williamsburg today seeking among the students there a face and figure that may be made the young Jefferson who was a student at William and Mary when the war with the mother country began. A number of pictures will be made in Williamsburg, showing Southern college life, which is to be included in Griffith's "America." These are the last pictures in this production to be made in Virginia.

Memphis (Tenn) News-Scimitar Nov. 18, 1923

New England To Open Treasures for Films

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary war relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next film production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the New England historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the Revolutionary war will be used in the action scenes in "America." It will be the first time these relics have been shown to the world through the medium of the motion picture.

Battle scenes will be photographed on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard 'round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night that the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Mr. Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Mr. Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites excepting where modern improvements make this impossible, but in every action scene some photographs of the actual site will be included.

John L. E. Pelkie making the historical arrangement of the story of Mr. Griffith's "America." Mr. Pell is the author of "Down To the Sea in Ships."

Grand Rapids (Mich) Herald Nov 18 1923

Research Bureau Needed by Movies; Histories Vague

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such flaw in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what Conestoga wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society declares there is no available information, though it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Nashville (Tenn) Tennessean Nov. 18, 1923

U. A. R. CHIEF VIEWS SCENES IN AMERICA

Griffith Arranging to Use Mount Vernon in His Film.

Mrs Anthony Wayne Cook president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to confer with D. W. Griffith, director of the film "America," relating to the use of Mount Vernon, Washington.

Understanding has been made by the Washington society of the Daughters of the American Revolution with the director that the grounds of Mount Vernon may be used in making the film historically authentic. While Mr. Griffith was in Boston with his company he met with the same active co-operation from all those who are interested in the presentment of American history on [illegible]

Fargo (N.D.) Tribune Nov. 18, 1923

Sea-Sick Horse Cause Of Delay in Filming Ride of Paul Revere

A seasick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and caused the work of D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of farmers and Boston citizens had gotten upon the horse that Paul Revere rode, and it chanced that it was one which contradicted most of the paintings. When the color was agreed upon, the horse, for some reason, was ordered from New York, and it arrived by boat after an alleged stormy passage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still possessed the illusion of being on a rocking vessel. Lexington report has it entered heartily into the making of this picture and all male descendants were conscripted by summons from the Lexington Historical Society to appear as their fathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact copies of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them armed with guns, heirlooms in their families. The same drum that William Diamond beat on the morning the British soldiers entered the village was [illegible] again to bring them into action for the film.

Richmond (Va) News Leader Nov 17 1923

D. W. Griffith is making "America" using many historic sites in Virginia. G. Watson James of Richmond, Va., national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to aid in making the film a masterpiece. Some of the oldest families in Virginia are giving aid and advice. The picture will be released in several weeks.

Scene from "America", David Wark Griffith's newest production, featuring Carol Dempster, Charles Mack and Erville Alderson.

Harris and Ewing

Nyc Telegraph Nov. 18. 1923

CAVALRY IN PICTURES.

Third Regulars Play Morgan's Raiders in "America."

A troop of the famous Third Cavalry, stationed at Fort Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders last week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming film, "America."

Major Wainwright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command at Fort Myer, assisted Mr. Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers was caught in one of the charges, but without casualties.

Harlem (Nyc) Home-News Nov. 18. 1923

The society women of Richmond, Va., who compose the Little Theater League, have been acting as extra people in some of the scenes for David W. Griffith's big production, "America." The director, with his staff and company, are traveling through Virginia, visiting the historic sites required for the scenes of this picture of Revolutionary times; and the members of both societies, the Sons, and the Daughters of the American Revolution are doing all in their power to aid in making the film historically authentic. While Mr. Griffith was in Boston with his company he met with the same active co-operation from all those who are interested in the presentment of American history on [illegible]

Charleston (W Va) Gazette Nov. 18, 1923

The famous Third, stationed at Fort Myer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders in scenes for D. W. Griffith's "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainwright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Fort Myer, assisted Mr. Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers was caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Boston (Mass) Herald Nov. 18. 1923

Memphis (Tenn) Commercial-Appeal Nov 18 1923

Manchester (Mass) Herald. Nov. 21. 1923.

WORKING ON REVOLUTIONARY FILM "AMERICA."

D. W. Griffith returned yesterday from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT said by government officials to be valued at two hundred million dollars. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood, was on government property.

Variety (Nyc.) Nov. 22, 1923

GRIFFITH PUTS REALISM INTO SOUTHERN SCENES

Shooting "America" on the Original Grounds and Historic Homes

Richmond, Nov. 21.

David Wark Griffith is using genuine Virginia exteriors in the filming of his new production tentatively titled "America."

For the past week he has been at Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered, a town which has changed but little since Colonial days. He got several scenes at Westover, former home of William Byrd, founder of Richmond, and at other historic estates.

At Yorktown he used the Nelson home, with cannon balls still lodging in the walls. The [illegible] used also were fired at the [illegible] by Washington's troops during the siege. Scenes taken around the first shot, when the colonists ventured to bombarding his headquarters, from their home used as headquarters by the British staff, [illegible] included a number of buildings the army in the production, including several scenes of the last battle and again the dramatic surrender of Lord Cornwallis.

Nyc Telegraph Nov. 2. 1923

Nyc Morning Telegraph Nov 22 1923

MR. GRIFFITH IS BACK AT STUDIO FROM VIRGINIA

Took Scenes for "America" in Several Historical Localities

D. W. Griffith returned yesterday from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT said by government officials to be valued at $200,000,000. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood was on government property.

Harlem Mite. Nyc City. Nov. 24. 1923

D. W. Griffith returned yesterday from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, America.

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT said by government officials to be valued at two hundred million dollars. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood, was on government property.

Morning Telegraph (Nyc) Nov. 25 1923

Griffith Meets the President

D. W. Griffith recently was presented to President Coolidge by Representative Tincher, the noted motion picture director and producer showed President Coolidge several scenes of his forthcoming film feature, "America," a picture of the Revolutionary War.

American officers of today, at rest in peace, these stamps depicted the battle scenes, they were used in Mr. Griffith's film.

New York Telegraph Nov. 25 1923

Jewish Tribune (Nyc) Nov. 23. 1923

Griffith and America

D. W. Griffith is not one that produces anything that [illegible] history of [illegible] purpose for his screen stories is [illegible] preservation of the United States [illegible] patriotic purposes.

With the exception of "The Covered Wagon" which is a historical romance rather than a political history, Mr. Griffith has been the principal Father of the Cinema since "The Birth of a Nation." Now he is engaged in doing a second chapter of a Nation." Now he is engaged in doing a second chapter of that production by the creation of a new historical drama to be called "America," and which will have to do with the birth of the nation, inasmuch as it covers the transformation of the Thirteen Colonies into a union of states through the crucible of the American Revolution.

There are millions of good and patriotic Americans, who have no opportunity to visit, even in fancy, the Monuments of our short struggle and compact union in months for our country they should be able this July of the old century and [illegible] to a close in all the wandering nations of Europe.

In creating work in the company of such authors of historic [illegible] of their foundations yet being there hard to [illegible] under it — as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, John Hancock, Benjamin Franklin, Patrick Henry, Alexander Hamilton, Robert Morris, Lloyd Paterson, and Anthony Wayne, [illegible] in order when and more exceptional [illegible] who [illegible] this country as a [illegible] for [illegible] and [illegible]

My Picture Play Magazine, Jan. 1924

WHAT'S A STUDIO LIKE, ANYWAY?

THAT'S the question that every fan asks, and of course, you can get as many different answers to it as the number of people of whom you ask it.

Here's the impression that Hap Hadley, the artist, carried away from his first bewildering visit to the D. W. Griffith studio at Mamaroneck, New York, where he went to make sketches of the shooting of scenes for the big Griffith production, "America," which is now being made.

After he got this impression down on paper—and thus out of his system—he was able to get to work and make drawings of some of the big things that Griffith is doing in the making of this big historical film. We hope to publish some of these in an early number.

The News-Leader, Richmond, (Va) 29

RICHMOND GIRLS AID IN TAKING OF SCREEN PLAY

Thirty at Westover Today Taking Part in David Wark Griffith's "America."

Westover, the Byrd mansion on the James, today is rubbing its eyes. Two centuries have fallen away. It is again pre-revolution days. A charming young woman in colonial dress smiles coquettishly at a bold, dashing colonial lover. Neighbors, dressed in the colorful clothing of the early eighteenth century, come to call. The talk is of tobacco and other produce of the soil.

But the talk is such simply because a Robert W. Chambers plot calls for it. The charming young woman, mistress of the mansion for a day, is the distinguished actress Carol Dempster and her lover is Charles Mack.

The neighbors are thirty young Richmond women, many of them members of the Little Theatre League. All are co-operating in the "shooting" of a D. W. Griffith picture, "America."

The Griffith stars left the Hotel Jefferson early this morning with their cameras and props for Westover. About 10 o'clock the supers, the young women of Richmond, in charge of Miss Eleanor Parrish, and in cistume, left in a motor bus for "location." They will be entertained at the Blue Teapot for lunch with members of the Griffith party, Miss Parrish said.

Members of the Griffith group remaining at the hotel explained that today's scenes will be romantic rather than historical. The Little Theatre League "supers" are contributing not to a historical incident but to a love story. All will return at 6 P. M.

Costumes were provided for the Richmond girls, and they will be filmed in a number of social scenes. Those chosen are Misses Eleanor Parrish, Martha Waller, Francis and Margaret Heindl, Agnes Moyler, Martha Mary Headley, Mildred Ragland, Thelma Hill, Nellie Meade, Alice Cole, Virginia Donnan, Elizabeth Gwathmey, Elizabeth Owens, Catherine Patterson, Elizabeth Knox, Julia Wickham, Ruby Bigger, Anna Cole and Judith Tompkins.

Those going from Richmond, include G. Watson James, who, as national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been in conference with Mr. Griffith in regard to a number of Revolutio[illegible] which will appear in the play. Location at this point will last through today and probably Monday.

Mr. Griffith is sparing no effort to make this play as true to historical facts as he succeeded in making "The Birth of a Nation," as "America" is to show the birth and freedom and the dawning of a western leader among nations. The cast for "America" includes, besides over thirty minor characters, such well-known film stars as Carrol Dempster, Niel Hamilton, Charles Mack and Earville Alderson.

Richmond (Va) News-Leader, Nov. 2. 1923

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" GREATEST HE HAS TRIED

Noted Motion Picture Director Here in Connection With Filming of Play.

"'America' is the greatest theme I have ever attempted," D. W. Griffith, noted motion picture director, who is in Richmond in connection with the production of his latest historical drama, told The News Leader today. The production is yet far from complete, but 250,000 feet of film already have been "shot," thirteen states have been visited and nearly 50,000 people have been employed.

Mr. Griffith arrived in Richmond at noon yesterday with six members of his cast, and other members reached the city last night.

"My latest production deals with the formative period in the country's history, the period leading up to the Revolutionary war, a time when the people of the whole world were discontented and restless just as they are today, when the rich lived in the utmost luxury and the poorer classes struggled to exist under the hardest kind of poverty. It pictures the events leading up to the formation of the constitution under which we now live and which meets the needs of the country today just as it met them at that time.

Majority Scenes in Virginia.

"In this production we filmed scenes from all the original states, but the majority of them will be taken in Virginia. We have for instance the old South church in Boston, and while we are here we will film scenes at Westover, the Shirley Carter place, and at Williamsburg. I am not sure that we will go to Yorktown, as I have not yet looked it over.

"What is the trend of the public taste in motion pictures?" he was asked.

"It has no trend in any particular direction. 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' is liked as well as when it was first staged. The public has certain tastes that are more or less permanent. If you happen to hit them with your production, you are all right, and if you fail to make a hit, you have lost."

Some idea of the vast amount of expense involved, the many months of painstaking labor and hard study, the miles and miles of film to be taken and retaken in the production of a motion picture may be gleaned from a few minutes' conversation with Mr. Griffith.

None of the cast of "The Birth of a Nation" take part in the production of "America." "They are stars now and as such are out of my reach," said Mr. Griffith with a smile.

"I have with me Miss Carroll Dempster, once a solo dancer with Ruth St. Denis. She also played in "The Love Flower" and "One Exciting Night." Playing with her is Charles Mack, who has been with me for many years and is really a splendid actor. He takes the part of the Macaroni of Revolutionary days, the dandy who wore lace on his cuffs and carried a little fur muff and was powdered and bewigged. Miss Dempster and Mr. Mack will represent the real old Virginia aristocracy."

"George Washington has not yet been cast. I have been looking for him for six months, but have not yet found just the type I want," said Mr. Griffith.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour, Nov 12, 1923

Dorothy Gish arrives in Italy.

Dorothy Gish arrived in Genoa last week and is engaged in selecting quarters for herself and her mother. As soon as she is settled in Florence, she will hasten to Inspiration's studio in the famous old Italian city, where she will create the role of "Tessa" in George Eliot's immortal novel, "Romola" under the direction of Henry King.

With Griffith and "America."

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White Houst staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

PHOTOPLAY EDITOR.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 8 1923

Griffith company in Washington.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes from D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Screen News, Nov 17 1923 Sacramento (Cal)

THIRD U. S. CAVALRY IN FILM SCENE "AMERICA"

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous 3d, stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Chattanooga (Tenn) News Nov 19 1923

WILL HAYS' PROPAGANDA

Secures Use of Army for Picture to Oppose Change.

Here is the latest development in the art of propaganda, says Labor: David Ward Grimth, noted screen director, [illegible] a lecture entitled "America."

The thought is that everything in this country is just right, and that anyone who suggests a change is "a dangerous radical."

Of course, Mr. Griffith has a perfect right to make such a picture if he desires to do so, but the point which will interest ordinary citizens, especially the workers, is that President Coolidge and Secretary of War Weeks have turned over the United States army to Mr. Griffith so that he may get the necessary "patriotic" effects.

This generosity on the part of President Coolidge and Secretary of War Weeks will save Mr. Griffith a very large sum of money, because the army will work for him for nothing, as Uncle Sam will pay all the bills.

The picture is to be put on the screen just before the presidential primaries, when big business will be urging the voters to support reactionary Republicans.

Will Hays, late chairman of the republican national committee, and now czar of the movies, is credited with having originated this happy idea.

Grimth called on President Coolidge at the White House the other day in the [illegible] Weeks ready on the spot [illegible] government target practice. After he left the president [illegible] this statement to the assembled newspaper reporters:

"There seems to be a tendency among many people in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to run them down, decline and decay and [illegible]."

Atlantic City (N J) Press, Nov 20, 1923

PHIL UNCK SAYS—

Paul Revere collected a lotta publicity, but think what the movie lights would bring him nowadays!

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY.

The movies have now given a decided new twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has turned into a private train of Pullmans. Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next picture—"America."

A train of five Pullmans specially outfitted, has been put under Griffith's command to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

Yesterday G. Watson James of Richmond, National Historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, joined the nomadic caravan.

All the historic sites along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter house, where the gypsy wandering will be kept up for the next week or ten days.

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram Nov. 26 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN MAKING FILM

The movies have given a modern twist to gypsying. The caravan of gay wagons has turned into a private train of Pullmans. Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Mr. Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

Yesterday G. Watson James of Richmond, National Historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, joined the nomadic caravan.

All the historic sites along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter house, where the gypsy wandering will be kept up for the next week or ten days.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Oct 25 1923

Descendants of "Minute Men" appearing in Griffith's new production.

A sore-sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the disadvantage of being on the deck of a tossing ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the main demonstrations of the Minute Men have been transported from their work in summer from the Lexington remaining actors to appear as their ancestors did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes their ancestors wore, many of them carried with pride some heirlooms in their possession.

The story from that William Dix, stated that as the morning the morning [illegible] the village was [illegible] with its peaceful [illegible] [illegible] the houses of the hamlet of the Revolution in the old North Church [illegible] the signal [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] America [illegible]

CHRONICLE CROSSUP

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov. 9 1923

The Boston Traveler says:

Washington, Oct. 31.—Congressman Treadway today presented to President Coolidge David W. Griffith, motion picture director and producer, who showed the President several scenes of his "America", a picture of the war for Independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary days, and will show the battles in which the American farmers and militia men struck the first telling blows for freedom.

American soldiers of today, attired as were those another soldiers, re-enacted the battle scenes. Many of the historic relics of those days were used.

Mid-Week Pictorial (N Y C) Nov 15 1923

One of the scenes in David Wark Griffith's new production, "America," now being filmed on Historic Virginia battlefields with the aid of Uncle Sam's troops. Left (dimed) is Miss Carol Dempster. Mack and Griffith, while at the right is Miss Carol Dempster.

Hamilton (Ohio) Journal 11/10/23

Lawrence Tribune Lawrence Nov 15 1923

Richmond (Va) Times-Dispatch Nov. 15 1923

Seattle (Wash) Post-Intel Nov. 17. 1923

Cleveland (Ohio) Press Nov 20 1923

D. A. R. HEAD TO HELP IN FILM

MRS. ANTHONY WAYNE COOK

We Are About to Be Pestiferous!

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he [illegible] mind, to have emphasized Mount Washington as the Father of his Country. At any rate, he has decided that it is time for him to take the hint of spring up in his bones and walk the floor with it. The baby, Griffith thinks, needs a part. So he's it.

There seems to be a tendency among many people," he says "in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to run them down, decline and decay and radical [illegible] ideas and ideas and [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible]

Wilmington (Del) Journal Nov 16 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN MAKING "AMERICA"

[illegible]

Denver (Colo) Post Nov. 17. 1923

U. S. Cavalry Unit Has Part in Griffith Film

[illegible]

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer Nov 17. 1923

Crack Army Troop Used For Movies

[illegible]

Mansfield (Ohio) News Nov 16 1923

Mansfield Boys Enroll by Carloads Jumping for Film

[illegible]

Jamestown (New York) Union Nov 20 1923

Wilmington (Del) Journal Nov 21 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN MAKING FILM

[illegible]

Boston Post Traveler Nov 25 1923

26

Lowell (Mass) Sun Nov 16.1923

Jersey Review (N.J.) Nov. 17.1923

Waterbury (Conn) Democrat 11/17/23

Memphis (Tenn) Commercial-Appeal Nov 18 1923

...ture Play

...ation Department of D. ... announces that a sea- ...postponed the ride of Paul ... Boston to Lexington. ...n is filming scenes for his ...film, "America." It took ...e to ... color of the ... Revere rode, and it chanc- ... one which contradicts ...he paintings. When the ...agreed upon, the horse, for ...on, was ordered from New, ... it arrived by boat after an ...ormy passage. The streets ...d with spectators to watch ...duction of the historic ride. ... the horse appeared, it still ...he illusion of being on a ...sel. Lexington report has ...t heartily into the making ...ture and all male descend- ... conscripted by summons ...exington Historical Society ...as their fathers did in the ...exington Common. They ... in exact copies of the ...their ancestors wore, many ...rmed with guns, heirlooms ...uffles. The same drum that ...Diamond beat on the morn- ...ritish soldiers entered the ... again to bring ...ction for the film.

...en (Conn) ...d Nov. 16.1923

...GETTING READY ...PRODUCE "BEN HUR"

David Wark Griffith is ...on the task for which he ...ed many years. Ever since ...of "The Birth of a Nation," ...tor has longed to film a ...he more colorful episodes ...e Revolution of 1776. Now, ...ng the hills of Putnam ...N. Y., he is leading several ... players, "extras" and ...through scenes of skirm- ...nd foraging such as actu- ... place a century and a ... "America" will be the ... the photoplay, and as ... point for the romantic ... which Mr. Griffith will ...nto his reconstructed his- ... has purchased the rights ...rt W. Chamber's early ..."The Reckoning." Only one ...r from the novel is said ...to the contemplated picture, ... and Mr. Chambers, An- ...elly and Mr. Pell, author ...s to the Sea in Ships," are ... the work of revising and ...ng the material. The Bos- ...Party will supply an early ... in the plot, and Mr. Grif- ... presumably come to Mass- ...s for a portion of the film- ...ank McGlynn will play the ... Washington. The venture ... to have the support of the ...ers of the American Revo- ...but whether Mr. Hirsch- ...n, has been consulted does ...pear.

...months of discussion ... over the pr...

...en News (Nye.) ...r 17 1923

...U. S. CAVALRY IN FILM SCENE "AMERICA"

...rack cavalry company of the ...he famous 3d, stationed at Ft. ...Virginia, played the part of Mor- ...aiders this week in scenes for D. ...ffith's next film "America." This ...rst time a cavalry unit has taken ...e film.

...Wainright, aide to Secretary of ...eks, lead the troop in the cos- ...nd character of the celebrated ... Colonel Hawkins, in command ...rror, assisted Griffith in directing ...euvers. The White House staff ...ographers were caught in one of ...ran, without serious injuries.

...ral (Conn) Hour ...r 17 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY DE LUXE ON PULLMANS

"F. F. V.'s" of Richmond His Guide on Locations for Film America

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theatre League are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

D. W. Griffith is making "America" using many historic sites in Virginia. G. Watson James of Richmond, Va., national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to aid in making the film a masterpiece. Some of the oldest families in Virginia are giving aid and advice. The picture will be released in several weeks.

Richmond (Va) News-Leader Nov 17 1923

Enact Revolutionary War Scene In Filming Griffith's 'America'

"You men on the hill there, die! You farther down use your own judgment. All ready, boys!" Next the crash of discharged rifles, clouds of smoke, frantic horses running madly among fallen bodies. Red coats flashing among the shrubs and timber. Naked Indians falling with tomahawks on their victims.

All the time the camera on its high scaffold grinds steadily.

In such manner the D. W. Griffith Company on location at Raven's Wood, the old Higginbotham place near Richmond, yesterday re-enacted the Revolutionary war scene in which General Butler's Tory "Greens" aided by the Indians, supposedly in the Mohawk Valley, New York, attacked a convoy of supplies on its way to General Washington's army. A number of the Richmond Howitzers took the part of the continental army troops aiding in the Tory raid.

The wooded hill with its narrow road along which the wagons and pack horses moved to be suddenly attacked by the hidden Tories and Indians, the green uniforms of Butler's troops, the red coats of the British, the weirdly painted Indians and the drab, tattered costumes of the Colonials made altogether a colorful picture. And those who watched were as varied. Little darkies looked on wonderingly, ready to run, but too fascinated by the sight of wild Indians and falling soldiers; while school children found their Revolutionary history suddenly come to life.

Though yesterday's work was long shots, in which individual actors are not starred, there were a number of prominent players taking part. Jim Milesly and Will Willis, of long experience on the legitimate stage, took prominent parts as colonials. Frank McGlynn, Jr., the son of Frank McGlynn, who took the role of Abraham Lincoln in Drinkwater's play, a young Hercules in strength and stature; Arthur Dewey, who takes the part of General Washington in other scenes of "America," and Don Carney, also a successful actor on the legitimate stage, took the parts of Mohawk Indian chiefs.

Herbert Sutch, Griffith's assistant director, is in Williamsburg today seeking among the students there a face and figure that may be made the young Jefferson who was a student at William and Mary when the war with the mother country began. A number of pictures will be made in Williamsburg, showing Southern college life, which is to be included in Griffith's "America." These are the last pictures in this production to be made in Virginia.

Scene from "America", David Wark Griffith's newest production, featuring Carol Dempster, Charles Mack and Erville Alderson.

Harris and Ewing

Cincinnati (Ohio) Billboard 11/17/23

D. W. MEETS COOLIDGE

Washington, Nov. 10.—D. W. Griffith, famous motion picture director, was presented to President Coolidge last week at the White House. Griffith showed the President scenes from the great production "America", upon which he is now at work. Griffith was in Washington with a large company taking scenes for the picture.

Portland (Me) Press-Herald 11/17/23

Memphis (Tenn) News-Scimitar Nov. 18.1923

Grand Rapids (Mich) Herald Nov 18 1923

New England To Open Treasures for Films

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary war relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites for his next film production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the New England historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the Revolutionary war will be used in the action scenes in "America." It will be the first time these relics have been shown to the world through the medium of the motion picture.

Battle scenes will be photographed on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard 'round the world" was fired, Buckman's tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night that the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Mr. Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Mr. Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites excepting where modern improvements make this impossible, but in every action scene some photographs of the actual site will be included.

John L. S. Pelbie making the historical arrangement of the story of Mr. Griffith's "America." Mr. Pell is the author of "Down To the Sea in Ships" ...

Research Bureau Needed by Movies; Histories Vague

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such flaw in historical records, the motion picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what kind of wagons were used with the northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical society declares there is no available ... though it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Nashville (Tenn) Tennessean Nov. 18, 1923

D. A. R. CHIEF VIEWS SCENES IN AMERICA

Griffith Arranging to Use Mount Vernon in His Film.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Hollywood, Calif., where she is to be the guest of Mr. D. W. Griffith, producer of the film "America" relating to the days of George Washington.

Progressive Hollywood made the most of the occasion, the guests being entertained at a dinner given by Mr. Griffith, at which the director was toastmaster. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chaplin, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Meighan, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. DeMille, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Lasky, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zukor, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Olcott, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pickford, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Milestone, Mr. and Mrs. Mack Sennett, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Bosworth, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Beery, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Turpin, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ray, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barthelmess, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mulhall, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Niblo, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Conway, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Hoot Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mix, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hur Lampman, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Ingraham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borzage

My Picture Play Magazine Jan. 1924

WHAT'S A STUDIO LIKE, ANYWAY?

THAT'S the question that every fan asks, and of course, you can get as many different answers to it as the number of people of whom you ask it.

Here's the impression that Hap Hadley, the artist, carried away from his first bewildering visit to the D. W. Griffith studio at Mamaroneck, New York, where he went to make sketches of the shooting of scenes for the big Griffith production, "America," which is now being made.

After he got this impression down on paper—and thus out of his system—he was able to get to work and make drawings of some of the big things that Griffith is doing in the making of this big historical film. We hope to publish some of these in an early number.

The Norwalk (Conn) Hour Oct 25 1923

Descendents of "Minute Men" appearing in Griffith's new production.

A sick horse postponed the ride of Paul Revere from Boston to Lexington and Concord last week, while D. W. Griffith was there taking scenes for his historical film "America."

A committee of Lexington and Boston historians had agreed upon the color of the horse Revere rode, one that contradicts most of the paintings. When the color was decided, the horse was ordered from New York and arrived by boat through a stormy voyage. The streets were filled with spectators to watch the reproduction of the historic ride, but when the horse appeared, it still had the bloated of being on the deck of a coastwise ship.

Lexington has entered so heartily into the making of the picture that all the main demonstrate at the Minute Men have been rehearsed from their work to summons from the Lexington Historical society to appear as their forefathers did in the fight on Lexington Common. They were dressed in exact replicas of the costumes that ancestors wore, many of them aged with guns that were heirlooms in their families.

The man drum that William Dawes had that on the morning the British attacked the village was beaten with so powerful them into action.

When the house of the Reverend Jonas Clark, the patriot preacher in the old North Church town, was reached only guests and relatives were invited and guests are enjoying dancing, singing, etc. The [illegible] has passed a pleasant [illegible]

PHILOSOPHER CITIZEN

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 9 1923

The Boston Traveler says:

Washington, Oct. 31.—Congressman Treadway today presented to President Coolidge David W. Griffith, motion picture director and producer, who showed the President several scenes of his "America", a picture of the era for Independence which will reproduce Lexington and Bunker Hill as they were in the Revolutionary days, and will show the battles in which the American farmers and militia men struck the first telling blows for freedom.

American soldiers of today, attired as were those another soldiers, re-enacted the battle scenes. Many of the historic relics of those days were used.

Two of the scenes in David Wark Griffith's new production, "America," now being taken in historic Virginia battlefields with the aid of Long Island men, are shown above. At the left is Miss Carroll Dempster, and at the right is Miss Clive Brooks.

Hamilton (Ohio) Journal 11/10/23

Richmond (Va) Times-Dispatch Nov. 15 1923

Indianapolis (Ind) Dispatch Nov 11 1923

Journal Tribune Sunday Nov 18 1923

Seattle (Wash) Post-Intel Nov. 17. 1923

Cleveland (Ohio) Press Nov 20 1923

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram Nov. 21. 1923

Wilmington (Del) Sunday Star Nov 11 1923

Denver (Colo) Post Nov. 17. 1923

Denver (Colo) Post Nov 18 1923

Boston Herald Traveler Nov 18 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour, Nov. 12, 1923

Dorothy Gish arrives in Italy.

Dorothy Gish arrived in Genoa last week and is engaged in selecting quarters for herself and her mother. As soon as she is settled in Florence, she will hasten to Inspiration's studio in the famous old Italian city, where she will create the role of "Tessa" in George Eliot's immortal novel, "Romola" under the direction of Henry King.

With Griffith and "America."

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White Houst staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

PHOTOPLAY EDITOR.

RICHMOND GIRLS AID IN TAKING OF SCREEN PLAY

Thirty at Westover Today Taking Part in David Wark Griffith's "America."

Westover, the Byrd mansion on the James, today is rubbing its eyes. Two centuries have fallen away. It is again pre-revolution days. A charming young woman in colonial dress smiles coquettishly at a bold, dashing colonial lover. Neighbors, dressed in the colorful clothing of the early eighteenth century, come to call. The talk is of tobacco and other produce of the soil.

But the talk is such simply because a Robert W. Chambers plot calls for it. The charming young woman, mistress of the mansion for a day, is the distinguished actress Carol Dempster and her lover is Charles Mack.

The neighbors are thirty young Richmond women, many of them members of the Little Theatre League. All are co-operating in the "shooting" of a D. W. Griffith picture, "America."

The Griffith stars left the Hotel Jefferson early this morning with their cameras and props for Westover. About 10 o'clock the supers, the young women of Richmond, in charge of Miss Eleanor Parrish, and in costume, left in a motor bus for "location." They will be entertained at the Blue Teapot for lunch with members of the Griffith party, Miss Parrish said.

Members of the Griffith group remaining at the hotel explained that today's scenes will be romantic rather than historical. The Little Theatre League "supers" are contributing not to a historical incident but to a love story. All will return at 6 P. M.

Costumes were provided for the Richmond girls, and they will be filmed in a number of social scenes. Those chosen are Misses Eleanor Parrish, Martha Waller, Francis and Margaret Heindl, Agnes Moyler, Martha Mary Hoadley, Mildred Ragland, Thelma Hill, Nellie Meade, Alice Cole, Virginia Donnan, Elizabeth Gwathmey, Elizabeth Owens, Catherine Patterson, Elizabeth Knox, Julia Wickham, Ruby Bigger, Anna Cole and Judith Tompkins.

Those going from Richmond, include G. Watson James, who, as national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been in conference with Mr. Griffith in regard to a number of Revolutio[illegible] topics which will appear in the play. Location at this point will last through today and probably Monday.

Mr. Griffith is sparing no effort to make this play as true to historical facts as he succeeded in making "The Birth of a Nation," as "America" is to show the birth and freedom and the dawning of a western leader among nations. The cast for "America" includes, besides over thirty minor characters, such well-known film stars as Carrol Dempster, Niel Hamilton, Charles Mack and Earville Alderson.

Richmond (Va) News-Leader Nov. 2. 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 8 1923

Griffith company in Washington.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes from D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

Observers for the D. A. R. have been present at most of the important scenes in the taking of the picture, including the battle of Lexington and the battle of Bunker Hill.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Screen News Nov 17 1923

Sacramento (Cal)

THIRD U. S. CAVALRY IN FILM SCENE "AMERICA"

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous 3d, stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Times-Star Nov 17 1923

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" GREATEST HE HAS TRIED

Noted Motion Picture Director Here in Connection With Filming of Play.

"'America' is the greatest theme I have ever attempted," D. W. Griffith, noted motion picture director, who is in Richmond in connection with the production of his latest historical drama, told The News Leader today. The production is yet far from complete, but 250,000 feet of film already have been "shot," thirteen states have been visited and nearly 50,000 people have been employed.

Mr. Griffith arrived in Richmond at noon yesterday with six members of his cast, and other members reached the city last night.

"My latest production deals with the formative period in the country's history, the period leading up to the Revolutionary war, a time when the people of the whole world were discontented and restless just as they are today, when the rich lived in the utmost luxury and the poorer classes struggled to exist under the hardest kind of poverty. It pictures the events leading up to the formation of the constitution under which we now live and which meets the needs of the country today just as it met them at that time.

Majority Scenes in Virginia.

"In this production we filmed scenes from all the original states, but the majority of them will be taken in Virginia. We have for instance the old South church in Boston, and while we are here we will film scenes at Westover, the Shirley Carter place, and at Williamsburg. I am not sure that we will go to Yorktown, as I have not yet looked it over.

"What is the trend of the public taste in motion pictures?" he was asked.

"It has no trend in any particular direction. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is liked as well as when it was first staged. The public has certain tastes that are more or less permanent. If you happen to hit them with your production, you are all right, and if you fail to make a hit, you have lost."

Some idea of the vast amount of expense involved, the many months of painstaking labor and hard study, the miles and miles of film to be taken and retaken in the production of a motion picture may be gleaned from a few minutes' conversation with Mr. Griffith.

None of the cast of "The Birth of a Nation" take part in the production of "America." "They are stars now and as such are out of my reach," said Mr. Griffith with a smile.

"I have with me Miss Carroll Dempster, once a solo dancer with Ruth St. Denis. She also played in "The Love Flower" and "One Exciting Night." Playing with her is Charles Mack, who has been with me for many years and is really a splendid actor. He takes the part of the Macaroni of Revolutionary days, the dandy who wore lace on his cuffs and carried a little fur muff and was powdered and bewigged. Miss Dempster and Mr. Mack will represent the real old Virginia aristocracy."

"George Washington has not yet been cast. I have been looking for him for six months, but have not yet found just the type I want," said Mr. Griffith.

Chattanooga (Tenn) News Nov 19 1923

Atlantic City (NJ) Press, Nov. 20, 1923

WILL HAYS' PROPAGANDA

Secures Use of Army for Picture to Oppose Change.

Here is the latest development in the art of propaganda, says Labor:

David Ward Griffith, noted screen director, [illegible] a picture entitled "America."

The thought is that everything in this country is just right, and that anyone who suggests a change is "a dangerous radical."

Of course, Mr. Griffith has a perfect right to make such a picture if he desires to do so, but the point which will interest ordinary citizens, especially the workers, is that President Coolidge and Secretary of War Weeks have turned over the United States army to Mr. Griffith so that he may get the necessary "patriotic" effects.

This generosity on the part of President Coolidge and Secretary of War Weeks will save Mr. Griffith a very large sum of money, because the army will work for him for nothing, as Uncle Sam will pay all the bills.

The picture is to be put on the screen just before the presidential primaries, when big business will be urging the voters to support reactionary candidates.

Will Hays, his chairman of the republican national committee, and [illegible] "czar of the movies," is credited with having originated the happy Mr. Griffith-Uncle Sam combination.

Church [illegible] on Sunday [illegible] at the White House rehearsal [illegible] film of the progress made in the [illegible] years and to show how the celebration [illegible] Harding's government despite [illegible] Democrats [illegible] to the contrary notwithstanding.

There seems to be a tendency among many people in various sections of the country for a change, and the [illegible] Hays, Coolidge and Wall Street [illegible] to be [illegible] to make the people believe that they are [illegible] that they have been [illegible]

President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very anxious to [illegible] the government [illegible] tanks, guns and other war equipment as well as [illegible] and buildings and other government property, which will [illegible] in the forthcoming Griffith-Hays-Coolidge-Wall Street [illegible] and other patriotic [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Great Bridgewater (Mass) Gaz. Berkshire (Mass) Mail - Dispatch. Nov. 18-1923 28

OLD VILLAGE OF YORKTOWN GOES INTO THE MOVIES

Natives Become Actors for Big Griffith Film

By Frank H. West.

ALL that was lacking was the original cast when D. W. Griffith and his company of moving picture men and women re-enacted the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown last week.

It was the biggest thrill that has come to the village, lo, these many years. It was all of a sudden like. Griffith came and went like a cyclone, taking the population by surprise and leaving them many happy memories to talk over at the fireside for many winters to come.

Somehow or other word got around that the greatest moving picture man in the world would visit Yorktown to take some pictures.

"What for?" said the population. "We haven't even got a movie theater. What should he want to come to Yorktown for?"

Losing sight of the fact that Yorktown is America's most cherished cradle of liberty, the population forgot all about Cornwallis, about the first custom house ever built in the United States, about the scores of scenes that have not been marred by the obnoxious progress of human events—that is, from the movie man's point of view.

Why, man alive, there are places in Yorktown that look today just as they did when George Washington marched triumphantly into the village with his victorious army, a ragged and frayed little army that it was.

Famous Old Corner.

There is that famous corner where the custom house stands, an aged brick wall on one side of the road and a long vista through low-branched trees to kindly houses with hospitable roofs. There isn't a telegraph pole or wire, a gasoline station or a garage to mar the view. The only discordant note is a small stretch of concrete road—a pictorial defect easily corrected.

No wonder Griffith enjoyed Yorktown.

He came in the night. A special train furnished by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway brought the crew from Richmond after scenes had been "shot" at Westover and Shirley-on-the-James. The train was parked at the Navy Mine Depot, near Yorktown, and was used as headquarters for the movie family. Griffith is filming America's starting at the time it was discovered by Columbus down to the present. Within a few thousand feet of film he will attempt to portray the high spots of American history that have taken more than 400 years in the making. The highest spot in the drama is the Revolutionary period, and therefore Yorktown will come in for a big place in this ten-reeler.

There were about sixty people in Griffith's company, but this was not enough for the scenes. The call for extras went out.

"We want men, women and children," the assistant director, Herbert Sutch, said, "white and black."

Many Applied for Jobs.

While Mr. Griffith was out looking over locations on Sunday the cast director was scouting for material. The word went through the peninsula that D. W. Griffith was in Yorktown and wanted people to work in the movies. As a result on that frosty and cloudy Monday morning there were more than 300 applicants for jobs. They weren't in it for the money—they wanted the experience.

The director took them at all ages. There was the little Elrington baby, a bit of about two years and as many feet tall, and she was one of the star hits of the show, dressed in a long dress with a succession of bottle and much goodfeed this little tot was requisite.

Pretty soon Yorktown began to look alive. The concrete roadway was covered with carts as in olden days, but this touch of modernity. The campers were so massed as not to include telegraph poles or wires, were then transformed into the picture. Barrels added with powdered lime and gunpowder to add smoke, and bells were brought and instruments have marked the present days, the important villagers were given parts of various people, including Lord Cornwallis and George Washington.

A Human Process.

From this point the city grew more interesting the people became more human. Everything seemed to belong there. When a flivver passed into the scene it was the flivver that looked out of place, not the Colonial setting.

When the company was assembled in front of the hotel the camera men appeared and Griffith took his place in a chair beneath the cameras. He works with a smoothness and comprehensiveness that beggars description. Every one immediately seemed at home in the picture, so thoroughly had he adapted the crowd's mental attitude. He did wonders with the little boy and girl actors. They came and went as he directed and showed no embarrassment at being actors.

"Gee, this is great," one of the kids said, "gettin' paid for playin'."

The first scene was taken near the hotel with the wide expanse of river as a background. Neil Hamilton, the "star," as a Continental soldier, rides into the picture. He is met by a group of Colonial gentlemen on horseback and appears in a great hurry to get somewhere.

Colonial dames and ladies are walking under leafy branches. A very small class, apparently, but it was re-staged a dozen times before it suited the director.

Pony-around and Broadway.

The scene was next changed to the custom house corner, the "Pony-around and Broadway" of Yorktown.

As we cast drove to an old coach came into view. Then there was quite a hurry calling a boatload of tobacco to the custom house. The boatload is in any sugar-coated pole being driven through the streets, with barrels placed upon the wagon, and the most valuable crop of the most valuable land.

At the sound of the old fife and drum the people in the village came out in a group to watch the proceedings. Soldiers in uniform dashed back and forth. The village seemed very much elated both in real life and in reel life.

Griffith in Action.

Time and again this scene is repeated. Griffith walks back and forth making little changes here and there. His mind possesses a quality of alertly that is surprising. The slightest infraction of the fine-looking horses, rides into view. There is an interchange of courtesies, and for a moment or two Washington pauses while the fiddlers play a tune.

As the cameras grind out foot after foot of film the action goes on. Following Washington's arrival there comes the two great family coaches of the Montagues, which carries the romantic part of the story. Soldiers in uniform dash back and forth. The village seems very much elated both in real life and in reel life.

Griffith in Action.

Time and again this scene is repeated. Griffith walks back and forth making little changes here and there. His mind possesses a quality of alertly that is surprising. The slightest infraction of the scene is quickly detected. A bit of newspaper blows across the scene and the camera action is stopped while it is cleared away. No one is allowed to smoke where the smoke will blow into the picture unless the actor is supposed to be smoking.

During his directing he keeps up a flow of conversation in a low tone, never shouting, frequently squinting through a monochrome filter that gives the correct color values to the picture.

Occasionally he goes through a bit of business to show the actors how it is to be done. The actors know nothing of the story they are enacting. They do not know what comes next, but do as they are told. The master mind knows the story, knows how the scenes are to be enacted and knows how they link up with the other parts of the picture. That is all that seems necessary.

Nelson Home Shown.

From this scene the cameras are moved a block up the street to take in the Nelson Home, occupied by the Rieves, and the home of Mrs. Shield, the oldest house in Yorktown and one of the most attractive and much visited homes in Virginia. Mrs. Shield has a guest book that contains the names of many prominent people and she has been responsible for maintaining much of the historic atmosphere of Yorktown through her society organized for this purpose.

Mrs. Shield, dressed as a Colonial Dame, consented to appear in one of the pictures and is shown seated with "George Washington" (Peter Dewey) on the wall of the Nelson garden. Another picture shows Mrs. Shield on the steps of her home with Neil Hamilton, the star of the company.

Among others who appear in the picture from among the Yorktown population are:

Mrs. Howard Ferris (on horseback), Mrs. M. C. Eblen, Mrs. S. W. Hickey, Miss Fannie Sue Cornick, Miss Dorothy Forman, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Edrington, Jennie Edrington, G. B. White and Luther Beer, violinists; Mr. and Mrs. George Hammontree, Mrs. Sydney Smith, Miss Virginia Smith, Miss Violet Forman, Miss Dora Crockett, Miss Gladys Hammontree, Mrs. Douglas Hubbard, Mrs. Munson Cook, Miss Mary Rice, Julius Cornick, Mrs. L. Foxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Hayden, C. P. Rockwell, Joe Schmidt, R. A. Blow, Mrs. George Walter Toms, of Richmond; Garnett Chalkley, Lester Ferrara, Lionel Richardson, Ben Hayden, Frank Edrington, Theo Wainwright, Tommy Edrington, Elizabeth Hayden and Stafford Cook.

D. W. GRIFFITH IN ACTION DIRECTING "AMERICA" AT YORKTOWN

YORKTOWN MEMBERS OF CAST WITH GEORGE WASHINGTON ON THE WALL

VILLAGERS CELEBRATING SURRENDER OF CORNWALLIS AT YORKTOWN

MR. GRIFFITH CONSIDERED THIS OX CART A VALUABLE FIND

VILLAGERS IN FRONT OF OLD INN

MRS. SHIELDS OF YORKTOWN AND NEIL HAMILTON, STAR OF "AMERICA" ON STEPS OF OLDEST HOUSE IN YORKTOWN

VILLAGERS WAITING THE ARRIVAL OF WASHINGTON

GROUP OF YORKTOWN PEOPLE IN CAST OF "AMERICA"

ARRIVAL OF THE MONTAGUE COACH AT YORKTOWN AFTER SURRENDER OF CORNWALLIS

Historic Scenes Are Reenacted Before Camera

Variety (N.Y.) Nov 22 1923

GRIFFITH PUTS REALISM INTO SOUTHERN SCENES

Shooting "America" on the Original Grounds and Historic Homes

Richmond, Nov. 21.

David Wark Griffith is using genuine Virginia exteriors in the filming of his new production tentatively titled "America."

For the past week he has been at Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered, a town which has changed but little since Colonial days. He got several scenes at Westover, former home of William Byrd, founder of Richmond, and at other historic estates.

At Yorktown he used the Nelson home, with cannon balls still sticking in the walls. The big, round shot were fired at the house by Washington's troops during the siege. Governor Nelson himself fired the first shot, when the soldiers hesitated at bombarding his beautiful home, then being used as headquarters by the British staff.

Griffith selected a number of local types for parts in the production, including several scions of the best families, who retain the physical characteristics of their famous ancestors.

Portland (Me) Press-Herald Nov 23 1923

Newark (N J) Star-Eagle 11/23/23

Portland (Oregon) Times 11/22/23

Cornwall (Conn) Hour Nov 22 1923

HISTORICAL SPOTS FILMED IN "AMERICA"

D. W. GRIFFITH has returned from Virginia to the Mamaroneck studios after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scene.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a chain of forts built by government officials to be valued at one hundred million dollars. This is the area into the first fortification and the working where the train stood, was in government employ.

Newburgh (Pa) Bee Nov 20 1923

Syracuse (N.Y.) Telegram Nov 20 1923

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post November 20 1923

Portland (Ore) Telegram Nov 23 1923

MR. GRIFFITH IS BACK AT STUDIO FROM VIRGINIA

Took Scenes for "America" in Several Historical Localities

D. W. Griffith on Historic Battle-Field

Portland (Ore) Nov 24 1923

WE ARE ABOUT TO BE PACIFIED!

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he feels, in his own mind, he has supplanted George Washington as the Father of his Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the baby offspring up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, Griffith thinks, needs a pacifier and he's it.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people," he says, "in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to wave them against this and stamp out radicalism. We hope to improve upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

"President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in permitting us to use government reservations, tanks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which will enable us to produce historic scenes and other interesting incidents much more effectively and accurately than we could otherwise."

We Are About to Be Pacified

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he feels, in his own mind, he has supplanted George Washington as the Father of his Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the baby offspring up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, Griffith thinks, needs a pacifier and he's it.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people," he says, "in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to wave them against this and stamp out radicalism. We hope to improve upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

"President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in permitting us to use government reservations, tanks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which will enable us to produce historic scenes and other interesting incidents much more effectively and accurately than we could otherwise."

So We Are About To Be Pacified!

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he feels, in his own mind, he has supplanted George Washington as the Father of his Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the baby offspring up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, Griffith thinks, needs a pacifier and he's it.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people," he says, "in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to wave them against this and stamp out radicalism. We hope to improve upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

"President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in permitting us to use government reservations, tanks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which will enable us to produce historic scenes and other interesting incidents much more effectively and accurately than we could otherwise."

Boston (Mass) 29

United States Cavalry of Fort Meyer, Virginia, Helping to Make the New Film "America." (Copyright International)

Chicago (Ill) Industrial Bulletin 11/24/23

Denver (Colo) Rocky Mt News Nov 18 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner Nov 18 1923

MOVIE STEEPED IN POISON

By LAWRENCE SUDD

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON.—David Wor

Crack Cavalry Company Takes Part in Filming

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Va., played the part of Morgan's Raiders in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the color-bearing Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, of cavalry at Fort Myer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers.

The White House staff of photographers was caught in one of the charges, without serious injury.

Ollie Seconds the Motion

Moroseo writes to T. T. from New York saying that he will quit producing until he can develop actors who will work for what he calls equitable salaries.

He mentions several interesting cases of the before and after success scale.

He says he took Lew Stone to New York at $100 a week and now he is receiving $1000 a week in pictures; Walter Catlett, he says, began here at $75 a week and now gets $1500; Charlotte Greenwood, he says, first got $100 a week for herself and Ring Lardner and he has gotten up to $1000 a week; Charlie Ruggles, he says, had his salary jumped from $100 a week to $1000 a week; Wallace Beery, he says, was paid $150 and now commands $1000 a week; Edgar Kennedy, he says, started here in Hollywood at $100 and now is in the top of the list of comedy actors, and probably earning the most of any actor.

Denver (Colo) Post Nov 18 1923

Mid-Week Pictorial, November 29, 1923

Philadelphia (Pa) Record Nov 25 1923

Hartford (Conn) Times Nov 23 1923

Denver (Colo) Post Nov 17 1923

Detroit Free Press Nov 25 1923

Pittsburgh (Pa) Sun Nov 25 1923

Pittsburgh (Pa) Post Nov 25 1923

Des Moines (Iowa) News Nov 21 1923

Des Moines (Iowa) Capital Nov 19 1923

Kansas City (Mo) Star Nov 25 1923

Kansas City (Mo) Times Nov 25

Richmond (Mass) Gaz Reviews (Nov 23 1923) Wed - Dispatch. Nov. 18-1923 28

OLD VILLAGE OF YORKTOWN GOES INTO THE MOVIES

Natives Become Actors for Big Griffith Film

By Frank H. West.

ALL that was lacking was the original cast when D. W. Griffith and his company of moving picture men and women re-enacted the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown last week.

It was the biggest thrill that has come to the village, lo, these many years. It was all of a sudden like. Griffith came and went like a cyclone, taking the population by surprise and leaving them many happy memories to talk over at the fireplaces for many winters to come.

Somehow or other word got around that the greatest moving picture man in the world would visit Yorktown to take some pictures.

"What for?" said the population. "We haven't even got a movie theater. What should he want to come to Yorktown for?"

Losing sight of the fact that Yorktown is America's most cherished cradle of liberty, the populace forgot all about Cornwallis, about the first custom house ever built in the United States, about a scores of scenes that have not been marred by the obnoxious progress of human events—that is, from the movie man's point of view.

Why, man alive, there are places in Yorktown that look today just as they did when George Washington marched triumphantly into the village with his victorious army, a ragged and frayed little army that it was.

Famous Old Corner.

There is that famous corner where the custom house stands, an red brick wall on one side of the yard and a long vista through low-branched trees to kindly houses with hospitable roofs. There isn't a telegraph pole or wire, a gasoline station or a garage to mar the view. The only discordant note is a small stretch of concrete road—a victorial defect easily corrected. No wonder Griffith enjoyed Yorktown.

He came in the night. A special train furnished by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway brought the crew from Richmond after scenes had been "shot" at Westover and Berkley-on-the-James. The train was parked at the Navy Mine Depot near Yorktown, and was used as headquarters for the movie family. Griffith is filming America's start-

YORKTOWN MEMBERS OF CAST WITH GEORGE WASHINGTON ON THE WALL

MR. GRIFFITH CONSIDERED THIS OX CART A VALUABLE FIND

VILLAGERS IN FRONT OF OLD INN

D. W. GRIFFITH IN ACTION DIRECTING "AMERICA" AT YORKTOWN

MRS. SHIELDS OF YORKTOWN AND NEIL HAMILTON, STAR OF "AMERICA" ON STEPS OF OLDEST HOUSE IN YORKTOWN

VILLAGERS AWAITING THE ARRIVAL OF WASHINGTON

VILLAGERS CELEBRATING SURRENDER OF CORNWALLIS AT YORKTOWN

GROUP OF YORKTOWN PEOPLE IN CAST OF "AMERICA"

ARRIVAL OF THE MONTAGUE COACH AT YORKTOWN AFTER SURRENDER OF CORNWALLIS

ing at the time it was discovered by Columbus down to the present. Within a few thousand feet of film he will attempt to portray the high spots of American history that have taken more than 400 years in the making. The highest spot in the drama is the Revolutionary period, and therefore Yorktown will come in for a big place in this ten-reeler.

There were about sixty people in Griffith's company, but this was not enough for the scenes. The call for extras went out.

"We want men, women and children," the assistant director, Herbert Sutch, said, "white and black."

Many Applied for Jobs.

While Mr. Griffith was out looking over locations on Sunday the cast director was scouting for material. The word went through the peninsula that D. W. Griffith was in Yorktown and wanted people to work in the movies. As a result on that frosty and cloudy Monday morning there were more than 300 applicants for jobs. They weren't in it for the money—they wanted the experience.

The director took them at all ages. There was the little Edrington baby—a tot of about two years and as many feet tall and still was one of the star bits of the show. Dressed in a long dress with a suggestion of bustle and much stuffiest this little tot was exquisite.

Pretty soon Yorktown began to look alive. The concrete roadway was covered with carts so as to give not the touch of modernity. The campers were so matched as not to include telegraph poles or wires where they interfered with the pictures. Shortly after this produced hair and gentlemen in wig, breeches and hose were seen walking the streets. There were the new imperial citizens who were part of various scenes. Soon Yorktown and more than

A Glorious Morning.

Even under the cloudy skies of Monday morning Yorktown looked picturesque. The most important scenes were made in the most important of Yorktown.

Everything seemed to belong there. When a flivver passed into the scene it was the flivver that looked out of place, not the Colonial setting.

When the company was assembled in front of the hotel the camera men appeared and Griffith took his place in a chair beneath the cameras. He works with a smoothness and comprehensiveness that beggars description. Every one immediately seemed at home in the picture, so thoroughly had he adapted the crowd's mental attitude. He did wonders with the little boy and girl actors. They came and went as he directed and showed no embarrassment as being actors.

"Gee, this is great," one of the kids said, "gettin' paid for playin'."

The first scene was taken near the hotel with the wide expanse of river as a background. Neil Hamilton, the "star" as a Continental soldier, rides into the picture. He is met by a group of Colonial gentlemen on horseback and appears in a great hurry to get somewhere.

Colonial dames and ladies are walking under leafy branches. A very small elm, apparently, but it was re-rooted a dozen times before it suited the director.

Pretty Second and Broadway.

The scene was soon changed to the custom house stands, the "Forty-second and Broadway" of Yorktown.

As we last drove by an old negro came into view. Just then he paused a moment to look at the custom house. The breeze in its rare moments gave little flirts through the ribbons with which it adorned brown and yellow straw hat. This old fellow was a fine specimen of the most valuable "film" in Yorktown.

As the sound of the old fife and drum corps broke there in the quiet morning air, the old negro stopped and gazed at the scene. Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which the Navy had laid a mesh of TNT, said to be equal to the ten hundred million dollars. This is the army idea for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood, was in government property.

Everything seemed to belong there. When a flivver passed into the scene it was the flivver that looked out of place, not the Colonial setting.

When the company was assembled in front of the hotel the camera men appeared and Griffith took his place in a chair beneath the cameras. He works with a smoothness and comprehensiveness that beggars description. Every one immediately seemed at home in the picture, so thoroughly had he adapted the crowd's mental attitude. He did wonders with the little boy and girl actors. They came and went as he directed and showed no embarrassment as being actors.

"Gee, this is great," one of the kids said, "gettin' paid for playin'."

The first scene was taken near the hotel with the wide expanse of river as a background. Neil Hamilton, the "star" as a Continental soldier, rides into the picture. He is met by a group of Colonial gentlemen on horseback and appears in a great hurry to get somewhere.

Colonial dames and ladies are walking under leafy branches. A very small elm, apparently, but it was re-rooted a dozen times before it suited the director.

Pretty Second and Broadway.

The scene was soon changed to the custom house stands, the "Forty-second and Broadway" of Yorktown.

As we last drove by an old negro came into view. Just then he paused a moment to look at the custom house. The breeze in its rare moments gave little flirts through the ribbons with which it adorned brown and yellow straw hat. This old fellow was a fine specimen of the most valuable "film" in Yorktown.

As the sound of the old fife and drum corps broke there in the quiet morning air, the old negro stopped and gazed at the scene. Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which the Navy had laid a mesh of TNT, said to be equal to the ten hundred million dollars. This is the army idea for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood, was in government property.

fine-looking horses, rides into view. There is an interchange of courtesies, and for a moment or two Washington pauses while the fiddlers play a tune.

As the cameras grind out foot after foot of film the action goes on. Following Washington's arrival there comes the two great family coaches of the Montagues, which carries the romantic part of the story. Soldiers in uniform dash back and forth. The village seems very much elated both in real life and in reel life.

Griffith In Action.

Time and again this scene is repeated. Griffith walks back and forth making little changes here and there. His mind possesses a quality of alertly that is surprising. The slightest infraction of the scene is quickly detected. A bit of newspaper blows across the scene and the camera action is stopped while it is cleared away. No one is allowed to smoke where the smoke will blow into the picture unless the actor is supposed to be smoking.

During his directing he keeps up a flow of conversation in a low tone, never shouting, frequently squinting through a monochrome filter that gives the correct color values to the picture.

Occasionally he goes through a bit of business to show the actors how it is to be done. The actors know nothing of the story they are enacting. They do not know what comes next, but do as they are told.

The master mind knows the story, knows how the scenes are to be enacted and knows how they link up with the other parts of the picture. That is all that seems necessary.

Nelson Home Shown.

From this scene the cameras are moved a block up the street to take in the Nelson Home, occupied by the Blows, and the home of Mrs. Shield, the oldest house in Yorktown and one of the most attractive and much visited homes in Virginia. Mrs. Shield has a guest book that contains the names of many prominent people and she has been responsible for maintaining much of the historic atmosphere of Yorktown through her society organized for this purpose.

Mrs. Shield, dressed as a Colonial Dame, consented to appear in one of the pictures and is shown posed with "George Washington" (Admiral Dewey) on the wall of the Nelson garden. Another picture shows Mrs. Shield on the steps of her home with Neil Hamilton, the star of the company.

Among others who appear in the picture from among the Yorktown population are:

Mrs. Howard Ferris (on horseback), Mrs. M. C. Ehlen, Mrs. S. W. Hickey, Miss Fannie Sue Cornick, Miss Dorothy Forman, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Edrington, Jennie Edrington, G. B. White and Luther Beer, violinists; Mr. and Mrs. George Hammontree, Mrs. Sydney Smith, Miss Virginia Smith, Miss Violet Forman, Miss Dora Crockett, Miss Gladys Hammontree, Mrs. Douglas Hubbard, Mrs. Munson Cook, Miss Mary Rice, Julius Cornick, Mrs. L. Foxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Haydon, G. F. Rockwell, Joe Schmidt, R. A. Blow, Mrs. George Walter Toms, of Richmond; Garnett Chalkley, Lester Ferrara, Lionel Richardson, Ben Hayden, Frank Edrington, Theo Wainwright, Tommy Edrington, Elizabeth Hayden and Stafford Cook.

Historic Scenes Are Reenacted Before Camera

Variety (Nyc) Nov 22 1923

GRIFFITH PUTS REALISM INTO SOUTHERN SCENES

Shooting "America" on the Original Grounds and Historic Homes

Richmond, Nov. 21.

David Wark Griffith is using genuine Virginia exteriors in the filming of his new production tentatively titled "America."

For the past week he has been at Yorktown, where Cornwallis surrendered, a town which has changed but little since Colonial days. He got several scenes at Westover, former home of William Byrd, founder of Richmond, and at other historic estates.

At Yorktown he used the Nelson home, with cannon balls still sticking in the walls. The big, round shot were fired at the house by Washington's troops during the siege. Governor Nelson himself fired the first shot, when the soldiers hesitated at bombarding his beautiful home, then being used as headquarters by the British staff.

Griffith selected a number of local types for parts in the production, including several scions of the best families, who retain the physical characteristics of their famous ancestors.

Ny Eve. World Nov 23 1923

Portland (Me) Press-Herald Nov 23 1923

Newark (N J) Star-Eagle 11/23/23

Norfolk (Va) Times 11/22/23

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Nov 22 1923

Norfolk Pilot Nov 24 1923

Chicago Indep Soldier

Pittsburgh (Pa) Post Nov 20 1923

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post November 20 1923

Philadelphia Ledger Nov 20 1923

VISTORICAL SPOTS FILMED IN "AMERICA"

D. W. GRIFFITH BACK IN MAMARONECK

D. W. GRIFFITH HAS RETURNED FROM VIRGINIA

D. W. SCARED

D. W. Griffith on Historic Battle Field

MR. GRIFFITH IS BACK AT STUDIO FROM VIRGINIA

Took Scenes for "America" in Several Historical Localities

WE ARE ABOUT TO BE PACIFIED!

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he appears, in his own mind, to have supplanted George Washington as the Father of His Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the baby offering up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, this times, needs a pacifier and he's it.

There seems to be a tendency among many people, in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to vary from against this day and stamp out radiation. We hope to improve upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in providing us to our government rail, rocks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which would be of public history value and other interesting information and accordingly than we could obtain.

Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for Mr. Coolidge. We commend the expenditure of hundreds of dollars for clothing in the purchase of thousands of dollars worth of weapons. When the people read his statement in the papers they will have the pleasure of knowing that they have joined the president in the belief that they paid cash for the service of the war and now also they paid cash for the service of the war.

Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for the use of political propaganda which appears to have in view, spread across the land. And it runs like poetry.

The end of this day is to be "America." For a season, "Here Point of Observation."

We Are About to Be Pacified

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he appears, in his own mind, to have supplanted George Washington as the Father of His Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the baby offering up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, this times, needs a pacifier and he's it.

There seems to be a tendency among many people, in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to vary from against this day and stamp out radiation. We hope to improve upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in providing us to our government rail, rocks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which would be of public history value and other interesting information and accordingly than we could obtain.

Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for Mr. Coolidge. We commend the expenditure of hundreds of dollars for clothing in the purchase of thousands of dollars worth of weapons. When the people read his statement in the papers they will have the pleasure of knowing that they have joined the president in the belief that they paid cash for the service of the war and now also they paid cash for the service of the war.

Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for the use of political propaganda which appears to have in view, spread across the land. And it runs like poetry.

The end of this day is to be "America." For a season, "Here Point of Observation."

So We Are About To Be Pacified!

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he appears, in his own mind, to have supplanted George Washington as the Father of His Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the baby offering up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, this times, needs a pacifier and he's it.

There seems to be a tendency among many people, in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to vary from against this day and stamp out radiation. We hope to improve upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in providing us to our government rail, rocks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which would be of public history value and other interesting information and accordingly than we could obtain.

Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for Mr. Coolidge. We commend the expenditure of hundreds of dollars for clothing in the purchase of thousands of dollars worth of weapons. When the people read his statement in the papers they will have the pleasure of knowing that they have joined the president in the belief that they paid cash for the service of the war and now also they paid cash for the service of the war.

Yes for Mr. Coolidge. Yes for the use of political propaganda which appears to have in view, spread across the land. And it runs like poetry.

The end of this day is to be "America." For a season, "Here Point of Observation."

Boston (Mass) 29

MUCH MOVEMENT IN THE MOVIES, THERE IS TROUBLE AHEAD ME ONE

United States Cavalry of Fort Meyer, Virginia, Helping to Make the New Film "America."
(Copyright International)

Chicago (Ill) Industrial Solidarity 11/24/23

Denver (Colo) Rocky Mtn News Nov 18 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner Nov 18. 1923

My City

MOVIE STEEPED IN POISON

By LAURENCE TODD

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON.—David Wark Griffith, producer of propaganda films for the liquor interests in the old days, has completed a big job of cut-throat work with the Coolidge administration and its militarist cliques, to "put over" on the American voters next year a film intended to make them enthusiastic for reaction.

Those who remember Griffith's work, with its scene depicting Christ producing wine, and a scene of drunkenness with the light turned down from the blear-eyed wretch the miracle, are qualified to estimate how far Griffith is going in his manufacture of war, greed, hatred and the status quo.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people for a change and an urge to turn from against this and many yet reflection," said the president, after calling upon President Coolidge today. "We have a lot of people who are tired of talk about how they were have been forced into the quarrel and they want to take the first opportunity they have to get out of it."

Another Harding administration has been in preaching of "a new economic economy, more business, more prosperity." Coolidge admitted that he had to "cut down work and stop the production of the war works." The production of the war works meant the production of the war profiteers, the production of the war profiteers meant the production of the war profiteers, the production of the war profiteers meant the production of the war profiteers, the production of the war profiteers

Syracuse (N.Y.) Post-Standard Sunday Dec. 2, 1923

Spokane (Wash) Labor World Nov 16 1923

AMERICA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL HOMES IN NEW ENGLAND AND SOUTH, D. W. GRIFFITH SAYS

"Whatever of truth and beauty is attainable by a generous public in my larger output, trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home," writes D. W. Griffith, noted motion picture producer, in "Arts and Decoration".

"I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the back-log for the fireplace. There were two windows. One looked upon a wheat field with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather large room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

"Charles A. Schwab's house, where Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticized by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, receives a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses fail of their purpose of beauty because they do not accord with the American setting and environment. They are incongruous, and incongruity is never beautiful.

"The most beautiful houses in America are but a twentieth of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness is infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which stems back to the early Greek.

"One of these houses is Woodlawn, an old plantation home on the Bayou Teche in Louisiana. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the South, and which was cared for by twenty-five servants, are large in the front part of the house and taper to small ones at the back. I used it as a setting for pictures I was taking. It was in similar spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James River, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley House is ceded to be one of the most beautiful houses in America.

"A few months after I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In the Colonial style, with great pillars, it had large rooms at the front, and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their soul of America. There are houses that had been lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gaie.

Boston (Mass) Herald Nov. 25, 1923

Syracuse (N.Y.) Herald Nov 26 1923

Making Picture Plays Here.

When the manufacture of motion pictures is resumed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation 40 per cent of its output will be made on Long Island. Remote as the city is from the largest cities of the country, Hollywood became the center of motion picture manufacture on account of its natural advantages. The mild climate made it possible to work almost the year around without discomfort and without the additional expense of heating the vast halls in which the actors posed. Then the quality of the light was especially suited in the opinion of the directors to the production of the best photography. No other spot in the world with the exception of Sicily was thought to be so well adapted to the camera.

In spite of these advantages there is undeniable extravagance in the transfer across the continent of so many of the actors needed for these motion pictures, in addition to so much of the material. Women's names, for instance, are an important factor in the success of the motion picture play. Indeed, dressing for the speaking stage was never more expensively practiced than it is today on the screen. All these properties not to be carried to the West come from New York.

Advertisement in the manufacture of the motion picture is so big that the Long Island studio of the Famous Players-Lasky company will consume another mile of its place on the Long Island station than it formerly did. Such a change makes possible skills that are necessary, which must be carried to the Pacific coast to place sights before the camera. That are there, just between the mountains and the sea, Nature's great studios. Money will of course be saved in the home division. That the transcontinental trips compared with the days will be a matter of the producers are so eager to do it.

This has been started by the producers, and long the center of film production of the time. Thousands of people are employed in Hollywood and there is a small town devoted exclusively to the business of the motion picture. Hundreds of the "Movies" are located in the Pacific coast. The business is in the hands of the Pacific coast. The business is in the hands of the Pacific coast. The business is in the hands of

Little Rock (Ark) News Nov 23, 1923

Lexington (Ky) Herald Nov 25, 1923

Louisville (Ky) Herald. Nov. 25, 1923

WE ARE ABOUT TO BE PACIFIED!

David Wark Griffith produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he appears, in his own mind to have supplanted George Washington as the Father of his County. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the lusty offspring up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, Griffith thinks, needs a pacifier and he's it.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people," he says, "in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to warn them against this and stamp out radicalism. We hope to impress upon the people that they are better off today than they have been before.

"President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in permitting us to use government regiments, tanks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which will enable us to portray historic scenes and other interesting incidents much more effectively and accurately than we could otherwise."

Nice for Mr. Griffith. Nice for Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Griffith gets some thousands of uniformed movie actors for nothing, to say nothing of thousands of dollars worth of scenery. When the people pay for admission to see his super-film they will have the pleasure of knowing that they have earned the privilege—twice; once when they paid taxes for the upkeep of the army, and once when they paid at the door. However, if they come away pacified by Mr. Griffith, they doubtless will be content.

As for Mr. Coolidge, he gets the sort of political propaganda upon which apparently he hopes to rely, spread before millions of movie fans. And it costs him nothing.

The title of this film is to be "America." For a subtitle may we suggest, "Have Faith in Massachusetts?"

GRIFFITH NAMED COLONEL

Picture Producer and Publisher Join State Heroes

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 24. — David Wark Griffith, famous motion picture producer, and John Irving Roamer, editor of "Printer's Ink," a nationally known advertising publication, today joined the ranks of Kentucky's full-fledged colonels, according to an announcement made by Mayor Huston Quinn.

Their appointment as aides on the staff of Governor Edwin P. Morrow comes as a result of their conspicuous services in behalf of Kentucky's 1924 homecoming and in keeping with the promise by Mayor Quin that all notables who contributed to the glory and fame of Kentucky would be similarly honored.

Mr. Griffith is a native Kentuckian, having been born and reared in Oldham county, a short distance from this city. When a young man he was a reporter for the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Madison (Wis) Journal 11/25/23

He's "Col." D. W. Griffith Now And He Will Visit Home Folks During Home Coming Next June

Years and years ago when David Wark Griffith, famous motion picture producer, left his old home on a farm in Oldham County to make his mark in the world, he was just "Dave" Griffith to the folks around Lagrange. But next June when he comes back to visit the scenes of his early struggles and to be an honored guest of Kentucky's Home Coming celebration, he will not be plain "Dave," but "Colonel David," if you please.

Yesterday Mayor Huston Quin, general chairman for the Home Coming, announced a colonel's commission for Mr. Griffith, as well as one for John Irving Roamer, editor of "Printer's Ink," a nationally known advertising publication, had been received from Gov. Edwin P. Morrow. The appointment of these notables to the rank of colonel comes as a result of their conspicuous service in behalf of the Home Coming, the mayor said.

As companions on the governor's staff, Mr. Griffith and Mr. Roamer will have Norman P. Hapgood, George Horace Lorimer, John T. McCutcheon and Irvin S. Cobb, all of whom are equally famous and have done their "bit" to help boost Kentucky's celebration for its native sons and daughters next June.

The return of Mr. Griffith to his old home in Oldham County will be the occasion of a special celebration there in honor of the famous figure in the film world. Since learning of plans for the Home Coming he has expressed a desire to visit the scenes of his early days while he is in Louisville as a guest of the celebration.

In keeping with the promise made several months ago that all notables who contribute to the fame and glory of Kentucky will receive colonels' commissions, Mayor Quin declared that more appointments will be made from time to time, and this phase of the Home Coming publicity will be continued, altho the recipients in few cases will be native Kentuckians. Since the Home Coming organization began its work Governor Morrow has cheerfully granted commissions, and Gov.-elect William J. Fields, who is his campaign manager, has promised to continue similar recognition of the services of famous men, and women on behalf of the Home Coming.

In the same mail yesterday that carried the Griffith and Roamer commissions, both of which were accompanied by complimentary letters from the mayor, were letters addressed to the mayors of more than 2,750 cities in the United States urging them to turn over to some native Kentuckian of their acquaintance a message from Home Coming headquarters. By this plan Home Coming officials hope to reach former Kentuckians in every section of the country with news of the celebration.

Mayor Quin yesterday also sent commissions to other Home Coming colonels and to Irvin S. Cobb, who has held a commission for some time, requesting them to communicate with their new comrades.

Anniversary Issue Sept 21, 1923

The Daughters of the American Revolution have taken a hand in the film business. At least they have cooperated with David W. Griffith to make a patriotic film emphasizing the glory of our independence which their organization commemorates. The title of the film is "America" and it was selected in an ingenious manner. A poll was taken of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's play-ground. More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America", with the "Spirit of '76," the second choice. The voters are also to be included in the many group scenes in the production.

Los Angeles (Cal) Times Nov 25, 1923

Griffith's next colossal picture is "America," in which all the important battles of the revolutionary war are being reproduced. All the historic scenes along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives. The society women of Richmond are acting as extras for the scenes requiring their presence. It is said that a train of five pullmans have been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

Historic Homes of F.F.V. Opened for Griffith

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans. Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production.

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the first families of Virginia are his guides. G. Watson James of Richmond, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn mansion at Westover on the James River. Society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

Historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation of the family now lives. The gypsy progress will continue

Fargo (ND) Tribune 11/25/23

Syracuse (NY) American 11/25/23

GRIFFITH FILMING SCENES IN VIRGINIA

"America" Is Being Produced on Spots Where Action Took Place.

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being sold, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The Society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

U. S. Cavalry Used As Morgan Raiders In Griffith's Film

A TROOP of the famous Third Cavalry, stationed at Fort Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders last week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming film, "America."

Major Wainwright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command at Fort Meyer, assisted Mr. Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers was caught in one of the charges, but escaped without casualties.

Nashville (Tenn) Tennessean Nov. 25, 1923

Crack Cavalry as "Morgan's Raiders"

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Va., played the part of Morgan's Raiders recently in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America." This is the first time a calalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Fort Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, but

San Francisco (Cal) Examiner 11/25/23

Jamesville (Ohio) Times-Signal Nov 25, 1923

The crack cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America."

OUTSIDE OF THAT, HERE'S ALL GIFT

Publicity notice received from the crack cavalry company of the U. S. Army, the famous Third, stationed at Fort Myer, Va., etc.

"Cavalry comes in troops, the "Third" is a regiment, and, as from that, the notice is all g

Columbus (Ohio) Citizen 11/24/23

Seattle (Wash) Times 11/25/23

Oakland (Cal) Tribune Nov 25 1923

GRIFFITH FILM BRINGS RECRUITS INTO THE ARMY

"America," Still in Making, Is Serving a Patriotic Purpose

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes, and, according to the figuring of army officers, will have aided in increasing the enrollment of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New Rochelle, New York and Virginia showing United States Regulars, including the 10th and 12th Infantry and the 3d Cavalry participating in the action, through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Photographs of regulars are shown during the actual appearance of the troops in Revolutionary uniforms and backdrop of Washington's army. Little girl is spectator as she is passed going through maneuvers which take Revolutionary there. The men are added to army ranks, after enlistment, and Hadley sketch, made a candid study of the strategy and tactics of the war of independence.

Cracks Cavalry Unit Plays in 'America'

Paul Revere's Horse Prevents Plotting Paul Revere From Taking Famous Gallop Through New England Again

Picture Play January

WHAT'S A STUDIO LIKE, ANYWAY?

THAT'S the question that every fan asks, and of course, you can get as many different answers to it as number of people of whom you ask it.

Here's the impression that Hap Hadley, the artist carried away from his first bewildering visit to D. W. Griffith studio at Mamaroneck, New York where he went to make sketches of the shooting of scenes for the big Griffith production, "America," which is now being made.

After he got this impression down on paper and free out of his system—he was able to get to work make drawings of some of the big things that Griffith is doing in the making of this big historical film. hope to publish some of these in an early number.

Lackawanna (NY) Journal Sep 21, 1923

The Daughters of the American Revolution have taken a hand in the film business. At least they have cooperated with David W. Griffith to make a patriotic film emphasizing the glory of our independence which their organization commemorates. The title of the film is "America" and it was selected in an ingenious manner. A poll was taken of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's play-ground. More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America", with the "Spirit of '76," the second choice. The voters are also to be included in the many group scenes in the production.

Norfolk (Va) Sep 24 1923

The Daughters of the American Revolution have taken a hand in the film business. At last they have cooperated with David W. Griffith to make a patriotic film emphasizing the glory of our independence which their organization commemorates. The title of the film is "America" and it was selected in an ingenious manner. A poll was taken of six universities, six grade schools, six clubs, and six sporting places where slang is most prevalent, including a prize fighter's camp, a race track, a pool room, a dance hall and a boy's play-ground. More than ninety per cent of the votes were for "America", with the "Spirit of '76," the second choice. The voters are also to be included in the many group scenes in the production.

Grand Falls (NB) Herald 9/24/23

Howard (Ind) Times Sep 21, 1923

Paul Revere's Ride Sep 24 1923

Reading (Pa) Times

Reading (Pa) Sep 24 1923

Lancaster (Pa) Intelligencer

WHAT WAS THE COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

A Little Matter of Horse History

HISTORIANS have described minutely and at least one poet has sung in lilting verse the ride of Paul Revere. In fact Mr. Revere is unquestionably the best known jockey America ever had. But who knows the name, the color, or the breed of the noble steed which bore him to Lexington, Concord and other Middlesex towns and hamlets? Extant poetry and prose extol Revere but pay rather scant attention to his horse.

Hence when D. W. Griffith, making his big patriotic film of the Revolutionary War "America," at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution, wanted to get a minute description of Revere's horse he could find none. Mr. Griffith didn't care much by what name the horse was called, but in the interests of historical accuracy he did want to know its color, size and breed.

But to get the needed information he was forced to establish a research department, which not only delved through hundreds of written volumes in the course of weeks, but scoured even the most obscure historical collections and museums before the data were secured.

As the making of "America" progressed Mr. Griffith found that our historians frequently neglected to furnish detailed information which he needed in his work and so he has continued the research bureau as a permanent adjunct to the production of this picture. It is said that as a result of Griffith's experience the motion picture industry will found an independent bureau of historical research under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Screen News, Sacramento, (Cal) Nov. 24. 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN MAKING FILM

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James river. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James river will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

Paris (Ky) News Nov 27 1923

WILL DESCRIBE GRIFFITH FILM

Garland O'Neil to Address Paris Rotary Club Today on Noted Kentuckian's Next Production

ACCIDENT VICTIM BURIED

[Special to The Herald]

PARIS, Ky., Nov. 27.—Garland O'Neil, formerly of Paris, a graduate of the Paris High school, will be the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Paris Rotary Club Wednesday at 12:15 o'clock at the Bourbon county Y. M. C. A. private dining room. Mr. O'Neil will speak on D. W. Griffith's new motion picture, "America," suggested by the operations of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Newark (NJ) Ledger Nov 30 1923

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America," which will be released shortly.

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred.

More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT said by government officials to be valued at two hundred million dollars. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood was on government property.

Detroit (Mich) News Dec 2 1923

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH GRIFFITH

THE first still to arrive on D. W. Griffith's new spectacle, "America," based on the Revolutionary War, shows U. S. Regulars as Redcoats and Minutemen in the trenches at Bunker Hill.

Moline (Ill) Dispatch Dec 1 1923

Griffith Turns Gypsy in Making Latest Picture

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James river. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James river will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

WASHINGTON'S HOME IN THE MOVIES

Arrangements are now under way for the use of the Washington home at Mount Vernon as the setting for some of the principal scenes in D. W. Griffith's historical picture, "America." The film deals with the dramatic episodes of the Revolutionary war and George Washington is one of the chief characters. Scenes of Washington's home life will be shown in their exact historical settings. Griffith is being assisted in his work by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the D. A. R., is now in conference at Washington with Griffith over various details of the pageants and committees of showers from the organization have attended the taking of the most important episodes in Paris in order to ensure their accuracy.

My Morning Telegraph Dec. 7 1923

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE DELIGHTS FILM WORLD

Recommendation of Admission Tax Abolition and Following Words Taken as Executive Recognition of Great Industry.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECOMMENDATION.

"I especially commend a decrease on earned incomes, and further abolition of admission, message and nuisance taxes. The amusement and educational value of moving pictures ought not to be taxed."

President Coolidge's recommendation that Congress abolish the "admission, message and nuisance taxes," coupled with his emphatic endorsement of the motion picture industry, brought great joy to every branch of it yesterday. Producers, players, distributors and exhibitors were doubly gratified that, not only did the President recommend the elimination of an oppressive war tax, but, in so many words, recognized the important position held in public life by the motion pictures.

It was too soon for any one to discuss methods or means whereby Congress may be induced to heed the Presidential recommendation. That will come later.

Here are some of the expressions from the leaders:

Sydney S. Cohen.

(President Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.)

"It was very gratifying to read the statement contained in the annual message of President Calvin Coolidge to Congress, especially his recommendations for the repeal of the admission taxes, as it expresses an appreciation of the public service activities of the motion picture industry.

"Governments are not run for profit. They are run for service to the people, and the industry generally is to be congratulated that its public service activities rendered since the inception of the industry, and particularly during the last few years, and the late World War, have merited the sanction and approbation of the President of the United States, as it has members of the Cabinet, leading United States Senators and Congressmen, Governors of States and other public spirited men.

"I am firmly of the opinion that in years to come this service rendered by the theatre owners and by the industry generally will so impress itself on the official and public mind that this industry in all its branches will be exempt from any and all forms of taxation, because there will be a realization that it is of more value to Government, State, city and community than that obtained from taxes.

"The co-ordinated effort and co-operation of all forces in the industry are required to help carry into effect the recommendations made by the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury.

"At the meeting of the officers and board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at the Hotel Willard, Washington, on Friday and Saturday, November 30 and December 1, a special committee of the organization was designated for this sole purpose, and it is our intention to continue our efforts along lines that will present a solid and united front, so that relief sought and so very much needed will be obtained."

Charles T. O'Reilly.

(President Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce.)

"The President's message, containing a recommendation to Congress for the removal of the tax on admissions to motion picture theatres because of the educational value of the motion picture, is a great recognition by the highest official in the land of the work done by the industry and will be received with appreciation throughout the country regardless of party politics.

"President Coolidge deserves the undivided support of those who are the custodians of this great medium, the value of which he has recognized in his recommendation to abolish the war tax, which has been borne so long and so patiently by the motion picture public."

Richard Rowland.

Richard Rowland, general manager of First National, said that he was heartily in favor of the President's suggestion to Congress that the tax on motion picture admissions be repealed.

"The value of motion pictures to the country is so great that it should not be handicapped by taxes of this sort," Mr. Rowland said. "In addition, I am opposed to direct taxation in any form at this time. The power the war is freezing the better for us and for the entire world."

Hiram Abrams.

(President United Artists Corporation.)

"When President Coolidge declared in his message to Congress that 'To reduce taxes there is no more fruitful field than that which is afforded by the taxes on theater tickets,' said Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists Corporation, "he was speaking for the entire motion picture industry. This was essentially a war-time measure for revenue, and I heartily concur with the President in advocating relief to the general public from this form of taxation.

"The theatre, and particularly the motion picture theatre, in many instances, furnishes about the only entertainment and diversion that the laboring man has. The motion picture and the theatre have come to rule as absolute necessities of life. They no longer may be classed among the luxuries. There is no question but that the removal of the theatre ticket tax would bring great relief to the working classes, which have come to depend almost entirely upon the motion picture for their entertainment; to say nothing of the fact that motion pictures have won unanimous recognition everywhere for their educational value.

"To remove the wartime tax from the chief source of entertainment and education for the working man and his family certainly is 'paramount,' as President Coolidge asserts, and certainly will serve 'to give every home a better chance.'"

David Wark Griffith.

"I am heartily in accord with President Coolidge.

"The value of entertainment and particularly of motion pictures, which today, as the chief source of entertainment for the great mass of the American people, was proven during the war.

"As an educational factor, the value of the screen can hardly be overestimated. It seems unfair that the people of the United States should have to pay a tax for so great an educational factor.

"'America,' which I am now filming, is a case in point. The research work for this picture required years of effort. It was requested by the Daughters of the American Revolution, who wished a drama of the War of Independence. It is hardly equitable that the American people should be taxed in order to witness the film presentation of the romance of the Revolution, the story of their own forefathers."

Jules E. Brulatour.

"President Coolidge's recommendation that the admission taxes be rescinded shows conclusively the far sightedness and clear cut Americanism of our President. By abolishing these taxes not only the greatest good will accrue to the motion picture industry itself, but in my opinion it will rebound to the benefit of the whole American people. The screen long admitted as the greatest educator and entertainer will be placed in a much better position to intelligently serve and interest as well as amuse the whole public. The President and the country at large are to be congratulated."

Sidney Pearson.

(V. P. and General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.)

The President's direct reference to the motion picture industry, it's inclusion, and his recommendation that all Federal tax be abolished, thus placing the motion picture industry on the same plan as any other industry, is a recognition that we have been existing for far years, and the efforts will be for reaching in that it will tend to discourage the tax and other harassing legislation, which has heretofore confronted us at the hands of State and municipalities.

The removal of the Federal tax will be a big step in the right direction, and the Hays and association through respect all across have the public mind indeed under progressive leaders and more careful entertainment of mutual elevation prices.

The President's recent message is an optimist and powerful building force in the industry, and everyone should be in accordance.

Sidney Pearson,
Vice President and General Manager Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Motion Picture Magazine Jan 1923 (myatt)

GRIFFITH HANDED COLONEL'S RANK FOR FILM FAME

It's now Col. D. W. Griffith. For the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America," at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honorary colonel by the Governor of his native State, Kentucky, he just learned at Mamaroneck, where he is at work on the new film.

D. W. Griffith

Elmer Edwin P. Morrow has just awarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, who made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to that city.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received commissions in the past include Lord Duffer Harem Carnegie, Harvey F. Hagerd and Col. E. E. Richardson.

HISTORICAL epochs on the screen are to the fore at present—note "America," a Griffith production, which really promises to be the long-heralded rival of the "Birth of a Nation." Griffith gave the folk around Somers, N. Y., such a patriotic stirring-up as they hadn't had in a long time, when he arrived in that vicinity with his scarlet uniformed British Army and his handful of Colonists in their home-spun suits. The greatest trouble he had was to keep the lookers-on out of the fighting. Each of the occupants of the thirty thousand motor cars, that he lined up to watch the fun, as well as the residents, wanted to wade in and trounce the British. But the thing which most nearly defeated both armies were those unmanly wigs they had to wear while fighting. Manton, the distinguished hairdresser of New York, was kept steadily on the jump putting the wigs back into place.

From Somers, Mr. Griffith took his company to Boston where weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the Revolution, were turned over to him by the Lexington Historical Society, for the filming of the story. All the scenes were taken on the actual site of action except where modern improvements made this impossible. Lexington Common, Buchanan's Tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping when the British came, and many other familiar historical landmarks will be seen in the picture.

Wichita Falls (Tex) Sep 25 1923

Times Tribune (Tex) Sep 11 1923

Wichita Falls Daily Times Sep 11 1923

Wichita Falls Daily Times Sep 11 1923

Wichita Falls Daily Times

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Dec. 1, 1923

"America" a recruiting picture.

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by Army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York, and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry, and the 3rd Cavalry, cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minutemen, and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvres obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

PHOTOPLAY EDITOR.

Harrisburg (Pa) Telegraph Dec 1 1923

SOLDIERS TAKING PART IN FILM

D. W. Griffith Photographing "America," a Picture of Revolutionary War Days

"America" the new film being photographed by D. W. Griffith at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is still in the process of making and includes scenes in which a number of United States regulars take part.

Photographs taken by Army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York, and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the Sixteenth and Eighteenth Infantry, and the Third Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, Minutemen, and members of Washington's Army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers, who collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Harlem (N.Y.C) Home News Dec 2 1923

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's Army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York, and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry, and the 3d Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

The regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, Minutemen, and members of Washington's Army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvres obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Brooklyn (N.Y) Eagle Dec. 2, 1923 33

D. W. GRIFFITH AIDS ARMY RECRUITING

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's Army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by Ormy photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry and the 3d Cavalry participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the usual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minutemen and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges and going through maneuvres obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officials who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Sunday Dec 1923

Above—In the trenches at Bunker Hill showing U. S. regular army soldiers garbed as British redcoats and as Minutemen, acting as "supers" for D. W. Griffith's production of "America." This film is sponsored by the Daughters and Sons of the American Revolution.

Charleston (W Va) Gazette Dec 2 1923

Griffith has returned from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on 11 historical spots for his Revolutionary film "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than 40 persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT said by government officials to be valued at $200,000,000. This is the army base for high explosives, and the tracking where the train stood was on government property.

Jy M. P News Dec. 8 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH recently was presented to President Coolidge by Representative Treadway. The [illegible] showed the chief executive several scenes of "Ame[illegible]

Sam[illegible]

D. W. GRIFFITH has returned from Virginia to his studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y., after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary picture, "America."

Jy Herald Dec 8 1923

COL. D. W. GRIFFITH NOW.

David W. Griffith has joined the ranks of Kentucky colonels among the men of the amusement business, along with Lee Klaw and John Golden. He is the first motion picture producer to be so honored by his native State. Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just awarded to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville A commission which makes the man who founded the modern photoplay with "The Birth of a Nation" and who is now picturing the War of Independence for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a full fledged colonel.

Jy Eve Journal Dec 8 1923

Griffith Made Colonel

D. W. Griffith, who is connected with motion pictures, has been commissioned a colonel by Governor Morrow, of Kentucky, from which State Colonel Griffith hails.

Jy Times Dec 9 1923

According to the D. W. Griffith office, Robert W. Chambers has become a commuter between New York and Mamaroneck, the reason being that he is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which Mr. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution. In addition to writing the story, Mr. Chambers is rendering assistance in the details of many of the scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians.

Jy Tribune Dec 9 1923

R. W. Chambers Writes "America" for Griffith

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers's early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period. He has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor to the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

South Bend (Ind) News Dec 2 1923

Above—D. W. in action. Griffith is seen illustrating a point to one of his actors in "America" in which fifty thousand persons have been used to date, although the filming is far from finished. The picture is sponsored by the Daughters and Sons of the Revolution.

Ottumwa (Ia) Courier Nov. 27 1923

D. W. Griffith Now A Colonel.

When David Wark Griffith, famous motion picture producer, goes back to Oldham County next June to visit the scenes of his childhood and also be an honored guest at Kentucky's 1924 Home Coming celebration, his friends and neighbors who once addressed him as "Dave" may prefix "Colonel" to his name.

This was the announcement made by Mayor Huston Quin, general chairman for the Home Coming, who said that he had received from Gov. Edwin P. Morrow full-fledged colonel's commissions not only for Mr. Griffith, but also for John Irving Roamer, editor of "Printer's Ink," a nationally known advertising publication.

As in the cases of Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood and Col. John T. McCutcheon, the appointments, Mayor Quin said, were made because of the services Mr. Griffith and Mr. Roamer had performed in behalf of Kentucky's 1924 Home Coming.

Friends of Mr. Griffith are planning a special celebration in his honor at his old home town when he returns.

Denver (Colo) Times Dec. 1, 1923

Cornwallis Surrender Filmed by Griffith

D. W. Griffith returned yesterday from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT, said by government officials to be valued at $200,000,000. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood was on government property.

Milwaukee (Wis) Journal Dec 2 1923

Griffith Films Huge Pageant of the Revolution

Making of Historical Spectacle, America, Attended by Revival of Patriotism

WHEN the Daughters of the American Revolution suggested to David Wark Griffith that he make a photoplay based on the American revolution, they started something. Mr. Griffith is not only making the photoplay first but being historian, patriotic director, society women, descendants of Revolutionary heroes, and the United States army itself are helping and in everything goes accordingly to celebrate America, as the new film has been named, should express in outward emblems over The Birth of a Nation.

Herself of holding reviews of the patriotic buildings which must figure in our frame action about the revolution, Griffith and his entire company of players, technicians and camera men, are traveling from place to place in United States and popular points are taking their work to the great place, with their tents, equipment and money better than a dozen Napoleons and never a loss of the Third Napoleon ever so much.

Principals of leading stage artists, and for the parade through the streets of Boston and Washington Day Weeks ago, and now that a fortnight is for the money is owed in a few days.

A National "Festival"

The production of America is said to be taken at the cost of a job and pocket of millions, and the [illegible] of Americans. The work has cost the United States [illegible] and the United States army [illegible] and the United States army [illegible] and the United States army

WHAT WAS THE COLOR OF PAUL REVERE'S HORSE?

A Little Matter of Horse History

HISTORIANS have described minutely and at least one poet has sung in lilting verse the ride of Paul Revere. In fact Mr. Revere is unquestionably the best known jockey America ever had. But who knows the name, the color, or the breed of the noble steed which bore him to Lexington, Concord and other Middlesex towns and hamlets? Extant poetry and prose extol Revere but pay rather scant attention to his horse.

Hence when D. W. Griffith, making his big patriotic film of the Revolutionary War "America," at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution, wanted to get a minute description of Revere's horse he could find none. Mr. Griffith didn't care much by what name the horse was called, but in the interests of historical accuracy he did want to know its color, size and breed.

But to get the needed information he was forced to establish a research department, which not only delved through hundreds of written volumes in the course of weeks, but scoured even the most obscure historical collections and museums before the data were secured.

As the making of "America" progressed Mr. Griffith found that our historians frequently neglected to furnish detailed information which he needed in his work and so he has continued the research bureau as a permanent adjunct to the production of this picture. It is said that as a result of Griffith's experience the motion picture industry will found an independent bureau of historical research under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Screen News. Sacramento, Cal. Nov. 24. 1923

WILL DESCRIBE GRIFFITH FILM

Garland O'Neil to Address Paris Rotary Club Today on Noted Kentuckian's Next Production

ACCIDENT VICTIM BURIED

[Special to The Herald]

PARIS, Ky., Nov. 27.—Garland O'Neil, formerly of Paris, a graduate of the Paris High school, will be the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Paris Rotary Club Wednesday at 12:15 o'clock at the Bourbon county Y. M. C. A. private dining room. Mr. O'Neil will speak on D. W. Griffith's new motion picture, "America," suggested by the operations of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Lexington (Ky) Herald Nov 28 1923

Newark (NJ) Ledger Nov 30 1923

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia to his Mamaroneck Studios after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America," which will be released shortly.

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred.

More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT said by government officials to be valued at two hundred million dollars. This is the army base for high explosives and the siding where the train stood was on government property.

Detroit (Mich) News Dec 2 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN MAKING FILM

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James river. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James river will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

Paris (Ky) News Nov 27 1923

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH GRIFFITH

THE first still to arrive on D. W. Griffith's new spectacle, "America," based on the Revolutionary War, shows U. S. Regulars as Redcoats and Minutemen in the trenches at Bunker Hill.

Moline (Ill) Dispatch Dec 1 1923

Griffith Turns Gypsy in Making Latest Picture

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, America.

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

WASHINGTON'S HOME IN THE MOVIES

Arrangements are now under way for the use of the Washington home at Mount Vernon as the setting for some of the principal scenes in D. W. Griffith's historical picture, "America." The film deals with the dramatic episodes of the Revolutionary war and George Washington is one of the chief characters. Scenes of Washington's home life will be shown in their exact historical settings. Griffith is being assisted in his work by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the D. A. R., is now in conference at Washington with Griffith over various details of the contracts and committees of observers from the organization have attended the taking of the most important scenes to date in order to insure their accuracy.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE DELIGHTS FILM WORLD

Recommendation of Admission Tax Abolition and Following Words Taken as Executive Recognition of Great Industry.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECOMMENDATION.

"I especially commend a decrease on earned incomes, and further abolition of admission, message and nuisance taxes. The amusement and educational value of moving pictures ought not to be taxed."

President Coolidge's recommendation that Congress abolish the "admission, message and nuisance taxes," coupled with his emphatic endorsement of the motion picture industry, brought great joy to every branch of it yesterday. Producers, players, distributors and exhibitors were doubly gratified that, not only did the President recommend the elimination of an oppressive war tax, but, in so many words, recognized the important position he'd in public life by the motion pictures.

It was too soon for any one to discuss methods or means whereby Congress may be induced to heed the Presidential recommendation. That will come later.

Here are some of the expressions from the leaders:

Sydney S. Cohen.

(President Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.)

"It was very gratifying to read the statement contained in the annual message of President Calvin Coolidge to Congress, especially his recommendations for the repeal of the admission taxes, as it expresses an appreciation of the public service activities of the motion picture industry.

"Governments are not run for profit. They are run for service to the people, and the industry generally is to be congratulated that its public service activities rendered since the inception of the industry, and particularly during the last few years, and the late World War, have merited the sanction and approbation of the President of the United States, as it has members of the Cabinet, leading United States Senators and Congressmen, Governors of States and other public spirited men.

"I am firmly of the opinion that in years to come this service rendered by the theatre owners and by the industry generally will so impress itself on the official and public mind that this industry in all its branches will be exempt from any and all forms of taxation, because there will be a realization that it is of more value to Government, State, city and community than that obtained from taxes.

"The co-ordinated effort and co-operation of all forces in the industry are required to help carry into effect the recommendations made by the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury.

"At the meeting of the officers and board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at the Hotel Willard, Washington, on Friday and Saturday, November 30 and December 1, a special committee of the organization was designated for this sole purpose, and it is our intention to continue our efforts along lines that will present a solid and united front, so that relief sought and so very much needed will be obtained."

Charles T. O'Reilly.

(President Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce.)

"The President's message, containing a recommendation to Congress for the removal of the tax on admissions to motion picture theatres because of the educational value of the motion picture, is a great recognition by the highest official in the land of the work done by the industry and will be received with appreciation throughout the country regardless of party politics.

"President Coolidge deserves the undivided support of those who are the custodians of this great medium, the value of which he has recognized in his recommendation to abolish the war tax, which has been borne so long and so patiently by the motion picture public."

Richard Rowland.

Richard Rowland, general manager of First National, said that he was heartily in favor of the President's suggestion to Congress that the tax on motion picture admissions be repealed.

"The value of motion pictures to the country is so great that it should not be handicapped by taxes of this sort," Mr. Rowland said. "In addition, I am opposed to direct taxation to pay for the war. The sooner the war is forgotten the better for us and for the entire world."

Hiram Abrams.

(President United Artists Corporation.)

"When President Coolidge declared in his message to Congress that 'To reduce our taxes is to give every home a better chance,' he undoubtedly had in mind such taxation as that embodying the tax on theater tickets," said Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists Corporation. "This was essentially a war-time measure for revenue, and I heartily concur with the President in advocating relief to the general public from this form of taxation.

"The theatre, and particularly the motion picture theatre, in many instances, furnishes about the only entertainment and diversion that the laboring man has. The motion picture and the theatre have come to rule as absolute necessities of life. They no longer may be classed among the luxuries. There is no question but that the removal of the theatre ticket tax would bring great relief to the working classes, which have come to depend almost entirely upon the motion picture for their entertainment; to say nothing of the fact that motion pictures have won unanimous recognition everywhere for their educational value.

"To remove the wartime tax from the chief source of entertainment and education for the working man and his family certainly is 'paramount,' as President Coolidge asserts, and certainly will serve 'to give every home a better chance.'"

David Wark Griffith.

"I am heartily in accord with President Coolidge.

"The value of entertainment and particularly of motion pictures, which today, as the chief source of entertainment for the great mass of the American people, was proven during the war.

"As an educational factor, the value of the screen can hardly be overestimated. It seems unfair that the people of the United States should have to pay a tax for so great an educational factor.

"'America,' which I am now filming, is a case in point. The research work for this picture required years of effort. It was requested by the Daughters of the American Revolution, who wished a drama of the War of Independence. It is hardly equitable that the American people should be taxed in order to witness the film presentation of the romance of the Revolution, the story of their own forefathers."

Jules E. Brulatour.

"President Coolidge's recommendation that the admission taxes be rescinded shows conclusively the far sightedness and clear cut Americanism of our President. By abolishing these taxes, not only the greatest good will accrue to the motion picture industry itself, but in my opinion it will rebound to the benefit of the whole American people. The screen long admitted as the greatest educator and entertainer will be placed in a much better position to intelligently serve and interest as well as amuse the whole public. The President and the country at large are to be congratulated."

Hiram Pearson.

(V. P. and General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.)

The President's direct reference to the motion picture industry, it's well-founded, and his recommendation that all Federal tax be abolished, thus placing the motion picture industry on the same plan as any other industry, is a recognition that we have been waiting for for years, and its effects will be far reaching in that it will tend to discourage the tax and other harassing legislation, which has heretofore confronted us at the hands of State and municipalities.

The removal of the Federal tax will be a big step in the right direction, and the States and municipalities should respect all excess taxes the public could indeed enjoy progressively better and more perfect entertainment of educational value.

The President's voting message is an excellent one, presently nothing prohibiting citizens of all classes might to be exercised.

Hiram Pearson,
Vice President and General Manager
Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Kansas City Star Dec 7 1923

GRIFFITH HANDED COLONEL'S RANK FOR FILM FAME

It's now Col. D. W. Griffith.

For the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America," at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honorary colonel by the Governor of his native State, Kentucky, he just learned at Mamaroneck, where he is at work on the new film.

D. W. Griffith

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Major Hanson Quinn of Louisville, adding he made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. Roosevelt, Harvey Lorimer, Marquis F. Regoud and Col. T. Roosevelt.

Motion Picture Magazine Jan 1923 (Nyc City)

HISTORICAL epochs on the screen are to the fore at present—note "America," a Griffith production, which really promises to be the long-heralded rival of the "Birth of a Nation."

Griffith gave the folk around Somers, N. Y., such a patriotic stirring-up as they hadn't had in a long time, when he arrived in that vicinity with his scarlet uniformed British Army and his handful of Colonists in their home-spun suits. The greatest trouble he had was to keep the lookers-on out of the fighting. Each of the occupants of the thirty thousand motor cars, that had lined up to watch the fun, as well as the residents, wanted to wade in and trounce the British. But the thing which most nearly defeated both armies were those unmanly wigs they had to wear while fighting. Manton, the distinguished hairdresser of New York, was kept steadily on the jump putting the wigs back into place.

From Somers, Mr. Griffith took his company to Boston where weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the Revolution, were turned over to him by the Lexington Historical Society, for the filming of the story. All the scenes were taken on the actual site of action except where modern improvements made this impossible. Lexington Common, Buchman's Tavern and the Adams house, where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping when the British came, and many other famous historical landmarks will be seen in the picture.

Times Picayune (Nyc) Sep 25 1923

Washington Herald Dec 1 1923

Kansas City Star Nov 28 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Dec. 1, 1923

Harrisburg (Pa) Telegraph Dec 1 1923

Harlem (NYC) Home News Dec 2, 1923

Brooklyn (NY) Eagle Dec 2, 1923

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Sunday Dec 1 1923

33

"America" a recruiting picture.

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by Army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York, and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry, and the 3rd Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minutemen, and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through manoeuvres obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

PHOTOPLAY EDITOR.

Charleston (W Va) Gazette Dec 2, 1923

SOLDIERS TAKING PART IN FILM

D. W. Griffith Photographing "America," a Picture of Revolutionary War Days

"America" the new film being photographed by D. W. Griffith at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is still in the process of making and includes scenes in which a number of United States regulars take part.

Photographs taken by Army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York, and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the Sixteenth and Eighteenth Infantry, and the Third Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, Minutemen, and members of Washington's Army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers, who collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's Army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York, and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry, and the 3d Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

The regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, Minutemen, and members of Washington's Army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through manoeuvres obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

D. W. GRIFFITH AIDS ARMY RECRUITING

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's Army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by Ormy photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry and the 3d Cavalry participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the usual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minutemen and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges and going through maneuvers obsolete—since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officials who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Jy Tribune Dec 9 1923

Jy M.P News Dec. 8, 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH recently was presented to President Coolidge by Representative Treadway. The President showed the chief executive several scenes of "Ame

Bamil

D. W. GRIFFITH has returned from Virginia to his studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y., after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary picture, "America."

Jy Eve Journal Dec 9 1923

Jy Times Dec 9 1923

R. W. Chambers Writes "America" for Griffith

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers's early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period. He has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor to the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

According to the D. W. Griffith office, Robert W. Chambers has become a commuter between New York and Mamaroneck, the reason being that he is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which Mr. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution. In addition to writing the story, Mr. Chambers is rendering assistance in the details of many of the scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians.

Griffith Made Colonel

D. W. Griffith, who is connected with motion pictures, has been commissioned a colonel by Governor Morrow, of Kentucky, from which State Colonel Griffith hails.

Herald Dec 8 1923

GL." D. W. GRIFFITH NOW.

David W. Griffith has joined the ranks Kentucky colonels among the men the amusement business along with Klaw and John Holden. He is the motion picture producer to be so ored by his native State. Gov. rin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just warded to Mayor Huston Quinn of ville a commission which makes man who founded the modern photo- with "The Birth of a Nation" and is now picturing the War of Independence for the Daughters of the erican Revolution, a full fledged lonel.

Morning Telegraph Dec. 8 1923

IT'S "KUNNEL" GRIFFITH NOW

Producer-Director Who Has Commanded Many Armies for the Screen Commissioned by Governor Morrow of Kentucky and May Now Wear Uniform.

FOY HAS A MULTIPLEX JOB

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH has commanded all sorts of armies from the day he filmed "The Birth of a Nation" down to the past week when he handled American regulars in the battle scenes for "America," his new film now in process of filming. However, he has never had a commission conferred upon him until yesterday. Being a Kentuckian, there was only one military title sought for him and it has been conferred by Governor Edwin P. Morrow who, of course, made him a "Kunnel." Governor Morrow has made Mr. Griffith a member of his staff and as such he takes place with other such great honorary comrades as Norman Hapgood, Charles Klaw, Lucius and John T. McCutcheon.

Kentucky colonels date back to the aristocratic cavalrying and all such every Kentuckian and there is a uniform that goes with it.

Milwaukee (Wis) Journal Dec 2 1923

Griffith Films Huge Pageant of the Revolution

Making of Historical Spectacle, America, Attended by Revival of Patriotism

WHEN the Daughters of the American Revolution suggested to David Wark Griffith that he make a photoplay based on the American revolution, they started something. Mr. Griffith is not only making the dashed thing but being historical, patriotic, patient, nearly broke, disappointed at Revolutionary heroes, and the Daughters wonder every day if anything and if everything goes according to schedule. Anyway, as the new film has been called, it appears to national significance even the birth of a nation.

Colonel of holding centuries of the minute holdings which most people in and about Boston know about the revolution, Griffith and his assistant director and cameraman, who are directing from place to place in many states, with hundreds, perhaps, of people, have made the grand grab with their goals as standard and better than ever before. Mr. Griffith is the director of the United States cavalry in the film.

The idea of making a film pageant of the revolution was suggested by the Daughters of the American Revolution, who thought it would be a good way to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the revolution.

A National Revival

The producing of Griffith is said to be just what is the need of a nation at this time. It is a revival of patriotism, of the spirit of the revolution, of the spirit of the Minutemen, of the spirit of the Boston Tea Party, of the spirit of the Green Dragon, of the spirit of the Sons of Liberty, of the spirit of the Continental Congress, of the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, of the spirit of the Constitution, of the spirit of the Revolutionary War, of the spirit of the Revolutionary Army, of the spirit of the Revolutionary Navy, of the spirit of the Revolutionary Militia

Denver (Colo) Post Dec 2 1923

Nashville (Tenn) Tennessean Dec 2 1923

St Paul (Minn) News Dec 2 1923

The Butte (Montana) Miner Dec 2 1923

HISTORY BARES ITS SECRETS FOR NEW 'AMERICA' FILM

New England Societies to Aid Griffith in His Latest Picture.

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production, "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies, including in particular the Lexington Historical society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world thru motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington common, where the historic "shot heard around the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

The action under Griffith's direction will continue along the road to Concord, where the battle of the bridge will be fought. It is Griffith's intention that all scenes shall be taken on actual sites except where improvements prohibit, but in every action some photographs of the actual sites will be included.

GRIFFITH SHOOTS ELEVEN HISTORICAL SCENES

Virginia Location Used in Patriotic Spectacle of "America."

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT, said by government officials to be valued at $200,000,000. This is the army base for high explosive and the cracking where the train stood was on government property.

Lexington (Ky) Herald 12/2/23

Newark (N J) Ledger Dec 3 1923

Washington (D.C) Star Dec 2 1923

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 11/6/23

Crawfordsville (Ind) Journal Nov 17 1923

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to see scenes taken relative to the life of George Washington for the film "America," which David W. Griffith is producing. Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mt. Vernon to be used as a historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the incidents which took place there.

D. W. Griffith is back from Virginia where he filmed scenes depicting the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, for his Revolutionary War story, "America."

D. W. Griffith will be the "Pictorial Father of his Country" when his "America" is finished. This film has to do with the thirteen original colonies.

D. W. Griffith has returned to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes in Virginia for his revolutionary film, "America." The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part. Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT. This is the army base for high explosives, and the track where the train stood was on government property.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to see scenes taken relative to the life of George Washington for the film "America," which David W. Griffith is producing. Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Bernon to be used as a historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life and the incidents which took place there.

The Crack Cavalry company of the Army, the famous Third stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's raiders in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This if the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, led the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft Meyer, assisted Griffith in directing the maneuvers. When Barbara La Marr four months ago married Jack Dougherty, Universal star, band, it seems, VIE

Griffith's next colossal picture is "America," in which all the important battles of the revolutionary war are being reproduced. All the historic scenes along the James river will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives. The society women of Richmond are acting as extras for the scenes requiring their presence. It is said that a train of five pullmans have been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

Mansfield (Ohio) News 11/14/23

Madison (Wis) Journal 11/25/23

Richmond (Va) News-Leader Dec 3 1923

CHAMBERS WRITING THE "AMERICA" BOOK

Novelist Joins With D. W. Griffith in Working Out Plot of Film Now Under Way.

Announcement was made yesterday that Robert W. Chambers is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming. It has been understood heretofore that Mr. Griffith himself was writing the scenario of this newest of his ambitious works. Mr. Chambers gained his first fame as a novelist in dealing with romances of the Revolutionary period. He is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, particularly Continental and Revolutionary history of New York State. He is now a regular visitor at the Griffith Mamaroneck studios, where some of the scenes are being shot.

A "film magnate" speaks out loud and clear: "Gray doesn't photograph." D. W. Griffith would be shocked to hear it. So soon has human nature changed?

On the theatrical page of the Sunday New York Times it is reported that a celebrated "film magnate" witnessed the premiere in that city of the drama which aroused more or less furore in Richmond. Would this play, "Robert E. Lee," make a good photoplay? He replied in the negative. "Gray," he said, "doesn't photograph."

It was last May or June that "The Birth of a Nation" came for its "steenth" time to Washington. There are many Southerners in Washington. But there are not so many that they will fill a theatre night after night, afternoon after afternoon through many days. That, however, was the welcome given "The Birth of a Nation." On one night at least the audience—in which a senator from Wyoming rubbed elbows with a postal clerk from Indiana—almost shouted the exit lights out.

Why was not the "film magnate" honest? Why did he not say: "This Dawnwaren thing is not Three Weeks enough for my chop of movie!" Why did he say "Gray doesn't photograph"?

Charleston (W Va) Gazette Nov 11 1923

Griffith Turns Gypsy In Making Newest Film

Noted Producer Seeking To Secure Real Atmosphere For Making of "America," New Photoplay and Vaudeville Opens Today

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the sons of the American Revolution, has been called to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Myra Mansion at Yorktown on the James river. The society women of Richmond are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic places along the James River will be the photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue for about a week.

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner Dec 2 1923

Davenport (Iowa) Dem-Leader Nov 25 1923

Mamaroneck studios after an exciting Dixie expedition, in which railroads gave him special trains and governors tendered him ovations. A delightful time was had by all, we hear. D. W. is shooting "America" faster than he has ever made a picture. He has already made more than 40 per cent of the production.

We hear that Viburton Mack should not in the cast, which includes David Dempster and

ESTATES FILMED FOR NEW PICTURE

Moving Pictures Give Modern Twist to "Gypsying," With Pullmans As the Wagons

CRACK CAVALRY COMPANY USED FOR "AMERICA"

The crack cavalry company of the army, the famous Third, stationed at Ft. Meyer, Virginia, played the part of Morgan's Raiders this week in scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film "America." This is the first time a cavalry unit has taken part in a film.

Major Wainright, aide to Secretary of War Weeks, lead the troop in the costume and character of the celebrated Morgan. Colonel Hawkins, in command of Ft. Meyer, assisting Griffith in directing the maneuvers. The White House staff of photographers were caught in one of the charges, without serious injuries.

Indianapolis (Ind) Times Dec 1 1923

Wilmington (Del) Sunday Star Nov 25 1923

Griffith Filming Historic Virginia

Wichita (Kan) Beacon Nov 27 1923

San Francisco (Cal) Chronicle Dec 2 1923

Wilmington (Del) News Journal Nov 27 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Herald Dec 2 1923

Historic Film in Making With Griffith Directing Scenes of the Revolution

When the Daughters of the American Revolution suggested to David Wark Griffith that he make a photoplay based on the American Revolution, they started something.

As a result of this suggestion Griffith is not only making the desired film, but leading historians, patriotic societies, society women, descendants of Revolutionary heroes and the United States army itself are helping him, and if everything goes according to schedule, "America," as the new film has been named, should surpass in national significance even "The Birth of a Nation."

Probably no other film during its making ever created more widespread interest than that upon which Griffith is now working. This is due in part to its patriotic nature, which has already caused a revival of interest in revolutionary times in the regions where the great conflicts of our first war were fought; and in part to the unusual way in which Griffith is making the picture.

On Actual Sites.

Instead of building replicas of the historic buildings which must figure in any drama written about the Revolution, Griffith and his entire company of players, technicians and research advisers, are travelling from place to place in special trains and taking their scenes on the actual sites, with thousands of the general public as spectators, and society belles, Revolutionary descendants and the enlisted men of the United States army as "supers."

So far this experiment of "letting the public in" to view the actual filming of a motion picture is working out admirably, even though in several cases—notably in reproduction of big battle scenes—pirate movie camera men attempted to take "shots" of the scenes which Griffith staged at great expense in order to sell them to small companies, for use in lesser pictures. A number of such attempts were stopped by state troopers in New York, and the pirates' cameras and films confiscated until the new Griffith picture has been released.

The magnitude of Griffith's understanding in "America" can, perhaps, best be understood by the fact that he aims to reproduce the major battles of the War of Independence with strict fidelity to historical accuracy; that although he has been at work but a short time and will require several months to finish filming 250,000 feet of film as been used already, and more than 50,000 persons have appeared in the scenes; that thousands of regular Army soldiers, drafted for the purpose through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, camped more than a fortnight in Putnam county to appear in a few scenes; and that when completed the picture will actually have cost more than a million dollars.

Enthusiasm Aroused.

Although he had long realized the dramatic possibilities of the American Revolution as the basis for a photoplay, Griffith has been surprised, he says, at the enthusiasm which the project seems to have aroused. His New York office and his studios at Mamaroneck have been literally flooded with requests from historical organizations which wish to aid with historical data or to appear in the picture; with valuable historical information from students of the Revolutionary period; with requests from municipalities which figured as the sites of Revolutionary inland take pictures in their cities, towns cidents for him to bring his company and hamlets.

Indeed the production of "America" may be said to have taken on the aspect of a national revival of patriotism, and particularly of a renaissance of interest in the ideals and traditions of Revolutionary days. Whole townships have turned out to watch the rehearsing and the taking of scenes, and thousands who never saw a motion picture camera, and who had forgotten there ever was a War of Independence, have had an opportunity to see a dozen cameras in action, and to learn through watching a faithful reproduction of scenes in the struggle for liberty something of the stuff of which the Minutemen were made.

Some idea of the interest with which the filming of "America" is being followed may be gained from the fact that historical societies and descendants of Revolutionary heroes in sections where scenes were being taken brought from the dens and treasure chests of their mansions, and from family vaults, invaluable relics of the revolution, ranging from pistols, spurs, and drums, to garments and gowns, gents trembling with age, and offered them to Griffith for use in the pictures. Because of this enthusiasm, it has been possible to use as proper in the Griffith production, without paying for the privilege, hundreds of dollars worth of property.

Research Involved.

Griffith's aim is preserving substantial accuracy has been achieved largely through the establishment of a special bureau of research. This bureau, which has proved so successful that the movie pioneer intends to continue maintaining a private organization under the directorship of Will M. Ryan, formerly of Washington and Lee University, has been busy for months past ferreting out data on the Revolutionary period. Through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, the bureau has been able to secure the services of a special detachment of army officers who have had years of experience in the study of military tactics and who have been assigned to Griffith through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks.

Lieut. Col. Frank Parker, Lieut. Col. Ralph Parker, Major Frank Parker, Major Ralph Parker, Major Ralph Parker, Major Ralph

Providence (RI) Journal Dec. 2, 1923

AROUND THE FILM WORLD

Costume and Historical Dramas Drive Producers to Exhaustive Research.—British Writer Discusses "Legends" of the Screen, New Photoplays and Stories.

By YD

Having almost exhausted the novelty in the statistics of movie costs, stupendous armies of animals and people, architectural marvels, and music-while-they-act, details of "research" work are being given out now by the various companies. Costume pictures are said to require a lot of it, and that is enough to start the movie publicity men off.

So they are sending forth the information of how a world-wide search lasting nine months was conducted to find just what sort of a ring King Louis, the umteenth, wore on his thumb, Friday the 31st, the very day the mob stormed the chateau for some reason or other. Without obtaining historic accuracy on this point, the producers could not go ahead. They would not insult their audiences or their own consciences by providing their king with a glass diamond set in German silver when upon the historic occasion they are picturing he was wearing his seal ring with the garnet in the snake's eye.

Something after the same manner is a reported attempt of Mr. Griffith to find out the exact [illegible] the horse Paul Revere rode. But after all, this desire to avoid anachronisms is highly laudable, and it is surmised that the publicity men are to blame for letting their enthusiasm carry them to extremes. Anachronisms do creep in and it takes the utmost care to avoid them, which reminds us of one that might have been avoided had the hero's rags been less dainty.

He was the hero of a costume drama of the cloak and sword age, and had languished in a fetid prison for oh, several months. When he came out his clothes were in tatters and just below each knee was the undeniably fresh imprint of a very modern kind of garter.

Legends in the Movie World

"In the film trade are countless legends—about stars, about humor, about happy endings," says the Manchester Guardian. "There are those who say that the cinema is itself a legend. Its childhood is legendary without a doubt, as legendary as the demands of the public upon which centres wax fat and prosper, as legendary as the facts which publicity men purvey. But the most curious legends of all, and the most peculiar to the industry, are those which have gathered round the names of certain producers, guarding them from all attack.

"In the beginning, of course, there is always a truth. On a single picture, great or near great, the myth is founded. Let there follow one or two films built on the same lines, competent, smooth-running, let people talk a little analyzing and framing the beauties in words and the myth will grow to full strength.

"The producer may not become a Crœsus, for the regular pay-box patron is difficult to gull, but amongst the cognoscenti his reputation is assured. His films, even in embryo, will be enwrapped in a legend of quality which it would take a very serious blunder to destroy. Devices which would look cheap in another man are read as quaintness in him.

"Subtlety is seen where there is no subtlety; melodrama becomes strength and crudity courage, and every little gleam of beauty is magnified a hundredfold. But such producers have had to pay a heavy price for the legend which has grown up around them; they are artists, remember, or have at least been artists once, and none knows better than they the quality of each bauble of their handiwork.

"But unlike the artists of the pen and brush, they are never allowed to make frank pot-boilers and call them so. They have to live always up to their legend, and wait in fear and trembling for their disciples to notice some point overdrawn, some oddity overstrained, to pause, to question, realize the bluff, and rebel.

"The risk of detection, however, is very small, thanks to the hundred and one screen inanities which have already jaded the mind of intelligent filmgoers and blunted the edge of criticism. We are thankful for every little scrap of artistry that comes our way, and in our gratitude refuse to examine it too closely. With a lazy but touching faith in legend the knowing have testified again and again to the debilitating influence of the ordinary screen play on the sensitive mind.

"The persistence of the Harold Lloyd legend is due to the many comedians who fail to raise a smile. The Mary Pickford legend has been fostered bravely by the weakness of her imitators. And the Sjostrom legend—one of the most persistent and clever—has mainly sprung from a comparison of America's redundancy, flamboyance and artificiality with the simple dramatic sense and light-painting of the Swede. Sjostrom has made in his career three or four remarkable films—about as many as the producers of America have made in all.

"He has made one magnificent film, 'Love's Crucible.' And then, having shaped it and turned it, he must needs set the crucible boiling with as efficient a pair of firelighters as 'Jealousy' and 'Honor,' which anyone but a legend-blind graphologist would recognize for what they are."

Portland (Ore) Oregonian 12/2/23

Griffith Is Modern Gypsy in Film Making.

Scenes for "America" Require a Wide Variety of Locations.

NOW the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Va., national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James river. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theater league are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James river will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress [illegible]

Sioux City (Ia) Journal 12/2/23

Galleries Are Permitted to See Big Picture Filmed

Galleries are to be invited to the taking of the big scenes in motion pictures, according to an understanding recently reached by the leading producers.

The purpose of inviting the public is to combat the prevalent impression of "faking" in production. So much discredit has been cast upon the reality of scenes by various writers that theater owners complained their patrons did not believe any scene in a film was legitimately photographed without "doctoring."

The first test of inviting the public, has been unusually impressive, as galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed day by day the filming of "America." The hillside near Somers, N. Y., where the scenes are being staged offer a perfect stadium for the gallery to view the thousands of soldiers and players in action.

The privilege is being abused by pirate photographers who take the action with small motion picture cameras, and hawk it to smaller companies for big scenes in minor productions. Saturday afternoon, the state police confiscated seven small motion picture cameras. Capt. French, of the state police, made no arrests, the film and camera being held in the custody of the police until "America" is released.

Washington (D.C) Star, Dec. 2, 1923

Historic Buckman Tavern at Lexington, Mass., as one of the scenes in the new Griffith photoplay, "America." Several scenes for the picture were made around Mount Vernon and other historic Virginia homes near Washington.

Variety (NYC) 12/6/23

D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" is being shown in Paris, after being forbidden twice by the French authorities, who ordered cuts to be made before finally permitting the picture to be released for the public. Despite its mutilated condition "The Birth of a Nation" (La naissance d'une nation) [illegible]

Louisville (Ky) Courier-Journal Nov 25/1923

D. W. GRIFFITH NOW A COLONEL

Movie Producer Honored By Morrow for Services In Home-coming.

TO RETURN TO LA GRANGE

When David Wark Griffith, famous motion picture producer, comes back to Oldham County next June to visit the scenes of his childhood and also be an honored guest at Kentucky's 1924 Home Coming celebration, his friends and neighbors who once addressed him as "Dave" may prefix "Colonel" to his name.

This was the announcement made yesterday by Mayor Huston Quin, general chairman for the Home Coming, who said that he had received from Gov. Edwin P. Morrow full-fledged Colonel's commissions not only for Mr. Griffith, but also for John Irving Roamer, editor of "Printer's Ink," a nationally known advertising publication.

As in the cases of Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood and Col. John T. McCutcheon, the appointments, Mayor Quin said, were made because of the services Mr. Griffith and Mr. Roamer had performed in behalf of Kentucky's 1924 Home Coming.

Friends of Mr. Griffith are planning a [illegible] celebration in his honor at his old home in La Grange when he returns to Kentucky next June. In an interview given recently to the Washington correspondent of The Courier-Journal, Mr. Griffith said he looked forward with great pleasure to the Home Coming and was anxious to visit the scenes of his childhood in his native State.

P. Digest Toronto Canada Dec 8 1923

Washington's Life Subject of Next Griffith Production

By YD

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has gone to Washington to observe the taking of scenes for D. W. Griffith's next film, "America," relating to the life of George Washington.

Arrangements are being made for the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon to be used as an exact historical setting for the scenes showing Washington's home life, and the historical incidents which transpired there.

All the scenes of Washington's earlier life will be taken on the actual settings in Virginia.

D. W. Griffith has taken a large staff and two cars of players to the Washington setting, where he will spend several weeks.

Cincinnati Ohio Billboard Dec 8/1923

Chicago (Ill) Exhibitors Herald Sep 22-1923

Griffith to Make Revolutionary Film at Request of D. A. R.

Production Will Depict Sacrifices and Stuggles During the Period of America's Founding

(Special to Exhibitors Herald)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Singular honors and further recognition of the motion picture as a medium for fostering Americanism and promoting education is bestowed on the cinema in a request made by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution that a film be made, dedicated to patriotic purposes, and depicting the struggles and sacrifices of the founders of America. This request has been acceded to and the picture will be produced by D. W. Griffith.

THIS is believed to be the first time in the history of the motion picture that a national organization of the prestige of the D. A. R. has requested the industry to produce a photoplay.

* * *

The request was first made to the Committee on Public Relations affiliated in an advisory capacity with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America of which Will H. Hays is president. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general, and Mrs. Charles White Nash, New York State Regent representing the Daughters of the American Revolution on the committee made the request to Mr. Hays who transmitted the idea to Mr. Griffith who readily consented to make the picture.

Preparation of the scenario has started and acording to present plans the picture will graphically show the struggles, sacrifices and results of the Revolutionary period. Prominent figures and scenes of early American history will be introduced and the whole is intended to foster the spirit of Americanism in an appealing manner.

* * *

Mr. Griffith, in outlining his plans for the production in a letter to Will Hays, stated:

"It is an important development in the progress of motion pictures when such an organization takes an active and helpful interest in introducing these larger themes into pictures."

Writing further on his idea of what the picture would embody Mr. Griffith's plans include the picturization of various phases of unrest today; the average working man's condition at present; the battles between capital and labor. Then the story would go into the past and show the great sacrifices made by our forefather to make possible the privileges now enjoyed. This would lead into the story of the Revolution depicting outstanding events and personages of American history.

* * *

Among them would be such scenes and incidents as the battlefield at Concord and Lexington; the road where Paul Revere made his memorable ride; the battle of Bunker Hill; Nathan Hale risking his life to protect another; the disaster at Ft. Washington and the retreat from Ft. Lee and many other scenes of importance.

According to Mr. Griffith, Robert W. Chambers, noted author, whose several books deal with the Revolutionary period will render his time and services in the making of the picture as will John L. E. Pell, an authority on American history and Anthony Paul Kelly, author of "Three Faces East."

* * *

While the picture will be of historical nature it will be a commercial production, appealing to the masses. It will be kept entirely free from political or partisan propaganda.

Dayton (Ohio) Herald 11/30/23

FAMOUS MOVIE MAN TELLS HOW TO PLAN ROOMS

W. Griffith, Director of Big Pictures, Has Ideas on Decoration in Home.

GOOD TASTE IN MOVIE INTERIORS UNPROFITABLE

That Explains Clashing Scenes But Griffith's Home Would Be Different.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—"Motion pictures have received, and merited, much criticism about the type of rooms they photograph to represent the homes of the rich," says D. W. Griffith, writing in "Arts and Decoration." Men and women in evening attire depart to the opera or arrive from it. Or a dinner or dance is in progress. Persons of wealth, family and education flash their jewels in the atmosphere of a furniture shop or an auctioneer's show room. The colors are crowded with objects that stridently quarrel. I concede the bad taste of such interiors. But there are two reasons that measurably justify the presentation of them. First they are a replica from memory of some drawing room. I have seen them as crowded and stifled by ill-assorted and unimaginative and conflicting objects in Mayfair. And if a producer had the courage to show a room as home of wealth that was not crowded with masses of misplaced magnificence he would disappoint his audiences. The new shows offers such drawing rooms and other interiors as the "poorer classes" like to think are the possessions of the rich. If I show a home of refinement as I conceive it to be, where life flows on in quiet beauty, I shall lose money. In smaller offices, however, I shall repeat the furnishing of the gods.

I believe that the cause of bad taste is developed by environment. If I had children I should try to do for them the good of taste. I should provide them with a room which my father's generation would have called the room of taste. In this I should provide them with the best I could afford, and furnished with the pictures, rugs and furniture which I thought would be the best of their kind. I should not permit them to have a piano which my father's generation would have called the piano of taste. I should not permit them to have a piano which my father's generation would have called the piano of taste. I should not permit them to have a piano which my father's generation would have called the piano of taste

Topeka (Kan) Journal Dec 5 1923

Daily Hotel Reporter Dec. 13 1923

Toledo (Ohio) Blade Dec 3 1923

Cincinnati (Ohio) Times-Star 12/

GRIFFITH HANDED COLONEL'S RANK FOR FILM FAME

It's now Col. D. W. Griffith.

For the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America," at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest to goodness colonel by the Governor of his native State, Kentucky, he just learned at Mamaroneck, where he is at work on the new film.

D. W. Griffith

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, stating he made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the State.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood and Col. John T. McCutcheon.

Syracuse (N.Y.) American Dec 9 1923

George Zimmerman and Mrs. Joseph Arthur.

From Gerrit J. Lloyd, D. W. Griffith, Inc.

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued hs screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" nof includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Paul Revere Episode in New Film

PAUL REVERE and the Zev of '76 do their stuff in D. W. Griffith's photodrama of the American Revolution, "America." The cartoon is by Hap Hadley, who appeared with the "Greenwich Village Follies" here two seasons ago.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, famous novelist, is writing the scenario for "America," the story of the Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Atlanta (Ga) Weekly Film Review Dec 8 1923

GRIFFITH BACK AT STUDIO AFTER FILMING HISTORIC VIRGINIA SITES

D. W. Griffith has returned to his studio at Mamaroneck, N. Y., after filming scenes on eleven historic sites in Virginia for his Revolutionary War spectacle, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was photographed at Yorktown on the ground where it actually took place, and more than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the famous surrender took part in the scenes.

Nashville (Tenn) Tennessean 12/9/23

SCENES IN "AMERICA" GET ARMY RECRUITS

Griffith "Shots" Now Being Used to Add Sol-soldiers.

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes, and, according to the figuring of army officers, will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry, and the 3rd Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, Minutemen and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through manouevers obsolete since revolutionary times. The men were drilled by army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Omaha (Nebr) Bee 12/9/23

Robert W. Chambers is writing the story of "America," the Revolutionary war picture being made for D. W. Griffith.

Philadelphia Rec Dec 9 1923

Robert W. Chambers, the n is writing "America," the story American Revolution, which D. W. fith is filming for the Daughters American Revolution. He is a visitor at the Griffith studios, and D. W. hold conferences in to the story inspired by descen the heroes of '76. In addition to the story of "America," Chamb been able to aid Griffith in the of many scenes, particularly those ing with the Northern Indians.

Atlanta (Ga) American Dec. 9. 1923

WRITING "AMERICA"

The secret of why Robert Chambers, the novelist, has be a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck N.Y. out at last. He is writing "Ame the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Griffith, himself a descendant the Shirley, Carter, and other ern families which figured prominently in early American affairs, has long been known as a deep student of Revolutionary history.

Providence (RI) Tribune 12/9/23

MOVIE BALL PLANS

Virginia Magee, a Griffith Star, Will Attend

Miss Virginia Magee, one of the stars with D. W. Griffith Co., an understudy of Miss Lillian Gish, and one of the most attractive actresses in motion pictures, will appear at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet on next Friday evening in connection with the movie ball under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club Under Privileged Charity Fund. Miss Magee is one of a galaxy of stars who have been signed up to appear at the event, and she will also take the leading part in the new motion picture, "A Miracle," which will be taken in this city under the direction of the Otto P. Backer Productions, Inc.

Her acting in "Sonny" and also in the "Bond Boy," in which she played opposite Richard Bartelmes, has won her a place among the critics and she was later drafted to the "footlights," where she played a leading part in "Lady Butterfly" in New York and also in the Zeigfeld Follies.

She was born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1902 and received her education in the Convent and Castle in Tarrytown, N. Y. A number of other stars have been secured for the movie ball, some of whom are Gladys Leslie, Dolores Cassinelli, Jane Thomas, Maurice Costello and Mark Haight. The names of other players, prominent in the silver sheet, who it is expected will be present, will be announced later.

Syracuse (N.Y.) American Dec 9 1923

Chambers Writing Story of "America," New Griffith Film

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that Robert W. Chambers is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming. It has been understood heretofore that Mr. Griffith himself was writing the scenario of this newest of his ambitious works. Mr. Chambers gained his first fame as a novelist in dealing with ramances of the Revolutionary period. He is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, particularly Continental and Revolutionary history of New York State. He is now a regular visitor at the Griffith Mamaroneck studios, where some of the scenes are being shot.

NY Post 12/8/23

Robert W. Chambers is writing "America," the story of the Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

NY Eve Journal Dec 8 1923

Griffith Made Colonel

D. W. Griffith, who is connected with motion pictures, has been commissioned a colonel by Governor Morrow, of Kentucky, from which State Colonel Griffith hails.

NY Herald Dec 8 1923

"COL." D. W. GRIFFITH NOW.

David W. Griffith has joined the ranks of Kentucky colonels among the men in the amusement business, along with Marc Klaw and John Golden. He is the first motion picture producer to be so honored by his native State. Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville a commission which makes the man who founded the modern photoplay with "The Birth of a Nation" and who is now picturing the War of Independence for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a full fledged colonel.

Boston (Mass) Globe Dec 9 1923

Robert W. Chambers is the author of "America," the motion picture story being filmed by David W. Griffith. Chambers is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, and he is also noted as one of the most popular novelists in America.

Port Chester (N.Y.) Item Dec. 6. 1923

Noted Novelist Is Living In Mamaroneck

The secret of why Robert W Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York city and Mamaroneck, is out at last. He is writing "America" the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfil his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor at the Griffith studios, where he and D. W hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Griffith, himself a descendant of the Shirley, Carter, and other Southern families which figured prominently in early American affairs, has long been known as a deep student of Revolutionary history.

Union (N.J.) Hudson-Dispatch Dec 6 1923

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS WRITING 'AMERICA'

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America", the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfil his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

NY Telegram 12/8/23

Washington (D.C.) Star Dec 9 1923

Chambers Writing 'America'

THE secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York city and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the revolutionary period, and who is regarded as an authority on early American history, has become so enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts and still keep "America" marching to completion.

Pittsburgh (Pa) Gazette-Times Dec 9 1923

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

NY Eve World Dec 7. 1923

OLD ADAGE IN NEW FORM.

Politicians for years have quoted, "As goes Maine, so goes the country!" and, during the past few years, we've noted that this should be paraphrased into "As goes Griffith, so goes the movies!"

It seems that no matter what D. W. G. starts he has so many followers and folks trying to "beat him to" the screen with the same idea that it has at times proved rather disconcerting.

The most flagrant case of this sincerest form of flattery was when he had finished his version of "The Two Orphans" only to have about four smaller productions of "The Two Orphans" on the screen before the scheduled opening, and now since he has announced that he is making a big picture of the American Revolution called "America," there are scores of other American Revolution stories being rushed onto the screen.

NY Telegraph Dec 9 1923

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH has commanded all sorts of armies from the day he filmed "The Birth of a Nation" down to the past week when he handled American regulars in the battle scenes for "America," his new film now in process of filming. However, he has never had a commission conferred upon him until yesterday. Being a Kentuckian, there was only one military title possible for him and it has been conferred by Governor Edwin P. Morrow who, of course, made him a "Kunnel." Governor Morrow has made Mr. Griffith a member of his staff and as such he takes place with other such great honorary commanders as Norman Hapgood, George Horace Lorimer and John T. McCutcheon.

Kentucky colonels have to go to inaugurations, unveilings and all such great maneuvers, and there is a uniform that goes with it.

Colonel Griffith.

It's now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith. For the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made a colonel by the Governor of his native State, Kentucky. Governor Edwin P. Morrow, of Kentucky, has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn, of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the State of Kentucky. Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Colonel George Horace Lorimer, Colonel Norman P. Hapgood and Colonel John T. McCutcheon. Griffith was born in La Grange, Ky., January 22, 1875, one of eight children born to General Wark Griffith—the "Roaring Jake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

(Copyright 1923, N. S. Jay Kaufman.)

NY Tribune Dec 9. 1923

D. W. Chambers Writes "America" for Griffith

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers's early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period. He has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor at the Griffith studios where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour Dec 7. 1923

FOUR.

Boston (Mass) Traveler Dec 10 1923

Griffith Pictures Voted Most Popular in England

Boston (Mass) Post Dec 11 1923

Exhibitors Herald Chicago (Ill) Dec 15. 1923

United Artists

D. W. GRIFFITH has returned to his Mamaroneck, N. Y., studio after filming scenes on eleven historic sites in Virginia for his Revolutionary picture, "America." Charlie Chaplin's first comedy offering through United Artists will be "The Gold Rush," a burlesque on the days of the "Forty niners" [illegible] will be completed about February 1.

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee Dec 6 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH was [illegible] at the creation of [illegible] "America" for the coming [illegible]

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Dec 7 1923

Moline (Ill) Dispatch Dec 6 1923

Griffith Turns Gypsy in Making Latest Picture

Now the police have given a modern twist to "tramping." The caravan of one wagon has become a private suite of Pullmans.

Instead of fortune being told, one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, America.

A train of six Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the old or Inspiration of Virginia are his guides. G. Wyndham Hayes of Richmond, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Yorktown Battlefield, where the British surrendered to the United States and France, and scenes will be taken for the picture depicting that previous [illegible]

All the heroes of Revolutionary Days will appear in "America." Here are seen Samuel Adams (J. Max Brandt) and John Hancock (William Conquest) being captured by Tories (Frank Wilson of the Lexington, Mass., Historical Society, John B. Pitt, and D. W. Pitt). The picture will show [illegible] the taking of Samuel Clark and John of Lexington which [illegible]

In the lower picture D. W. Griffith is seen going over the top of "Bunker Hill" during the filming of "America," with which he is trying to repeat the "Rock of Ages" [illegible] The figure on the top of the trench is that of Samuel Prescott. The men in the trenches are real U. S. regulars, loaned for the picture through the War Department, which put several thousand soldiers into camp at Kingston, New York, to get models in making the pictures.

Photoplay Magazine January 1924

Over the Top at Bunker Hill

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee Dec 11 1923

Elwood Ebbits to Enter Motion Picture Field With D. W. Griffith

DAVID WARK

Chicago (Ill) News Waterbury (Conn) Standard 12/7/23

Tacoma (Wash) Ledger 12/9/23

Memphis (Tenn) Comm-Appeal Dec 9, 1923

37

Paul Revere and the Zev Of 1776 Redo Their Stuff

D. W. Griffith is making a spectacular photodrama of the American Revolution which will be called "America," and which is being filmed on the exact spots that are represented in this historical feature.

'No One Ever Late for "Date" With President of the U. S.

Funny Little Three Cornered Smile Greets All Callers. Arkansas Traveling Exhibit Calls to Pay Respects at White House.

BY DAISY FITZHUGH AYRES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The president of the United States greets his company with a funny little three-cornered twisted smile that includes his nose and one-half of his face. It's a queer little kind of round the corner smile with a pleasant little confidential kink in it. Also its a rare achievement, because the seriously visaged president doesn't indulge much in dimpling and smiling. The eminent gentleman as a rule has always been more along the lines of the knight with the rueful countenance. His is the tragic rather than the comic mask.

It's an awful lot of fun when Mr. Slemp answers your telephone request after you've called up "Main Six" and says "yes, you may call on the president if you come at 1:15 sharp." Then likely as not, Mr. Coolidge's custodian ponders a second and amends his dispensation to a "Say, suppose you make it 1:20. I think I can get you in better at that time." So priceless are even the most infinitesimal midgings of time when it comes to checking up the Jay's doings at the White House.

Of course nobody is ever a hairbreadth late at a presidential appointment. You get there ahead of time, of course, with your smiles and your grins all neatly adjusted, and your clever little speech rehearsed. Everybody always secretly hopes to make an impression.

Mr. Dalrymple who has been police guard at the entrance to the executive offices at the western end of the White House, courteously waves you to enter. You find the lobby pretty well filled with messenger men in waiting and other eager individuals. In the transverse corridor usually are seated Col. Edwin William Starling of Kentucky, who has been on duty with three presidents and other plain clothes secret service men. Mr. McKenna is the gentleman who sits at the desk and keeps records of things. Mr. C. Bascom Slemp, former congressman, receives you heartily. Most people are old friends of his. He throws open the door of the beautiful green carpeted, white walled oval office of the chief executive with a cordial, "Mr. President, I present Mr. and Mrs. Blankson of Kentucky." The president seated before the same mahogany desk toward the center of the room, that had accommodated President Harding and his predecessors—there is always a vase of flowers upon it, puts down his pen and arises with alacrity. His greetings are kindly and homefolksy. He seems really glad to see you. "Kentucky is a mighty pretty state," says Mr. Coolidge, with the humorous little three-cornered smile that includes the end of his nose.

The gentleman speaks with a definite New England drawl. You could spot him geographically even though he were a complete stranger. There is a certain characteristic twang to his deliberate utterances that speaks indubitably of Maine, New Hampshire or Vermont.

Mr. Coolidge is always meticulously groomed. His clothes are that minute home from the tailor or presser. He evidently doesn't wait for tub night to roll around before he takes a bath. There's no better valeted man in Washington than our new president.

"Yes," agrees Mr. Slemp. "Kentucky is indeed a fine state. My mother was born in Kentucky, and I have a sister married there in the Blue Grass."

A few more blithesome remarks are passed between visitors and host—everybody standing, and the five or 10 minutes of your allotment is passed. It may be 1:20. Making your exit you encounter on the threshold the next batch of callers on the day's budget. Likely as not it's a bevy of deeply awed school girls solemnly chaperoned. Mr. Slemp dismisses you with a smile and proceeds to handle the on-coming posse. There are no intermissions. Mr. Slemp, however, keeps the president's afternoons entirely free from all social intrusions. Mr. David Wark Griffith of La Grange, Ky., and moving picture fame recently had a heart to heart with Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Griffith was making a Colonial film in his production of "America" at Four Mile Run, Va.

Over 3,000 shook hands with indefatigable President Harding and his wife on a single New Year's Day. It is to be hoped Mr. Coolidge has no ambition to break the record. But then Mr. Harding used to say it was the fondest thing he was of! He claimed the effort did not tax him. But flesh has its limitations.

And speaking of the valiant endeavors of Mr. C. Bascom Slemp to keep his chief permanently off the sick lists, Mr. Slemp is the focus of much flattering attention himself. He's a mighty good mixer, friendly and home-folksy and he is delightfully eligible, matrimonially speaking. The gentleman's own secretary is swamped acknowledging invitations. He lived so close to Kentucky, where he used to spend most of his time, that his attention is largely pre-empted by members of the Kentucky colony in Washington. Capt. C. C. Calhoun, an old friend of Mr. Slemp back in Lexington, and Mrs. Calhoun, one of the dominant women of Washington, gave a brilliant dinner for the presidential secretary.

In Big Stone Gap, Va., Bascom Slemp and John Fox, Jr., the Kentucky novelist, were famous buddies. Together the two friends would tramp over the mountains and gather material for the Kentuckian's stories. Mr. Slemp is said to be the original of one of the characters in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," just as Dr. Jonothan C. Day of New York figured as a Kentucky mountain boy in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

James Lane Allen, greatest of Kentucky novelists who first helped toward fame the struggling young writer of his own state, the late John Fox, who married Fritzi Scheff, is also a friend of Mr. Slemp.

Mrs. Mary Lee Dodson Callahan, wife of Lieut. Malcolm Callahan, on duty at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, herself a Tennesseean, was a delegate to the recent U. D. C. convention from the Nathan Bedford Forrest Chapter, Humboldt, Tenn.

Mrs. George B. Gill, state president Arkansas division, U. D. C., presented Mrs. Coolidge with a niboak vase when she called at the White House. Headed by former Gov. Charles H. Brough of Arkansas, a party of 125 Arkansas men and women, carrying exhibits of Arkansas' products, called on the president with gifts. The Arkansas congressional delegation gave the party a grand time.

George T. Bassett of Memphis is secretary and treasurer of the Glee Club of the Catholic University.

Mrs. T. J. Ahern of Texarkana, Arkansas, visited her brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Carl J. Moss.

Harry T. Kranz of Arkansas, Miss Laura B. Mason, Oscar McPeak, Ralph C. Hale of Tennessee, were admitted to practice before the supreme court of the District of Columbia, as were Miss Laura B. Mason, Harry R. Hall, Cyrus H. Slafford, T. C. Havell of the same state.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post Nov 16 1923

Lionel Barrymore, Carol Dempster and Neil Hamilton will appear in D. W. Griffith's "America."

Denver (Colo) Times Dec 9 1923

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Dec 9 1923

Denver (Colo) News Dec 9 1923

Nashville (Tenn) Banner Dec 9 1923

Lewiston (Maine) Herald Dec 9 1923

Boston (Mass) Advertiser Dec 9 1923

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Dec 9 1923

San Francisco (Cal) Journal Dec 9 1923

Seattle (Wash) Post-Intel 12/9/23

Seattle (Wash) Times Dec 9 1923

Canton (Ohio) News Dec 7 1923

Topeka (Kansas) Capital Dec 9 1923

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 12/8/23

Chicago (Ill) Journal Dec 7, 1923

Chicago (Ill) American 12/7/23

CHAMBERS IS WRITING STORY OF REVOLUTION

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, is out at last. He is writing "America", the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfil his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

Army as Extras In Griffith's "America"

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes and, according to the figuring of army officers, will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing the Sixteenth and Eighteenth Infantry and the Third Cavalry participating in the action, through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown made up as British Grenadiers, Minutemen, and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since revolutionary times. The men were drilled by army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Griffith's 'America' Used for Recruiting Purposes

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, already is getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes and, according to the figuring of army officers, will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States regulars, including the Sixteenth and Eighteenth infantry and the Third cavalry, participating in the action thru the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

PICTURE BRINGS RECRUITS

United States Army Aided by Griffith's "America."

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's Army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for Army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of Army officers will have aided in increasing the personnel of our fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by Army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States Regulars, including the 16th and 18th Infantry and the 3rd Cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown [illegible] the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minute men and members of Washington's Army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by Army officers who, collaborating with Griffith's experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Spending Five Minutes With the President

Such Appointments Are Staged Through the Kindness of Secretary Slemp—One Must Arrive Promptly and Depart on Time. Mrs. Coolidge's Little Come-In Smile.

BY DAISY FITZHUGH AYRES.

Above—In the trenches at Bunker Hill showing U. S. regular army soldiers garbed as British redcoats and as Minutemen, acting as "extras" for D. W. Griffith's production of "America." This film is sponsored by the Daughters and Sons of the American Revolution.

MOVIE SOLDIERS ARE REAL ARTILLERS

Train Caravan To Carry Actors To Historic Sites

At Work on "America."

Middletown (Ohio) Journal 12/25/23

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Dec 9, 1923

38

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 12/9/23

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer Dec 9, 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN FILMING

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The Society women of Richmond composing the Little Theatre League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue about a week.

Above—A consultation on location between D. W. Griffith and some of his players in "America," the photodrama based on the American Revolution and sponsored by the Daughters and Sons of the Revolution.

"AMERICA" FILM DRAWS RECRUITS

Army Officers Cooperate With Producer in Planning Revolutionary War Photoplay

Still in the process of filming, "America," which is being made at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of army officers will have aided in increasing the personel of the fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States regulars, including the 16th and 18th infantry and the 3d cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minute men, and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by army officers who, collaborating with experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

CAROL DEMPSTER, star in D. W. Griffith's productions. She will be seen next in "America."

Davenport (Iowa) Times 12/8/23

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution. Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 12/11/23

Wawash (Ind) Plain-Dealer Dec. 1, 1923

Griffith receives new honors.

It's now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith.

The motion picture pproducer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth Of A Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest-to-goodness colonel by the Governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the state of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Happgood, and Col. John T. McCutcheon.

Griffith was born in La Grange, Ky., January 22, 1880, one of eight children born to Genral Jacob Wark Griffith—the "Roaring Jake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

Word of the signal honor bestowed upon him by the Blue Grass State reached Griffith yesterday at his studios at Mamaroneck, where he is filming scenes for "America." He declined to be interviewed.

GRIFFITH'S REVOLUTIONARY PLAY

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary screen feature which he is now preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

San Francisco (Cal) Journal Dec 9 1923

America doesn't know the color of its best known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere, when he made his famous ride. D. W. Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Syracuse (N Y) Herald Dec 9, 1923

Regulars as Actors—United States regulars as red coats and Continental soldiers in the trenches at Bunker Hill during the making of "America."

Chicago (Ill) American Dec. 10, 1923

HONOR GRIFFITH

It's now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith.

For the motion picture producer, who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest to goodness colonel by the governor of his native state, Kentucky, in recognition of the honor he has brought the state.

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 12/9/23

Evening World 12/12/23

As far as Screenings can ascertain, D. W. Griffith is the first motion picture producer to be honored by his native State by being allowed to tack the title "Colonel" before his name.

News that the Governor of Kentucky, where Griffith was born, had placed him among the famous Kaintucky Kernels arrived at the Mamaroneck studios yesterday.

And Griffith is deserving another medal, for he told us all about being made a Colonel and never once tried to work in the old run about being a pun.

Los Angeles (Cal) Times Dec 13 1923

GRIFFITH IS NOW KENTUCKY COLONEL

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH)

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—D. W. Griffith has commanded all sorts of armies from the day he filmed "The Birth of a Nation" down to the past week when he headed American regulars in the battle scenes for "America," his new film, now in the making. However, he had never had a commission conferred upon him until yesterday.

As he is a Kentuckian there was only one military title possible for him, and it has been conferred by Gov. Edwin P. Morrow, who, of course, made him a "colonel." Kentucky colonels have to go to no expenditure, uniforms and all such great maneuvers, and there is a uniform that goes with it.

Salt Lake (Utah) Telegram Dec 13, 1923

Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette Dec. 9, 1923

PRICELESS RELICS USED IN 'AMERICA'

DIRECTOR'S AIM OF FILM IS TO ASSURE HISTORICAL ACCURACY.

Norfolk (Va) News Times-Leader 12/9/23

"America" First Picture Used for Recruits

RIGHT OFF THE REEL

By ELEANOR VERT

Robert W. Chambers Is Writing Story for Griffith's 'America'

HEROINE OF "AMERICA"

Boston (Mass) Traveler Dec 12, 1923

"AMERICA" FILM DRAWS RECRUITS

Army Officers Cooperate With Producer in Planning Revolutionary War Photoplay

Filming of "America" Is Steady Progress

Los Angeles (Cal) Herald Dec 13 1923

Salt Lake (Utah) Telegram Dec 13, 1923

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer Dec 13, 1923

Boston (Mass) Morning Herald Dec. 12, 1923

Boston (Mass) Herald Dec 12, 1923

Boston (Mass) Post Dec 12, 1923

Chicago (Ill) Herald Dec 12, 1923

Chicago (Ill) Herald Dec 12, 1923

Chicago (Ill) Herald Dec 12, 1923

Chesapeake and Ohio Plays Prominent Part in "Shooting" "America"

WELL, FOLKS, we are in the movies. In real movies too, collaborating with David Wark Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation." In November the Chesapeake and Ohio played an important part in making some of the scenes for Mr. Griffith's stupendous production, "America," which, it is hoped, will recreate a reverence for the freedom and blessed privileges of citizenship for which our forefathers bled and died.

What stands out most prominently in the Chesapeake and Ohio's participation was the personal solicitation of G. Watson James, Jr., and the splendid support and effective service rendered by Joseph L. Stines, Southeastern Passenger Agent, after Mr. James had passed on the "tip." Not only did Mr. Stines, as a Passenger Agent, measure up to the standard of Chesapeake and Ohio courtesy, but he had the unanimous support of the Passenger Department.

The story is a good one, so here goes: Mr. Griffith and staff arrived in Richmond, Va., on October 31st, bearing a letter of introduction to G. Watson James, Jr., your Editor, who happens to be General Historian, General Society, Sons of the Revolution. It was the great producer's desire to gain entree to some of the celebrated colonial homes which border our Peninsula District, also to obtain atmosphere and local color from the Historian.

This was arranged by Mr. James and in addition a cast of some thirty young men and young ladies assembled to assist Mr. Griffith's company of sixty. The next step was an introduction to Governor Trinkle. At the conference which followed, the General Historian was requested by the Governor to see that Mr. Griffith met certain gentlemen at Yorktown and Williamsburg. At the request of Mr. Griffith, Mr. James arranged this trip, persuading the party to travel via our fast morning train on Sunday, November 4th, instead of by motor. Preceding the party to the station Mr. James made all arrangements for their comfort.

After an all day trip which embraced Jamestown, Yorktown and Williamsburg, the party returned by the afternoon train. During the return trip, Mr. Griffith expressed some fears as to proper accommodations at Yorktown for his cast. Mr. James instantly suggested a special train to be routed via Government Mine track to within half a mile of the company's proposed location. The special movement was authorized then and there and Mr. James was asked to make the arrangement.

In charge of Mr. Stines, who had already been adopted by the entire party and christened a "regular railroad man," the special left Main Street Station, Saturday, November 10th, at 9.30 p.m. It consisted of two baggage cars, one ten compartment sleeper, one sixteen section sleeper, one flat and a stock car. On the flat was loaded two magnificent coaches, exact reproductions of those which conveyed Lord Dunsmore to and from Virginia's ancient capital. In the stock car were horses for the outriders, Paul Revere's horse, George Washington's and those of other re-born notables that shortly will flit across the silver screen. In the sleepers were such stars as Carol Dempster, known to all stardom as the dainty heroine of "Dream Street," "The Love Flower," and "The White Flower;" Neil Hamilton, who it will be recalled went "Down to the Sea in Ships;" Charles Mack, whom every screen fan knows; David Wark Griffith, the great genius of moving pictures, and a host of other famous, silent actors. In the baggage cars were thousands of dollars worth of gorgeous costumes, wigs and paraphernalia with which to make the greatest historical and patriotic film ever attempted.

Under the watchful eyes of Mr. Stines, Trainmaster Anderson, Engineer K. S. Turner, and Fireman J. R. Johnson the train finally was parked within the Government's Mine depot. When the York river gave back the sheen of a late fall's rising sun, members of the party arose in their warm, comfortable, moving home to spend the Sabbath in rest.

Early on the following morning, inhabitants of staid and historic Yorktown, awoke, rubbed their eyes and poured into the streets. "General Washington" on a prancing charger quieted his nervous horse near the immortal Nelson Mansion. Bewigged and powdered grande dames of the colonial period swept down the lanes. Coaches and outriders stopped for a brief respite at the old customs house. Carol Dempster, lovely to behold, tripped lightly into the coach and was driven off to "Westover." Slaves, with yoked oxen and the oldfashioned hogshead tobacco cart, ambled down to the market. Dames curtsied, fiddlers played before "Ye Old Tavern" in joy for the deliverance and victory of American arms. Yorktown went back over a century and stayed back for three days.

About midday of the second day things commenced to happen for the Chesapeake and Ohio, when Herbert Sutch, Assistant Director, announced he would want two more special movements. The long distance phone was brought into action and details were arranged.

Mr. Stines soon had the first special, consisting of engine, sleeper and baggage car, rolling on its long journey to Mamaroneck, N. Y., about 10.30 p.m. Tuesday, November 13th, and followed on board the second special November 14th, the party arriving at Richmond about 3.00 p.m. Here the movement was broken up—one sleeper switched to the Atlantic Coast Line for its journey to Mamaroneck, the baggage car to follow later. When some members of the party left by the sleeper mentioned above, Mr. Stines was on hand to see them safely on their journey. Mr. Griffith's appreciation was expressed in a letter from Mr. Sutch, published elsewhere, and which it is the MAGAZINE'S pleasure to reproduce.

As we go to press, some of the Griffith party are still showing their fondness for the Chesapeake and Ohio as they are now located at Staunton and in the near future will return to Richmond. Joe Stines has been promised the business whenever in the territory, and Joe will get it. "Personal solicitation every day keeps the pink slip away." We might add also that other evidence of the Griffith company's appreciation is reproduced on the Woman's Page. Its members are one hundred per cent. for the Chesapeake and Ohio.

In conclusion it may be of interest to our readers to know the action of "America" includes such battles as "Concord," "Bunker Hill" and that it starts with Pitt's defense of the colonies and ends with the inauguration of General Washington. Every possible source of historic data has been run down to insure its historical accuracy both by Mr. Griffith Robert W. Chambers and John L. E. Pell, who jointly produced the scenario.

"America" will surpass "The Birth of a Nation" in art and action if such a thing can be believed. So far its production has cost over a $1,000,000. It has the official endorsement of the Nation's Chief Executive and every historical and patriotic society called upon for aid.

Mr. J. D. Potts, P. T. M.
Dear Sir:

As representative of the D. W. Griffith, Inc., I wish to thank you for the unusually courteous treatment accorded to our company by The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and, in particular, by the kind and obliging Joseph Stines, who was with us on our journey to and from Yorktown.

I, personally, have traveled on most of the railroads in this country under many conditions, but I have yet to meet anyone who excels Mr. Stines, both in his official capacity and his personal relations with the people under his care.

Thanking you personally for your kind attention, and hoping that we will soon travel again on the Chesapeake and Ohio, I am,

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) H. Sutch,
Asst. Director for D. W. Griffith.

D. W. Griffith Filming "America" at Yorktown

(1) D. W. Griffith ready to say "camera." (2) A confab over the special movements, (left to right) Herbert Sutch, Assistant Director, G. Watson James, Jr., Editor of the MAGAZINE, Joseph L. Stines, Southeastern Passenger Agent and J. M. Ashcraft, Financial Secretary. (3) Lord Dunsmore's coach and outriders near the historic Customs House. (4) Neil Hamilton as "Paul Revere," resting on his modern horse, and eating chicken.

We are happy to introduce, winsome, dainty, demure, charming Carol Dempster, who will be the heroine of David Wark Griffith's gigantic film "America."

With her unaffected simplicity and gracious manner, Miss Dempster cast a spell over all employes of the Chesapeake and Ohio with whom she came in contact. To Margaret Lynn, feminine scribe of the MAGAZINE,

Miss Carol Dempster
Heroine of Griffith's "America"

Miss Dempster expressed her delight at visiting Virginia and her special delight in riding on the Chesapeake and Ohio which traverses some of the most sacred and historic ground in America. Devoid of all atmosphere of the beauty doctor, Carol Dempster captures one's admiration by her sheer beauty of face and genuineness of character.

To go from the sublime to the ridiculous: Miss Dempster races over Smithfield Ham, to which she was introduced during her stay in Virginia.

If you doubt her admiration of Virginia and the Chesapeake and Ohio, why, read her letter, reproduced in the left hand columns.

To-
Margaret Lynn and the women of the Chesapeake and Ohio magazine:-
We want to thank all of you Virginians for your great courtesy and hospitality to us while working in Mr Griffith's picture "America" - without Virginia's aid it would almost seem the final part of the picture "America" could not be made but as far as that is concerned could the entire America have come into being without the aid of old Virginia!
Merry Christmas and Happy New Year -
Carol Dempster

Storm Breaks

Expected Dissension Over "The Birth of a Nation" Loose in Kansas—Many Protests

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Topeka, Kan.—A storm has broken over the action of the censor board in authorizing the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Kansas.

Governor Davis, when he returns from a trip will find an assortment of protests that will occupy his attention. The protests are pouring not only into the governor's office, but also into the office of the attorney general, Charles B. Griffith. Petitions are coming into Griffith's office begging him to take legal steps to stop the showing of the film.

It is probable Griffith will advise the board to repeal its action in admitting the picture. The Supreme Court has decided the action of the board was final. Only Governor Davis could stop the picture, and the governor has said that he saw nothing wrong with it.

A petition of 500 citizens of Salina, business men, city and county officials and school teachers has been presented the governor begging him to stop the film. A petition of 183 signatures from Fort Scott negroes was sent to Griffith, who transmitted it to Governor Davis.

The ministers of Wichita, Fort Scott, Salina and Kansas City, have filed protests and many personal letters are coming in. Delegations of negroes from Topeka and Coffeyville called on Griffith today and protested.

TO PLAY IN "AMERICA."

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Warfield, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Movie Producer With Wade In "Crick," Too

"In the theft of a thrilling life must be a sensation wonderful to experience and David Wark Griffith, genius of the motion picture world, must be still feeling the effects of it according to the way he writes Mayor Huston Quin.

"I must admit the Governor's appointment gave me the theft of my life," are the exact words the master movie producer uses in his letter acknowledging receipt of a Colonel's commission which he was awarded because of his activities in behalf of Kentucky's 125th Home Coming Association.

Explaining "Colonel" Griffith for he takes great pride in signing his letter to this person—says:

"As a boy I was proud of my father's title to my side and had my young ample and he (Colonel) and I will convention the feeling of pride and we had come and we'll subsequent legal title matter. And now, letter calls me that, although unofficial, I am proud, and consequently, I feel that I should be a Kentucky Colonel. Kentucky was the first state in which I made a picture, and I shall always remember the kindness of the people of the Bluegrass State

Middletown (Ohio) Journal 11/27/23

Indianapolis Star Dec 9, 1923

38

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 12/9/23

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain-Dealer Dec 9, 1923

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY IN FILMING

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans.

Instead of fortunes being told one is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production, "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides.

G. Watson James of Richmond, Virginia, national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrn Mansion at Westover on the James River. The Society women of Richmond composing the Little Theatre League, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James River will be photographed, including particularly the Shirley Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

The gypsy progress will continue about a week.

Above—A consultation on location between D. W. Griffith and some of his players in "America," the photodrama based on the American Revolution and sponsored by the Daughters and Sons of the Revolution.

"AMERICA" FILM DRAWS RECRUITS

Army Officers Cooperate With Producer in Planning Revolutionary War Photoplay

Still in the process of filming, "America," which is being made at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of army officers will have aided in increasing the personel of the fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States regulars, including the 16th and 18th infantry and the 3d cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minute men, and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by army officers who, collaborating with experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

CAROL DEMPSTER, star in D. W. Griffith's productions. She will be seen next in "America."

Syracuse (N.Y.) Herald Dec 9, 1923

Regulars as Actors—United States regulars as red coats and Continental soldiers in the trenches at Bunker Hill during the making of "America."

Davenport (Iowa) Times 12/8/23

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution. Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

Norwalk (Conn) Hour 12/11/23

Griffith receives new honors.

It's now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith.

The motion picture pproducer who devoluntionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth Of A Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest-to-goodness colonel by the Governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the state of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood, and Col. John T. McCutcheon.

Griffith was born in La Grange, Ky., January 22, 1880, one of eight children born to Genral Jacob Wark Griffith—the "Roaring Jake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

Word of the signal honor bestowed upon him by the Blue Grass State reached Griffith yesterday at his studios at Mamaroneck, where he is filming scenes for "America." He declined to be interviewed.

Wawesh (Ind) Plain-Dealer Dec. 1, 1923

GRIFFITH'S REVOLUTIONARY PLAY

"America" is the title definitely selected for D. W. Griffith's revolutionary screen feature which he is now preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

San Francisco (Cal) Journal Dec 9 1923

America doesn't know the color of its best-known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere, when he made his famous ride. D. W. Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Mr. Edwin B. Worthington, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of that period.

Chicago (Ill) American Dec. 10, 1923

HONOR GRIFFITH

It's now "Col." D. W. Griffith.

For the motion picture producer, who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest to goodness colonel by the governor of his native state, Kentucky, in recognition of the honor he has brought the state.

Los Angeles Cal Times Dec 12 1923

GRIFFITH IS NOW KENTUCKY COLONEL

(EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH)

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—D. W. Griffith has commanded all sorts of armies from the day he filmed "The Birth of a Nation" down to the past week when he handled American regulars in the battle scenes for "America," his new film, now in the making. However, he had never had a commission conferred upon him until yesterday.

As he is a Kentuckian there was only one military title possible for him, and it has been conferred by Gov. Edwin P. Morrow, who, of course, made him a "colonel." Kentucky colonels have to go to inaugurations, weddings and attend great maneuvers, and there is a uniform that goes with it.

Charleston (W Va) Gazette 12/9/23

Evening Star (Washington) 12/11/23

As far as Screenings can ascertain, D. W. Griffith was the first motion picture producer to be honored by his native State by being allowed to tack the title "Colonel" before his name.

News that the Governor of Kentucky, where Griffith was born, had placed him among the famous Kaintucky Kernels arrived at the Mamaroneck studios yesterday.

And Griffith is deserving another medal, for he told us all about being made a Colonel and never once tried to work in the old pun about being a pest.

Salt Lake (Utah) Telegram Dec 13, 1923

"AMERICA" FILM DRAWS RECRUITS

Army Officers Cooperate With Producer in Planning Revolutionary War Photoplay

Still in the process of filming, "America," which is being made at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for Uncle Sam's army.

It is the first dramatic photoplay ever used for army recruiting purposes, and according to the figuring of army officers will have aided in increasing the personel of the fighting forces long before it is placed on public exhibition.

Photographs taken by army photographers during the filming of scenes in New England, New York and Virginia, showing United States regulars, including the 16th and 18th infantry and the 3d cavalry, participating in the action through the courtesy of Secretary of War Weeks, are being used in an intensive campaign now being conducted by the recruiting service.

Thousands of regulars are shown enjoying the unusual experiences of being made up as British grenadiers, minute men, and members of Washington's army, taking part in spectacular charges, and going through maneuvers obsolete since Revolutionary times. The men were drilled by army officers who, collaborating with experts, made a special study of the strategy and tactics of the War of Independence.

Filming of "America" In Steady Progress

New Orleans (La) Times-Picayune 12/9/23

PRICELESS RELICS USED IN 'AMERICA'

ARCHAEOLOGY AIM OF FILM IS TO ASSURE HISTORICAL ACCURACY.

"America" First Picture Used for Recruits

RIGHT OFF THE REEL

By ELEANOR VERT

Robert W. Chambers Is Writing Story for Griffith's 'America'

HEROINE OF "AMERICA"

Boston (Mass) Traveler Dec 12, 1923

Chesa

WELL, the m too, collabora
Griffith, the Birth of a N
the Chesape an importan of the scen stupendous which, it is reverence f blessed privi
which our died.

What sta
nently in Ohio's parti
sonal solici
James, Jr.,
port and effe
by Joseph I Passenger A had passed
did Mr. St
Agent, meas of Chesapea
but he had
of the Passe

The story goes: Mr. rived in Ric ber 31st, be duction to your Editor
General Hi
ciety, Sons was the gre gain entree t colonial hon
Peninsula I atmosphere
the Histori

This was and in add thirty you ladies asse
Griffith's c
next step w
Governor T
ference whic
Historian
Governor t
met certain

We are ha winsome, dain
ing Carol Dem

To

Albany (N.Y.) News Dec. 13, 1923

Chesapeake and Ohio Plays Prominent Part in "Shooting" "America"

WELL, FOLKS, we are in the movies. In real movies too, collaborating with David Wark Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation." In November the Chesapeake and Ohio played an important part in making some of the scenes for Mr. Griffith's stupendous production, "America," which, it is hoped, will recreate a reverence for the freedom and blessed privileges of citizenship for which our forefathers bled and died.

What stands out most prominently in the Chesapeake and Ohio's participation was the personal solicitation of G. Watson James, Jr., and the splendid support and effective service rendered by Joseph L. Stines, Southeastern Passenger Agent, after Mr. James had passed on the "tip." Not only did Mr. Stines, as a Passenger Agent, measure up to the standard of Chesapeake and Ohio courtesy, but he had the unanimous support of the Passenger Department.

The story is a good one, so here goes: Mr. Griffith and staff arrived in Richmond, Va., on October 31st, bearing a letter of introduction to G. Watson James, Jr., your Editor, who happens to be General Historian, General Society, Sons of the Revolution. It was the great producer's desire to gain entree to some of the celebrated colonial homes which border our Peninsula District, also to obtain atmosphere and local color from the Historian.

This was arranged by Mr. James and in addition a cast of some thirty young men and young ladies assembled to assist Mr. Griffith's company of sixty. The next step was an introduction to Governor Trinkle. At the conference which followed, the General Historian was requested by the Governor to see that Mr. Griffith met certain gentlemen at Yorktown and Williamsburg. At the request of Mr. Griffith, Mr. James arranged this trip, persuading the party to travel via our fast morning train on Sunday, November 4th, instead of by motor. Preceding the party to the station Mr. James made all arrangements for their comfort.

After an all day trip which embraced Jamestown, Yorktown and Williamsburg, the party returned by the afternoon train. During the return trip, Mr. Griffith expressed some fears as to proper accommodations at Yorktown for his cast. Mr. James instantly suggested a special train to be routed via Government Mine track to within half a mile of the company's proposed location. The special movement was authorized then and there and Mr. James was asked to make the arrangement.

> Mr. J. D. Potts, P. T. M.
> Dear Sir:
>
> As representative of the D. W. Griffith, Inc., I wish to thank you for the unusually courteous treatment accorded to our company by The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and, in particular, by the kind and obliging Joseph Stines, who was with us on our journey to and from Yorktown.
>
> I, personally, have traveled on most of the railroads in this country under many conditions, but I have yet to meet anyone who excels Mr. Stines, both in his official capacity and his personal relations with the people under his care.
>
> Thanking you personally for your kind attention, and hoping that we will soon travel again on the Chesapeake and Ohio, I am,
>
> Yours sincerely,
> (Signed) H. Sutch,
> Asst. Director for D. W. Griffith.

In charge of Mr. Stines, who had already been adopted by the entire party and christened a "regular railroad man," the special left Main Street Station, Saturday, November 10th, at 9.30 p.m. It consisted of two baggage cars, one ten compartment sleeper, one sixteen section sleeper, one flat and a stock car. On the flat was loaded two magnificent coaches, exact reproductions of those which conveyed Lord Dunsmore to and from Virginia's ancient capital. In the stock car were horses for the outriders, Paul Revere's horse, George Washington's and those of other re-born notables that shortly will flit across the silver screen. In the sleepers were such stars as Carol Dempster, known to all stardom as the dainty heroine of "Dream Street," "The Love Flower," and "The White Flower;" Neil Hamilton, who it will be recalled went "Down to the Sea in Ships;" Charles Mack, whom every screen fan knows; David Wark Griffith, the great genius of moving pictures, and a host of other famous, silent actors. In the baggage cars were thousands of dollars worth of gorgeous costumes, wigs and paraphernalia with which to make the greatest historical and patriotic film ever attempted.

Under the watchful eyes of Mr. Stines, Trainmaster Anderson, Engineer K. S. Turner, and Fireman J. R. Johnson the train finally was parked within the Government's Mine depot. When the York river gave back the sheen of a late fall's rising sun, members of the party arose in their warm, comfortable, moving home to spend the Sabbath in rest.

Early on the following morning, inhabitants of staid and historic Yorktown, awoke, rubbed their eyes and poured into the streets. "General Washington" on a prancing charger quieted his nervous horse near the immortal Nelson Mansion. Bewigged and powdered grande dames of the colonial period swept down the lanes. Coaches and outriders stopped for a brief respite at the old customs house.

D. W. Griffith Filming "America" at Yorktown

(1) D. W. Griffith ready to say "camera." (2) A confab over the special movements, (left to right) Herbert Sutch, Assistant Director, G. Watson James, Jr., Editor of the MAGAZINE, Joseph L. Stines, Southeastern Passenger Agent and J. M. Ashcraft, Financial Secretary. (3) Lord Dunsmore's coach and outriders near the historic Customs House. (4) Neil Hamilton as "Paul Revere," resting on his modern horse, and eating chicken.

Carol Dempster, lovely to behold, tripped lightly into the coach and was driven off to "Westover." Slaves, with yoked oxen and the oldfashioned hogshead tobacco cart, ambled down to the market. Dames curtsied, fiddlers played before "Ye Old Tavern" in joy for the deliverance and victory of American arms. Yorktown went back over a century and stayed back for three days.

About midday of the second day things commenced to happen for the Chesapeake and Ohio, when Herbert Sutch, Assistant Director, announced he would want two more special movements. The long distance phone was brought into action and details were arranged.

Mr. Stines soon had the first special, consisting of engine, sleeper and baggage car, rolling on its long journey to Mamaroneck, N. Y., about 10.30 p.m. Tuesday, November 13th, and followed on board the second special November 14th, the party arriving at Richmond about 3.00 p.m. Here the movement was broken up—one sleeper switched to the Atlantic Coast Line for its journey to Mamaroneck, the baggage car to follow later. When some members of the party left by the sleeper mentioned above, Mr. Stines was on hand to see them safely on their journey. Mr. Griffith's appreciation was expressed in a letter from Mr. Sutch, published elsewhere, and which it is the MAGAZINE'S pleasure to reproduce.

As we go to press, some of the Griffith party are still showing their fondness for the Chesapeake and Ohio as they are now located at Staunton and in the near future will return to Richmond. Joe Stines has been promised the business whenever in the territory, and Joe will get it. "Personal solicitation every day keeps the pink slip away." We might add also that other evidence of the Griffith company's appreciation is reproduced on the Woman's Page. Its members are one hundred per cent. for the Chesapeake and Ohio.

In conclusion it may be of interest to our readers to know the action of "America" includes such battles as "Concord," "Bunker Hill" and that it starts with Pitt's defense of the colonies and ends with the inauguration of General Washington. Every possible source of historic data has been run down to insure its historical accuracy both by Mr. Griffith Robert W. Chambers and John L. E. Pell, who jointly produced the scenario.

"America" will surpass "The Birth of a Nation" in art and action if such a thing can be believed. So far its production has cost over a $1,000,000. It has the official endorsement of the Nation's Chief Executive and every historical and patriotic society called upon for aid.

"The Daddy of All" in Directing Field

DAVID W. GRIFFITH.

Here is the "daddy" of them all when it comes to directing; the man who first gave motion pictures their big place in the world with his "Birth of a Nation" and whose position in the cinema field corresponds to that of another David named Belasco, in the dramatic realm. It is claimed by those who appear to know that Griffith is a poor man today because he has preferred to make the kind of pictures he liked, to knuckling down to some firm that could order him to make the kind of pictures they liked. He is now engaged on "America," a film being made under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and claimed to be his most ambitious effort.

NY Telegraph Dec. 13, 1923

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America." Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, beginning his screen career.

The part for which he has been selected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

TRENT.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Clarksburg (W. Va.) Telegram Dec 14 1923

We are happy to introduce, winsome, dainty, demure, charming Carol Dempster, who will be the heroine of David Wark Griffith's gigantic film "America."

With her unaffected simplicity and gracious manner, Miss Dempster cast a spell over all employes of the Chesapeake and Ohio with whom she came in contact. To Margaret Lynn, feminine scribe of the MAGAZINE,

Miss Carol Dempster
Heroine of Griffith's "America"

Miss Dempster expressed her delight at visiting Virginia and her special delight in riding on the Chesapeake and Ohio which traverses some of the most sacred and historic ground in America. Devoid of all affectations of the beauty doctor, Carol Dempster captures one's admiration by her sheer beauty of face and genuineness of character.

To go from the sublime to the ridiculous: Miss Dempster raves over Smithfield Ham, to which she was introduced during her stay in Virginia.

If you doubt her admiration of Virginia and the Chesapeake and Ohio, why, read her letter, reproduced in the left hand column.

To-
Margaret Lynn and the women of the Chesapeake and Ohio magazine:-
We want to thank all of you Organizations for your great courtesy and hospitality to us while working in Mr. Griffith's picture "America" - without Virginia's aid it would almost seem the final part of the picture "America" could not be made but as far as that is concerned until the return America has come into being without the aid of old Virginia!
Merry Christmas and Happy New Year -
Carol Dempster

NY Film Daily Dec 13, 1923

Storm Breaks

Expected Dissension Over "The Birth of a Nation" Loose in Kansas—Many Protests

(Special to THE FILM DAILY)

Topeka, Kan.—A storm has broken over the action of the censor board in authorizing the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Kansas.

Governor Davis, when he returns from a trip will find an assortment of protests that will occupy his attention. The protests are pouring not only into the governor's office, but also into the office of the attorney general, Charles B. Griffith. Petitions are coming into Griffith's office begging him to take legal steps to stop the showing of the film.

It is probable Griffith will advise the board to repeal its action in admitting the picture. The Supreme Court has decided the action of the board was final. Only Governor Davis could stop the picture, and the governor has said that he saw nothing wrong with it.

A petition of 500 citizens of Salina, business men, city and county officials and school teachers has been presented the governor begging him to stop the film. A petition of 102 signatures from Fort Scott negroes was sent to Griffith, who transmitted it to Governor Davis.

The ministers at Wichita, Fort Scott, Salina and Kansas City, have filed protests and many personal letters are coming in. Delegations of negroes from Topeka and Coffeyville called on Griffith today and protested.

Pottstown (Pa) Ledger Dec 14 1923

TO PLAY IN "AMERICA."

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Wark Griffith, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Louisville (Ky) Journal Dec 15, 1923

Movie Producer Will Wade In "Crick," Too

"Given the theft of a thrilling life must be a sensation wonderful to experience and David Wark Griffith, genius of the motion picture world, would be slit during the effects of it according to the war he writes Mayor Huston Quin.

"I never knew the Governor's appointment gave me the theft of my life," are the exact words the master movie producer sent to his latest honorable racing of a Governor's commission which he was awarded by reason of his patriotism in behalf of Kentucky's 1st Home Coming Association.

Explaining "Colonel" Griffith, for he is now first grade in Mayor Quin's staff, he said: "As I made my way and had my return made the feeling of work and [illegible] the feeling of work and [illegible] I felt that I was a part of the great Home Coming Association and that I was [illegible] the Governor's appointment.

Boston Traveler Dec 15 1923

Lionel Barrymore, who is now playing in New York in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh!" has been added to the cast of D. W. Griffith's "America." How Mr. Barrymore can find time to commute daily to the Griffith studios at Mamaroneck is a mystery. However, he returns to Griffith's direction after many years. It was in the old Biograph company, as a member of Griffith's stock company, that Lionel Barrymore first acted for the camera.

Harrisburg (Pa) Telegraph 12/7/23

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America." The part which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. In addition to Barrymore, the cast now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Sacramento Cal Screen News Dec 15 1923

MOUNT VERNON

Washington's Home Shown On Screen In Griffith Movie

Arrangements are now under way for the use of the Washington home at Mount Vernon as the setting for some of the principal scenes in D. W. Griffith's historical picture, "America." The film deals with the Revolutionary war and George Washington is one of the chief characters. Scenes of Washington's home life will be shown in their exact historical settings. Griffith is being assited in his work by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the D. A. R., is now in conference at Washington with Griffith over various details of the spectacle and committees of observers from the organization have attended the taking of the most important episodes to date in order to insure their accuracy.

Lexington (Ky) Herald Dec 9 1923

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the war department to lend any reasonable assistance in the making of "America," D. W. Griffith's latest.

Brockton (Mass) Enterprise 12/15/23

Lionel Barrymore in "America."

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America." Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some 10 years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

Sacramento Cal Bee 15 1923

HISTORICAL SPOTS USED FOR FILMING "AMERICA"

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender, took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding around which was buried a cache of TNT, said by government officials to be valued at two hundred million dollars. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood was on government property.

Springfield (Ohio) News 12/2/23

Griffith Shoots Historical Scenes

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia to his Mamaroneck studios, after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America."

The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than forty persons, whose ancestors were present at the surrender, took part in the scenes.

Yorktown gave Griffith a thrill by parking his special train on a siding, around which was buried a cache of TNT, said by government officials to be valued at two hundred million dollars. This is the army base for high explosives and the tracking where the train stood was on government property.

Canton (Ohio) News 12/7/23

40

[illegible] has just been made by the author of "America," now under production by David Wark Griffith, is none other than Robert W. Chambers.

When Griffith arranged to make this pictorial history of the country at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and under their sponsoring, the identity of the author was not announced and it was generally supposed that Griffith was working up his own story as he went along.

It has been learned, however, that Chambers is writing the story and is also acting as technical advisor to Griffith in a number of matters connected with the production, especially those relating to the Indians in whose lore he is an expert.

Tacoma Sunday Ledger 12/9/23

Paul Revere and the Zev Of 1776 Redo Their Stuff

D. W. Griffith is making a spectacular photodrama of the American Revolution which will be called "America," and which is being filmed on the exact spots that are represented in this historical feature.

Sandusky (Ohio) Register 12/9/23

D. W. Griffith was presented to President Coolidge recently and expressed his pleasure at the meeting by exhibiting several screens of "America" for the chief executive.

Atlantic City (NJ) Press Dec 15 1923

COL. D. W. G.

As far as Screenings can ascertain, D. W. Griffith is the first motion picture producer to be honored by his native State by being allowed to take the title "Colonel" before his name.

News that the Governor of Kentucky, where Griffith was born, had placed him among the famous Kaintucky Kernals arrived at the Mamaroneck studios recently.

And Griffith is deserving another medal, for he told us all about being made a Colonel and never once tried to work in the old pun about being cut.

Springfield (Ohio) News 12/9/23

Still in the process of filming, D. W. Griffith's "America," which he is making at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is already getting recruits for the United States army, it is said.

Mamaroneck (NY) Paragraph Dec 13 1923

D. W. CHAMBERS NOW WORKING AT GRIFFITH STUDIO

Renowned Author Is Preparing the Script of "America"

The reason for Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, becoming a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., has become known. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming as his next photoplay spectacle at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mr. Chambers, whose early popularity as a novelist was gained through his stories dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfil his many other contracts for serials and novels, and still keep "America" marching steadily toward completion.

Mr. Chambers is a regular visitor at the Griffith studio where he and Mr. Griffith held their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of 1776. In addition to writing the story of "America," Mr. Chambers has been able to aid with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Mr. Griffith, himself a descendant of the Shirley in early American affairs, has long been known as a deep student of Revolutionary history.

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner Dec 13, 1923

D. W. Griffith Now Kentucky Colonel

IT'S now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith, the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest to goodness colonel by the Governor of his native State, Kentucky.

Governor Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the State of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner.

Word of the signal honor bestowed upon him by the Blue Grass State has just reached Griffith at his studios at Mamaroneck, where he is filming scenes for "America."

"Col." Griffith Now

For the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth Of A Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest to goodness colonel by the Governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the state of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood, and Col. John T. McCutcheon.

Griffith was born in La Grange, Ky., Jan. 22, 1880, one of the eight children born to General Jacob Wark Griffith—the "Roaring Jake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

Word of the signal honor bestowed upon him by the Blue Grass State reached Griffith last week at his studio at Mamaroneck, where he is filming scenes for "America." He declined to be interviewed.

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner Dec 14 1923

Canton (Ohio) News Dec 14 1923

Lionel Barrymore becomes a Griffith player in "America," in which he will play the role of David Butler. Nothing has yet been said in any of the announcements concerning this character and revolutionary history fails to give him a place of prominence, yet the manner of making the announcement and the qualities of the player indicates that he will have an important part in the film.

It is really a return, for Barrymore played for a time under Griffith's direction in the old Biograph days. He will do his screen work in the daytime and on Sundays, retaining his stage role for evening performances.

Carol Dempster, who has been one of Griffith's favorite actresses for several years, will have a prominent part and some of the others who have been named are Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke. Many of the characters have not yet been cast.

New Canaan (Conn) Advertiser Dec 13 1923

AMERICA'S MOST BEAUTIFUL HOMES IN NEW ENGLAND AND SOUTH, D. W. GRIFFITH SAYS

"Whatever of truth and beauty is discernible by a generous public in my eager output, I trace to a country boy used to hearing Keats and Tennyson and Shakespeare read at home," writes D. W. Griffith, noted motion picture producer in "Arts and Decoration."

"I can summon at any moment a vision of the room in which my father read to my mother, my brother, my sister and me. My sister was a teacher and a not to be despised poet. It was a smallish room with a great fireplace of rough stones. It was part of my day's business to provide the back-log for the fireplace. There were two windows. One looked upon a wheat field with the turnpike alongside it. The other upon a fringe of black woods. It was a rather large room, for, like all others of the South, we had little after the war. But the walls were gray. The furniture was dark and old. There were a few good books. That was a beautiful room. Not only for the sentiment of its association but in reality. It possessed the essentials of a room where American life is lived.

"Charles A. Schwab's house, there Riverside Drive begins in New York, is much criticised by those who have an acute sense of beauty. The house, beautiful in itself, lacks complete beauty because it does not reflect American life. The much-talked-of house of James A. Deering, at Miami, Florida, receives a deal of unfavorable criticism, even though it has golden door-knobs. Both houses full of their purpose of beauty because they do not accord with the American setting and sentiment. They are incongruous, and incongruity is never beautiful.

"The most beautiful houses in America are but a twentieth of the value in dollars of the two I have named, but their value in sentiment and in fitness is infinite. The most beautiful houses I have seen are in the South and in New England. They have the same characteristics. Their style is early American, which stems back to the early Greek.

"One of these houses is Woodlawn, on the plantation home on the Rappahannock in Fredericksburg. The house has a large, imposing front. The wooden pillars are eight feet thick. The rooms in which the original master entertained the celebrated persons of the South, and which was used for the twenty-five wounds, are large in the front part of the house and large in small rooms at the back. I said it is a set-ting for pictures I was taking. It was in similar spirit to Shirley House, one of the famous homes on the James River, where my grandmother, one of the Carters, was born. Shirley House is conceded to be be one of the most beautiful houses in America.

"A few months after I took scenes in Woodlawn House, I found a home in Connecticut that was its sister in spirit. In the Colonial style, with great pillars it had large rooms at the front, and smaller rooms at the back. Sentimental trees there were, too, cypress in the South, replaced by pines in the North. There was beauty in every inch of these houses because they harmonized with their soul of America. There are houses that had been lived and loved in, one felt; houses where life had been gentle."

Chicago (Ill) Journal Dec 14, 1923

Barrymore With Griffith

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Albany (NY) News Dec 13 1923

Toledo (Ohio) Times 12/15/23

L. BARRYMORE IN MR. GRIFFITH'S NEW FILM "AMERICA"

Will Act for Camera in Addition to Work at Belasco Theatre

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Newark (NJ) Ledger Dec 15 1923

HELPING D. W. GRIFFITH ROBERT W. CHAMBERS IS

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, novelist, has become a commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers is reported as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels, and still keep "America" marching steadily toward completion.

Mr. Chambers is a regular visitor at the Griffith studio where he and Mr. Griffith held their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of 1776. In addition to writing the story of "America," Mr. Chambers has been able to aid with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Mr. Griffith, himself a descendant of the Shirley in early American affairs, has long been known as a deep student of Revolutionary history.

Reel Journal Kansas City (Mo) Dec 15 1923

KANSAS BAN ON "BIRTH OF A NATION" IS LIFTED

Middletown (Ohio) Journal Dec 16 1923

D. W. GRIFFITH MADE "COLONEL"

Denver (Colo) Times 12/15/23

Griffith Made Real Colonel in Honor of 'America' Film

Colonel Griffith

THE Governor of Kentucky has commissioned Mr. David Wark Griffith, the premier motion picture director, as a colonel.

Before the Volstead fiend are that title carried special weight twice in Kentucky, and everywhere in the country where polished men congregate, but now it is purely honorary.

A Kentucky Colonel is quite a great deal, but the family records of Col. D. W. Griffith show him to be a lineal descendant of David Pulliam, a Major of the Kentucky militia, who was killed at Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1812. Those who have heard Mr. Griffith say it is hard to say what is worse: that he stage is from, or is the equal the sec-ter language tells.

Lionel Barrymore Engaged to Play in Griffith Cast

New Griffith Film "America," Reproduces Lexington and Bunker Hill

How General Joseph Warren Died at the Battle of Bunker Hill

The students of American history have given D. W. Griffith every aid possible in truly presenting on the screen the scene of this famous battle, which will be one of the most important parts of his new play, "America," recently taken in the very place where the Yankees beat the British.

Drum of Lexington

Irma Harrison, star in the screen production of "America," is here pictured holding the drum actually used in that historic encounter between the "Minute Men" and the British troops in the town of Lexington, Mass. D. W. Griffith has made this great new historic moving picture.

Indianapolis (Ind) Star Dec 16 1923

Above: A consultation on location between D. W. Griffith and some of his players in "America," the phonograms based on the American Revolution and sponsored by the Daughters and Sons of the Revolution.

Camden N.J. Courier Dec 16 1923

ROBERT CHAMBERS IS BUSY AUTHOR

Famous Novelist Now Busy Writing Photoplay Story for "America"

COMMUTES DAILY FROM NEW YORK

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, and which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers' early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor at the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid materially in the details of many scenes, notably those dealing with the Western Indians, in which he is an expert.

In fact, himself a descendant of the pioneer, hunter and other American leaders, which Griffith is endeavoring to carry through in his picture of Revolutionary times.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS and D. W. Griffith discuss the filming of the spectacle, "America," which Chambers is writing and Griffith is producing for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

My Herald Dec 16, 1923

St Paul (Minn) News Dec 16 1923

R. W. CHAMBERS WRITES "AMERICA" FOR GRIFFITH

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last.

He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers' early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period. He has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor to the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conference in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid materially in the details of many scenes, notably those dealing with the Western Indians, in which he is an expert.

Baltimore (Md) Sun Dec 16 1923

Lionel Barrymore Has Role In "America"

He is Again Being Directed by D. W. Griffith, After An Absence of Ten Years.

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore goes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some 10 years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work in several roles, when he returned to the stage.

The part with which he has been identified in "America" is Jim Hawkins, the Yankee peddler, a character which he created in the stage version of Rupert Hughes' novel, "Excelsior."

Lionel Barrymore is a member of the famous theatrical family, and has been in the theatrical business all his life. His father, Maurice Barrymore, was a famous actor of the old school, and his mother, Georgiana Drew, was a member of the famous Drew family, which for years was prominent in the theatrical world.

Lionel Barrymore's first appearance on the stage was in his father's production of "Rosemary" in Philadelphia, when he was a boy of 10 years. He was then a member of the Frohman Stock Company, playing under the direction of Charles Frohman, Daniel Frohman, Gustav Frohman, Charles Dickson and other famous directors of the period.

Lionel Barrymore's first appearance on the stage was in his father's production of "Rosemary" in Philadelphia, when he was a boy of 10 years. He was then a member of the Frohman Stock Company, playing under the direction of Charles Frohman, Daniel Frohman, Gustav Frohman, Charles Dickson and other famous directors of the period.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast of "America" includes Lionel Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore,

Louisville (Ky) Herald Dec 16 1923 42

Title Of Colonel Thrills Movie's Greatest Producer

WHEN the world's greatest movie producer gets thrilled at something more than his own handiwork, then it's time to take notice, especially when that person happens to be David Wark Griffith.

Laying aside his own thrill-producing tools at Mamaroneck, N. Y., "Colonel" Griffith—for he really is an honest-to-goodness colonel nowadays—wrote Mayor Huston Quin, general chairman for Kentucky's coming celebration, that Kentucky has just given him the thrill of his life. And all because he has realized a childhood ambition to become a colonel!

That the genius of the movies is genuinely thrilled over his appointment to the governor's staff is evidenced by the following letter:

Mamaroneck, N. Y.,
December 5, 1923.

Huston Quin, Mayor of the City of Louisville, Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mayor Quin:

Permit me to acknowledge your most welcome letters of the twenty-first and twenty-third ultimo. I must admit the one inclosing the governor's appointment gave me the thrill of my life. As a boy I once fastened my father's sabre to my side, and had my brother salute me as "Colonel." I can still remember the feeling of pride and awe that came over me as I acknowledged that salute. And your dear letter made me feel that, altho imperfectly and unworthily, I had attempted to follow in the footsteps of my dear father, who answered Kentucky's call in those trying days of the Civil War.

I am so delighted with my appointment that I have written directly to Governor Morrow thanking him for this great honor that he and my fellow-Kentuckians have bestowed upon me; and, as I said to him, I hope that wherever and whenever it is necessary to fight the good fight for Kentucky I shall be found humbly in my place doing my full duty.

You may rest assured that when the 1924 Home Coming is had, if I am on this side of the Atlantic, Kentucky will per-mainly for one of her most humble but appreciative sons there really to do homage to his glorious and beloved state. And in the meantime you may rest assured that I shall constantly endeavor to do my little bit to help the cause along.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH.

Thanking you for your thoughtful part in securing this appointment for me, and assuring you again of my appreciation, I beg to remain—and I take great pride in signing myself—

Your obedient servant,
D. W. GRIFFITH,
Colonel.

If "Colonel" Griffith does succeed in getting back to Kentucky for the Home Coming his admirers here will see that he gets a chance to visit the scenes of his boyhood days at La Grange, in Oldham County, and may be climb an apple tree or two!

Boston (Mass) Advertiser Dec 16 1923

BARRYMORE IN AMERICAN CLASSIC

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged for the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore came back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old biograph days that Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years; then returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytimes and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Chambers Is Writing Scenario for "America"

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York city and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor at the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Griffith, himself a descendant of the Shirley, Carter, and other southern families which figured prominently in early American affairs, has long been known as a deep student of revolutionary history.

New Orleans (La) Item 12/16/23

Robt. W. Chambers Writing "America" For D. W. Griffith

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor at the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76. In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the Northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Griffith, himself a descendant of the Shirley, Carter, and other Southern families which figured prominently in early American affairs, has long been known as a deep student of Revolutionary history.

Washington (DC) Star 12/16/23

A Barrymore in "America"

LIONEL BARRYMORE, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

About ten years ago in the old Biograph days Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been selected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke.

Boston (Mass) Morning Globe Dec 16 1923

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America." Mr Barrymore comes back to Mr Griffith after an absence of many years. It was 10 years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith.

Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke and many other important actors and actresses are in the cast.

When asked for a description of "America," Mr Griffith replied, "My country, 'Tis of Thee."

Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch 12/16/23

L. Barrymore to Help.

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for [illegible] years, when he returned to the stage.

Duluth (Minn) Herald 12/1[illegible]

According to the D. W. [illegible] Robert W. Chambers [illegible] commuter between New York and Mamaroneck, [illegible] being that he is writing "[illegible]" the story of the American [illegible] tion, which Mr. Griffith is [illegible] for the Daughters of the Am[illegible] Revolution. In addition to [illegible] the story, Mr. Chambers is [illegible] assistance in the details of [illegible] the scenes, particularly those [illegible] ing with the Northern Indi[illegible]

Moline Dispatch Dec 2[illegible]

Lionel Barr[illegible] To Play [illegible] Role

Lionel Barrymore [illegible] his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some 10 years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for [illegible] years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been selected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke.

Ann Arbor (Mich) News 12/19/23

Charlottesville (Va) Progress 12/20/23

D. W. Griffith, who is making "America" another of his super-features, is in Virginia using the locale of the actual ground where many of the great events of the Revolution took place. He will rename the film later, he states.

S. Fcal) Journal Dec 19 1923

Recent reports that D. W. Griffith was about to journey to Italy to direct historical films have become familiar for the last few years. Now, by way of Los Angeles comes word that Joseph Farnham, head of the Unione Cinematografica Italiana, is ready to sign with Griffith for a lavish spectacle to be made in Rome. Mr. Griffith, as often, keeps silence, and continues his task of completing "America."

Los Angeles (Cal) Herald 12/19/23

D. W. Griffith was asked the other day for a description of his forthcoming picture, "America." The director replied: "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Los Angeles (Cal) Record

We Are About to Be Pacified

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH produced "The Birth of a Nation." As a consequence he appears, in his own mind, to have supplanted George Washington as the Father of his Country. At any rate he has decided that it is time for him to take the lusty offspring up in his arms and walk the floor with it. The baby, Griffith thinks, needs a pacifier and he's it.

"There seems to be a tendency among many people," he says, "in various sections of the country for a change, and we want to warn them against this and stamp out radicalism. We hope to impress upon the people that they are better off today than they have ever been before.

"President Coolidge and other officials of the administration have been very generous in permitting us to use government regiments, tanks, guns and other war equipment, as well as historic battlefields and buildings and other government property, which will enable us to portray historic scenes and other interesting incidents much more effectively and accurately than we could otherwise."

Nice for Mr. Griffith. Nice for Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Griffith gets some thousands of uniformed movie actors for nothing, to say nothing of thousands of dollars' worth of scenery. When the people pay for admission to see his super-films they will have the pleasure of knowing that they have earned the privilege—twice; once when they paid taxes for the upkeep of the army and once when they paid at the door. However, if they come away pacified by Mr. Griffith, they doubtless will be content.

As for Mr. Coolidge, he gets the sort of political propaganda upon which apparently he hopes to rely, spread before millions of movie fans. And it costs him nothing.

The title of this film is to be "America." For a subtitle, may we suggest, "Have Faith in Massachusetts"?

Paul Revere Had A Horse; That Much We Know

AMERICA doesn't know the color of its best-known horse, the one ridden by Paul Revere when he made his famous ride to Lexington and Concord to warn the Colonists.

Because of such inaccuracy in historical records, the motion-picture industry has taken steps for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau, under the direction of Will H. Hays.

Historians have told the main events, but nowhere is there any authentic record of exactly how things looked. For instance, when D. W. Griffith wanted to know what sort of wagons were used with the Northern armies during the Revolutionary war, not a single historical record described them.

As the motion-picture industry is planning to make a great number of historical films with absolutely accurate details, the pictorial vagueness of the histories must be corrected, and it is for this purpose that the producers will jointly subscribe for the research bureau.

Griffith already has spent hundreds of dollars seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's horse for the scenes in his next production, "America." Edwin B. Worthen, president of the Lexington Historical Society, declares there is no available record, although it is known the horse was not white, as pictured in illustrations. Griffith's research department is now conducting search through personal correspondence of the [illegible]

Baltimore (Md) American 12/16/23

Barrymore Engaged.

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram 12/19/23

San Francisco (Cal) Record 12/17/23

GRIFFITH, the D. W., is now a Kentucky colonel.

Col. D. W. Griffith. Yes suh!

Griffith's commission was issued by the governor of Kentucky, Edwin P. Morrow, "in recognition of the honor" the movie producer has brought Kentucky, his native state.

How did D. W. take his great honor?

Was he flustered, flattered or merely bored?

Posterity may never know. To quote from the communique of Frederick Roche, the Griffith press agent:

"Word of the signal honor bestowed upon him by the Blue Grass state reached Griffith yesterday at his studio at Mamaroneck, where he is filming scenes for 'America.' He declined to be interviewed."

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee Dec 19 1923

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS WRITING "AMERICA"

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained thru novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

He is a regular visitor at the Griffith studios, where he and D. W. hold their conferences in regard to the story inspired by the descendants of the heroes of '76.

In addition to writing the story of "America," Chambers has been able to aid Griffith in the details of many scenes, particularly those dealing with the northern Indians, in whose lore he is an expert.

Chicago (Ill) News Dec 19 1923

Lionel Barrymore with Griffith.

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Lionel Barrymore to Be Seen In New Griffith Photo Play

After having been separated for several years from D. W. Griffith, with whom he began his work on the screen, Lionel Barrymore will return to that producer's studio in the latter's forthcoming picture, "America," now in the making. In addition to Barrymore, who will play one of the outstanding roles in the film, the cast will include Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke and others.

Mr. Barrymore is appearing in David Belasco's production, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," in New York and will act before the camera when not engaged in the performance of that drama.

Cleveland Ohio Times 12/21/23

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming production by D. W. Griffith, "America." Mr. Barrymore [illegible] of several years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days [illegible] Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career [illegible]

Hartford (Conn) Times 12/21/23

SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS DOMINATES "AMERICA"

If—you were a motion picture director, besieged by telegrams inviting you to innumerable Christmas celebrations;

Or—a motion picture actor or actress, with family and friends waiting not so very far away with evergreen trees laden with presents, and a delicious Christmas feast;

And—you were directing or acting in a picture for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a picture inspired by a love of your country, and exuding in every scene the ideals of the founders of these United States; and

If—you were asked to stay in the studio all Christmas Day in order to make scenes of Valley Forge during the American Revolution, that these scenes might breathe the real spirit of Christmas;

What would you do?

If you were D. W. Griffith, or a member of his company down at his studio at Mamaroneck, N. Y., you would [illegible] when Mr. "America" Griffith and his players are going to do—play your part as you never played it before, and put on the screen the spirit of Christmas as the Fathers of the American Republic knew it.

For, rejecting hundreds of invitations to dinners and festivities, Griffith and his players, fairly bubbling over with the real Christmas spirit of giving to their labor the very best that is in them, will devote their Christmas to filming Christmas scenes for "America," the story of the War of American Independence, requested by the D. A. R.

And the most remarkable part of it all is that there is to be heard not a murmur of complaint, not to be seen the slightest suggestion of a frown, over this giving up of the customary Christmas celebration in favor of hard work.

The big studio is beautifully hung with evergreen, and through it drifts the sound of cheery Christmas carols played on a specially imported organ, and sung by a mixed chorus. On every side one finds smiling faces, and cheering words.

The spirit of Christmas is [illegible]

San Francisco (Cal) Bulletin 12/19/23

Robert W. Chambers Writing Story Of D. W. Griffith's "America"

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York City and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America" that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfill his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

Cruscogo (Ind) Palladium 12/19/23

D. W. Griffith, who is making "America," another of his super-features, is in Virginia using the locale of the actual ground where many of the great events of the Revolution took place. He will rename the film later, he states.

Los Angeles (Cal) Record 12/18/23

Lionel Barrymore Joins Griffith Staff

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Waterbury (Conn) Dem 12/18/23

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Washington (DC) Post 12/18/23

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytimes and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Attleboro (Mass) Sun 12/18/23

San Francisco (Cal) Herald 12/19/23

Lionel in "America"

Lionel Barrymore has signed [illegible] for the part of Walter Butler in the D. W. Griffith production "America."

Johnstown (Pa) Democrat June 19 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Herald 12/19/23

LIONEL BARRYMORE TO PLAY THE LEAD IN DAVID WARK GRIFFITH MOVIE

Famous Actor Says Will Be "Villain" in "America"

Palladium 12/21/23

WOULD YOU DO THE SAME?

If you were a motion picture director, besieged by telegrams inviting you to innumerable Christmas celebrations;

Or—a motion picture actor or actress, with family and friends waiting not so very far away with evergreen trees laden with presents, and a delicious Christmas feast;

And—you were directing or acting in a picture for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a picture inspired by a love of your country, and exuding in every scene the ideals of the founders of these United States; and

If—you were asked to stay in the studio all Christmas Day in order to make scenes of Valley Forge during the American Revolution, that these scenes might breathe the real spirit of Christmas;

What would you do?

If you were D. W. Griffith, or a member of his company down at his studio at Mamaroneck, N. Y., you would [illegible] when Mr. "America" [illegible]

Telegraph 12/18/23

GRIFFITH IS TO WRITE AND CHAMBERS TO DIRECT

Producer and Author Exchange Work Temporarily for Christmas

Los Angeles (Cal) Record 12/21/23

MOVIE MEN DRAW IMMENSE INCOMES

Griffith Film Gets Recruits for Army

Evening Herald (Calif) Dec 22 1923

Lionel Barrymore Stands Ready

Evening Herald Dec 22 1923

Review Dec 22 1923

Los Angeles (Cal) Record 12/21/23

AND SO IS "COLONEL" D. W. GRIFFITH

Chicago (Ill) News Dec. 22, 1923 Boston Traveler Dec 22 1923

43

MAKING ICE WITH HOT WATER—AND ROLLING HOME THE ROCK

Robert W. Chambers (Left) and David Wark Griffith Discussing "America," Drama of the American Revolution They Are Preparing at Request of D. A. R.

Robert W. Chambers and D. W. Griffith Discuss the Film "America," Done at the Request of the D. A. R. Part of It Was Filmed in Concord, Mass.

Virginia Lamont and Edwin B. Worthen, of Concord, Mass., as They Appear in the Film "America." Both Are Well Known in Concord. (Keystone)

Moline (Ill) Dispatch Dec 22 1923

Lionel Barrymore To Play Leading Role in America

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production America.

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage. The part for which he has been selected in America is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his evening and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for America now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be placed.

My Review 12/22/23 So Bend (Ind) Times

Lionel Barrymore With D. W. Griffith

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith film production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after many years. It was some ten years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of a stock company organized by Mr. Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under Griffith direction. He continued screen work for several years, and then returned to stage poductions.

The role for which he has been selected in "America" is one demanding exceptional versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his evening and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Mr. Barrymore the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be placed.

Left—Robert W. Chambers the novelist and D. W. Griffith at the latter's studio in Mamaroneck, N. Y., discussing "America" which the former is writing and the latter directing for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chicago Exhibitors Herald Dec. 22 1923

And now, D. W. Griffith is Colonel D. W. Griffith and in future to be addressed thus by all who have due regard for the niceties. There arrived last week at the Mamaroneck studios a colonel's commission bestowed upon the producer by Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky in recognition of the honor which the producer has brought to the state of Kentucky, of which he is a native.

Colonel Griffith declined to be interviewed.

Page Major O'Mahoney.

Bklyn. Standard Union Dec 23 1923

Lionel Barrymore has just signed with D. W. Griffith to play the role of Walter Butler in "America."

Detroit (Mich) Free-Press 12/23/23

Descendants of Revolutionists Aid Griffith in Patriotic Film

CAROL DEMPSTER.

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, D. W. Griffith is filming "America," a photodrama based upon the American War of Independence. The story of "America," in which the leading figures of Revolutionary days play important parts, includes the delineation of this country's struggle for liberty from Paul Revere's ride to the presidency of George Washington, and draws a striking contrast between this country in 1776 and today.

Leading patriotic societies, descendants of Revolutionary heroes and government officials are giving the Griffith company every assistance in the production of the film, which is being produced under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Wherever possible Griffith has taken his scenes on the actual locations and with descendants of Revolutionary heroes forming an extra cast. In this way he has shot scenes at Lexington, Concord, Valley Forge and other historic places in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and throughout the entire state of New York.

Representatives of the Daughters of the American Revolution have been on the scene of the Griffith operations and have kept a watchful eye on the production. Colonel Harvey Ladd, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been in charge of the work for the organization.

When Griffith and his players go on location he and his players are the objects of enthusiastic demonstrations by the natives. Whole townships have quit work to see the noted director and his players restage Revolutionary episodes.

Not only have historic mansions been turned over to Griffith as locales for scenes, but societies and individuals have offered him invaluable relics ranging from swords and drums to carriages and furniture, many of which had not been out of museum cases and family vaults for years.

Wherever possible Griffith has taken his scenes on the actual locations and with descendants of Revolutionary heroes forming an extra cast. In this way he has shot scenes at Lexington, Concord, Valley Forge and other historic places in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and throughout the entire state of New York.

Representatives of the Daughters of the American Revolution have been on the scene of the Griffith operations and have kept a watchful eye on the production. Colonel Harvey Ladd, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been in charge of the work for the organization.

When Griffith and his players go on location he and his players are the objects of enthusiastic demonstrations by the natives. Whole townships have quit work to see the noted director and his players restage Revolutionary episodes.

Not only have historic mansions been turned over to Griffith as locales for scenes, but societies and individuals have offered him invaluable relics ranging from swords and drums to carriages and furniture, many of which had not been out of museum cases and family vaults for years.

Kansas City (Mo) Reel Journal 12/22/23

GOVERNOR CONFERS TITLE OF COLONEL ON GRIFFITH

now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith, the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest-to-goodness colonel by the governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever to be honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood and Col. John T. McCutcheon.

Griffith was born in LaGrange, Ky., January 22, 1880, one of eight children, to Gen. Jacob Wark Griffith, the "Roaring Lake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

The Boys of '76, a "still" taken during the filming of D. W. Griffith's America, a production soon to be released.

Milwaukee (Wis) Journal, Dec. 23, 1923

My M. P. News 12/22/23

Lionel Barrymore Signs With Griffith

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, and Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Rochester (N.Y.) Democrat & Chron. 12/23/23

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged by D. W. Griffith for a serial called "America," which the director is now making.

Chicago (Ill) Tribune Dec 23, 1923

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH is a proud man as the picture he says he feels will be the greatest of his productions. It is to be called "America" and will show secret scenes in this country's history since the time America was discovered. It was during the war when this photograph of the well known director was taken.

Toledo (Ohio) Times Dec. 23, 1923

THIRD CAVALRY IN GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

Boston Traveler 12/22/23

Wichita (Kan) Eagle 12/23/23

Seattle (Wash) Post Intel 12/23/23

My News 12/23/23

LIONEL BARRYMORE IN NEW GRIFFITH PICTURE, "AMERICA"

Louisville (Ky) Herald Dec 13 1923 — St. Louis G.T. — Milwaukee (Wis) Sentinel 12/23/23 — Bronx (NY) News 12/23/23 — Home Memphis (Tenn) Coml-Appeal Dec 23 1923 — Seattle (Wash) Times 12/23/23 — San Francisco (Cal) Chronicle Dec 23 1923 — Portland Press

Lexington (Ky) Herald 12/23/23 — Newark (NJ) Ledger 12/23/23

"AMERICA" NEW GRIFFITH FILM

World-Famed Producer Bases Latest Exploit in Screen Attempts on Revolutionary War History

SOLDIERS OF U. S. ARE USED

At the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, D. W. Griffith, Kentucky's great contribution to the personnel of the film world of today, is filming "America," a photodrama based on the American war of independence. The story of America, in which the leading figures of Revolutionary days plays important parts, includes the delineation of this country's struggle for liberty from Paul Revere's ride to the presidency of George Washington, and draws a striking contrast between this country in 1776 and today.

Leading patriotic societies, descendants of Revolutionary heroes, and government officials are giving Griffith enthusiastic support in his latest undertaking, with which he hopes to surpass even "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

Secretary of War John W. Weeks placed thousands of soldiers at the command of Mr. Griffith, and these troops, in costume, restaged the principal battles of the war, historical experts, representatives of the patriotic organizations, and regular army officers acting as advisers as to the military technique of the Revolution.

At Somers, Putnam county, N. Y., Griffith constructed a vast camp, where for weeks regular army infantrymen, reserve cavalrymen and his company of more than a thousand actors, advisers and technicians worked to reproduce with meticulous accuracy and him the more spectacular engagements.

In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes of the actual sites and more picturesque episodes of the war. Griffith has established a precedent by inviting the general public to the filming, and wherever his company goes on location, he and his players are the objects of enthusiastic demonstrations by the natives.

Salt Lake City (Utah) Tribune 12/23/23

D. W. Griffith Is Made "Colonel"

It's now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith, the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest-to-goodness colonel by the governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Governor Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the state of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood and Colonel John T. McCutcheon.

Griffith was born in La Grange, Ky., January 22, 1880, one of eight children born to Gen. Jacob Wark Griffith, the "Roaring Jake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

Davenport (Iowa) Democ Leader 12/23/23

Port Chester (NY) Item 12/24/23 — Norwalk (Conn) Hour 12/24/23

Star Barrymore in New Griffith Film "America"

CHAMBERS AND GRIFFITH CHANGE 3 JOBS FOR XMAS

Charleston (S C) News & Courier Dec 25 1923

Portland (Ore) Oregonian Dec 25 1923

Hartford (Conn) Courant Dec 25 1923

CHRISTMAS AND GRIFFITH

IF—you were a motion picture director, besieged by telegrams inviting you to numerable Christmas celebrations;

OR—a motion picture actor or actress, with family and friends waiting not so very far away with evergreen trees laden with presents, and a delicious Christmas feast;

AND—you were directing or acting in a picture for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a picture inspired by a love of your country, and exuding in every scene the ideals of the founders of these United States; and

IF—you were asked to stay in the studio all Christmas Day in order to make scenes of Yuletide during the American Revolution, that these scenes might breathe the real spirit of Christmas—

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

WELL—if you were D. W. Griffith, or a member of his company down at his studios at Mamroneck, N. Y. you would probably do exactly what Mr. Griffith and his players are going to do—play your part as you never played it before, and put on the screen the spirit of Christmas as the Fathers of the American Republic knew it.

For, rejecting hundreds of invitations to dinners and festivities, Griffith and his players, fairly bubbling over with the real Christmas spirit of giving to their labor the very best that is in them, will devote their Christmas to filming Christmas scenes for "America," the story of the War of American Independence, requested by the D. A. R.

And the most remarkable part of it all is that there is to be heard not a murmur of complaint, not to be seen the slightest suggestion of a frown, over this giving up of the customary Christmas celebration in favor of hard work.

The big studio is bountifully hung with evergreen, and through it drifts the sound of cheery Christmas carols played on a specially imported organ, and sung by a mixed chorus. On every side one finds smiling faces and cheering words.

Now the movies have given a modern twist to "gypsying." The caravan of gay wagons has become a private train of Pullmans. Instead of fortunes being told, time is being spent to enable D. W. Griffith to visit the various historic sites in Virginia for taking scenes for his next production "America."

A train of five Pullmans has been put at the command of Griffith to travel wherever he wishes, and the older families of Virginia are his guides. G. Watson James of Richmond, Va., national historian of the Sons of the American Revolution, has been enlisted to accompany Griffith.

One of the principal locations visited is the Byrd mansion at Westover, on the James river. The society women of Richmond composing the Little Theatre league, are acting as extra people for the scenes requiring their presence.

All the historic estates along the James river will be photographed, including particularly "Shirley," the Carter home, where the tenth generation now lives.

Toledo (Ohio) Times 12/23/23 — Charleston (W Va) Gazette 12/23/23

STEP UP AND MEET "COLONEL" D. W. GRIFFITH

It's now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith.

For the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the War of Independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest-to-goodness colonel by the governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the state of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Hapgood and Col. John T. McCutcheon.

Griffith was born in La Grange, Ky., January 22,1880, one of eight children born to Gen. Jacob Wark Griffith, the "Roaring Jake" Griffith of the Confederacy.

Jewish Daily News Dec 24 1923

BARRYMORE TO FEATURE PLAY

Well Known Actor Will Have Character Part in Historical Photoplay, "America"

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming Griffith production "America".

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Toledo (Ohio) Blade 12/24/23

R. W. Chambers Writing "America"

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, the novelist, has returned to the field of his first success in "America," which he is writing and D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution. The photoplay tells the story of the Colonies' war for independence. "Cardigan" and other romantic novels of Revolutionary days were Chambers' first literary successes.

דער קאמפף פון אמעריקא פאר אונאבהענגיגקייט הויט געזיצט דורך פון גריפיטס אויף ליידענט

ד. וו. גריפיטס, דער פּראָפעסאָר פון "ע בוירט אוו ע נעישאן" און אנדערע גרויסע, אויב נים גרעסטע ספּעטאַקלען, וואָס זיינען ווען עס איז געווען גע־ווארען אויס'ן ליידענס, ארבייט איצט אייף אַ בילד, וואָס איבערטרעפט אַלץ וואָס איז ביז איצט געווען געווארען.

דער נאָמען פון גריפיטס'ס נייער פּראָ־דאַקשאָן איז "אמעריקא" און אין דעם בילד וועט איבערגעגעבען ווערען דער גרויסער קאַמף וואָס אמעריקא האָט גע־פיהרט פאַר איהר אונאבהענגיגקייט. בעריהמטע פאַטריאָטישע אָרגאַניזאַ־ציעס, די בעריהמטע היסטאָריקער פון דער צייט פון דער רעוואָלוציע, האָבען ענטאַלפען גריפיטס'ן אַז זיין נייע בילד זאָל זיין אַ ריכטיגע שילדערונג פון דעם גרויסען פרייהייט קאַמף.

Vancouver (BC) Sun 12/24/23

Griffith Is Elevated to Colonelship

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—D. W. Griffith has commanded all sorts of armies from the day he filmed "The Birth of a Nation" down to the past week, when he handled American regulars in the battle scenes for "America," his new film, now in the making. However, he had never had a commission conferred upon him until yesterday.

As he is a Kentucky there was only one military title possible for him, and it has been conferred by Governor E. Morrow, who, of course, made him a "colonel." Kentucky colonels have to go in impressive ceremonies and all sorts of great pageantry, and there is a culture that goes with it.

Toledo (Ohio) Times 12/23/23

Griffith's "America" Being Filmed.

Vast preparations are on foot at the Griffith studio out in Mamaroneck, where the Great D. W. is completing his work on "America." As almost every one knows by this time, "America" is a revolutionary drama with much historical significance on the side.

Mr. Griffith has worked on this picture for a long time, traveling all over the original 13 colonies to obtain authentic locations, and using up whole regiments of cavalry in his battle scenes.

The story for "America" is being developed under the supervision of Robert W. Chambers, who is no mean authority on revolutionary matters. His novel of this period, "Cardigan," was made into a picture—and turned out to be a dismal failure.

I wonder why none of the movie people have adapted Mr. Chambers' Civil War story, "Alisa Palac," which to my mind is the best thing he has ever written.

Providence (RI) Journal 12/23/23

Los Angeles (Cal) Times 12/23/23

Christmas Day will be just one more day in the Griffith studio, for the company is at work on an important sequence and no one wants to stop. There will however be evergreens and holly wreaths around the place to remind the company that some people are having a holiday. As Lionel Barrymore has been added to the cast of the Griffith picture and he is playing on Broadway in "Laugh Clown, Laugh" his picture work has to be crowded in at all sorts of hours.

Flickers From Filmland

Now, Griffith and his company, now producing "America" at the behest of the Daughters of the American Revolution, are going to celebrate Christmas Day by taking Christmas scenes for the drama of the fight for independence. The studio at Mamaroneck has been hung with greenery and there will be Christmas carols with organ accompaniment, everybody "fairly bubbling over" with the real Christmas spirit of giving to their labor the very b[illegible]

Lionel Barrymore Cast In Griffith's America

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been selected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Barrymore Will Play in 'America'

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the D. W. Griffith production "America."

Barrymore comes back to Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, with many of the important minor roles still to be selected.

Saginaw (Mich) News Courier Dec 26, 1923

Latest News and Gossip from Filmland

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

BY MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let lose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the odult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the adult public more closely to the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are cooperating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing, [illegible] a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Mamaroneck (NY) Paragraph 12/26/23

AT THE GRIFFITH STUDIO

D. W. Griffith and his staff have now been back in Mamaroneck for the past six weeks, but Herbert Sutch, assistant director, and a few others, have just returned. About one half of the new mammoth production, "America," has been filmed. While away, the actors made a tour of the south, mainly Virginia and the Blue Ridge Mountains, of course filming the battle of Yorktown, where the Revolutionary War ended.

Griffith had one interview with President Coolidge, and obtained permission to use any of the army or navy forces that he chose.

A local girl who is taking a leading part in the picture is Margaret "Billy" Rainsford, of Mamaroneck. She takes the part of the Indian princess "Pocahockus", and also another smaller part. Miss Rainsford has been in the Ziegfield Follies, was one of the staff in the "Tiger Rose", and has been connected with the Belasco Company.

Among the other celebrities that have returned are Neal Hamilton, now of Pelham Manor, the leading man; Carol Dempster, the leading lady; Bert Davis, one of the directors; and many others.

Hartford (Conn) Times 12/27/23

SILENT DRAMA

Here's a novel Christmas gift! D. W. Griffith, motion picture director is giving Robert W. Chambers, novelist, the chance to direct a scene in "America," and Chambers is returning the gift by letting Griffith write five hundred words of his forthcoming novel, which will tell in type the story of "America." It was about when Chambers, a regular letter to the Griffith studio at Mamaroneck, N. Y., remarked to Griffith, "Look here, writing a novel is a terrible grind of a business, but this directing a picture seems to be of easy sort of a job." Griffith remarked that at least one other of America's most popular novelists had become accustomed to turning out a best seller of the latter occupation of operating from directing. "Therefore the two are related by the Daughters of the American Revolution in their end to the screen spread to make each other this unique Christmas gift. They will spend all Christmas day at it, the usual number of actors, cameras, [illegible] and camera men.

Hartford (Conn) Courant Dec 27, 1923

Fitzgibbon, Inventor of "Paul Revere" Scene

My Telegraph Dec 26 1923

Griffith and Chambers to Trade

Boston Herald 12/26/23

Star Dec 27, 1923

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer Dec 26

NEA DAILY MOVIE SERVICE

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

BY MAURICE HENLE

WHAT'S DOING IN THE MOVIES

BY MAURICE HENLE

Portland (Me) Press Herald 12/27/23 — My Telegraph, Friday, December 28, 1923 — M.P. News 12/29/23

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBLIC MORE CLOSELY TO FILMS

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Special Correspondence of The PRESS HERALD

New York, Dec. 19.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early Spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our West of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

BEAU BROADWAY

FILM ARMY STARTS NEW INVASION OF VIRGINIA

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH.

David Wark Griffith and Camera Crew Relive Days of Old Dominion.

HISTORY PUT UPON SCREEN

(Special Dispatch to The Morning Telegraph.)

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 27.

Shadowy figures, gaunt specters of long-forgotten first families of Virginia, families that flourished, here, suh, in the brightest days of the "Old Dominion," came to life for one fleeting moment recently, and relieved the annals of this State for the historical film, "America," when David Wark Griffith initiated a new invasion of the territory that lies below Mason-Dixon line.

Back in the dim days of Colonial life, when Virginia was noted for the excellence of its mint julips, the beauty of its women, the chivalry of its men and the fleetness of its thoroughbreds, as Kentucky later also was to be known, the swift tide of events made the Old Dominion one of the conspicuous historical points of the American Revolution.

Across this background, the legions of General Robert E. Lee later marched and counter-marched, slaughtered and were slaughtered, in the struggle that welded more firmly the indissoluble chains that now bind these United States in a compact group.

Historic Romance Woven.

Yonder, suh, lies Chancellorsville, where "Stonewall" Jackson was mortally hurt by his own men, and south of us, lies Appomatox Court House, where Lee surrendered and the twilight of Confederacy faded into night.

"Four score years ago," in the words of Abraham Lincoln, Virginia rode high on the crest of a social wave—the 'Old Dominion" was in its heyday.

In order to make a permanent record of Virginia's splendor and magnificence, the Daughters of the American Revolution appealed to Mr. Griffth to weave a historical romance on the Southern loom. Eagerly snatching at this opportunity to erect a lasting memorial to their fathers, the Virginia Society added its endorsement.

So the North again invaded the South, but Mr. Griffith rode in the van of the Northerners instead of Grant, and moving picture cameras "shot" in place of Northern cannon.

Griffith, son of Brig. Gen. Jacob Wark Griffith, Confederate army, and himself born in Kentucky, must have experienced strange emotions at the head of a Northern detachment of "invaders."

Accompanied by stars of the motion picture world, Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Charles Mack and John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," who colloborated with Robert W. Chambers in the preparation of the scenario for "America," Griffith's film army arrved here last week, and with the aid of G. Watson James, Southern historian, and the Richmond Theatre League, immediately went to work.

Old-Timers Applaud.

The principal scenes were laid at "Westover," on the banks of the James River, the estate of William Byrd, founder of Richmond. Scenes also were taken at "Upper Brandon," "Lower Brandon," "Shirley" and "Lower Shirley" on the James River.

Vivid memories of the South of days agone were recalled to gray-haired Virginians, who gathered to see an old-fashioned Virginian wedding re-enacted before the camera. The toast to the bride and other details of the wedding were so true in detail that the spectators broke into applause. The original silver of the Byrd family was reverently resurrected by negro servants for use in these wedding scenes.

Mr. Griffith insisted on historical accuracy throughout the work of his company in this territory. State coaches were built in New York City from plans submitted by local historians, and local dressmakers were engaged to faithfully reproduce the colonial costumes. This fidelity to details probably will make "America" an unusually important historical document.

In order to move the moving picture army about easily, a six-car train was turned over to Mr. Griffith. Two baggage cars, a flat car and a stock car carried the impedimenta, while two sleepers provided the actors and actresses with sleeping quarters.

Although the scenes taken here deal principally with the American Revolution, Mr. Griffith intends to return here just so soon as the historical phases of the struggle with England are completed, to film the story of the Civil War.

NOTED FILM DIRECTOR IN ACTION

David Wark Griffith Filming Scenes for the Spectacle, "America," Near Richmond, Va.

FILM ARMY STARTS NEW INVASION OF VIRGINIA

(Continued From Page 1.)

Lionel Barrymore Engaged for "America"

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith film production, "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after many years. It was some ten years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of a stock company organized by Mr. Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under Griffith direction.

M.P. World (Ny) 12/29/23

Barrymore With Griffith

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith film production, "America." The cast also includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke.

Ny Exhibitors Trade Review 12/29/23

LIONEL BARRYMORE TO STAR IN GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been elected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and force. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theatre.

Bklyn (Ny) Life 12/29/23

"AMERICA"—Here's a novel Christmas gift! D. W. Griffith, motion picture director, gave Robert W. Chambers, novelist, the chance to direct a scene in "America," and Chambers is returning the gift by letting Griffith write five hundred words of his forthcoming novel, which will tell in type the story of "America."

My Review 12/29/23

GRIFFITH WANTS SNOW AND LOTS OF IT AT ONCE

Can't Go On With His Film "America" Until Heavy Fall Comes

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary Days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of Colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of the winter scenes until next year in the hope that the [illegible]

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee Dec 29 1923

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely To The Photoplays

BY MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

JUST as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

My Telegraph 12/29/23

CAROL DEMPSTER

Times Sq Bally 12/29/23

NAT'L HOLIDAYS FOR ADVENT OF FEATURES

"America," Griffith's Latest, Has Washington's Birthday

Boston News Dec 29, 1923

D. W. Griffith, who is in the midst of what will be his greatest work to date—"America"—is being assisted with the writing and preparing of the story by Robert W. Chambers, famous novelist.

Mr. Chambers is an able writer in his own profession in the United States, and Griffith has sent his manuscript to his studio. Again we say, we hope this working collaboration on the part of the "master director" shall be a huge success.

Kansas City (Mo) Post Journal 12/29/23

My Screen 12/30/23

Saturday Evening Post 1/5/24 — Exhibitors Herald Chicago Dec 1/5/24 — My M.P. News 1/2/24

SCREENLAND. ~~January~~ Feb. ~~1924~~ Feb. 1924

Seeing "AMERICA" FIRST

David Wark Griffith is busy at work upon his big spectacle of the American Revolution, "America." At the top is "D. W." himself in the saddle, while at the right he is choosing a charge of Virginia riders at Summers, New York. Below, Griffith directing a scene near Fort Myer, Va., with Charles Mack, Neville Alderson and Carol Dempster in the picture, waiting from the wings.

The Jewish Daily News Dec 30 1923

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארץ לייזענס די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדן מיט די גרעסטע מואווינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יארן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטיינען אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אויסאבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציאן. די סצענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

קעראל דעמפסטער
„וועלכע שפּילט די הויפט ראלע אין „אמעריקא".

דער נאמען פון דער נייער בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דער בילד ווערט אר־בערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אויס־אבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמע־ריקאנער רעוואלוציע. די סצענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

The Jewish Daily News Dec 30 1923

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארץ לייזענס די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדן מיט די גרעסטע מואווינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יארן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטיינען אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אויס־אבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמע־ריקאנער רעוואלוציע. די סצענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

The Jewish Daily News Jan 1 1924

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארץ לייזענס די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדן מיט די גרעסטע מואווינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יארן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטיינען אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אויס־אבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמע־ריקאנער רעוואלוציע. די סצענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

The Jewish Daily News Dec 30 1923

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארץ לייזענס די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדן מיט די גרעסטע מואווינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יארן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטיינען אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אויס־אבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמע־ריקאנער רעוואלוציע. די סצענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

קעראל דעמפסטער
„וועלכע שפּילט הויפטראלע אין „אמעריקא".

The Jewish Daily News Jan 2 1924

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארץ לייזענס די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדן מיט די גרעסטע מואווינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יארן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטיינען אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אויס־אבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמע־ריקאנער רעוואלוציע. די סצענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

The Forward Nyetz Jan 6 1924

גריפיט'ס נייעסטע פראדאקשאן וועט געוויזען ווערן וואשינגטאן בוירטהדיי.

וואשינגטאן בוירטהדיי, דעם 21טן פעברואר, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיטס נייעסטע פראדאקשאן פון דער אונ־אבהענגיגונגס קריעג געוויזען ווערען צו דעם ערשטען מאל אין 44טע סטרים טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאהל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, וואס האט געפירט דערצו אז אמעריי־קא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געוויזען אויפ'ן לייזענס.

גריפיט האט אבגעגעבען אזן א שיער ארבייט און גלט פאר אט דעם בילד, ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעס־טע אמעריקאנער געלעהרטע און אונ־ווערסיטעטן, זיי האבען איהם געהאלפ אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבען א ריכ־טיגע בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציע־אנערער עפאכע.

די געלערנטע האבען געזוכען אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפשפיג־לונג און גריפיט האט געזוכען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. אמעריקא איז היסטאריש ריכטיג און שפאנ־נענד.

Sunday Morning Telegraph 1/6/24

CAROL DEMPSTER INJURED.

MISS CAROL DEMPSTER, leading woman in D. W. Griffith's "America," now being filmed at Mamaroneck, had a very narrow escape from death, and received painful injuries, when thrown from a horse during one of the scenes.

Miss Dempster was riding a spirited mare in a scene, when the animal slipped in the mud and fell, throwing the film actress some distance. She was riding side saddle, and only for the fact that the horse fell on the offside, would have been crushed beneath its weight.

Mr. Griffith and a dozen others rushed to her aid. A physician was hastily summoned, and it was found that she was suffering from a badly wrenched shoulder and a sprained ankle.

Her costume, a relic of Revolutionary days, was ruined. It will be necessary to refilm the scene.

The Day Jan 5, 1924

גריפיט, דער פראדיוסער פון „ע בוידס אז ע ניישאן" מרעפט זיך אלץ ארבער מיט זיין נייע בילד „אמעריקא"

חצן מען רעדט וועגען דעם, וואס פאר א פארטשריט די מואוויקטונס האט געמאכט אין אמעריקא די לעצטע יארען, ווערט שטענדיג דערפשנט דער נאמען פון ד. וו. גריפיט, דעם מאן וואס האט אויפגעפירט „ע בוידס אז ע ניישאן" און אנדערע עפאכע־מאכנדע בילדער.

גריפיט האט זיך שטענדיג אויסגעצייכנט מיט בילדער, וואס האבען געהאט א גרויסען פארגנעג. מיט בילדער וואס האבען זיך אויסגע־צייכנט מיט זייער נאגריזעקייט, ער האט זיך קיינמאל נים אפגעשטעלט פאר נעלד צו ערריי־כען דאס הערמסטע, וואס מען קען, און ער האט דאס ערריייכט, ווי עס זאגען ערות די בילדער, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געשאפען.

אבער איצט האט גריפיט פארגענומען א בילד, וואס שטיינט איבער אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געשאפן און נים נאר, וואס גריפיט האט געשאפן, נאר וואס עס אין בכלל געוויזען געווארען אויפ'ן לייזענס. ער האט געשאפן א בילד, וואס שטעלט פאר דעם הערליכסטען פש־פעגס אין דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע — די גרויסע רעוואלוציע דעם טייג פאר אומאפהענ־גיגקייט.

דער נאמען פון דעם בילד איז „אמעריקא", ווי מען לעזט אונז ווייטער ווען „אמעריקא" נאר איז ניכטן געוויזען ווערען אין איינעם פון די גרעסטע בראדוויי טעאטערס.

The Jewish Morn. Journal Jan 6 1924

גריפיטס נייעסטע פראדאקשאן וועט געוויזען ווערען וואשינגטאן בירטהדיי

וואשינגטאן בוירטהדיי, דעם 21טן פעברואר, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיטס נייעסטע פראדאקשאן פון דער אונ־אבהענגיגונגס קריעג געוויזען ווערען צו דעם ערשטען מאל אין 44טע סטרים טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאהל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, וואס האט געפירט דערצו אז אמעריי־קא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געוויזען אויפ'ן לייזענס.

גריפיט האט אבגעגעבען אזן א שיער ארבייט און גלט פאר אט דעם בילד, ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעס־טע אמעריקאנער געלעהרטע און אונ־ווערסיטעטן, זיי האבען איהם געהאלפ אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבען א ריכ־טיגע בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציע־אנערער עפאכע.

די געלערנטע האבען געזוכען אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפשפיג־לונג און גריפיט האט געזוכען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. אמעריקא איז היסטאריש ריכטיג און שפאנ־נענד.

The Jewish Morn. Journal Jan 6 1924

קעראל דעמפסטער, סטאר אין נייער גריפיטה פראדאקשאן

קעראל דעמפסטער וועט שפּילען די הויפט ראלע אין ה. א. גריפיט'ס נייעס־טע בילד „אמעריקא". „אמעריקא", א בילד פון דער אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, פארשפּרעכט צו זיין אזוי עפאכע־מאכענד ווי זיין „ע בוידס אז ע ניישאן". דאס בילד ווערט איצט הארוצירט אויסשליסליך כדי צו פאראייביגען דעם הערראישען קאמף פון די גרינדער פון דער אמעריקאנער רעפּובליק.

The Day (Nyetz) Jan 6 1924

קעראל דעמפסטער, סטאר אין נייער גריפיטה פראדאקשאן

קעראל דעמפסטער וועט שפּילען די הויפט ראלע אין ה. א. גריפיט'ס נייעס־טע בילד „אמעריקא". „אמעריקא", א בילד פון דער אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, פארשפּרעכט צו זיין אזוי עפאכע־מאכענד ווי זיין „ע בוידס אז ע ניישאן". דאס בילד ווערט איצט הארוצירט אויסשליסליך כדי צו פאראייביגען דעם הערראישען קאמף פון די גרינדער פון דער אמעריקאנער רעפּובליק.

The Day Jan 5, 1924

Hurrah for D. W. Griffith.

In my humble opinion, D. W. Griffith is the wonder man of the motion-picture industry. Mr. Griffith must be a cultured gentleman and a deep student of humanity. His pictures are always so cleverly directed; exquisitely correct in even the slightest detail. And there is a whimsy about them that no other director achieves. His actors always "fit in," as it were, to the characters they are to portray. One never finds a namby-pamby mediocrity as the star of a Griffith production. Some of his "finds," too, are the rarest jewels in all moviedom's glittering diadem. There is Lillian Gish, unbelievably demure, delicate, quaint. Have we another personality like hers on the silver sheet to-day? And Dorothy, whimsical, delightful little Dorothy Gish, with a natural-born genius for comedy. Mae Marsh's piquant tip-tilted charm fairly radiated from the screen. Among the men folks, we have Richard Barthelmess and Henry Walthall. And going back to the ladies again, there is—"Our Mary." She was one of Griffith's first stars, I believe. There is not a sweeter personality in the whole shadow world than Mary Pickford. I love all of her pictures. They are as clean and sweet as my fairy tales were.

MAY G. NELSON.
129 South Dupre Street, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Is D. W. Overrated?

I have just seen "The White Rose," and it has prompted me to ask why D. W. Griffith is still considered the greatest motion-picture director. Had this same picture been produced by any other director it would have been branded as cheap melodrama, but because it happens to be D. W.'s latest it is hailed as "marvelous," et cetera. Outside of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Orphans of the Storm," Griffith I think has contributed nothing worth while to the screen. He has really just been riding along on the reputation he made with the former picture. "Way Down East" proved popular and was entertaining, but that also was little more than pure melodrama. Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess saved it from being thoroughly cheap.

The comedy vein Griffith persists in injecting into his pictures is really too forced to be enjoyable. I sometimes think he caters to the unintelligent and illiterate because he seldom gives the audience credit for any intelligence—every detail being explained minutely in his productions. And after reading the lengthy prologue which accompanies his pictures, it is hardly necessary to stay to view the picture.

Rex Ingram, in his short career, has overwhelmed Griffith, I think. Cecil De Mille is a back number—any one who saw "Adam's Rib" will agree with me, I am sure. His brother William is by far the better director. He does not have to depend on luxurious sets, exotic stars, and magnificent scenery to put his stories over.

Speaking of "exotic stars," Gloria Swanson, who was formerly in this class, has at last proven that she is a real actress, and does not have to depend on her clothes to put her across. I am referring to her work in "Zaza," which I considered great. She was positively ugly and wore outlandish, unbecoming costumes throughout the picture, except in the final scenes, but I haven't seen a finer piece of acting in a long time than she did in "Zaza." Gloria is about the most interesting personality now on the screen. I do not see how she can be considered beautiful, but regardless of this she can hold my interest in any picture in which she appears.

Many of us were under the impression that Pola Negri would outshine Gloria and our other American stars, when she came over to appear in American productions, but so far Pola has overshadowed neither Norma, Gloria, nor Leatrice Joy—three sincere American actresses. I do consider Pola about the most wonderful person on the screen, and after seeing "The Cheat," I can think of no American actress who can wear clothes as becomingly as she does, but we have come to expect acting of Pola, and in her first two American pictures her acting has not surpassed that of our best stars.

How I would like to shake hands with Agnes Smith for her review of "Roma." She is about the first person who has not said that Mary Pickford was perfect. Mary is not a great actress—she is a great personality. The same can be said of Douglas Fairbanks. There has been too much "Our Mary" propaganda, and also too much boosting of Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith.

Mary Philbin, Louis Stone, and Ben Lyon could hold their own with Pickford, Fairbanks, and Griffith, but just because they happen to be newer it's hard for them to gain the foothold they deserve.

GRACE O'DONNELL
[illegible] West Ninety-eighth Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Chicago Herald Jan 1 1924

WOULD YOU DO THE SAME?

If you were a motion picture director, besieged by telegrams inviting you to innumerable Christmas celebrations;

Or a motion picture actor or actress, with family and friends waiting not so very far away with evergreen trees laden with presents, and a delicious Christmas feast;

And you were directing or acting in a picture for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a picture inspired by a love of your country, and exuding in every scene the ideals of the founders of these United States; and

If you were asked to stay in the studio all Christmas Day in order to make scenes of Yuletide during the American Revolution, that these scenes might breathe the real spirit of Christmas—

What would you do?

Well, if you were D. W. Griffith, or a member of his company down at his studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y., you would probably do exactly what Mr. Griffith and his players are going to do—play your part as you never played it before, and put on the screen the spirit of Christmas as the Fathers of the American Republic knew it.

For, rejecting hundreds of invitations to dinners and festivities, Griffith and his players, fairly bubbling over with the real Christmas spirit of giving to their labor the very best that is in them, will devote their Christmas to filming Christmas scenes for "America," the story of the War of American Independence, requested by the D. A. R.

The Relaxation 12/31/23

גריפיט האט נאכבעזוכט די סטע איינצעלהייטען וועגען דער עפאכע וואס ער בעהאנדעלט אין זיין „אמעריקא"

גריפיט, וועמענס נאמען איז פאר־בונדען מיט די גרעסטע פראדאקשאנס, וואס זיינען געווען געווארען אויפ'ן לייזענס נעהם איצט זיך אליין איבער־טרעפען, וואס דאס טיינט, אז ער נעהט איבערטרעפען אלץ וואס עס איז געווי־זען געווארען אויפ'ן לייזענס. באלד וועט געווען ווערען א בילד אויף וועל־כען אט דער גרויסער פראדיוסער האט געארבייט צוזאמען מיט טויזענדער סצענען פאר הרשים און הרשים און ער האט געהאט דערביי די הילף פון פילע אויסווערטיגע אמ־ביסאריש.

די הילף פון אויסווערטיגע און היסטאריקער האט גריפיט געדארפט, ווייל עס האט זיך געהאנדעלט וועגען א היסטאריש בילד, וועגען א בילד פון א צייט, וואס איז די וויכטיגסטע פון אונ־זער לאנד.

עס האט זיך געהאנדעלט וועגען דעם בעפרייאונגס קריעג, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט. יעדער היסטאריש־ער מענטש איז אונטערזוכט געווארען אין יעדע סצענע אין גענומען אויפ'ן פלעץ. וואו די זאך איז פארגעקומען.

דער נאמען פון דעם בילד איז „אמע־ריקא" — אין דעם בילד ווערט אונזער [illegible] אייך אויף דאס ניי ענע־

The Forward Nyetz Jan 6 1924

גריפיט'ס נייעסטע פראדאק־שאן וועט געוויזען ווערן וואשינגטאן בוירטהדיי.

וואשינגטאן בוירטהדיי, דעם 21טן פעברואר, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיטס נייעסטע פראדאקשאן פון דער אונ־אבהענגיגונגס קריעג געוויזען ווערען צו דעם ערשטען מאל אין 44טע סטרים טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאהל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, וואס האט געפירט דערצו אז אמעריי־קא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געוויזען אויפ'ן לייזענס.

גריפיט האט אבגעגעבען אזן א שיער ארבייט און גלט פאר אט דעם בילד, ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעס־טע אמעריקאנער געלעהרטע און אונ־ווערסיטעטן, זיי האבען איהם געהאלפ אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבען א ריכ־טיגע בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציע־אנערער עפאכע.

די געלערנטע האבען געזוכען אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפשפיג־לונג און גריפיט האט געזוכען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. אמעריקא איז היסטאריש ריכטיג און שפאנ־נענד.

The Chicago Herald Journal 12/29/23

Fair Exchange

D. W. Griffith, motion picture director, is giving Robert W. Chambers, novelist, the [illegible] direct a scene in "America." [illegible] Chambers is returning the gift by letting Griffith write 500 words of his forthcoming novel, which will tell in type the story of "America."

Louisville (Ky) Herald Dec 30 1923

[illegible] Timing of Great Film "America" Overtures [illegible] has planned thoroughly [illegible] pictures at the disposal of the great director. Things go along [illegible] production will be [illegible] contributions of [illegible] will be [illegible]

Boston Herald Pub Jan. 3 1924

Filming in Virginia

[illegible] D. W. Griffith [illegible] "America" [illegible]

Baltimore (Md) Sun 12/30/23

D. W. Griffith's Film Who Could Interpret

Backed by D. A. R., Master Director Is Making What Promises to Be Real Motion Picture Epic.

by MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen.

A few years back, D. W. Griffith [illegible] the screen with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount [illegible] "Orphans of the Storm." This [illegible] and Gloria Swanson [illegible] Thus two [illegible] pictures.

[illegible] Lillian and Dorothy Gish [illegible] Barthelmess [illegible] Walthall [illegible] Lionel Barrymore [illegible] Mae Marsh [illegible] Carol Dempster [illegible] Mary Pickford [illegible] Griffith [illegible] Lionel Barrymore [illegible] Mae Marsh [illegible] Carol Dempster [illegible] Mary Pickford [illegible] Griffith [illegible] Lionel Barrymore [illegible] Mae Marsh [illegible] Carol Dempster [illegible] Mary Pickford [illegible] Griffith [illegible]

MAKING AMERICA

D. W. GRIFFITH

Lionel Barrymore [illegible] Mae Marsh [illegible] Carol Dempster [illegible] Mary Pickford [illegible] Griffith [illegible]

Atlantic City N.J. Gazette 12/30/23 The Forward 1/4/24 New Haven (Conn) Times Leader 12/31/23 Jewish Freiheit 1/8/24 Charleston (W Va) Mail 12/30/23

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By MAURICE HENLE

New York, Dec. 27.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country wkh "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Secretary of War Weeks has

Portland Ore Journal Dec 30 1923

Barrymore Booked For Griffith Film

D. W. Griffith has engaged Lionel Barrymore for the role of the "heavy" in "America." Production is expected to continue until spring.

Lionel Barrymore becomes a Griffith player in "America," in which he will have the role of David Butler. Nothing has yet been said in any of the announcements concerning this character and revolutionary history fails to give him a place of prominence, yet the manner of making the announcement and the qualities of the player indicates that he will have an important part in the film.

It is really a return, for Barrymore played for a time under Griffith's direction in the old Biograph days. He will do his screen work in the daytime and on Sundays, retaining his stage role for evening performances.

Carol Dempster, who has been one of Griffith's favorite actresses for several years, will have a prominent part and some of the others who have been named are Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke. Many of the characters have not yet

Mansfield Ohio News 12/13/23

DISTINGUISHED ACTOR GOES WITH GRIFFITH

"Lionel Barrymore," in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus [illegible] his screen career under Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been cast in "America" is one demanding great versatility and [illegible]. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his stage and footlight engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast of "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke, [illegible] of the important minor [illegible] yet selected.

Canton (Ohio) News Dec 14 1923

Charlotte (NC) Observer Dec 29 1923

GRIFFITH MAY PRODUCE PICTURES AT ASHEVILLE

Is Looking Over Locations in That Vicinity for His Most Ambitious Production.

Salt Lake City (Utah) Telegram 12/16/23

GRIFFITH PICKS BARRYMORE FOR "AMERICA" CAST

Bethlehem (Penn) Times Dec 28 1923

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBLIC MORE CLOSELY TO THE FILMS

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

Portland (Ore) Journal 12/30/23

Famous Horse's Color Unknown To Americans

Morning Telegram Jan 8 1924

D. W. Griffith's America May Bind the Public More Closely to Cinema Plays

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our West of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

The Jewish Daily News Jan. 4. 1924

גריפיט, דער פראדיסער פון "ע באדרט אד ע נעשאן," טרעפט זיך אליין אבער מיט זיין ביינ ביילד "אמעריקא"

East Stroudsburg (Penn) Press Dec 29 1923

EMINENT IN DIFFERENT SPHERES.

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist (with monocle), and David Wark Griffith at the latter's studio discussing the play "America," which Chambers is writing and Griffith is filming at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Worchester Mass Post Jan 1 1924

Film of the Revolution Latest American Epic

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

קעראל דעמפסטער, סטאר אין נייער גריפיטה פראדאקשאן

קעראל דעמפסטער וועט שפּיעלען די הויפּט ראָלע אין ד. א. גריפיט'ס נייעסט כע בילד אמעריקע". אמעריקע", א בילד פון דער אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, פארשפּרעכט צו זיין אזוי עפּאכע־מאכער ווי זיין אומפארגעסליכע באַרטה אזו א ניישאן", דאס בילד ווערט איצט דאָפּדוצירט אויסשליסליך כדי צו פאראייביגער דעם הערראישען קאמף פון די גרינדער פון דער אמעריקאנער רעפּובליק.

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארן לייזענען די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמענס נאמען איז פארבונדען מיט די גרעסטע מאוויינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יאָרן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטייגן אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אומאבהענגיקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציאָן. די פעענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלעצער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען.

קעראל דעמפסטער
«וועלכע שפּילט הויפּטראָלע אין „אמעריקע"

גריפיט'ס נייעסטע פּראָדאקשאן וועט געוויזען ווערען וואשינגטאן בוירטהדעי.

וואשינגטאן בוירטהדעי, דעם 21טן פעברואר, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיטס נייעסטע פּראָדאקשאן פון דער אונ־אבהענגיגונגס קריעג געוויזען ווערען צו דעם ערשטען מאל אין 44טע סטריט טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאהל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, וואס האט געפיהרט דערצו אז אמעריי־קא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געוויזען אויפ'ן לייזענען.

גריפיט האט אנגעגעבען אזן א שיער ארבייט און געלט מאר אם דעם בילד. ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעס־טע אמעריקאנער געלעהרטע און אונ־ווערסיטעטען, זיי האבען איהם געהאלפ אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבען א ריכ־טיגע בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציי אנערער עפּאכע.

די געלערנטע האבען געזעהען אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפּשפּיג־לונג און גריפיט האט געזעהען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. אמעריקא איז היסטאָריש ריכטיג און שפּאנענד.

גריפיט מאכט איבער פארן לייזענען די וויכטיגסטע מאמענטן פון דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע

ד. וו. גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדען מיט די גרעסטע מאוויינג פיקטשורס, וואס מיר האבן געהאט די לעצטע יאָרן, האט איצט פארענדיקט א בילד, וואס דארף איבערשטייגן אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט.

דער נאמען פון דעם נייעם בילד איז „אמעריקא". אין דעם בילד ווערט איבערגעגעבן דער גרויסער קאמף, וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפירט פאר אומ־אבהענגיגקייט.

דאס בילד איז פון דער גרויסער אמע־ריקאנער רעוואלוציאָן. די פעענען זיינען גענומען געווארן אויף די פלע־צער, וואו די פאסירונגען זיינען פאר־נעקומען. (*

קעראל דעמפסטער
«וועלכע שפּילט הויפּטראָלע אין „אמעריקע"

גריפיט האט נאכגעזוכט די סטע אינטעלליגענטן ווענען דער עפּאכע וואס ער בעהאנדעלט אין זיין "אמעריקא"

גריפיט, וועמענס נאמען איז פאר־בונדען מיט די גרעסטע פּראָדאקשאנס, וואס זיינען געוויזען געווארן אויפ'ן לייזענען געהט איצט זיך אליין איבער־טרעפען, וואס דאס מיינט, אז ער געהט איבערטרעפען אלץ וואס עס איז געווי־זען געווארען אויפ'ן לייזענען. באלד וועט געוויזען ווערען א בילד אויף וועל־כען אט דער גרויסער פּראָדיוסער האט געאַרבייט צוזאמען מיט טויזענדער מענשען פאר חדשים און חדשים און ער האט געהאט דערביי די הילף פון טיל־אונגעוויזעטען און בעריהמטע היס־טאריקער.

די הילף פון אונגעוויזעטען און היסטאריקער האט גריפיט געדאַרפט, ווייל עס האט זיך געהאנדעלט וועגען א היסטאריש בילד, וועגען א בילד פון א צייט, וואס איז די זיבכטיגסטע פון אונ־זער לאנד.

עס האט זיך געהאנדעלט וועגען דעם בעפרייאונגס קריעג וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפיהרט. יעדער היסטאָרישער פאקט איז אונטערזוכט געווארען אין יעדע סצענע אין געגענטען אויפ'ן פלאץ, וואו די זאך איז פארגעקומען.

דער נאמען פון דעם בילד איז "אמע־ריקא" — אין דעם בילד ווערט אונזער לאנד אייך אויף דאס ניי עכטע

גריפיט'ס נייעסטע פּראָדאקשאן וועט געוויזען ווערען וואשינגטאן בוירטהדעי.

וואשינגטאן בוירטהדעי, דעם 21טן פעברואר, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיטס נייעסטע פּראָדאקשאן פון דער אונ־אבהענגיגונגס קריעג געוויזען ווערען צו דעם ערשטען מאל אין 44טע סטריט טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאהל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, וואס האט געפיהרט דערצו אז אמעריי־קא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געוויזען אויפ'ן לייזענען.

גריפיט האט אנגעגעבען אזן א שיער ארבייט און געלט מאר אם דעם בילד. ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעס־טע אמעריקאנער געלעהרטע און אונ־ווערסיטעטען, זיי האבען איהם געהאלפ אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבען א ריכ־טיגע בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציי אנערער עפּאכע.

די געלערנטע האבען געזעהען אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפּשפּיג־לונג און גריפיט האט געזעהען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. אמעריקא איז היסטאָריש ריכטיג און שפּאנענד.

גריפיט, דער פּראָדיוסער פון „ע בירד אז ע נייישאן" טרעפט זיך אליין איבער מיט זיין ניי בילד „אמעריקא"

הען סטן רעדס הענען דעם, וואס פאר, א פארשארים די מאוויינגס האט געמאכט אין אמעריקא. די לעצטע יאָהרען, ווערט שטענדיג דערטשאנס דער נאמען פון ד. וו. גריפיט. דעם מאן וואס האט אויפגעפיהרט „א בירד אז ע נייישאן" און שנדערע עפּאכעמאכענדע בילד דער.

גריפיט האט זיך שטענדיג אויסגעצייכענט מיט בילדער, וואס האבען געהאט א גרויסען פארגנעם, מיט בילדער וואס האבען זיך אויסגע־צייכנט מיט זייער נראנדיזעזיים, ער האט זיך קיינמאל נים אפּגעשטעלט פאר געלד צו ערערי־כטן דאס הענסטע, וואס מען קען. און ער האט דאס ערריכט, ווי עס זאגען ערות די בילדער, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געשאפען.

שבער איצט האט גריפיט פארגנדיגט א בילד, וואס שטיגט איבער אלץ, וואס ער האט ביז איצט געמאכט און נים נאר, וואס גריפיט האט געמאכט, נאר וואס עס איז בכלל געווייזען געווארען אויפ'ן לייזענען. ער האט געמאכט א בילד, וואס שטעלט פאר דעם הערליכסטען פאר פעגנס אין דער אמעריקאנער געשיכטע — די גרויסע רעוואלוציע דעם קריג פאר אומאבהענ־גיגקייט.

דער נאמען פון דעם בילד איז „אמעריקא", ווי סטן לאזט אונז וויסען וועגען „אמעריקא" נאר איז ניכטן געווייזען ווערען אין איינעם פון די גרעסטע גרשרייבער טעאטערס. (*

גריפיטס נייעסטע פּראָדאקשאן וועט געוויזען ווערען וואשינגטאן בוירטהדעי.

וואשינגטאן בוירטהדעי, דעם 21טן פעברואר, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיטס נייעסטע פּראָדאקשאן פון דער אונ־אבהענגיגונגס קריעג געוויזען ווערען דעם ערשטען מאל אין 44טע סטריט טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאהל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, וואס האט געפיהרט דערצו אז אמעריי־קא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געוויזען אויפ'ן לייזענען.

גריפיט האט אנגעגעבען אזן א שיער ארבייט און געלט מאר אם דעם בילד. ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעס־טע אמעריקאנער געלעהרטע און אונ־ווערסיטעטען, זיי האבען איהם געהאלפ אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבען א ריכ־טיגע בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציי אנערער עפּאכע.

די געלערנטע האבען געזעהען אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפּשפּיג־לונג און גריפיט האט געזעהען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. אמעריקא איז היסטאָריש ריכטיג און שפּאנענד.

קעראל דעמפסטער, סטאר אין נייער גריפיטה פּראָדאקשאן

קעראל דעמפסטער וועט שפּיעלען די הויפּט ראָלע אין ד. א. גריפיט'ס נייעסט כע בילד אמעריקע". אמעריקע", א בילד פון דער אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע, פארשפּרעכט צו זיין אזוי עפּאכע־מאכער ווי זיין אומפארגעסליכע באַרטה אזו א ניישאן", דאס בילד ווערט איצט דאָפּדוצירט אויסשליסליך כדי צו פאראייביגער דעם הערראישען קאמף פון די גרינדער פון דער אמעריקאנער רעפּובליק.

D. W. Griffith's Film Who Could Interpret

Backed by D. A. R., Master Director Is Making What Promises to Be Real Motion Picture Epic.

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two outstanding contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen.

R. W. Chambers Is Author Of America

Noted Novelist Is Collaborating With D. W. Griffith On The Revolutionary Picture Latter Is Making

D. W. GRIFFITH IS STILL PRAYING FOR MUCH SNOW

Needs Old Time Winter Weather to Finish "America" Picture

New England and South Hold Nation's Prettiest Homes

D. W. Griffith Says He Has Found Charm in These Sections; Explains Home Portrays the Simple Life

Atlantic City N.J. Gazette 12/30/23 The Forward 1/4/24 New Haven (Conn) Times Leader 12/31/23 Jewish Freiheit 1/5/24 Charleston (W Va) Mail 12/30/23

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By MAURICE HENLE

New York, Dec. 27.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country wkh "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

גריפיט האט נאכגעזוכט די קלענסטע איינצעלהייטן וועגן דער עפאכע וואס ער בעגינט דאס אנדענקן אין זיין „אמעריקא".

גריפיט, וועמעס נאמען איז פארבונדען מיט די גרעסטע פראדאקשאנס וואס זיינען געווזען געווארען אויפ'ן לייוועגט נעהט איצט זיך אליין איבער טרעפען, וואס דאס מיינט, אז ער נעהט איבערטרעפען אליין, וואס עס איז ווען געווזען געווארען אויפ'ן לייוועגט. באלד וועט געווזען ווערען א בילד אויף וועלכען אט דער גרויסער פראדיוסער האט געארבייט צוזאמען מיט טויזענדער מענשען פאר חדשים און חדשים און ער האט געהאט דערביי די הילף פון פיעלע אונזווערזיטעטען און באריהמטע היסטאריקער.

די הילף פון אונזווערזיטעטען און היסטאריקער האט גריפיט געדארפט ווייל עס האט זיך געהאנדעלט ווענען א היסטאריש בילד, ווענען א בילד פון א צייט, וואס איז די וויכטיגסטע פון אונזער לאנד.

עס האט זיך געהאנדעלט ווענען דעם באפרייאונגס קריעג וואס אונזער לאנד האט געפיהרט. יעדער היסטאריש שער פלאץ איז אונטערזוכט געווארען און יעדע סצענע איז געגומען אויף דעם פלאץ, וואו די זאך איז פארגעקומען.

דער נאמען פון דעם בילד איז „אמעריקא" — אין דעם בילד וועט אונזער לאנד אויפסניי ענטדעקט ווערען פאר אייך.

**)

Portland Ore Journal Dec 30 1923

Barrymore Booked For Griffith Film

D. W. Griffith has engaged Lionel Barrymore for the role of the "heavy" in "America." Production is expected to continue until spring.

Mansfield Ohio News 12/13/23

DISTINGUISHED ACTOR GOES WITH GRIFFITH

Lionel Barrymore, in addition to his successful starring venture with David Belasco, has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production "America."

Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career under the Griffith direction. He continued his screen work for several years, when he returned to the stage.

The part for which he has been selected in "America" is one demanding great versatility and power. He will do his screen work daytime and Sundays, keeping his night and matinee engagements at the theater.

In addition to Barrymore, the cast for "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke. Many of the important minor parts will be filled.

Canton Ohio News Dec 14 1923

Lionel Barrymore becomes a Griffith player in "America," in which he will have the role of David Butler. Nothing has yet been said in any of the announcements concerning this character and revolutionary history fails to give him a place of prominence, yet the manner of making the announcement and the qualities of the player indicates that he will have an important part in the film.

It is really a return, for Barrymore played for a time under Griffith's direction in the old Biograph days. He will do his screen work in the daytime and on Sundays, retaining his stage role for evening performances.

Carol Dempster, who has been one of Griffith's favorite actresses for several years, will have a prominent part and some of the others who have been named are Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke. Many of the characters have not yet

Charlotte (NC) Observer Dec 29 1923

GRIFFITH MAY PRODUCE PICTURES AT ASHEVILLE

Is Looking Over Locations in That Vicinity for His Most Ambitious Production.

Special to The Observer.

ASHEVILLE, Dec. 28.—D. W. Griffith, noted director of the screen, was about most of the day yesterday looking over his scenes in his great production, "America," in and around this city. It was learned today authoritatively that Mr. Griffith, when it became known that of the large number of representatives of the motion picture men have been looking over locations here and near Hendersonville, the scenic beauty, and the Biltmore estate and the other places among the city, has decided upon this place as the place to make his great production.

Mr. Griffith is now in Atlanta, but will come back to Asheville next week and will be here for some time, probably the entire month of January. He will be accompanied by a large number of people, including his stars, and will have with him a large number of people from the city.

Mr. Griffith is a native of Kentucky and is a son of Colonel

Fort Worth (Tex) Star Telegram Dec 30 1923

GRIFFITH PICKS BARRYMORE FOR "AMERICA" CAST

Atlanta Constitution Dec 9 1923

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBLIC MORE CLOSELY TO THE FILMS

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

New York.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith, swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling qualities of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

The Jewish Daily News Jan. 4. 1924

גריפיט, דער פראדיוסער פון "ע באביט אז ע נעשאן," טרעפט זיך אליין איבער מיט זיין ביל "אמעריקא"

ווען מען דערט וועגען דעם, וואס פאר א פארשריט די מיאזיי קונסט האט געמאכט אין אמעריקא די לעצטע יאהרען, ווערט שענדיג דערפאנט דעם נאמען פון ד. וו. גריפיט, דעם מאן וואס האט אויפגעפיהרט "ע בוירט אין ע ניישאן" אין אנדערע עפאכע מאכענדיג בילדער.

גריפיט האט זיך שטענדיג אויסגעצייכנט מיט בילדער, וואס האבען גע האט א גרויסען פארגעניג, מיט בילדער וואס עס איז בכלל געווען אויפ'ן לייוועגט, ער האט זיך קיינמאל נים אפגעשטעלט פאר געלד צו ערייכען דאס העכסטע, וואס מען קען, אין ער האט דאס ערייכט, ווי עס זאל געווען ערות די בילדער וואס ער האט בין איצט געמאכט.

אבער יעצט האט גריפיט פערענדיגט א בילד, וואס שטייגט איבער אלץ וואס ער האט בין איצט געמאכט, אין נים נאר וואס גריפיט האט געמאכט, נאר, בראדוויי טעאטערס וואס האבען זיך איינגעצייכנט מיט זייער גראנדיעזקייט, ער האט זיך קיינמאל נים אפגעשטעלט פאר געלד צו ערייכען דאס העכסטע, וואס מען קען, אין ער האט דאס ערייכט, ווי עס זאל געווען ערות די בילדער וואס ער האט בין איצט געשאפען.

דער נאמען פון דעם בילד איז "אמעריקא", ווי מען לאזט אויפ'ן וויסען וועט "אמעריקא" נאר אין ניכען געשיכטע ווערען אין איינעם פון די וויכטיגסטע טעאטערס.

Bethlehem (Penn) Times Dec 28 1923

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBLIC MORE CLOSELY TO THE FILMS

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

EMINENT IN DIFFERENT SPHERES

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist (with monocle) and David Wark Griffith at the latter's studio discussing the play "America," which Chambers is writing and Griffith is filming at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Portland (Ore) Journal 12/8/23

Famous Horse's Color Unknown To Americans

East Stroudsburg (Penn) Press Dec 29 1923

Worchester Mass Post Jan 1 1924

Film of the Revolution Latest American Epic

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

D. W. Griffith's America May Bind the Public More Closely to Cinema Plays

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our West of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

The FREIHEIT JAN 7 1924

גריפיס ניסטע פראדאקשאן וועט געווינען ווערן וואשינגטאן בורסדעי

וואשינגטאן בורסדעי, דעם 21טן סעפטעמבער, וועט „אמעריקא", גריפיס'ס ניעסטע פראדאקשאן פון דער אויסגעטייטשטער קריעג געווינען ווערן צום ערשטן מאל אין 44טע סטרים טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע וואס האט געפיהרט ערגעץ, אז אמעריקא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געווינען אויפ'ן לייוונעם.

גריפיס האט אפגעגעבען אזא א שיער אר יארן און געלט פאר אט דעם בילד. ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעסטע אמעריקאנער געלערטע און אויסווערטיגע טעמען, זיי האבן אים געהאלפן, אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבן א ריכטיג בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציאנערער עפאכע.

די געלערנטע האבן זעהן אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפשפיגלונג און גריפיס האט געזען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. „אמעריקא" איז היסטאריש ריכטיג און שפאנענד.

The DAY JAN 8 1924

גריפיס'ס ניסטע פראדאקשאן וועט געווינען ווערן וואשינגטאן בורסדעי

וואשינגטאן בורסדעי, דעם 21טן סעפטעמבער, וועט „אמעריקא" גריפיס'ס ניעסטע פראדאקשאן פון דער אויסגעטייטשטער קריעג געווינען ווערן צום ערשטן מאל אין 44סטע סטרים טעאטער.

דאס איז דאס ערשטע מאל וואס די גרויסע אמעריקאנער רעוואלוציע וואס האט געפיהרט ערגעץ, אז אמעריקא זאל זיך באפרייען פון ענגלאנד, ווערט געווינען אויפ'ן לייוונעם.

גריפיס האט אפגעגעבען אזא א שיער אר יארן און געלט פאר אט דעם בילד. ער האט געהאט די הילף פון די גרעסטע אמעריקאנער געלערטע און אויסווערטיגע טעמען, זיי האבן אים געהאלפן, אז עס זאל זיין איבערגעגעבן א ריכטיג בילד פון דער גרויסער רעוואלוציאנערער עפאכע.

די געלערנטע האבן געזעהן, אז דאס בילד זאל זיין א ריכטיגע אפשפיגלונג און גריפיס האט געזען, אז עס זאל זיין אינטערעסאנט. „אמעריקא" איז היסטאריש ריכטיג און שפאנענד.

Ann Arbor (Mich) Times News Dec 19 1923

Movie Chat

The secret of why Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, has become a confirmed commuter between New York city and Mamaroneck, N. Y., is out at last. He is writing "America," the story of the American Revolution, which D. W. Griffith is filming for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chambers, whose early popularity was gained through novels dealing with the Revolutionary period, and who is regarded as one of the leading authorities on early American history, has become so intensely enthusiastic over "America," that he is reported to be burning the midnight oil prodigally in order to fulfil his many other contracts for serials and novels and still keep "America" marching merrily to completion.

Springfield (Ohio) News 12/25/23

Picture Director Named a Colonel

He now "Colonel" D. W. Griffith, the motion picture producer who revolutionized the film world by making the first long motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and who is now filming the war of independence in "America" at the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has been made an honest to goodness colonel by the governor of his native state, Kentucky.

Gov. Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky has just forwarded Griffith's commission to Mayor Huston Quinn of Louisville, with a letter stating that he has made Griffith a colonel in recognition of the honor which the movie producer has brought to the state of Kentucky.

Griffith is the first motion picture producer ever honored in this manner. Others who have received similar commissions in the past include Col. George Horace Lorimer, Col. Norman P. Harwood and Col. John F. McCutcheon.

Cincinnati (Ohio) Post 12/26/23

'America' May Be Master Director's Greatest Film Production

By Maurice Henle

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen.

A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." This year Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

THE possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

John W. Weeks, secretary of war, has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

BUT that isn't all. In a special train. Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

JUST as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of 1849 and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the "Delaware river.

Chicago (Ill) Post Dec 28 1923

Among the Players

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming production by D. W. Griffith, "America." Mr. Barrymore returns to the Griffith fold after an absence of several years. It was some 10 years ago in the old Biograph days that Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career.

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 1/1/24

Government Troops Helping Griffith to Film "America"

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Jamaica (N.Y.) Long Island Press Dec. 31. 1923

Writer, Director Exchange Jobs!

Buffalo (N.Y.) Times Dec. 30. 1923

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's hall of fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R. but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train. Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

Buckman Tavern is one of the original sites used by D. W. Griffith for "America," his picture soon to be released

Harrisonburg (Va) Advertiser 12/29/23

"AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBIC MORE CLOSELY TO FILMS

Griffith Picture Destined to be One of Most Powerful Ever Made

By MAURICE HENLE

New York, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's hall of fame. Paramount's "Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R. but all big patriotic societies are cooperating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops in costunie, are re-enacting the principal battles of the revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon," drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the "Delaware river.

My Telegraph Jan 6 1923

A GRIFFITH OPENING.

"America" Will Have Broadway Presentation February 21.

(Special Correspondence The Morning Telegraph.)

D. W. Griffith is determined to make "America" an all-round patriotic affair, as not only is his latest production all about the War of Independence and made for the Daughters of the American Revolution, but it is to have its opening on February 21, the eve of Washington's Birthday. The Forty-fourth Street Theatre has been chosen for the first public presentation.

[illegible] Lionel Barrymore has been engaged by D. W. Griffith for the spectacle "America" in which the producer is [illegible] at Mamaroneck [illegible] Long Island's star from his novel "[illegible]" with the [illegible] Mr. [illegible]

Cleveland (O) Times 12/20/23

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming production by D. W. Griffith, "America." Mr. Barrymore returns to the Griffith fold after an absence of several years. It was some 10 years ago in the old Biograph days that Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career.

Muncie (Ind) Press Dec 27 1923

CAROL DEMPSTER INJURED.

MISS CAROL DEMPSTER, leading woman in D. W. Griffith's "America," now being filmed at Mamaroneck, had a very narrow escape from death, and received painful injuries, when thrown from a horse during one of the scenes.

Miss Dempster was riding a spirited mare in a scene when the animal slipped in the sand and fell, throwing the film actress some distance. She was riding side saddle, and only for the fact that the horse fell on the offside, would have been crushed beneath its weight.

Mr. Griffith and a dozen others rushed to her aid. A physician was hastily summoned, and it was found that she was suffering from a badly wrenched shoulder, and a sprained ankle.

Her costume, a relic of Revolutionary days, was ruined. It will be necessary to refilm the [illegible]

By MAURICE HENLE

New York, Dec. 27.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two — Griffith and Paramount — are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history — one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war. Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

HENLE

HENLE

Chicago (Ill) Post Dec 28 1923

DISTINGUISHED ACTOR GOES WITH GRIFFITH

Toledo (Ohio) News Bee 1/1/24

Greensboro (N.C) News Dec 29 1923

Picture Play Magazine February 1924 49

How Mr. Griffith directs one of his big outdoor scenes

Mr. Griffith's Next Production

It is to be called "America" and it will treat the American Revolution in somewhat the same way that "The Birth of a Nation" treated the Civil War.

By James Randall Elliott

Miss Irma Harrison, who will play a Colonial belle.

FOR several months D. W. Griffith has been traveling up and down the Atlantic seaboard, taking scenes in historic locations for his forthcoming picture, "America," which is to treat the Revolutionary War in a manner similar to that in which "The Birth of a Nation" pictured the Civil War.

Predicting that a picture in the making will be a "masterpiece" is a hazardous business, but in view of the effort that is being expended on this undertaking, its outcome will be awaited with more than ordinary interest, for there is every reason for anticipating that it will be a significant contribution to the screen. "We believe that it is going to outbirth the 'Birth' and uncover the 'Wagon,'" one of Mr. Griffith's associates said enthusiastically, in commenting to me about it recently. Mr. Griffith, naturally, is making no such boastful comparisons as this, but his remarks about the theme of the picture indicate its possibilities.

"What we hope to do," he told me, some months ago, between the scenes on which he was working at the little village of Somers, New York, "is to show through what heroic efforts this great continent was settled and freedom was won by the American colonists, and how that freedom which they secured laid the foundations for the peace and prosperity which we now enjoy—and which we so little appreciate."

That is a big theme. It is a theme as big as that of "The Birth of a Nation." And Griffith's aim undoubtedly is to make this picture, if possible, as great, or even greater than "The Birth."

Carol Dempster plays "The Girl."

As a historical record it can scarcely fail to be of great value. Months were spent in research work before a single location was visited. Every possible aid has been extended by all the American historical societies, by the government, and by individuals. Scenes have been shot in every available historic spot where the old landmarks have been preserved, and where these have changed, sets were erected on locations bearing a resemblance to the old prints which the historians unearthed in museums and libraries.

Such a location was the one shown on the opposite page—the one at Somers, New York, where the Indian attack upon a colonial settlement, and the retreat from the Battle of Concord, were filmed last summer.

This drawing, which was made from sketches done on the spot, shows Griffith's method of directing one of the big scenes. Like a general directing a battle, he was stationed high up on a hillside, where he could communicate with some of the near-by camera men by megaphone, and with his assistant directors, stationed at different points on the location, by means of a specially installed telephone system.

The filming of scenes at this location alone was a huge undertaking. Before the company went there, every available room in every near-by farmhouse was engaged, as well as all of the rooms in the historic "Elephant Inn." In addition several camps were erected. Some three hundred workmen, most of them skilled mechanics, carpenters, painters, and the like, arrived first to build the necessary roads, erect the sets, and install the various equipment necessary.

Then came the company, and with them some four or five hundred soldiers from Fort Meyer, whose military discipline and training made them the ideal type of extras to represent the British troops. Several weeks were spent on this location, and on the last day they staged the big scene, in which sets erected for miles around were burned.

And this was but a small part of the entire undertaking, for a list of the locations visited would read like an index to a history of the Revolution. At this writing Mr. Griffith is doing interiors at his Mamaroneck studio, where he has reproduced the British House of Lords, where bits of the historical debates that took place at the time of the Revolution will be enacted. And a little later, when snow has fallen, he will set out again to do scenes at Valley Forge.

There will be, of course, a love story running through the picture, in which Carol Dempster will play "The Girl" and Neil Hamilton, "The Boy." But in addition to these romantic and fictitious characters there will be a long list of historic ones, including Washington, John Adams, John Hancock, Alexander Hamilton, Patrick Henry, Paul Revere, Major Warren, General Gage, to name but a few, as well as Pitt, Chatham, Burke, King George the Third, and other historic English figures. Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the heavy villain of the story, a historic character named Walter Butler.

Neil Hamilton will be the hero of the love story.

Charles Mack will play an aristocratic young Southerner.

Production of "America" Awakens New Interest in Revolutionary History

Griffith Leaves No Ground Uncovered in Making Great American Drama—Players Visit All Battlefields—Research Bureaus Established—Historians Collect Data for Colossal Film.

Will Reproduce Battles of War of Independence — Soldiers of United States Army Learn Workings of Flintlock—Redskins Have to Be Coached in Use of Bow and Arrow.

Chambers Watches Developments

Paul Revere's Horse Wasn't White.

Rousing Patriotism.

Visit Battlefields.

Lack Whole Big Forces.

50

THE FIGHT AT CONCORD BRIDGE

UNITED STATES REGULARS, IN REDCOATS AND "HOMESPUN" REFIGHT THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL IN D. W. GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

THE MINUTEMEN PREPARE TO PROTECT HISTORIC BUCKMAN TAVERN

The Daughters of the American Revolution mag section

"AMERICA"

By Frederick Roche

COUNTRY wide interest in the War of Independence is being aroused through the filming, by David Wark Griffith, of "America," a photoplay based upon the Revolution, and featuring the major incidents and battles of this country's great struggle for justice and liberty.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and other officers of that organization have witnessed the "shooting" of various scenes in "America," as have representatives of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Lexington Historical Society, the Massachusetts Historical Society, the Colonial Dames, and other similar patriotic societies.

SAMUEL ADAMS GREETS A VISITOR TO THE HANCOCK-CLARKE HOUSE, LEXINGTON, MASS., IN D. W. GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

Government officials, the United States Army, prominent historians, patriotic societies, and descendants of Revolutionary families are aiding the noted director in every possible way, and there is every indication that the resulting picture will be one worthy of the great theme it depicts, with fidelity to historic facts.

Not only have the historical experts of these and similar organizations aided Griffith in the vast volume of research work made necessary by his elaborate plans, but the societies have placed at his disposal the famous old houses and other shrines for which they care, as locales, and their invaluable collections

"America"—the story of the American Revolution, of the high ideals which swayed the founders of the United States, of the sublime courage with which they worked to achieve their ideals—has long been Griffith's dream.

Of the prodigious labor of transforming that dream into reality, only those

THE MINUTEMAN IN D. W. GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA"

Original Flint-lock and Powder Horn used in Battle of Lexington conversant with the making of a great film can know. The task of assembling a qualified staff of research experts who worked for months before a scene was taken, for example, was alone a tremendous task.

Public and private libraries were combed, museums and private collections of books, documents, letters, and diaries were gone over in order to settle disputed points—points of little consequence to the average historian.

The selection of a cast was another point upon which Griffith spent much time. Thousands of actors and actresses were interviewed before the most fitting ones to portray George Washington, Samuel Adams, John Hancock, Prescott, Lee, Dorothy Quincy and other leading characters were chosen.

Fortunately Giffith was saved much of the usual labor of selecting extra people. For, fired with an appreciation of the magnitude of the task of picturizing the Revolution, the United States Army and hundreds of Revolutionary descendants stepped into the breach and offered their services.

At every historic spot where Griffith took scenes, hosts of Revolutionary descendants, volunteering and eager, were used as "extras." When finished this unique picture will be in a measure a catalogue of the descendants of Revo-

Third Cavalry, led in person by Major Wainwright, aide to Secretary Weeks, reproduced Morgan's raid.

The work still goes on. It will be many weeks before it is finished and ready for the public eye. And day by day the mail pouring into Griffith's office grows more voluminous with letters ex-

Ft Wayne (Ind) Gazette 12/27/23

Brownsville (Pa) Telegraph 12/29/23

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's hall of fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every schoolchild in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R. but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Wilmington (Del) Journal Dec 29 1923

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every schoolchild in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

Brooklyn Times 12/30/23

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

New York, Dec. 28.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with the "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America", now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

Springfield (Ill) Journal 12/30/23

FILM 'AMERICA' TO DRAW SCREEN CLOSE TO PUBLIC

BY MAURICE HENLE

Special to The Press Journal.

New York, Dec. 29.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America", now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

Griffith directing A Paul Revere scene

Springfield (Ill) Journal 12/30/23

Cleveland (Ind) News Dec 26, 1923

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBLIC MORE CLOSELY TO THE FILMS

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen.

A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to public "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every schoolchild in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Portsmouth (Va) Star 12/30/23

Brooklyn Times 12/30/23

FILMING PAUL REVERE'S RIDE

Kansas City (Mo) Post 12/30/23

Griffith Making Screen Epic of the Revolution

—Sketched by Had H. Hadley.

When Griffith goes to making a picture the whole film industry sits up and takes notice. Right now the master of film direction is making "America," a screen epic of the American Revolution—just as "The Birth of a Nation" was of the Civil war. Miss Carol Dempster, heroine of former Griffith contributions to the screen, will be seen in the feminine lead.

Portland (Maine) Times-Herald 12/31/23

DAILY MOVIE SERVICE

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By Maurice Henle

New York, Dec. 31.—Unless all signs fail two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount —are once more knocking at the door of the screens Hall of Fame Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A R., but all big patriotic societies are cooperating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

• • •

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics priceless relics that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

• • •

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between out west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandra, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been 'shot' in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Griffith Directing a "Paul Revere" Scene.

U.S. Army Recruiting Service Year Book 53

Soldiers as Movie Actors

Recruiters might well incorporate into their line of talk the screen training furnished by the Army to prospective moving picture stars, judging by the events of the past few months. The use of the 16th and 18th Infantry Regiments in the D. W. Griffith film, "America", was mentioned in a recent issue; later the 3rd Cavalry was featured in the same production. Outfits of the 2nd Division are furnishing the military features of the Fox Film Corporation picture, "The Warrens of Virginia," the play in which Miss Martha Mansfield so unfortunately lost her life. The 9th and 23rd Infantries have been doing the Infantry work of the two armies portrayed in the picture, while all the mounted maneuvering is being done by the 15th Field Artillery.

Norwalk (Conn) Sentinel 1/5/24

On the eve of Washington's Birthday, February 21, "America," the photodrama of the war of Independence, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution, will have its public premiere. The D. A. R. anxious to celebrate the second centennial of the beginning of the Revolutionary war with an appropriate screen production, requested Griffith to film a drama which would include the leading battles of this country's struggle for freedom. The story was written by Robert W. Chambers and Griffith and a large force of players, technicians and historical experts have been at work on the film for months.

New Britain (Conn) Herald 1/5/24

On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21, "America", the photodrama of the War of Independence, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution by D. W. Griffith, will have its premiere at the Forty-Fourth street theater, New York.

New Eve World 1/5/24

"AMERICA" FOR FEB. 22.

The latest D. W. Griffith film, "America," is being rushed to completion out in Mamaroneck so that it may be thrown on the public screens for the first time during the week of Washington's Birthday. To be more exact, the first New York showing will be at the 44th Street Theatre on the night of Feb. 21.

The request from the D. A. R., under whose auspices the film was made, coupled with the desire of D. W. G. himself to give the first showing as a celebration of Washington's birthday, has caused the director to work nights and holidays in an effort to have the film finished in time. And he told Screenings yesterday that it would be all ready when the time comes.

Muskegon (Mich) Chronicle 12/31/23

By Maurice Henle.

New York, Dec. 31.—Unless all signs fail two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. 'America' was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principle battles of the Revolution.

• • •

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

• • •

Just as 'The Covered Wagon' drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been 'shot' in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Warren (Ohio) Chronicle 1/3/24

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

BY MAURICE HENLE

New York—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principle battles of the Revolution.

• • •

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

• • •

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. The section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

St Paul (Minn) News 12/30/23

New Griffith Film, 'America,' to Be Fine Historical Lesson

Film to Be Notable Dramatic Piece as Well, Movie Men Predict—U. S. Troops in Cast.

BY MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29. — In the early spring Griffith will give to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The film promises to be not only a great lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his past attainments. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

USE FEDERAL TROOPS.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

NOW IN VIRGINIA.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee 1/1/24

GRIFFITH AWAITS SNOW FOR HIS "AMERICA."

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary Days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76.

Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of Colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to 15 feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

Chicago (Ill) News 1/2/24

Not What It Used to Be.

D. W. Griffith and his research workers, restaging revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter. While the informal reports of colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat. It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

Wilkes Barre (Pa) Times Leader January 1924

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By Maurice Henle

Port Chester (Ny) Item 1/2/24

MOVIE ACTORS AT MAM'K WAIT IN VAIN FOR SNOW

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary Days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of Colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to 15 feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

Flint (Mich) Journal January 3, 1924

LATEST GRIFFITH CLASSIC MAY BIND PUBLIC TO FILMS

"America" and Paramount's "Ten Commandments" Are Scored Best.

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principle battles of the Revolution.

• • •

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

• • •

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. The section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Baltimore (Md) Post 1/3/24

Making "America"

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Boston (Mass) Traveler Jan 4 1924

Griffith Picture to Open on Eve of Washington's Birthday

The eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, has been chosen as a fitting time for the first presentation of David Wark Griffith's photodrama of the revolutionary war, "America."

The Forty-fourth Street Theatre in New York, where "Broadway" is now running, will be the scene of the premiere. It will be a gala affair, given by the D. A. R. and other national and private societies interested in the production. Broadway is to be closed to the traffic during the showing of the film, and the entire theatre will be given over to the patriotic society.

GRIFFITH BELIEVES SEASONS HAVE CHANGED

Saginaw (Mich) News-Courier 12/28/23 Ft Wayne (Ind) Gazette 12/27/23 Brownsville (Pa) Telegram 12/29/23

Latest News and Gossip from Filmland

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are cooperating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use, by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Richmond (Ind) Item Dec 26, 1923

Brooklyn Times 12/30/23

By E. V. DURLING.

The Cosmopolitan Studios have started production in New York and will soon have three companies at work. This company is engaged in making "Janice Meredith" a story of the Revolution and it is said to conflict in many ways with D. W. Griffith's picture "America."

At the

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's hall of fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R. but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early 18s and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware river.

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Wilmington (Del) Journal Dec 29 1923

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

BY MAURICE HENLE

New York, Dec. 28.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

GRIFFITH'S "AMERICA" MAY BIND PUBLIC MORE CLOSELY TO THE FILMS

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen.

A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to public "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war of the American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousand of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Portsmouth (Va) Star

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every schoolchild in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Griffith directing a Paul Revere scene

Springfield (Del) Journal 12/30/23

FILMING PAUL REVERE'S RIDE

Springfield (Del) Journal 12/30/23

Springfield (Del) Journal 12/30/23

FILM 'AMERICA' TO DRAW SCREEN CLOSE TO PUBLIC

BY MAURICE HENLE

Special to The State Journal

New York, Dec. 23.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling Chance of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Hartford (Conn) Courant 12/31/23

Kansas City (Mo) Post 12/30/23 Portland (Maine) Times-Herald 12/31/23 U.S. Army Recruiting News 53 Norwalk (Conn) Sentinel 1/5/24

Griffith Making Screen Epic of the Revolution

—Sketched by Had H. Hadley.

When Griffith goes to making a picture the whole film industry sits up and takes notice. Right now the master of film direction is making "America," a screen epic of the American Revolution—just as "The Birth of a Nation" was of the Civil war. Miss Carol Dempster, heroine of former Griffith contributions to the screen, will be seen in the feminine lead.

DAILY MOVIE SERVICE

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

By Maurice Henle

New York, Dec. 31.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount —are once more knocking at the door of the screens Hall of Fame Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are cooperating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics priceless relics that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between out west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandra, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Griffith Directing a "Paul Revere" Scene.

Scenes already have been 'shot' in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Soldiers as Movie Actors

Recruiters might well incorporate into their line of talk the screen training furnished by the Army to prospective moving picture stars, judging by the events of the past few months. The use of the 16th and 18th Infantry Regiments in the D. W. Griffith film, "America", was mentioned in a recent issue; later the 3rd Cavalry was featured in the same production. Outfits of the 2nd Division are furnishing the military features of the Fox Film Corporation picture, "The Warrens of Virginia," the play in which Miss Martha Mansfield so unfortunately lost her life. The 9th and 23rd Infantries have been doing the Infantry work of the two armies portrayed in the picture, while all the mounted maneuvering is being done by the 15th Field Artillery.

New Britain (Conn) Herald 1/5/24

On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21, "America", the photodrama of the War of Independence, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution by D. W. Griffith, will have its premiere at the Forty-Fourth street theater, New York.

On the eve of Washington's Birthday, February 21, "America," the photodrama of the war of Independence, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution, will have its public premiere. The D. A. R., anxious to celebrate the second centennial of the beginning of the Revolutionary war with an appropriate screen production, requested Griffith to film a drama which would include the leading battles of this country's struggle for freedom. The story was written by Robert W. Chambers and Griffith and a large force of players, technicians and historical experts have been at work on the film for months.

Daily Eve. World 1/5/24

"AMERICA" FOR FEB. 22

The latest D. W. Griffith film, "America," is being rushed to completion in Mamaroneck so that it may be thrown on the public screens for the first time during the week of Washington's Birthday. To be more exact, the first New York showing will be at the 44th Street Theatre on the night of Feb. 21.

The request from the D. A. R., under whose auspices the film was made, coupled with the desire of D. W. G. himself to give the first showing as a celebration of Washington's birthday, has caused the director to work nights and holidays in an effort to have the film finished in time. And he told Screenings yesterday that it would be all ready when the time comes.

Muskegon (Mich) Chronicle 12/31/23

By Maurice Henle.

New York, Dec. 31.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. 'America' was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Warren (Ohio) Chronicle 1/3/24

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

BY MAURICE HENLE

New York—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principle battles of the Revolution.

* * *

But that isn't all. In a special train, Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contest between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, Just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

St Paul (Minn) News 12/30/23

New Griffith Film, 'America,' to Be Fine Historical Lesson

Film to Be Notable Dramatic Piece as Well, Movie Men Predict—U. S. Troops in Cast.

BY MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29. — In the early spring Griffith will give to the public his "America," now being filmed.

The film promises to be not only a great lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his past attainments. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R., but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

USE FEDERAL TROOPS.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

ROW IN VIRGINIA

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee 1/1/24

GRIFFITH AWAITS SNOW FOR HIS "AMERICA."

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary Days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76.

Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of Colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to 15 feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

Chicago (Ill) News 1/2/24

Not What It Used to Be.

D. W. Griffith and his research workers, restaging revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter. While the informal reports of colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat. It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

Wilkes-Barre (Pa) Times-Leader January 1924

Griffith's "America" May Bind Public More Closely to the Films

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By Maurice Henle

Fort Chester (N.Y.) Item 1/2/24

MOVIE ACTORS AT MAM'K WAIT IN VAIN FOR SNOW

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary Days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of Colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to 15 feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

Flint (Mich) Journal January 3, 1924

LATEST GRIFFITH-CLASSIC MAY BIND PUBLIC TO FILMS

"America" and Paramount's "Ten Commandments" Are Scr[illegible] Best.

NEW YORK, Jan. [illegible]—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

[illegible]

Baltimore (Md) Post 1/3/24

Making "America"

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

Boston (Mass) Traveler Jan 4 1924

Griffith Picture to Open on Eve of Washington's Birthday

The eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, has been chosen as a strong point for the first presentation of David Wark Griffith's photodrama of the Revolutionary war, "America."

The Forty-fourth Street Theatre in New York, where "Broadway" is now running, will be the scene of the premiere. It will be a gala affair, since the D. A. R. and other patriotic societies are greatly interested in the production. Many famous people, including [illegible] Washington, Lafayette, Paul Revere, Patrick Henry, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and John Paul Jones appear in the production.

[illegible] Forge and the Delaware River.

Oregonian

GRIFFITH BELIEVES SEASONS HAVE CHANGED

Burlington (Vt) Free Press 1/4/24 Los Angeles (Cal) Times 1/4/24 Dallas (Tex) News January

THE SCREEN

Paul Revere rides again in D. W. Griffith's "America."

Well, the good news has been verified by official announcement. Valentino has agreed to make one, or two, pictures for Paramount. Tarkington sits alone these days in the projection room of the Long Island Studio of Paramount, "Pied Piper Malone" is the first of the Tarkington stories to be made into a film.

SNOW AND ICE DON'T CO-OPERATE

Griffith Waits in Vain for Duplicates of Revolutionary Weather

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows beter the difference between a winter in Revolutionary days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right.

ATTENDANCE OF MOVIES SHOULD BE A MATTER OF CAREFUL SELECTION

BY NORA COLE SKINNER.

Written for The News. (All rights reserved.)

"All that was lacking was the original cast," said Frank H. West in the Richmond Times-Dispatch lately, "when D. W. Griffith and his company of moving picture men and women re-enacted the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown last week.

"It was the biggest thrill that has come to the village in, lo, these many years. It was all of a sudden-like. Griffith came and went like a cyclone, taking the population by suprise and leaving them many happy memories to talk over at the fireside for many winters to come.

"Somehow or other word got around that the greatest moving picture man in the world would visit Yorktown to take some pictures.

"'What for?' said the population. 'We haven't even got a movie theater. What should he want to come to Yorktown for?'"

For the moment it would seem that Yorktown had forgotten that she was America's most cherished cradle of liberty; that Cornwallis surrendered there all rights of Great Britain to dominion over the brave little thirteen Colonies; that among its buildings was the first customshouse ever erected in the United States, and that scores of other historic sites existed that had a fixed place in the heroism of the past. Most of all, she forgot, or did not consider, that the most important of these sites were intact, unmarred—from the movie man's point of view—by modern "improvements," such as gasoline stations, garages, telegraph wires and telephone poles, the most interesting places being left just as they were when George Washington marched into town with his ragged though happily victorious little American army that day nearly 150 years gone.

Revolutionary War Used.

It seems that Griffith is dramatizing a picture to be called "America," and it depicts all the high lights in American history from the time the New World was discovered by Columbus down to the present day, and for the scenes he is carrying his company to the actual sites in America where these high lights were enacted. Naturally, the Revolutionary War is being used as the highest spot of all in the ten-reel drama, and the surrender of the British at Yorktown plays a striking part.

A special train brought the crew from Richmond after scenes had been "shot" at Westover and Shirley-on-the-James. There were about sixty people in the Griffith company, but this was not enough for the Yorktown scenes, so a call went out for extras, black and white, and there were more than 200 who applied for jobs. Some of Yorktown's most blue-blooded aristocracy took part—direct descendants of the people the picture was depicting.

"Pretty soon Yorktown began to look older," the story goes. "The concrete roadway was covered with earth so as to blot out this touch of modernity. The cameras were so masked as not to include telegraph poles or wires where they interfered with the picture. Stately ladies with powdered hair, and gentlemen in silk stockings, satin knee breeches and continental hats walked the streets, while the less important villagers wore plain garb of various colors—smocks and long hair, rough leather shoes, brass buttons and more brass buttons. The scene was beautiful. Yorktown in Colonial days must have been bewitching. Everything seemed to [illegible] ever passed in [illegible] the river that looked out of place, not the Colonial setting."

Delighted Over Finds.

Mr. Griffith was delighted over his "finds" in Yorktown, and into the picture come an oxcart driven by an old negro, and next another darky hauling a hogshead of tobacco to the customhouse, the hogshead, as was the mode of former times, being its own wagon, an axle being driven through its middle, with shafts attached, drawn by two mules. These were but of the many neighborhood relics that had not been destroyed and which were made the most of.

Neil Hamilton is the star in "America." He is a Colonial soldier and rode into the picture at Yorktown on horseback, met other Colonial gentlemen, mounted, and appeared in a great hurry to get away. Doubtless, those taking part at Yorktown had no more knowledge as to what Mr. Hamilton was so disturbed about than we who await the picture. It was not Mr. Griffith's method to tell the local "supes" what was happening. They didn't know the story as a whole, a story of history, which yet had women and romance as living parts of it. He merely directed them what to do and how to do it. Sometimes they had to do it over as many as twelve times. George Washington had a part, of course. He was shown with his staff, mounted on fine horses, his army following, arriving in the village, the townspeople gathered to welcome them on the customhouse corner, and the corner of the old inn opposite equally alive with fiddlers, children, Indians, village men and women—an accurate and wonderfully picturesque scene.

Apparently, "Ameria" is one picture we may look forward to. And, indeed, the movie producers are turning out many. It is our responsibility to see that attending the movies holds a vast element of selection. If we would pick over the pictures as carefully as we choose our brands of groceries, our clothes, our golf paraphernalia—practically everything that we're finicky about—we'd raise the standard of pictures so generally that talk of a censorship to protect ourselves against ourselves would be useless. Certainly, the movie men are willing; but, naturally, they can't give us anything we don't want.

My Eve. Post 1/5/24

Fargo (N D) Forum 1/5/24

Chicago Sec Tribune 1/5/24

Waterbury (Conn) Democrat 1/5/24

Syracuse Herald

Taunton (Mass) Gazette Jan 5 1924

GAZETTE MOVIETORIUM

GRIFFITH DIRECTING A "PAUL REVERE" SCENE

By MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American independence. Not only the D. A. R. but all his patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the revolution.

• • •

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging the scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the revolution, have been turned over to Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

• • •

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with [illegible] and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been [illegible] in the vicinity of Bunker Hill and Lexington. And as the snow comes the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

My Exhibitors Trade Review 1/5/24

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, America. It was some ten years ago in the old Biograph days that he became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith, thus beginning his screen career.

Pliny Brent plays the young and handsome leading man opposite Jane Novak in "The Lullaby."

D. W. GRIFFITH IS STILL PRAYING FOR MUCH SNOW

Needs Old Time Winter Weatrer to Finish "America" Picture

Probably no one knows better than D. W. Griffith the difference between a winter of the Revolutionary War days and the present time, and certain it is that no one longs more ardently and hopefully for an old-fashioned cold spell and snowstorm than does this eminent motion picture director and producer.

Mr. Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary days at his Mamaroneck studio for scenes in "America" his forthcoming great screen spectacle which he is producing for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with snowfall statistics day by day for the winters of 1774, 1775 and 1776. They also know just how thick was the ice on the Delaware River and other streams which figured big in the history of the War for Independence.

And while these statistics show that in Colonial days New England, New York and even more Southern territory, was covered by anywhere from one foot to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year.

In the meantime there's been a lot of almost springlike weather so far this season and "D. W." and [illegible] are hoping [illegible]

Premiere of "America" on Feb. 21. On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21, "America," the photodrama of the War of Independence, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution by D. W. Griffith, will have its public premiere at the Forty-Fourth Street theater, New York.

The D. A. R., anxious to celebrate the sesqui-centennial of the beginning of the Revolutionary War with an appropriate screen production, requested Griffith to film a drama which would include the leading battles of this country's struggle for freedom. The story was written by Robert W. Chambers, and Griffith and a large force of players, technicians, and historical experts have been at work on the film for months.

The eminent historical and patriotic authorities connected with the production recently voiced the wish that the 1924 celebration of the birthday of George Washington be celebrated by the public presentation of "America," and to accomplish this Griffith and his players redoubled their efforts, working day and night, Sundays and holidays to finish the picture.

Practically every outstanding figure of Revolutionary days has a part in the drama, the filming of which necessitated Griffith and his company visiting the leading shrines of American liberty on special trains to take scenes [illegible]

"America," the D. W. Griffith special picture production, will first open in New York on Washington's birthday. Another historical film, "America," the D. W. Griffith photodrama of the War of Independence, made for the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be shown first at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre on February 21.

Boston (Mass) Post 1/5/24

Buffalo (N Y) Comm. 1/5/24

On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21, America, the photodrama of the War of Independence being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution by D. W. Griffith, will have its public premiere at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, New York.

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee January 5 1924

A Timely Showing

February 21st, the eve of Washington's birthday, has been chosen by D. W. Griffith as the date for the world premier of his Revolutionary war film, "America." The Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York, has been engaged for the first public [illegible]

Filmformation

By EARL AIKEN.

THERE is a picture still in the making down east which we believe is destined to upset and demolish all existing attendance records in movieland. It is D. W. Griffith's coming production, "America." It has every advantage for publicity, and has a tried and proven theme. It should rival anything that Griffith has ever released. "America" will be given its world premiere on the eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, in New York City, which undoubtedly will give it an extra push toward success.

On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21st, "America," the photodrama of the Revolution, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution by D. W. Griffith, will have its public premiere at the Forty-Fourth street theater in New York. The D. A. R., anxious to celebrate the sesqui-centennial of the beginning of the Revolutionary war with an appropriate screen production, requested Griffith to film a drama which would include the leading battles of this country's struggle for freedom. The story was written by Robert W. Chambers. Practically every outstanding figure of Revolutionary days has a part in the drama, the filming of which necessitated Griffith and his company visiting the leading shrines of American liberty.

Chicago Tribune 1/5/24

Detroit News Jan 6 1924

Utica (N Y) Observer-Dispatch January 6 1924

"America" May Bind Public Closely to Films

BY MAURICE HENLE.

New York, Jan. 5.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

BIGGEST THEME EVER TOUCHED

Its Success Will Help Schools and Tie Adult Public to Picture World.

BY MAURICE HENLE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

• • •

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

GRIFFITH FILMS PAUL REVERE

A [illegible] Paul Revere [illegible]

Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch Jan 6 1924

Evansville (Ind) Courier Jan 6 1924

Toledo (Ohio) Times 1/6/24

D. A. R. ENDORSE GRIFFITH FILM

January Magazine Recites Story of Photoplay "America."

ONE OF PROPERTIES IN "AMERICA"

Springfield (Mass) Union 1/6/24

GRIFFITH KNOWS SNOW FALL OF COLONIAL DAYS

Syracuse (N.Y.) Herald Janua 5 6 1924

Washington (D.C.) Herald Jan 6 1923

Historic Tavern—The historic Buc man Tavern at Lexington, Mas is one of the original sites used I Griffith in filming "America."

GRIFFITH FILM ARMY INVADES OLD DOMINION

Camera Crew Shoots Historic Scenes at the Old Byrd Estate on the James River

OLD RESIDENTS APPLAUD

Colonial Costumes Used in Old-Fashioned Wedding Taken for New Picture, "America"

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 5.—Shadowy figures, gaunt spectres of long-forgotten first families of Virginia, families that flourished here, sub, in the brightest days of the "Old Dominion," came to life for one fleeting moment recently, and revived the annals of this State for the historical film, "America," when David Wark Griffith initiated a new invasion of the territory that lies below Mason-Dixon line.

LAND OF ROMANCE.

Back in the dim days of Colonial life, when Virginia was noted for the excellence of its mint julips, the beauty of its women, the chivalry of its men and the fleetfoot of its thoroughbreds, as Kentucky later also was to be known, the swift tide of events made the Old Dominion one of the numerous historical points of the American Revolution.

Across this background the legend of Gen. Robert E. Lee later marching and countermarching straightened and then straightened in the struggle that sent many firmly the Revolutionary chapter that now bind Northern States in a common group.

Yellow with the Chesapeake, where Benedict Arnold, traitor to his own men, and mortally hurt to his own men, and finally, as he was Arnold, fled from the Revolutionary Court, where the surrendered and the hanged of Independence rolled [illegible]

[illegible] Jan. 5.—In the days of Washington's Virginia, when life was a long, [illegible] gaunt spectres of long-forgotten first families of Virginia, families that flourished here, sub, in the brightest days of the "Old Dominion," came to life for one fleeting moment recently, and revived the annals of this State for the historical film, "America," when David Wark Griffith initiated a new invasion of the territory that lies below Mason-Dixon line.

LAND OF ROMANCE.

Back in the dim days of Colonial life, when Virginia was noted for the excellence of its mint julips, the beauty of its women, the chivalry of its men and the fleetfoot of its thoroughbreds, as Kentucky later also was to be known, the swift tide of events made the Old Dominion one of the numerous historical points of the American Revolution.

Across this background the legend of Gen. Robert E. Lee later marching and countermarching straightened and then straightened in the struggle that sent many firmly the Revolutionary chapter that now bind Northern States in a common group.

Yellow with the Chesapeake, where Benedict Arnold, traitor to his own men, and mortally hurt to his own men, and finally, as he was Arnold, fled from the Revolutionary Court, where the surrendered and the hanged of Independence rolled [illegible]

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT PUT INTO PICTURE

Producer and Members of Company Filming "America" Work Hard During the Holidays

If you were a motion picture director, besieged by telegrams inviting you to innumerable Christmas celebrations;

Or a motion picture actor or actress, with family and friends waiting not so very far away with evergreen trees laden with presents, and a delicious Christmas feast;

And you were directing or acting in a picture for the Daughters of the American Revolution, a picture inspired by a love of your country, and exuding in every scene the ideals of the founders of these United States, and

If you were asked to stay in the studio all Christmas day in order to make scenes of Yuletide during the American revolution, that these scenes might breathe the real spirit of Christmas:

What would you do?

Well, if you were D. W. Griffith, or a member of his company [illegible] at his studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y., you would probably do exactly what Mr. Griffith and his players did—play your part as you never played it before, and put on the screen the spirit of Christmas as the fathers of the American republic knew it.

For, regarding hundreds of invitations to dinners and festivities, Griffith and his players, fairly bubbling over with the real Christmas spirit of giving to their labor the very best that in them, devoted their Christmas to filming Christmas scenes for "America," the story of the war of American independence, recounted by the D. A. R.

And the most remarkable part of it all is that there was scarcely any murmur of complaint, not so far as the slightest suggestion of a frown over this giving up of the customary Christmas celebration in favor of hard work.

The big studio was beautifully hung with evergreens, and through [illegible] the sound of [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] to a [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] The spirit of Christmas is [illegible] America.

D. W. Griffith's Film "America" Tale of Washington's Day

On the eve of Washington's Birthday, February 21, "America," the photodrama of the War of Independence being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution, will have its premiere at the Forty-fourth Street Theater.

The D. A. R., anxious to celebrate the sesquicentennial of the beginning of the Revolutionary War with an appropriate screen production, asked D. W. Griffith to film a drama which would include the leading battles of this country's struggles for freedom. The story was written by Robert W. Chambers, and Griffith and a large force of players, technicians and historical experts have been at work on the film for months.

The historical and patriotic authorities connected with the production recently voiced the wish that the 1924 celebration of the birthday of George Washington be marked by the public presentation of "America," and to accomplish this Griffith and his company redoubled their efforts, working day and night, Sundays and holidays, to finish the picture.

Practically every outstanding figure of Revolutionary days has a part in the drama. Hundreds of descendants of Revolutionary families were used as extra people and treasured relics of the war were dragged forth from family vaults and museum cases for use as properties.

Among those in the cast are Carol Dempster, Lionel Barrymore and Neil Hamilton.

Los Angeles (Cal) Times 1/6/24

HISTORY FEVER

You can hardly motor through the countryside above New York nowadays without meeting a part of the American revolution. Since Mr. Griffith decamped with his armies and went south for further exterior scenes, the "Janice Meredith" troupe has been advancing and retreating through the New England States.

And foreseeing a market for early American wares, other producers are rushing out with hardly more equipment that a camera and a few ragged uniforms and taking scenes.

Only a few days ago an independent producer showed me two reels of revolutionary war stuff which had been hurriedly shot with a view to incorporating it with a lot of studio shots and rushed on the market. Unfortunately the director was a bit impetuous and there were telegraph poles and rushing automobiles in the distance.

"The Ten Commandments" is crowding people in and enjoying a heavy advance sale at the box office.

And New York's favorite story is of Robert Sherwood, the critic on Life, who took a Bible to the picture with him saying "They can't put anything over on me. I've brought the [illegible]

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 1/6/24

Blue Skies Worry D. W.

THE most vociferous of the boosters of these parts haven't said nearly enough. They've confined themselves to the blue skies, the singing birds, the salubriousness and general balminess of these here parts. But they've overlooked a big bet.

D. W. Griffith—right in this neighborhood—to oh the New York State holding his thumbs, crossing his fingers, rubbing a razor's hair and praying for snow and ice.

Right in the heart of the Green country, he is held up in his producing "America," because of the balmy Spring-like weather.

The most enthusiastic photo fan has thus stolen a hundred miles of Los Angeles to assist and all the snow and ice he needed. As if they have to cut snow!

S F Cal Journal 1/6/24

WINTER EFFECTS NEEDED FOR FILM

Griffith Waiting for Snow to Embellish Latest Film Spectacle

Toledo Ohio Times 1/6/24

LIONEL BARRYMORE WITH D. W. GRIFFITH

Portland (Ore) Oregonian Jan 6 1924

Denver (Colo) Post 1/6/24

"America," the D. W. Griffith special picture production, will first open in New York on Washington's birthday. Another historical film, "Life of Abraham Lincoln," is to be first seen on Lincoln's birthday.

Minn Tribune St Paul Minn Jan 1/6/24, News 1/6/24

Barrymore to Play in Griffith Picture "America"

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged by D. W. Griffith for the role of Walter Butler in "America." During his starring venture with David Belasco in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh!" Barrymore will spend his days and Sundays at Mamaroneck, devoting his evenings and Thursday and Saturday afternoons to the play at the Belasco Theater.

Barrymore began his screen career under the Griffith direction, becoming a member of D. W.'s stock company ten years ago in the old Biograph days. The role of Butler is one demanding versatility and force. In addition to Barrymore the cast of "America" now includes Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson and Marie Burke.

As a Christmas present David W. Griffith invited Robert W. Chambers to direct a scene in "America," and to reciprocate Chambers suggested Mr. Griffith writing 500 words of his forthcoming novel, which is to tell the story of America."

Kansas City (Mo) Journal-Post Jan. 6, 1924

"America" in February.

"America," the D. W. Griffith special picture production, will first open in New York on Washington's birthday. Another historical film, "Life of Abraham Lincoln," is to be first seen on Lincoln's birthday.

Dayton (O) News Jan. 6, 1924

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'round, may be right. But now it seems winter has arrived and he can go on with his task.

Spring field (Ohio) Sun Jan 6 1924

Lionel Barrymore has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in "America," D. W. Griffith's next film effort. Mr. Barrymore now is playing in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh!" He will spend certain days at the Mamaroneck studios, and therefore will be as busy as any actor would want to be. The role of Butler is said to demand versatility and force.

Syracuse (N.Y.) Telegram Jan 8, 1924

"AMERICA," the D. W. Griffith special picture production, will first open in New York on Washington's Birthday. Another historical film, "Life of Abraham Lincoln," is to be first seen on Lincoln's Birthday.

The Griffith picture includes a large section of the Revolution including the Boston Tea Party, Paul Revere's Ride and Washington crossing the Delaware on the ice.

Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch 1/6/24

FILMLETS

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia after photographing scenes on eleven historical spots for his Revolutionary film, "America." The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than 40 persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scene.

Detroit Mich Free Press Jan 6 1924

Boston (Mass) Globe Jan 6 1924

Portland (Me) Press Herald 1/8/24

Read What D. W. Griffith Said to R. W. Chambers

D. W. Griffith has agreed to give Robert W. Chambers a chance to direct a big scene in "America" if Chambers will reciprocate by allowing D. W. a chance to write one chapter in his new novel, also called "America." It all came about because, one day, R. W. remarked to D. W. that writing was a terrible grind, and that directing was child's play.

San Antonio (Tex) Express 1/6/24

"America," the D. W. Griffith special picture production, will first open in New York on Washington's birthday. Another historical film, "Life of Abraham Lincoln," is to be first seen on Lincoln's birthday.

Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer Jan. 6, 1924

"America," the D. W. Griffith special picture production will first open in New York on Washington's birthday. Another historical play "Life of Abraham Lincoln" is to be first seen on Lincoln's birthday.

El Paso (Tex) Times Jan. 6, 1924

"America," the D. W. Griffith special production, will first open in New York on Washington's birthday. Another historical film, "Life of Abraham Lincoln," is to be first seen on Lincoln's birthday.

Zanesville (Ohio) Times Signal Jan 6 1924

Washington (D.C.) Times Jan 6 1924

NEW GRIFFITH FILM FEB. 21

Portland (Ore) Telegram Jan 6 1924

Los Angeles (Cal) Herald 1/9/24

Los Angeles (Cal) Examiner 1/9/24

Suffle of '76 Put on Film

Toledo (Ohio) Blade 1/9/24

ANGELUS WILL REACH NEW YORK SOON

Paterson (N.J.) Press Guardian Jan 7, 1924

CAROL DEMPSTER WILL NOT APPEAR AT LYCEUM

Miss Carol Dempster, who was to have made a personal appearance at the Lyceum Theatre tonight, was severely injured last Sunday evening during the filming of an important scene in the production of "America," according to word received late this afternoon by The Press-Guardian from David Ward Griffith, the well-known director. As the result of her injuries Miss Dempster will be unable to be in Paterson tonight. An effort will be made to have Charles Mack, who appeared in "One Exciting Night," to be at the Lyceum Theatre tonight to make Miss Dempster's and Mr. Griffith's apologies.

Elmira (N.Y.) Gazette 1/8/24

On the eve of Washington's Birthday, February 21st, "America," the photodrama of the War of Independence, being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution by D. W. Griffith, will have its public premiere at the Forty-Fourth street Theater, New York.

Dayton (O) News Jan 6 1924

In Cast for "America."

LIONEL BARRYMORE has been engaged to play the part of Walter Butler in the forthcoming D. W. Griffith production, "America." Mr. Barrymore comes back to Mr. Griffith after an absence of many years. It was ten years ago, in the old Biograph days, that Lionel Barrymore became a member of the stock company organized by Griffith.

Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Erville Alderson, Marie Burke and many other important actors and actresses are in the cast.

When asked for a description of "America," Mr. Griffith replied, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

My Tribune 1/6/24

My Eve World 1/8/24

A CABINET MEETING.

Two former Ambassadors and a former Secretary of the United States Treasury were among a party of distinguished guests who yesterday watched D. W. Griffith direct several scenes for his D. A. R. picture, "America," which is being whipped into shape out at Mamaroneck.

Dr. Charles R. Crane, former Minister to China, and Richard Crane, former Minister to Jugo-Slavia, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Houston, the former onetime Secretary of the Treasury, Sir Percy Sykes of London and John Farrar, editor of the Bookman, made up the party.

All were surprised to see Carol Dempster hard at work. She had not quite recovered from the effects of her injuries received Friday when she was thrown from her horse. Following the filming, Miss Dempster and Lionel Barrymore were the hosts at a luncheon served on the set.

My Telegraph 1/8/24

Notables See "America in Making."

Charles R. Crane, former Minister to China; Richard Crane, former Minister to Jugo-Slavia; former Secretary Houston, Sir Percy Sykes of London, and other notables were at the Griffith studio, Mamaroneck, yesterday, to witness the filming of several scenes of "America." The Cranes own "Westover," the ancient estate on the James River where Griffith shot some of the big Revolutionary scenes for the picture.

The visitors, however, saw the featured players work at a disadvantage. Miss Carol Dempster was thrown from her horse one day last week and limped every time the camera focused shooting, while Lionel Barrymore, who plays opposite her, had a very sore right arm due to painful injury sustained during the performance of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," at the Belasco Theatre.

Houston (Tex) Chronicle 1/8/24

D. W. Griffith has returned from Virginia after photographing scenes on 11 historical spots for his revolutionary film, "America." The surrender of Cornwallis was taken in Yorktown on the ground where it actually occurred. More than 40 persons whose ancestors were present at the surrender took part in the scene.

Portland (Me) Press Herald 1/8/24

Carol Dempster, leading woman in D. W. Griffith's "America," had a [illegible] and received painful injuries when she fell from her horse during the filming of one of the scenes at Mamaroneck. She was riding a spirited mare when the animal slipped in the mud and fell, throwing the screen actress some distance. Fortunately she was riding sidesaddle and only this saved her from having been crushed under the horse's weight. Mr. Griffith and a dozen others rushed to her aid. A physician was called and found that she had a badly wrenched shoulder and a sprained ankle. Her injuries, a result of the Revolutionary war, are refined, and the scene will have to be retaken.

Daily (N.J.) News Record 1/8/24

Tribune 1/7/24 Syracuse (N.Y.) Herald Jan 9 1924 Hudson (N.Y.) Register 1/10/24

"AMERICA" NEW HISTORY FILM WILL BE EPIC

D. A. R. and Other Patriotic Societies Co-operating With Producer to Make Historical Picture

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK.—Unless all signs fail, two more genuine contributions are about to be made to the motion picture screen. A few years back, D. W. Griffith swept the country with "The Birth of a Nation." Later Paramount let loose a broadside with "The Covered Wagon." Both were epics.

Now these same two—Griffith and Paramount—are once more knocking at the door of the screen's Hall of Fame. Paramount's "The Ten Commandments," if it lives up to expectations, will repeat the sterling quality of "The Covered Wagon." Chances are it will be better.

And in the early spring Griffith will give up to the public his "America," now being filmed.

* * * *

The possibilities for "America" drain the imagination as no other subject possibly can. The film promises to be not only a wonderful lesson in history—one that will be shown to every school-child in the country—but a film that will bind the adult public more closely to the picture world than ever before.

Griffith has everything in his favor to surpass even his own ability. "America" was begun under the inspiration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who urged Griffith to immortalize the war for American Independence. Not only the D. A. R. but all big patriotic societies are co-operating with the producer with the enthusiasm of school children in a commencement day play.

Secretary of War Weeks has placed thousands of soldiers at Griffith's command and these troops, in costume, are re-enacting the principal battles of the Revolution.

* * * *

But that isn't all. In a special train Griffith and his company are touring the shrines of American liberty, staging scenes on actual sites of the picturesque scenes of the war.

Old homes, those that have been standing since the Revolution, have been turned over for Griffith's use by enthusiastic citizens, and relics, priceless relics, that have been handed down from one generation to another, are being surrendered to the director for use in the picture.

* * * *

Just as "The Covered Wagon" drew a striking contrast between our west of the early eighteens and that of today, just so will "America" bring home to the public the vast growth since 1776.

Just at the present time Griffith and his company are in the vicinity of Alexandria, Va., where George Washington lived as a young man and went to lodge meetings. The very Masonic Hall which Washington frequented is standing. It's a picturesque old place. That section of the country teems with memories and offers the camera a world of opportunities.

Scenes already have been "shot" in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington. And as soon as the snow comes, the camera will be leveled on historic Valley Forge and the Delaware River.

Clarksburg (W Va) Telegram 1/9/24

THE DOES NOT SUIT.

The oldest inhabitant may be louder and more pardonent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary days and a winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the Daughters of American Revolution, are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'ought to be right.'

Toledo (Ohio) Blade 1/10/24

MOVIE ARMY IN NEW INVASION OF SOUTH

D. W. Griffith Moves Upon Virginia to Make Scenes for "America."

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 9.—Shadowy figures; gaunt spectres of long-forgotten first families of Virginia, families that flourished here, suh, in the brightest days of the "Old Dominion," came to life for one fleeting moment recently, and relieved the annals of this State for the historical film, "America," when David Wark Griffith initiated a new invasion of the territory that lies below Mason-Dixon line.

Back in the dim days of Colonial life, when Virginia was noted for the excellence of its mint juleps, the beauty of its women, the chivalry of its men and the fleetness of its thoroughbreds, as Kentucky later also was to be known, the swift tide of events made the Old Dominion one of the conspicuous historical points of the American Revolution.

Across this background the legions of General Robert E. Lee later marched and countermarched, slaughtered and were slaughtered, in the struggle that welded more firmly the indissoluble chains that now bind these United States in a compact group.

* * *

YONDER, suh, lies Chancellorsville, where "Stonewall" Jackson was mortally hurt by his own men, and south of us lies Appomattox Court House, where Lee surrendered and the twilight of Confederacy faded into night.

"Four score years ago," in the words of Abraham Lincoln, Virginia rode high on the crest of a social wave—the "Old Dominion" was in its heyday.

In order to make a permanent record of Virginia's splendor and magnificence, the Daughters of the American Revolution appealed to Mr. Griffin to weave a historical romance on the Southern loom. Eagerly snatching at this opportunity to erect a lasting memorial to their fathers, the Virginia Society added its endorsement.

So the North again invaded the South, but Mr. Griffith rode in the van of the Northerners instead of Grant and moving picture cameras "shot" in place of Northern cannon.

Griffith, the son of Brig.-Gen. Jacob Wark of the Confederate army, and himself born in Kentucky, must have experienced strange emotions at the head of a Northern detachment of "invaders."

Accompanied by stars of the motion picture world, Carol Dempsey, Neil Hamilton, Charles Mack and John L. F. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships," who collaborated with Robert W. Chambers in the preparation of the scenario for "America," Griffith's film army arrived here last week and with the aid of G. Watson James, Southern historian, and the Richmond Theatre League, immediately went to work.

* * *

THE principal scenes were laid at "Westover," on the banks of the James river, the estate of William Byrd, founder of Richmond. Scenes also were taken at "Upper Brandon," "Lower Brandon," "Shirley" and "Lower Shirley" on the James river.

Vivid memories of the South of days gone were recalled to prejudiced Virginians, who darkened to see an old-fashioned Virginia wedding re-enacted before the camera. Long lines of guests to the bride and other distinguished wedding guests were so true to detail that spectators broke into applause. The original dresses of the Byrd family were reproduced and worn by Mamaroneck women in those wedding scenes.

Mr. Griffith insisted on historical accuracy throughout the work of his company in this territory. Many months were built in New York city from plans submitted by local historians and local dressmakers were engaged in authentic reproduction of the colonial costumes. The result is striking, probably the most "American" by analogy the current historical document.

In order to make the movies complete, some other events of a generation ago were added. For instance, the Civil War was thrown in for good measure. This happened when a Yankee raiding party dashed into the Byrd estate and was driven off by the Byrd family and their retainers.

Bridgeport (Conn) Sunday Herald

"AMERICA" ON EVE OF WASHINGTON'S BIRTHD

On the eve of Washington's Bi day, February 21, "America," photodrama of the War of Inde dence, being made for the Daugh of the American Revolution by D. Griffith, will have its public prem at the Forty-fourth Street the New York

The D. A. R., anxious to celeb the sesqui-centennial of the begin of the Revolutionary war with appropriate screen production, quested Griffith to film a drama w would include the leading battle this country's struggle for free The story was written by Robert Chambers, and Griffith and a large force of players, technicians, and historical experts have been at work on the film for months.

The eminent historical and patriotic authorities connected with the production recently voiced the wish that the 1924 celebration of the birthday of George Washington be celebrated by the public presentation of "America," and to accomplish this Griffith and his players redoubled their efforts, working day and night, Sunday and holidays, to finish the picture.

Practically every outstanding figure of Revolutionary days has a part in the drama, the filming of which necessitated Griffith and his company

Newark (N J) Star-Eagle 1/10/24

THE oldest inhabitant may be louder and more persistent in his opinion of how the weather has changed since he was a boy, but probably no one in the United States knows better the difference between a winter in Revolutionary days and winter today than D. W. Griffith.

Griffith and his research workers, restaging Revolutionary times down at Mamaroneck for scenes in "America," which he is making for the D. A. R., are plentifully supplied with accurate reports of the snowfall day by day in '74, '75 and '76. Also of the thickness of the ice on the Delaware and other important streams. But they are waiting in vain for either the ice or the snow to be duplicated this winter.

While the informal reports of colonial times show that New England, New York and even more southern territory was covered by from one to fifteen feet of snow at this season of the year, the official thermometer at Mamaroneck registers spring heat.

It is reported that Griffith is thinking seriously of deferring the taking of his winter scenes until next summer, in the hope that the village weather prophet, who insists that the seasons have changed 'ought to be right.'

Saginaw (Mich) News 1/10/24

'America' Premiere Feb. 21

"America" will have its world premiere at the 44th St. theater, New York, on Washington's birthday eve. The picture is being made by D. W. Griffith.

Norwalk (Conn) Sentinel 1/11/24

Canton (Ohio) News 1/11/24

Waterloo (Ia) Standard 1/11/24

BACKWARD WINTER DOES NO BLOW TO MOVIE WORK

Bridgeport (Conn) Sunday Herald 1/10/24

Soldiering is Different For M Hard-Boiled Buck Learns

BY MAURICE HENLE

New York—"On the eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, 'America,' the photodrama of the War of Independence being made by D. W. Griffith, will have its world premiere at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, New York."

That announcement, just made, reminds us of a conversation we had with one of the "actors" in the film. He was a buck private, a hard-boiled member of the Sixteenth Infantry, and he had just returned to the army base at Governor's Island after participating in the filming of scenes of battles around Bunker Hill.

"They gave us a three-cornered hat," he mused, chuckling, "and a gun of the vintage of '76. An' a long-barreled blunderbuss that sounded like a powder house when it went off. I was togged out in a uniform that made me look like two ends o' the rainbow in a wrestling match, and, would you believe it—a wig with a tent pole sticking in the tail of it to make it stand out.

* * *

"Here I was after 30 years' service being told by this movie generalissimo that I didn't know how to drill," he went on complainingly, but still chuckling.

"'You're supposed to be a general,' this Griffith fellow told me.

"'Of what?' I replied.

"'A general of parts,' he comes back, 'an' you look like you lost most of the parts now.'

"He asks me if I knowed what a 'closeup' was. 'Sure,' I answers, 'arms inspection.' And the face he made convinced me I wasn't right.

"Then he wanted Slim Pickerings to register 'amazement.' And Slim bulged out his eyes and looked like a white horse chokin' to death on a hedge-apple. He looked so bad Miss Carol Dempster, the star of the film, screamed and almost fainted.

"Then Bill Gilhooley was told to register 'grief.' He telescoped his features, extended his mouth, drawed up his chin till his nose hung over and down like a red carrot hanging from a football.

"Well, the time came to lead my men up Bunker Hill. We were the Britishers and the Eighteenth Infantry was on top of the hill as the Minutemen. Everybody was talkin' about 'long shots' as though the old rusty flintlocks they gave us could be shot at long range. O confess it was all Greek to me, but we had a great time, and put up some tough fightin'."

* * *

That's that.

Saginaw (Mich) News 1/10/24

Soldiering is Diffe

THURSDAY THeater

BY MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—"On the eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, 'America,' the photodrama of the War of Independence being made by D. W. Griffith, will have its world premiere at the Forty-fourth street theater, New York."

That announcement, just made, reminds us of a conversation we had with one of the "actors" in the film. He was a buck private, a hard-boiled member of the sixteenth infantry, and he had just returned to the army base at Governor's island after participating in the filming of scenes of battles around Bunker Hill.

"They gave us a three-cornered hat," he mused, chuckling, "and a gun of the vintage of '76. An' a long-barreled blunderbuss that sounded like a powder house when it went off. I was togged out in a uniform that made me look like two ends o' the rainbow in a wrestling match and, would you believe it—a wig with a tent pole sticking in the tail of it to make it stand out.

"Here I was after 30 years' service being told by this movie generalissimo that I didn't know how to drill," he went on complainingly, but still chuckling.

"You're supposed to be a general,' this Griffith fellow told me.

"'Of what?' I replied.

"'A general of parts,' he comes back, 'an' you look like you lost most of the parts now.'

"He asts me if I knowed what a 'closeup' was. 'Sure,' I answers, 'arms inspection.' And the face he made convinced me I wasn't right.

"Then he wanted Slim Pickerings to register 'amazement.' And Slim bulged out his eyes and looked like a white horse chokin' to death on a hedge-apple. He looked so bad Miss Carol Dempster, the star of the film, screamed and almost fainted.

"Then Bill Gilhooley was told to register 'grief.' He telescoped his features, extended his mouth, drawed up his chin till his nose hung over and down like a carrot hanging from a football.

"Well, the time came to lead my men up Bunker Hill. We were the Britishers and the Eighteenth Infantry was on top of the hill as the Minutemen. Everybody was talkin' about 'long shots' as though the old rusty flintlocks they gave us could be shot at long range. I confess it was all Greek to me, but we had a great time, and put up some tough fightin'."

Camden (N J) Post-Telegram 1/11/24

Carol Dempster, leading woman in D. W. Griffith's "America," now being filmed, had a narrow escape from death when she was thrown from her horse during the filming of one of the scenes. The spirited mare Miss Dempster was riding slipped in the mud and fell, throwing the actress. She suffered a badly wrenched shoulder and a sprained ankle. The scene had to be re-filmed.

Roanoke (Va) Leader 1/11/24

Carol Dempster, leading woman in D. W. Griffith's "America," now being filmed, had a narrow escape from death when she was thrown from her horse during the filming of one of the scenes. The spirited mare Miss Dempster was riding slipped in the mud and fell, throwing the actress. She suffered a badly wrenched shoulder and a sprained angle. The scene had to be refilmed.

Wilmington (Del) Journal 1/12/24

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—"On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21, 'America,' the photo-drama of the War of Independence being made by D. W. Griffith, will have its world premiere at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York."

That announcement just made, reminds us of a conversation we had with one of the "actors" in the film. He was a buck private, a hard-boiled member of the Sixteenth Infantry, and he had just returned to the army base at Governor's Island after participating in the filming of scenes of battles around Bunker Hill.

"They gave us a three-cornered hat," he mused, chuckling, "and a gun of the vintage of '76. An' a long-barreled blunderbuss that sounded like a powder house when it went off. I was togged out in a uniform that made me look like two ends o' the rainbow in a wrestling match, and, would you believe it—a wig with a tent pole sticking in the tail of it to make it stand out.

* * *

"Here I was after 30 years' service being told by this movie generalissimo that I didn't know how to drill," he went on complainingly, but still chuckling.

"'You're supposed to be a general,' this Griffith fellow told me.

"'Of what?' I replied.

"'A general of parts,' he comes back, 'an' you look like you lost most of the parts now.'

He asts me if I knowed what a 'closeup' was. 'Sure,' I Answers, 'arms inspection.' And the face he made convinced me I wasn't right.

"Then he wanted Slim Pickerings to register 'amazement.' And Slim bulged out his eyes and looked like a white horse chokin' to death on a hedge-apple. He looked so bad Miss Carol Dempster, the star of the film screamed and almost fainted.

"Then Bill Gilhooley was told to register 'grief.' He telescoped his features, extended his mouth, drawed up his chin till his nose hung over and down like a red carrot hanging from a football.

"Well, the time came to lead my men up Bunker Hill. We were the Britishers and the Eighteenth Infantry was on top of the hill as the Minutemen. Everybody was talkin' about 'long shots' as though the old rusty flintlocks they gave us could be shot at long range. I confess it was all Greek to me, but we had a great time, and put up some tough fightin'."

Cincinnati (O) Times-Star 1/12/24

Set Premiere of Patriotic Film

On the eve of Washington's birthday, February 21, "America," the photodrama of the "War of Independence," being made for the Daughters of the American Revolution, by D. W. Griffith, will have its public premiere at the Forty-Fourth Street theater, New York.

The D. A. R., anxious to celebrate the sesqui-centennial of the beginning of the Revolutionary war with an appropriate screen production, requested Griffith to film a drama which would include the leading battle in this country's struggle for freedom. The story was written by Robert W. Chambers, and Griffith and a large force of players, technicians, and historical experts have been at work on the film for

Cleveland (Ohio) Press 1/11/24

D. W. Griffith Club to be Formed by Players

Portland (Ore) Press Herald 1/12/24

Soldiering For Films Is "Different" Hard-Boiled Buck Private

Correspondence of the PRESS HERALD

New York, Jan. 8.—"On the eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, 'America,' the photodrama of the War of Independence being made by D. W. Griffith, will have its world premiere at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, New York."

That announcement, just made, reminds us of a conversation we had with one of the "actors" in the film. He was a buck private, a hard-boiled member of the Sixteenth Infantry, and he had just returned to the army base at Governor's Island after participating in the filming of scenes of battles around Bunker Hill.

"They gave us a three-cornered hat," he mused, chuckling, "and a gun of the vintage of '76. An' it sounded like a powder house when it went off. I was togged out in a uniform that made me look like two ends o' the rainbow in a wrestling match, and, would you believe it—a wig with a tent pole sticking in the tail of it to make it stand out.

"Here I was after 30 years service being told by this movie generalissimo that I didn't know how to drill," he went on complainingly, but still chuckling.

"'You're supposed to be a general,' this Griffith fellow told me.

"'Of what?' I replied.

"'A general of parts,' he comes back, 'an' you look like you lost most of the parts now.'

"He asks me if I knowed what a 'closeup' was. 'Sure,' I answers, 'arms inspection.' And the face he made convinced me I wasn't right.

"Then he wanted Slim Pickerings to register 'amazement.' And Slim bulged out his eyes and looked like a white horse chokin' to death on a hedge-apple. He looked so bad Miss Carol Dempster, the star of the film, screamed and almost fainted.

"Then Bill Gilhooley was told to register 'grief.' He telescoped his features, extended his mouth, drawed up his chin till his nose hung over and down like a red carrot hanging from a football.

"Well, the time came to lead my men up Bunker Hill. We were the Britishers and the Eighteenth Infantry was on top of the hill as the Minutemen. Everybody was talkin' about 'long shots' as though the old rusty flintlocks they gave us could be shot at long range. I confess it was all Greek to me, but we had a great time, and put up some tough fightin'."

New London (Conn) Day 1/12/24

"Fights" in America Griffith Pieture, as General.

By MAURICE HENLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—"On the eve of Washington's birthday, Feb. 21, America the photodrama of the War of Independence being made by D. W. Griffith, will have its world premiere at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, New York."

That announcement, just made reminds us of a conversation we had with one of the "actors" in the film. He was a buck private a hard-boiled member of the Sixteenth Infantry, and he had just returned to the army base at Governor's Island after participating in the filming of scenes of battles around Bunker Hill.

"They gave us a three-cornered hat," he mused, chuckling, "and a gun of the vintage of '76. An' a long-barreled blunderbuss that sounded like a powder house when it went off. I was togged out in a uniform that made me look like two ends o' the rainbow in a wrestling match, and, would you believe it—a wig with a tent pole sticking in the tail of it to make it stand out.

"Here I was after 30 years' service being told by this movie generalissimo that I didn't know how to drill," he went on complainingly, but still chuckling.

"'You're supposed to be a general,' this Griffith fellow told me.

"'Of what?' I replied.

"'A general of parts,' he comes back, 'an' you look like you lost most of the parts now.'

"He asks me if I knowed what a 'closeup' was. 'Sure,' I answers, 'arms inspection.' And the face he made convinced me I wasn't right.

"Then he wanted Slim Pickerings to register 'amazement.' And Slim bulged out his eyes and looked like a white horse chokin' to death on a hedge-apple. He looked so bad Miss Carol Dempster, the star of the film, screamed and almost fainted.

"Then Bill Gilhooley was told to register 'grief.' He telescoped his features, extended his mouth, drawed up his chin till his nose hung over and down like a red carrot hanging from a football.

"Well, the time came to lead my men up Bunker Hill. We were the Britishers and the Eighteenth Infantry was on top of the hill as the Minutemen. Everybody was talkin' about 'long shots' as though the old rusty flintlocks they gave us could be shot at long range. I confess it was all Greek to me, but we had a great time, and put up some tough fightin'."

Toledo (Ohio) News-Bee 1/12/24

Toledo (Ohio) Times 1/12/24

GRIFFITH TURNS GYPSY, DE LUXE ON PULLMANS

Boston (Mass) Transcript Jan. 14, 1924

GRIFFITH AND "AMERICA"

As "D. W." Fills in the Outlines of His Re-created History—Characters Out of Old Records—Infinite Pains and Melodramatic Patches

FOR eight months past David Wark Griffith has travelled the historic spots of New England, and the hills of Putnam County, N. Y., "shooting" outdoor scenes for his forthcoming picture-spectacle, "America." Now, in his studios at Mamaroneck, L. I., he is at work on "interiors." A reporter for the New York Times recently visited him there, and described the progress of the film play. He found the director standing in a prison dungeon with a cobble-stoned flooring, discussing in low tones with Lionel Barrymore, who was sitting on the jail cot. Mr. Barrymore plays the role of Walter Butler, a character without a single redeeming attribute. Griffith was in modern clothes, and Barrymore in boots and breeches and shirt of gloomy hue.

Holding his cigarette between his fingers, Griffith stepped back to the firing line of the three cameras, and then called out "Lafayette," just loud enough to be heard in this unusually quiet studio. The Marquis de Lafayette, with his aid, stepped through the oaken door into the dingy-looking cell, his sword clanging, his tri-cornered hat set off by a red ribbon, and cream-colored lace protruding through the gap left by his graceful cape that hung in folds down to the calves of his high boots.

"So—sen-timen-tal," prompted Mr. Griffith, after the brilliantly attired aid had introduced the great Frenchman. "You—look—charming—just—now," continued Mr. Griffith, weighing his cigarette between his long fingers. "You—think—it might be possible to get him out of there, Barrymore? Ah that would be—wonderful!"

As he uttered the different sentences with pauses, Mr. Griffith appeared to act the different parts himself. He put himself with swift transition into the moods he wanted the players to feel. The overhead Cooper-Hewitts vied with the fading daylight visible through the upper windows.

They had a second rehearsal. "Allow me to present the Marquis de Lafayette," came from Griffith. "Now the sympathy, Lafayette," instructed Griffith, who calls his characters, according to the names in the story. "This place is bad for—you," urged Griffith. "That is enough."

Even the electricians were interested in the scene, a minor one in this production, regarding which Lionel Barrymore is extremely enthusiastic. It seemed strange that this actor, then seated on the cot in a cell, would be seen that night in the stage success, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

"Your lights!" ordered Mr. Griffith, and there was silence—only broken by the words from the director and the buzz of the winding of the cameras. After that was finished Griffith suggested trying the scene once more, and while preparations were being made Mr. Griffith told us that he would soon have to take a test of a George III., then sitting on a red plush chair, evidently hoping his build and physiognomy would be acceptable.

The director said he had tried thirty different men all of six feet to get his George Washington. We suggested that Washington was six feet two inches, whereupon Griffith explained that he had it on no less authority than Washington's London tailor's books, the fact that he was six feet tall. The order for General Washington's suits stipulated they were "for a man six feet of medium build, the clothes to be made of good cloth of genteel color." "From the engravings and pictures that man is strikingly like Lafayette," said Mr. Griffith, nodding in the direction of the actor who was just leaving the studio.

Mr. Griffith then lucidly discussed the question of longer scenes in pictures, asserting that brevity was splendid so long as the thought was maintained.

"It's a disputed question," he explained, "but we kept up the thought in the 'Birth of a Nation' and in 'Way Down East.' We learn from the oldest novelists that the thought must not be broken. They say, 'And now, dear reader,' and they go on to something else, or Dickens writes, 'So while this was happening,' and then proceeds. It is possible to have the continuance [illegible] following swiftly on the heels of others so long as the thought is not broken. If, when the mother is dying and the father bending over her, nicely acted, there should be introduced in a following scene the father's pet cow, it would not keep up the thought. I discussed this idea with Harris when he was living in Adolphi Terrace, Londonopen, the idea must flow in encore."

Referring to motion picture licenses, Mr. Griffith explained that when he makes a picture it must be a paying one, and that it should be remembered that a stage play may cost $50,000, and if it is successful the pay is all so great.

"Look," continued Mr. Griffith, "when making a picture, we spend $400,000, $500,000 and $1,000,000, and we would soon have to shut up shop if we only made pictures to suit ourselves. I have been working on this production since June, and we have sought out actual locations for some of the scenes. We had 800 men in the reproduction in Lexington of the great battle. We were careful to select men of certain attitudes and types—and we killed just the same number as those that died on the actual green. We even clad them in the same homespun. We have taken no end of pains to insure accuracy in detail and the appearances of the characters. I found that Thackeray has by far the best description of George Washington in his 'The Virginians.'

Picking a King.

"Now," said Mr. Griffith, bringing on three engravings of George III., "put yourself in the place of a director and select the one which in your idea is the best picture of the King."

One of the pictures showed a gallant young gentleman, brilliantly arrayed, in the saddle of a glistening steed. That, of course, showed George when he was too young. The second picture was of full face, with large, wide eyes, with which the artists were supposed to flatter their clients in the olden days; and the third picture was a profile, which had the fish-eyes or pop-eyes and the rather receding chin of the monarch. The man who had come for the test was twenty feet away in the glare of the Klieg lights, and surely he did not resemble any of the portraits of George. His chin was prominent. His face was modern, and it ill-suited the clothes of the eighteenth century, which, by the way, is no reflection upon his looks.

